SOME newspaper statements in regard to the vote in Congress on the anti-injunction bill do an injustice to one of the members of the House from the Pittsburgh district, Dr. A. J. Barchfeld. According to some of our contemporaries, the only support given this labor bill from Pittsburgh was that of Congressman Stephen G. Porter. The facts of the case are that when this bill was voted upon on May 14 Mr. Barchfeld was the only congressman from Pittsburgh who voted for it. Mr. Dalzell voted against it; Mr. Burke was absent, and Mr. Porter was in Pittsburgh, having been granted leave of absence by the House on account of sickness in the family. The Congressional Record of June 14 will verify the statements herein made.

GOV. CHARLES S. DENEEN, VICTOR IN ILLINOIS PRIMARIES

IN the means by which he rose to political power Charles S. Deneen, who was the Illinois Republican in the recent primaries to name a candidate for the governorship, bears a marked resemblance to Justice Hughes of New York and Ex-Governor Folk of Missouri. At first with a popular favor by his prosecution and conviction as state attorney (prosecuting attorney for Cook county, which includes Chicago) of crooked election officials and defrauding bankers, and he had his political reward for these public services in a re-election in 1900 by a vote 10,000 in excess of that given to McKinley in Chicago. His first nomination for governor followed in 1904 after the longest and most bitter convention struggle in American history. He was elected, but had to fight hard for his second nomination in 1908 and won by a plurality of only 28,164, although Taft carried the state by 179,122.

LABOR'S INTERESTS AT NATIONAL CAPITAL.

Membership of the Board of Arbitration to Settle Dispute Between Railroads and Engineers is Finally Completed. Government Still Trying to Get Mr. Gompers Involved in Darrow Case. Mediation Bill of Congressman Lee of Pennsylvania Favorably Reported

EXECUTIVE OFFICE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

WASHINGTON, June 18. — The board of arbitration to settle the differences between the railroads east of Chicago and their engineers, has been appointed by Chief Justice White, Charles P. Neill, Commissioner of Labor, and Judge Knapp of the Commerce Court. The board consists of Oscar Straus, former secretary of Commerce and Labor, chairman; Dr. Albert Shaw, editor of the American Review of Reviews; Otto Eidlitz, former chairman of the Building Trades' Employers' Association of New York; Frederick N. Judson, lawyer of St. Louis; Dr. Charles R. Van Hise, president of the University of Wisconsin; Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, and P. H. Morrissey, president of the Employes' and Investigators' Association. The two latter were elected by the railroads and engineers, respectively. The arbitration has been brought about through mediation under the Erdman act. The demands of the engineers are for a standard wage in the entire eastern territory. The firemen of these systems have also presents similar demands, but no action has yet been taken, but whatever action is taken will undoubtedly be predicted on the award of the arbitration board in the engineers' case.

The telegraphic news coming from Los Angeles reporting instances in the Darrow trial, indicates that the legal department of the government and the attorneys prosecuting Mr. Darrow are still in search of some "pin dot" upon which to draw President Gompers into the controversy. Every opportunity has been afforded the attorney general and all his assistants to secure information at the Federation headquarters and elsewhere, and notwithstanding the fact that the department has openly accused the officials of the American Federation of Labor, there is still an effort being made to connect them with some circumstance which might be twisted into a semblance of connection with an unlawful act. The Federation welcomes all the probes the department desires to institute and when it gets through it will have the satisfaction of knowing that no official of the American Federation of Labor had any knowledge of any wrongful act having been committed by any one in the famous dynamiting cases.

President Gompers recently appeared before the postoffice and postroads committee of the Senate in advocacy of the "anti-gag" rule and eight-hour posivion passed upon favorably by the House. He also appeared before the House Judiciary Committee advocating a favorable report upon the employers' liability and workmen's compensation bill, which has passed the Senate. President Gompers also appeared before a sub-committee of the Senate Judiciary Committee urging the sub-committee to report to the full Judiciary Committee the Clayton injunction limitation bill, which was passed by the House recently by a very large vote.

The House Interstate Commerce Committee has reported favorably the bill introduced by Congressman Lee of Pennsylvania, a union blacksmith, providing mediation in coal strikes of extending the provisions of the Erdman law to include both railway employes and coal miners.

Congressman Campbell of Kansas, has introduced a bill in the House, making it unlawful for any person, firm, company or corporation to place upon the market in interstate or foreign commerce, any product or products of convict labor, assembled and ready to use, without printing, embossing or stenciling its name and address of the manufacturer upon such article or commodity, providing that if it is impracticable to place such name and address on the article, it shall be placed upon the label or package containing it. The penalty for violation is a fine not exceeding $1,000, or imprisonment for a period not exceeding six months. Congressman Campbell claims that the effect of this bill will be to abolish the sweatshop, to stop the sale of prison made goods in competition with the products of honest industry and also air in promoting health by preventing wearing apparel, food products, tobacco and cigars from being made under unsanitary and diseased conditions of the sweatshop.

The Senate has concurred in a bill recently passed by the House, with a slight amendment, appropriating $1,000 for the purpose of equipping all army transports with life-boats and rafts, including a number of steel self-righting, self-bailing motor life-boats for each vessel as the secretary of war may deem it necessary to accommodate every person for whom transportation facilities are now provided, and the crew of said transports. This measure is in conformity with the policy recently adopted to equip all government vessels with adequate life-saving apparatus.

COMPLAINTS AGAINST COMPENSATION LAW

GALESBURG, Ill. — The Labor News of this city is authority for the statement that the compensation law which recently became effective in Illinois is developing some features destined to work an injury to those whom it was framed to protect. It is stated that the large employers of labor who elected to come under the provisions of the law, are insuring their employes and compelling them to pass a rigid examination and discharge those who are not good insurance risks; also weeding out the old men because they are not good risks and because of advanced years more liable to accident. The Labor News observes that this condition of affairs presents such a serious problem that a solution must be reached in the immediate future, else injustice be done to a large number of workmen in this state.

STREET CAR MEN GET INCREASE.

After a conference that lasted all Sunday afternoon and until 12:30 Monday morning, with the exception of a short adjournment, an agreement was reached by the Pittsburgh Railways Company and Division No. 85 of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes, satisfactory to both sides, which will go into effect at once.

A smaller increase was secured by the men than had been hoped for. The old wage rate is as follows: First six months of service, 22 cents an hour; second six months, 24½ cents; second year, 25½ cents; third year, 27½ cents; fourth year, 28½ cents; after four years, 29½ cents. The men asked that the rate be raised to 27 cents for the first six months, 29 cents for the second months; 29 cents during the second year; 30 cents during the third year and after three years' service 31 cents. The new scale gives an increase of 1 cent to all the various classes with the exception of the second-year men, who will receive an increase of 1 cent.

Disposition of the arbitration rules were also made to take effect at once. No arbitration will be used in the future, the disposal of all questions resting finally with President J. D. Callery of the company. The rules will hold for two years.

President Callery said that all other disagreements had been settled amicably. W. D. Mahon, president of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes, said the same thing. Those present at the meeting included 13 men from the different car barns, President Mahon, E. B. Shafer, president of Division No. 85, Business Agent J. J. Thorpe and Secretary P. J. McGrath. The men representing the company were President Callery, F. N. Jones, general superintendent; M. J. Maxwell, superintendent, and Clarence Burleigh, attorney.

The Church Federation's activity committee in a letter to the San Francisco labor council announced itself ready to assist the unions to secure better conditions and obtain one day's rest a week for workers. The council indorsed recommendations of the law and legislative committee for a $200,000,000 national highway from Atlantic to the Pacific.

Granite Cutters Get Advance

QUINCY, Mass., June 17.—The Granite Cutters' Union at Lewiston and Auburn, Me., has successfully negotiated a new agreement with contractors which increases the wage 25 cents per day, and eliminates a machine tool, the use of which is very unhealthy. The Granite Cutters' convention, recently held in this city, changed the title of their international executive officer, known as the secretary-treasurer, to international president. The duties of this officer remain practically as heretofore. James Duncan, known now as the secretary-treasurer, will be known after July 1, 1912, as international president of the Granite Cutters' Association.

Printers Organize At Waycross

WAYCROSS, Ga., June 15.—An official of the Georgia Federation of Labor here on an organizing mission has been successful in organizing the printers of this city, and all of the printing offices have given assurance that they will sign agreements to pay the union scale and make use of the union label in the future.

Butcher Workmen Win Strike

SIOUX CITY, Ia., June 15.—A strike which has been in progress against the Cudahy Packing Company of this city has been settled by granting to the men working in the packing house an increase in wages. Nearly 1,000 men were involved and the increase received is a material betterment of present conditions.

Pastor Russell's Sermon

MISCONCEPTIONS OF THE DARK AGES.

"Gnashing of Teeth" Merely Bible Hyperbole—Scriptures Misinterpreted—Pastor Russell Says the Bible Does Not Substantiate Horrible Teachings of Dark Ages—Classes the Spirit Mediums of Today With the Witches and Necromancers of the Past.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., June 16.—Pastor Russell delivered two addresses here. In one he chose this text: "There shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth when ye shall see Abraham and Isaac and Jacob and all the Prophets in the Kingdom of God, and you yourselves thrust out." Luke 13: 28.) He said:—

Bible students in the past, resting under the terrible fear of an eternity of torture after death, were inclined to twist the statements of Scripture into supports of their misconception. We are now breaking loose from some of those horrible nightmares of the Dark Ages, finding that the Bible, rightly interpreted, does not substantiate them. The hobgoblins and demons of torture, cloven hoof, forked tail, malignant glance, pitchforks and tongues of flame came down to us, not from the inspired Word of God, but from the pens of misanthropic poets and the brushes of ambitious painters, who revelled in the portrayal of "blood-curling scenes and endeavored to make them more awful than the tortures of the Inquisition chambers of their own day.

So far from describing Satan and his demon hosts as tormenters of the dead, the Bible tells us plainly that the dead are "asleep" and will know nothing of joy or sorrow until the awakening time in the dawning of the Messianic Kingdom, and that Satan and his demon hosts of fallen angels are not far off stoking fires, but bear by an "powers of the air." It tells us also that these seek to oppose the Divine Program and to ensnare our race by personating the dead, using as their chance's deceived spirit mediums as they used witches, wizards and necromancers in the past.

SATANIC INFLUENCE NEAR.

St. Peter, so far from believing that Satan is far off stoking fires, described him as a roaring, angry lion, going about amongst men seeking whom he might devour—deceive, involve in sin. St. Paul forewarns us that Satan and his agents are crafty and are to be expected to present themselves as angels of light—leaders in advanced truth. We are assured that this dreadful, illurious agency has been deceiving the whole world for centuries. The Divine promise is that Messiah's Kingdom shall bind or restrain Satan for a thousand years that he may deceive the people no more until Messiah shall deliver up the Kingdom to the Father.

The Scriptures specially forewarn us of great activity on the part of the evil spirits in the end of this Age, and intimate that they will have much to do with the great Time of world-wide Trouble which will precede the inauguration of Messiah's Kingdom. It is time for us to be on the lookout for those wonderful manifestations of diabolism which in our time will seem to make many of our rare madly insane, brutal, inhuman, diabolical. This is the real danger from the demons—in the present life, and not in the future.

They will deceive and torture humanly to the limit of their permission when they will be restrained by the King of Glory and the bright shining of the Sun of Righteousness, which will usher in the New Day or earth's blessing and restitution.

The words "weeping and gnashing of teeth" represent, not new conditions amongst men, but those which may be witnessed every day—sorrow, heartache, grievous disappointment, and this is the use of this expression in the Bible. We should dismiss all thought that the experiences mentioned will be after death and the result of tortures inflicted by demons.

JEWS' BITTER DISAPPOINTMENT.

In our text the Lord graphically pictures the disappointment of the Jews when they shall find out how great was their mistake in the rejection of Jesus and His Message. They will find that the glorious opportunity offered to them of becoming members in the Bride of Christ was the highest favor that Divine mercy could offer for them as the children of Abraham. They will become aware of their loss of the heavenly portion and also of the earthly portion of the Divine promise. They will see clearly to understand that the promise to Abraham dealt with two seeds, one heavenly, the other earthly, and that the faithful ones of past Ages, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob and all the holy Prophets and other faithful ones of their high station, will be rewarded with the highest position of honor in the earthly phase of Messiah's Kingdom, while they, who had the opportunity of entering the still higher, the spiritual phase of that Kingdom, failed because of unreadiness of heart to receive the Redeemer. They will find that some whom they esteemed as publicans and sinners and Gentiles, by accepting Christ and becoming His disciples, became heirs of the highest promise made to Abraham—became Abraham's spiritual Seed—members of the Messiah, of which Jesus is the Head and the Church His Body.

Alas, poor Jews! Our hearts may well go out to them in sympathy in their chagrin and disappointment when they shall learn the truth on the subject, when they shall learn that they have lost not only the heavenly glory but also the honorable place of being Messiah's earthly representatives. Most assuredly there will be weeping and gnashing of teeth and contrition of heart and penitence, we trust, toward God, which will bring them into the right condition to be amongst the first of humanity to be blessed under the New Order of things. Very soon, we believe, the blindness is to be turned from Israel—just as soon as the elect spiritual Seed of Abraham shall be completed. St. Paul tells us (Romans 11: 25.)

Then favor will return to the natural seed of Abraham: "They shall obtain mercy through your mercy." Their eyes of understanding will open, mentally. They will look upon Him whom they have pierced." They will mourn for Him, and the Divine promise is that God will then pour upon them the spirit of prayer and supplication.

OTHER SIMILAR TEXTS.

All Bible students will recall several other passages of very similar language to that of our text. But when we get the right focus upon them we perceive that they all belong to experiences in the present life, that none of them relate to incidents beyond the tomb. A greater care in the study of the Bible might have protected us from the thought that any of these references apply to the dead, because the Scriptures not only tell that they are sleeping and waiting for the morning, but they also particularly inform us that "the dead know not anything;" "their sons come to honor and they perceive it not or bring low, and they understand it not." Ecclesiastes ix. 5; Job xiv. 21.

This expression, "weeping and gnashing of teeth," is found also in the parable of the Wise and Foolish Virgins. The context tells us that this parable applies to the end of this Gospel Age, at about the time for the second coming of Jesus—not as a sin-bearing Sacrifice, but as the King of Glory. His consecrated, saintly people are likened unto ten virgins—five wise and five foolish.

The parable does not relate to the world at all, but merely to the saints. They are all virgins, all pure, all justified, all sanctified ones. The difference between them is in respect to their wisdom or unwisdom. The differ saints of God in the end of this Age, guided by the Divine Word, will watch very circumspectly, very faithfully searching the Scriptures in respect to all they believe and striving in contform themselves to the Divine will in all that they do and say.

Because of their watchfulness, alertness devoutness and loyalty they are wise and will be in a special position of advantage and knowledge in respect to the things of the Harvest time of this Age. The Master, the Bridegroom, will lead these, and gradually, one by one, they shall go through the door of death into their marriage, experiencing the glorious change promised, "in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye." They will complete the Bride Class, to which none can be added, because it is a foreordained and predestinated number.

With the end of our Age the door to glory and immortality will close, never to open again, because there is to be but one Bride and her membership is limited by foreordination.

THE FOOLISH VIRGINS.

The "foolish virgins" will miss their glorious opportunity by reason of unwisdom. They will be so overcharged with the cares of this life and the deceitfulness of riches and the attempt to have the favor of the world as well as the favor of the Lord that it will hinder them from proper spirits study and from faithfulness in walking in the footsteps of Jesus. Because of this they are styled foolish, unworthy of God's highest favor—the divine nature.

The parable shows them as finally in the very close of the Age, obtaining the light which they should have had sooner had they not been overcharged with worldly cares and ambitions. As soon as they obtain the light they realize the situation and ask for admission as members of the Bride of Christ, to which they were called; but the answer is that it is complete, that the Bridegroom can know only one Wife and cannot recognize them thus. Then to them will come weeping and gnashing of teeth, sorrow, disappointment, chagrin, that they have failed to obtain through their own carelessness this highest Prize, to which Divine mercy and love had invited them.

At that time will be great tribulation in the world, such as never was since there was a nation, and these foolish virgins will have their portion in it—with the hypocrites. The "time of trouble" will be specially upon the hypocritical or "tare" class of Christendom, which has preceded loyalty to God as his Church when in reality their hearts were far from Him. The "foolish virgins" are not hypocrites, but they will be overwhelmed on account of not living fully up to their privileges, they will fail to gain the Prize and be given a portion in the great trouble time with the hypocrites.

This is the Master's own description of the matter. A little later on (Revelation vii) He tells us more on the subject, that only Bible students may fully appreciate and understand. He tells us that after the completion of the Church, spiritual Israel, the 144,000, a great multitude will "come up through great tribulation and wash their robes and make them white in the blood of the Lamb." These will be honored with a place before the Throne, while the "elect," as the Bride, will be honored with immanced in His Throne.

This multitude will be granted palm branches, representing a final victory, but they will never be granted the crowns of victory which will belong only to the elect, "wise virgin" class, the Bride upon the Throne. The Bride class will be the Temple company, composed of living stones; but the Great Company, the "foolish virgin" class, will not be stones of that Temple, but will serve God in the Temple, an honorable place will thus be granted the "foolish virgins," who finally get the oil and finally cleanse their robes in the time of trouble, but only at last they attain the portion of the Bride.

In Psalm xiv we have a description of the Church in glory, the Wise Virgin class. She is pictured as a bride, all glorious within and clothed in raiment of gold and fine needlework. The Heavenly Bridegroom will present her faultless before His Father, the Great King, and then we read:

"The virgins, her companions, shall follow her; they shall be brought into the presence of the King." How glad we are that in Divine providence their weeping and gnashing of teeth and sorrow and disappointment at losing a place in the Bible Class will eventually work out for them a condition of heart and a demonstration of loyalty which God can reward with a blessing upon the Heavenly plane!

WAILING IN OUTER DARKNESS.

Another text dealing with "wailing and gnashing of teeth" deserves consideration here. It occurs in connection with the parable of the Wedding Garment. That parable pictures the closing time of this Age, when under Divine blessing God's most saintly people will be given greater light on His Word and be enabled thereby to more fully appreciate the lengths, breadths, heights and depths of His Love and His wonderful providences.

These consecrated ones are represented as being gathered into a great banquet hall, radiantly beautiful. In it they tarry, waiting to be ushered into the banquet proper, in an adjoining Apartment. The light of these apartments is in the parable vividly contrasted with the darkness that prevail's outside which darkness represents the condition of the world and all of God's people who have not yet come into the light of "present truth."

The parable is given specially to show the necessity of the "wedding garment"—that none may enter into the marriage feast except he scrupulously adhere and wear the "wedding garment." On such festival occasions in ancient times it was customary that all guests should be furnished by the host with garments of white which would cover their own garments, and for the time being, as his guests, this placed them all on the same footing, whatever their original station in life. Thus we have pictured the justification which all God's people receive as a gift through the merit of their Redeemer. Being justified by faith the consecrated have not only peace with God, but they have access to this figurative "marriage supper."

The parable is laid in the end of the Age and shows us that at the time an inspection of the Church may be expected. "When the king came in to behold a man who had not on a wedding garment." The implication is that the man had put on the wedding garment, else he could not have gone in at all; and his appearing later on without a "wedding garment" implies that he had rejected the robe provided by his host.

Thus he represented a class of Christians in the our day who, after believing in the merit of Christ's sacrifice, and accepting it as the passport to favors and privileges, ultimately neglect it and count it common or unimportant. The parable shows what is to be expected now, namely, that the Great King will command that such as ignore the merit of His sacrifice be cast into outer darkness

OUTER DARKNESS GENERAL.

But let us note carefully that the "outer darkness" is not something beyond death, but that it prevails everywhere all around us. "Darkness covers the earth and gross darkness the heathen." The only ones who are in the light are the ones whom the Lord has specially received and specially enlightened and specially privileged because they wear the "wedding garment" of Christ's righteousness. The casting out of the Lord without the "wedding garment" into "outer darkness" therefore would mean merely that such a one, despite his struggles and desire to remain in the light, would by Divine providence be denied the holy darkness around us to the whole world and lose those special privileges which he had enjoyed as one of the children of the light and heir of glory.

About the time that the faithful will be ushered into the marriage the great "time of trouble" will break upon the world, and all who are in darkness, the Redeemer of the Lord's flock of teeth" as they behold the collapse of those things upon which they have set their hearts and affections—the things of the present Order. Then the weeping and gnashing of teeth may ultimately be turned into joy, because there is a silver lining to the dark cloud which is about to envelop the world. It will be the dark hour preceding the dawning of the New Dispensation and the blessing of all the families of the earth by Messiah and His Bride, to a degree in which, by the grace of God, dear hearers, let us strive to make our calling and election sure.

TRIBUNE APPRECIATIONS.

Pennsylvania, June 18.

Enclosed please find amount covering my subscription to your valuable paper for another year.

Your paper continues to be a welcome visitor to our household, and its contents read with much interest and pleasure, more especially the Sabbath-school lesson. The Word as set forth by Pastor Russell, whom God is using and honoring as His mouthpiece, not forgetting your part also in publishing "The meat in due season."

Yours truly,
Mrs. A. B. SHUFF.

Massachusetts, June 17.

I appreciate the Tribune very highly and cannot afford to miss one copy. In all it's very interesting, especially the Bible Questions and Sunday School Lessons and above all Pastor Russell's Sermons.

Very truly yours,
J. R. MCCAUSLAND.

Pennsylvania, June 15.

Having renewed my subscription to your paper for another year through the Watch Tower, I herewith send you my appreciation for its many different good features. Our beloved Pastor Russell's Sermons, Sunday Schools Lessons and the Questions and Answers form the many good points. I love to read them.

Yours truly,
J. F. HOFFMAN.

Connecticut, June 13.

I wish to express my sincere thanks to you for the courage in presenting the Truth to the readers of your valuable paper by Pastor Russell Sermons and the other writings on the wonderful themes now due to be understood. May God bless you and prosper you in the good work. I would not like to miss one of the papers for as soon as I have been fed by them I pass them on to others that they can have a good meal.

Yours in the Truth,
ARTHUR C. HAWES.

South Carolina, June 12.

I like the religious department of the Tribune very much, in fact that is the main thing that I take the paper for. I find the Lessons explained clear in his articles which makes them worth reading and remembering.

Yours very respectfully,
JESSE F. CAMP.

Illinois, June 15.

I have been a reader and subscriber of your very interesting paper for about six weeks and am very much pleased with its general make-up and am sorry that I did not get relished a part of it and can say of Pastor Russell's Sermons as those of old said of the Saviour, "never men spake like this man. May God bless you.

S. E. CASE.

New Hampshire, June 15.

I have read with delight to Rev. Dr. Haldeman in which even I can see that he grossly misrepresents the teaching of Pastor Russell and of "Millennial Dawn" so-called. Whether he does so knowingly and intentionally only God who reads the hearts of men knows, and no one else has any right to say.

Personally I believe the Rev. Haldeman is greatly blinded by his own strong prejudices which are encouraged and strengthened by the adversary (the God of this world who hath blinded the minds of them which believe not, lest the light of the glorious gospel of Christ should shine unto them") (II. Cor. 4: 4), therefore he does it ignorantly. It seems to me that Pastor Russell is pre-eminently the one who "handles not the word of God deceitfully," which he handles like all its statements as no other human author has done since the days of the Apostles, so far as I am able to judge. Surely Mr. Russell "handles not deceitfully" but "rightly divides the Word of Truth."

It is hard indeed in these days to tell just when truth is to be found when sets and parties are in such violent opposition in all lines of life, social, industrial, scientific and religious. It is hard to decide what views to accept of which leaders to follow. But while no human leader is infallible, yet in things religious I think we would be safer to follow the one who sticks most closely to the Word of God and whose teaching is in harmony with that Word, however, it may differ from the doctrines of men. It is my firm belief that the Rev. Haldeman either does not know what Mr. Russell really teaches or else he never honestly tried to prove by the only competent authority (God's own Word) whether those views are correct or not, and in either case it would seem he had no right to condemn them as false. Nothing is more certain than this: If Pastor Russell's teaching is true no power can hinder or prevent its accomplishing the purpose for which it is given, II Cor. 13: 8) if it is not true it will fail and fall as all errors must sooner or later (Prov. 14: 12.) God is at the helm. Let us all "seek to follow that which is good," and "wait patiently on the Lord," committing "all our ways into him.

Yours in the love of fair play and justice.

MRS. C. H. BURKE.

Illinois, June 15.

The more we see of your valuable paper the more we appreciate the pains that you are taking to serve us, and we assure you that you will get as many subscribers as I can induce to take it.

Yours very sincerely,
JONAH JOHNSON.

Connecticut, June 17.

My subscription runs out in July and I have just renewed it through the Watch Tower. I have had the thirteen volumes of Dawn studies for 18 years. Oh what opening of the eyes to the Truth and now the Sermons, Question Box, Sunday School Lessons, they all help to throw light on the Blessed Book. I have long thought Pastor Russell to be a special gift of God's providence to spread the Truth now due to the household of faith and to declare anew the Glad Tiding of great joy which shall be to all people when all the blind eyes shall be opened and deaf ears unstopped. May the Redeemer of the Lord attend you in helping spread the Truth along in printing the best sermons ever printed.

Yours in the present Truth.
MRS. A. E. HAMMOND.

Colorado, June 18.

I am renewing my subscription to your much esteemed paper and wish to say how much I appreciate, especially the portions devoted to Bible instruction and the courage you have manifested in publishing weekly this great Harvest Message which has come to us through Pastor Russell's sermons. I assure you your paper will be a welcome weekly visitor as long as you continue the good work you have thus far proved efficient. We find the Question Box very instructive and believe it is doing a wonderful work in giving light on difficult Bible texts. May you continue in spreading the meat in due season to the household of faith.

Yours very truly,
J. A. MCCONNELL.

Colorado, June 16.

I regret so much that I have been careless in noticing the expiration of my subscription to your valuable paper which I prize so highly on account of the Sermons which I believe God is using particularly in this grand Harvest time, and the space you are giving to the Sermons, Bible Studies, Poems and Letters of Appreciation we appreciate very much. May rich blessings be yours.

Yours very respectfully,
MRS. E. M. WATERS.

Illinois, June 17.

It gives me great pleasure to send you a new subscriber to your paper. I have been a subscriber for a number of years and I assure you I shall be until the time when the Sermons are no longer published.

I admire the way you handle the Sermons and also the Question Box; they are certainly fine and also the way you present the labor news.

Sincerely yours,
H. D. BRIGGS.

Colorado, June 17.

Allow me to thank you for the benefit I have and am still deriving from the weekly visits of the Tribune, due to your publishing the religious lessons from Pastor Russell's pen.

Who would not be uplifted as they come to know our God is love and of the great plan of redemption He has provided for all mankind even while yet in their sins.

Well may your heart rejoice in this your privilege of helping to scatter the darkness and to send out the light that is as soon to enlighten every man that cometh into the world.

May your willing hands continue the privilege and love to our Father of Love the blessing to follow.

Your grateful reader,
MRS. GEO. MCNEILL.

New York, June 17.

Having seen your paper several times and looking it over closely, I have become very much attached to it. I do not believe I have ever seen a weekly newspaper that came with a clean line of reading matter as yours does. I notice also that you are endeavoring to keep in touch with the world abroad as well as in our own country, that your readers might also be kept in touch with the world.

There is one special feature of your paper which attracts my attention very much, and that is, C. T. Russell's Sermons. I have read several of his sermons from your paper and find that it is just what I have been seeking for.

You will find inclosed money order with which I desire to purchase a one year subscription of your paper that I might have this precious Truth, to help satisfy my hunger and thirst after righteousness.

Hoping that you will continue with your good work, I am for at least one year, one of your patronizers.

Yours truthfully,
RAY CRAW.

New Jersey, June 16.

A paper so rich in appreciations as yours gives one a feeling of apologizing for asking another small thimble to the number. However, I do desire to tell you how much I enjoy reading Mr. Alfred I. Ritchie's views on "Hell" in your issue of May. The writer's style is very fascinating as well as are his logical arguments. I notice he does not hesitate to say that he has seized the light on the Scriptures from Pastor Russell, unlike the "upstart" Shakespeare describes.

"But when he once attains the topmost round, he then unto the ladder turns his back."

Tribune is a wide-awake paper and deserves the prosperity it enjoys. Wishing you continued success.

M. ELIZABETH WOODWORTH.

It is only when we remember that the Kingdom of God—under Solomon was a foreshadowing of the Kingdom of Christ that we get the proper view of the situation. It was God's typical kingdom and Solomon sat upon its throne as God's representative. So a greater than Solomon is eventually to sit upon the throne of earth and extend the Kingdom to the uttermost bounds and bring the blessings—riches, honor, wisdom and power greater than we can now properly appreciate and but feebly foreshadowed in Solomon's experiences. Solomon's blemishes are not to be considered as typical blemishes in the Kingdom of Christ, however. They teach another lesson, namely, that all power and wisdom in the present time are hindered by the unfavorable conditions surrounding, so that they become traps and snares, even to the wisest and best intentioned of men. Meantime the Lord's promise through Moses and the prophets was for a greater than Solomon, and wiser than he and richer and more powerful than Solomon; able and willing to execute the Divine will amongst men, and to bring in a Kingdom of everlasting righteousness. That Kingdom has not yet appeared amongst men, and hence we still pray "Thy Kingdom come; thy will be done on earth, as it is in Heaven."—Watch Tower.

"Out of the heart are the issues of life." Ah, yes. This is true in two senses. The issues of life as respects the world are those of which we are guided and influenced by the heart. If our deeds and words would be pure and holy and helpful, they must be backed by a loyalty of heart. Again, "out of the heart are the issues of life" in the sense that the ultimate results that we shall obtain are not according to any formula of the New Order we make, nor of any creed to which we might assent, nor of any course of study which we might undertake; but those issues would be according also largely on account of the real attitude of our hearts, because all the issues of life, if they extend only to the outward man, and not the inward springs, will never bring us to the Mt. Sion. While the Lord has promised to those that love him with all their hearts, in those who are fully consecrated in heart to him and his services—Watch Tower.

HYGIENIC VALUE OF PRAYER.

At a recent medical conference Dr. Hyslop paid a remarkable tribute to the invisible value of prayer in the English Churchman. In treating of the influence of moral and religious environment, he said it ought to be taken into account by medical physicians, to fight against all those influences which tended to produce either indifference or intemperance towards religions. Of all hygienic measures to counteract disturbed hope and depression of spirits, he would undoubtedly put first place to the simple habit of prayer. Its effect on the mind was more beneficial than any other therapeutic agent known.

Apropos of which may be quoted the following from Longfellow's "The Psalm of Life":

"Trust no future however pleasant,
Let the dead past bury its dead!
Act, act in the living present,
Heart within and God o'erhead."

AERIAL ROPEWAYS.

Unique Method of Handling Timber in German East Africa.

Aerial ropeways have been used for many purposes and with varying success in different parts of the world, but probably unique in its way is the installation for timber transport at the New Moshi mills in the Usambara mountains of German East Africa, and its success during the last eighteen months is likely to encourage the provision of similar devices in other colonial timber regions where transport difficulties exist. The timber covered by the installation mentioned is upward of five miles—that is, from the sawmills on the edge of the forest, situated at an altitude of 5,220 feet, and the nearest railway station, between seventy and eighty feet above the sea level. A log road or other surface line was out of the question in such a descent, especially as the road is of a treacherous character. How steep the cableway is in parts may be gathered from the fact that between the two angle stations the gradient is actually 41 degrees, which has been rarely exceeded anywhere in the world. Along this cable rough or sawed logs up to forty-six feet in length and weighing one ton make their way down the mountain side to the railway station, and rails and other loads are hauled up to the sawmills.

The construction of the cableway was an engineering feat of no ordinary kind and necessitated the employment only of the two angle stations mentioned, but also of two tension towers, and it is to be noted that none of the supporting towers are of considerable height, one actually being as high as 100 feet. Steel had to be used throughout owing to the danger of wood destroying ants, but it is interesting in view of similar installations which may be put up that the whole work was carried out by unskilled native labor under the direction of the European engineers.

FITTING HORSESHOES.

Views of an Expert Who Practices the Cold Setting Method.

The subject of setting shoes hot or cold has been discussed pro and con for a few years, but of late I have not seen much of it. It seems to have died a natural death; but, be that as it may, there are still suggestions to be thrown out for those who have not yet attained satisfactory results.

For my part, I am satisfied that the way I have learned from instructions from other good shoers, and my own experience, that the shoe stays very well, and the hoofs stay as straight as can be expected, writes a Pennsylvania farrier in Blacksmith and Wheelwright. I am a firm believer in cold fitting and no fib. My shoes stick inevitably until the feet are too long, no matter whether the horse is used on the city streets, on the farm or on the open pike. The tip is put on to help hold the shoe, which if other work is done well is not necessary. In the first place, dress the right foot level, and let all of the horn or rasp all of the quick, and a small part of the sole, come up as a level on a perfect plane. Then fit a level your shoe perfectly, letting the two plane surfaces rest firmly on each other. When nails are set, drive them firmly into the recess of the shoe with your shoeing hammer, striking each nail several hard blows until the head is firmly set.

FIG. 1.—HORSESHOE NAIL ROLLER.

Having a clinch I use a puller like Fig. 1. When all nails are firmly driven, I drop the foot, take it forward, cut nails off with a sharp pair of nippers, and with a file remove the loose hoof under the nails, and pull the nail end out with the puller as much as it will, then trim those ends down with a rasp, just long enough to double them round, as shown in Fig. 2, then your shoe is on as tight as table. The heel ends of the shoe need not project more than half an inch, less is better.

To Detect Fire Damp in Mines.

One of the simplest of the many suggested tests for fire damp in mines is that described to the Scottish Society of Arts. It is an attachment that may be applied to any oil or safety lamp, and consists of a loop of copper wire supported on a brass rod passing through the oil vessel. To make a test the loop is moved into the flame. This becomes instantly nonluminous, but if fire damp is present in the air the cap is clearly seen. The test can be made in a moment at any time, without turning down or putting out the light. It is claimed that the percentage of fire damp this method will detect is exceedingly small, and that results of trials in both laboratory and mine go to show that this is one of the most sensitive, accurate, and convenient means of revealing the presence of inflammable gas in mine or other air.

Trees Purify the Air.

It has been calculated that a single tree, which through its leaves to purify the air from the carbonic acid arising from the perspiration of a considerable number of men, perhaps a dozen or even more. The volume of carbonic acid exhaled by a human being in the course of twenty-four hours is put at about 100 gallons, but by Boussingault's estimate a single square foot of leaf surface, counting both the upper and the under sides of the leaves, can, under favorable circumstances, decompose at least a gallon of carbonic acid in a day. One hundred square yards of leaf surface then would suffice to keep the air pure for one man; but the leaves of a tree of moderate size present a surface of many hundred square yards.

A Rasp Cutting Machine.

A new machine of German make is now available for cutting rasps. It cuts every kind of rasp, including those which have hitherto been cut only by hand because of the difficulties in designing a practical machine to do this work. Among the automatic properties of the new machine is an arrangement whereby it reduces the number of teeth cut on the tapered part of the tool without the necessity of being stopped or otherwise interfered with. The output is consequently rapid, and little attention is required.

Device to Straighten Bowed Legs.

Thomas M. Allan of Toronto has patented a device that should prove a boon to bow legged and pigeon toed folk. It provides an exercising device designed to straighten bowlegs and knockknees as well as pigeon toes by means of suitably disposed pads in a frame and arranged to so bear against the opposite sides of the leg as to produce the desired straightening effect.

Platinum Knee 25 Sapyuans.

It was not long ago that a German savant, when in Egypt, was examining the contents of a tomb ascribed to an Egyptian queen of the seventh century before Christ. Among articles of use and adornment he came across a plate which at first he took to be silver; but on closer investigation this turned out to be platinum, probably from alluvial deposits washed away from the upper Nile in times of flood. Since then other discoveries have led to the conclusion that the metal was known to the Egyptians and esteemed for its useful properties.

To Clinch.

Little's mother heard a great splash in the bathroom, and, upon investigation found her little daughter standing in the partially filled tub, in a most bedraggled condition.

"Why, you bad, Gemma," she explained, "I've been trying to walk on the water, and it's no fool's job, let me tell you."—Judge.

The Greater Evil.

"A visitor to see you, sir," said Senator Greatherd's secretary.

"I'll bet he wants some favor," grumbled the senator.

"It's a lady, sir."

"Ah! That means half a dozen favors."—Catholic Standard and Times.

A SPLENDID OPPORTUNITY

Brother J. A. Bohnet desires an unencumbered married couple to join him permanently on the Cemetery farm, R. F. D. 5, North Side, Pittsburg, Pa., to serve under the Bible House terms. This is a splendid opportunity for a suitable couple or Truth friends, who have some knowledge of farming to have a comfortable home amid pleasant surroundings.

Appreciations

Missouri, June 19.

We rejoice to see you give so much space to such a noble work. We think perhaps you are something like an editor we were talking to later. He said he first read the sermons to see what they were, but now he reads them because he thinks they are the most wonderful in the world. Yes, he said the ministers offered objection at first, but then he said so many people of his town came to him and praised him for publishing them that he thought he would lose caste if he did not, so he is glad now that he did it. Again thanking you for such a good paper, I remain your reader.

MRS. C. STOKES.

Florida, June 15.

Through the kindness of a dear sister in the Truth your splendid paper is sent to me and I want to tell you how I appreciate the gift as well as the pleasure I take in reading it on account of our beloved Pastor Russell's Sermons, the Sunday School Lessons and Question Box.

I read it all very carefully two or three times and then pass it along among friends once I meets with the highest praise from one and all.

As I read the Letters of Appreciation I fancy myself in a testimony meeting looking into the happy faces of dear friends, listening to the sweet old story that never grows old, the story that satisfies our longings as nothing else can do.

May the dear Lord bless you in spreading His Truth so widely and may the light reach the darkened minds of many good and saintly people through your efforts. With best wishes for your continued success and love for His Truth.

AND SHE WAS A SINNER.

Luke vii, 36-50—June 23.

Watchword for the month: Jesus, Saviour of all occasions, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners."—1 Timothy i, 15.

THE GOSPEL OF CHRIST is the Message of Divine compassion toward sinners. All reformers recognize sin and propose reconciliation with God—by works of chastity, by voluntary self-torture, or by future retribution. None of the heathen gods have any touch of sympathy for humanity. The Bible alone tells of a God impressed with the feeling of human infirmities; "God commendeth His love toward us in that while we were yet sinners Christ died for us."—Romans v, 8.

Q.—Is it proper for a Christian to engage in physical exercises, or physical sports? If so, would like to have your thought on this matter and, if possible, any Scriptures bearing on the subject, as I know of some people who seemingly think it a sin to devote any thought to the care of the body. (J. E. M.)

Answer.—The mind or will is the master of the body. The condition of the mind is largely affected by the condition of the body. A sound mind is a sound body is the ideal condition. To keep the body and the mind in proper condition, it is essential that they be exercised. If it be a law of nature that inactive products decay and disease. Any stagnant pool is a good illustration of this law. The Christian whose desire is to serve his God and his fellow-man, and who wills to do so, should recognize that he can work out his will and desires more effectively with a sound mind and a sound body than with those that are disabled or injured through neglect or disease. Considering the body from this standpoint, as an instrument or a function to be utilized by the will in accomplishing good works, it would be the part of wisdom for us to have it in excellent condition in order to achieve the best results. The orderly, systematic care of such bodies as God has developed, the traits of character that are essential to the Christian development. Temperance, self-control, determination, confidence, self-denial, etc., are naturally acquired by those who pursue a regular course of training with the object of devoting their time and energies to the service of their Lord. The Apostle says: "Bodily training is profitable for a little; but piety is profitable for all things, having a promise of the present life, and of that which is future."—1 Timothy iv, 8.

Q.—Will you kindly explain this seemingly harsh Bible statement, the expression of the Savior, as given in the fifth chapter of Matthew, the 19th verse: "And woe unto them that are with child, and to them that give suck in those days?" (J. G. D.)

Answer.—This expression is a portion of our Lord's great prophecy relative to events and conditions that would develop in the last days of the Christian dispensation. As with all prophetic expressions it is in highly figurative language. The clue to the understanding of the prophecy is found elsewhere in the Scriptures. A woman is used as a symbolical representation of a church. Thus the true Church of Christ is referred to as a "chaste virgin" and also in another picture as the "Bride, the Lamb's wife" (II Corinthians xi, 2; Revelation xxi, 9). The false churches are represented as corrupt and defiled women (Revelation xvii, 1-5). Compare these two verses with Revelation xxi, 8-11. The "mother harlots" is represented as a lewd woman, and also as the great mystical city of Babylon. Her daughters, the denominational systems that are the offspring of the parent system, are likewise represented as being corrupt. The true church is represented as the pure woman, the Bride, and also as the heavenly city of Jerusalem. In the end of the Age, at the time of the Lord's return from heaven, those who are members of the false churches are represented as being babes both conceived and born. They have been made of the milk of the Word as the Apostle says (Hebrews v, 12-14); they are not sufficiently developed in knowledge and grace to assimilate the strong and important doctrines. It will be a special time of sorrow for the religious false systems in that day, "those who are with child," and also to those who are nursing the milk—in other words "giving suck."

"He Tenderly Forgave Her Sins."

Q.—How shall we harmonize the apparently contradictory expressions found in the following Scriptural quotations—"Thus have ye made the commandment of God of none effect through your TRADITIONS"? (Matthew xv, 6; Mark vii, 13.) "And profited in the Jew's religion above many my equals in mine own nation, being more exceedingly zealous of the TRADITIONS of my fathers"? (Galatians i, 14.) "Therefore, brethren, stand fast, and hold the TRADITIONS which ye have been taught, whether by word, or our epistle"? (II Thessalonians ii, 15.)

Answer.—The Savior's words addressed to the Scribes and Pharisees, the religious leaders of His day, have reference to the theories and opinions that had been formed and handed down from father to child. They had upon the inspired testimony of the Prophets and the faithful servants of the Lord. Many of these teachings were in direct opposition to the instructions contained in the Holy Scriptures, and because their teachings set forth by those who had been appointed to teach the people the true understanding of the inspired Word, they were received as being true. In this way the commandment of the Lord had been made void. Jesus' words had direct reference to the teachings of the Scriptures and also to his own instructions which he had presented to those that he was addressing. In other words, there are true traditions and false traditions. All of those which are in harmony with the teachings of the Divine Word are true, and all those which are not in harmony are false and not to be accepted. We cannot be particular in our efforts to get the Truth.

EVERYBODY'S BIBLE QUESTION BOX

YOUR BIBLE QUESTIONS WILL BE ANSWERED IN THESE COLUMNS, OR BY MAIL IF SENT TO THE EDITOR OF THE JOURNAL.

Q.—Are we to accept the Bible account of the miracles that were performed in olden times? Why are not miracles performed in our day? (Doubtful.)

Answer.—This is an age of miracles, with messages being flashed thousands of miles through space, and under the seas, and around the globe. Marvelous discoveries and wonderful inventions are being made almost daily. Some of the achievements of our times almost surpass those of former days, even the miracles of which we read in the Scriptures. As a matter of fact, miracles are transpiring all about us constantly. The reproduction of living organism, either animal or vegetable, is beyond comprehension, as well as beyond our power—hence miraculous. We can see the exercise of life principle, but can neither understand it nor produce it. Two seeds are planted side by side; the conditions, air, water, and soil are alike; they grow we cannot tell how, nor can the wisest philosopher explain the miracle. These seeds develop characteristics that are exactly opposite, though the conditions were the same. The Creator of them knows all of the marvels that we see about us in the material world, would surely be able to perform the miracles recorded in the Bible, and therefore we need have no doubts as to their authenticity.

Q.—Did God create Satan? (C. F. T.)

Answer.—According to the Bible, Satan, of his own volition, became the adversary of God. Originally, as God created him, he was given the form, grand of character and of a high order of angelic nature, a "covering cherub" (Ezekiel xxviii, 14). He transformed himself from the loyal, glorious servant of God, to a bitter enemy and opponent. The Scriptures tell us what constituted this transforming work—that it was an evil thought, a disloyal thought, an ambitious thought. The angel Lucifer—signifying "bright morning star"—said within himself, "I will ascend into heaven, I will exalt my throne above the stars of God (the other angels) . . . I will be like the Most High (Isaiah xiv, 12-14). As God is the Governor of the entire Universe, Satan like to be the Emperor of some quarter of it where I might reign supreme and not be subject to any one's command. Lucifer's opportune moment came when our first parents were created. Perceiving that they had the procreative powers to fill the earth with posterity, he seized upon the thought that by alienating them from God, he could work an influence over them and eventually have an earthly dominion of his own. God has permitted him to carry out much of his scheme, while he was, at the same time, unconsciously, working out a part of the Divine purpose. It is not to be understood that Satan has in any sense thwarted the Divine Program; on the contrary it has been a part of God's great plan to permit evil to reign for 6,000 years and then to bind Satan and establish righteousness.

Q.—Can you give some Scriptural proof that faith dying as it is practiced today is of the Adversary or the Evil One? I know that it cannot be of the Lord because there are some who are engaged in performing wonderful cures, as I happen to know personally, and who are devoid of faith in the teachings of the Bible. For instance, a dear friend of mine was healed from a death bed by the powers of one of these "cures" who in his teachings was denying the very foundation principles of the Scriptures. (A. N.)

Answer.—There is no question but that many remarkable cures are effected by some who seemingly are able to exert an influence that is beyond and above the natural powers of man. It is equally true that many of these healers make no professions as to Christianity. Their power then must be from an evil source, as the righteous Lord would not aid those who are not in harmony with Himself. In agreement with this thought we read in the seventh chapter of Matthew, the 22d and 23d verses, that some would accomplish many wonderful works, even in the name of Christ, to whom the Lord would not recognize them. After all, the Lord's followers are not to be known by their "great works" but by their fruits: "Ye shall know them."—Matthew vii, 20.

Q.—Is it possible for Christians to handle deadly serpents and to drink poisons without suffering injury in any degree, as stated in Mark xvi, 18? (E. F. D.)

Answer.—Since God invites man to reason on His Word (Isaiah i, 18), we must know that His Word is reasonable. Many questions in the question box are unreasonable. But is it a part of God's Word? We answer, No. St. Mark's Gospel originally ended with verse nine, chapter sixteen; the additional verses (10 to 20 inclusive), which includes the above quotation, are not found in the old manuscripts of the Bible. All scholars are agreed that the addition was made about six hundred years after St. Mark's Gospel was written, and hence the quoted words are no part of the Gospel, and we know them to be untrue. To scrutinize them, now that we know about them, would be to join with those who wrote them in adding to the Word of God (Revelation xxii, 18, 19). Human experiences shows that not even the best of Christians can, with impunity, "Take up serpents and drink deadly poison."

Woman and the Home

FREAKISH BATHING GOWNS WORN BY THE SUMMER GIRL.

THE smart bathing costume is made along radical lines, as may be seen by a glance at the illustration. One costume whose convenience cannot be antipaid has a divided skirt. The rose shown in the picture is, of course, in order to show the cut of the garment, but when the panel in front and the companion panel in the rear fall in place it is very decreed in appearance. The suit is made of waterproofed white satin and trimmed with satin in dark blue. The other bathing dress, which is cut along more conventional lines, is built of red satin foulard in various shades. The tucked bodice and puffed sleeves are very pretty, and the square neck is finished with a band of plain material that enhances the whiteness of the skin.

simple gowns. To see their merits devoted schoolgirls decked in costly fabrics, bedecked and ornamented, gives an end of heartache and, worse still, creates a germ of dissatisfaction in the heart.

It is a strange thing that women who are by nature kind and sweet and noble are sometimes almost gimmicks of fashion, striving to outdo their neighbors to outdress their husbands' companions, to give costly entertainments to ride in magnificent motorcars, to luxuriate in endless luxury, all for the effect of the show. It is a thing not quite understandable by the average man—not that he is without a great faults, for in truth a model of rectitude goes home frequently with the financial ear or the financial scalp of his neighbor across the way. He is just as cruel and just as unpardonable as the women. But it is also certain that he is not as tender hearted and by nature is not as much given to sympathy and consideration for others. The very nature of his duties in life, the fighting as the need of its family, makes him less considerate. The woman, however, is gentle and kind and—tact and should have more consideration for those not so well placed in this world.

Seed Cakes.

If you wish to make a very plain seed cake it may be built up on the recipe for a simple currant cake. Where the recipe calls for currants just substitute caraway seeds.

Another way to make a plain caraway seed cake is to use Vienna bread dough or dough with milk and add to it an ounce or two of butter or sugar and caraway seeds to taste.

The allowance of seed is usually small, a teaspoonful of them to the pound of flour being used. Too many seeds in the cake will make it dry.

Making Prunes Tempting.

For prune compote get large and slow cooking prunes. They should be absolutely fresh. Use a pound of them, soaking well in lukewarm water. Then wash and cover with cold water. Add the rind of half a lemon, a small stick of cinnamon and a half cup of sugar. Boil slowly for forty-five minutes; then dissolve a half teaspoonful of corn starch with a little cold water, throw in with prunes; boil up again and add a glass of grape juice. Let cool and serve.

A MERE MAN'S VIEWPOINT.

Public Sentiment and the School Authorities Should Discourage the Wearing of Elaborate and Expensive Graduation Gowns.

By BYRON WILLIAMS.

THE average man who has fussed something of the pleasures of this world and who knows something of the trials of the lowly and downtrodden striving to educate their children will scarcely be in favor of the stand taken by certain college girls who object to the simple graduating costume as outlined by the college officials. The story says some of the seniors declare they will forego their diplomas rather than submit to the plain and simple costumes demanded by the authorities. The marshals have posted the rules that designate a costume. To consist of a plain tailored skirt waist with long sleeves, a plain white skirt, no tan tons, three inches from the ground; as pendente gown two inches above the bottom of the skirt, with white linen collar, small white bow tie, white belt with either no buckle or a pearl one, black oxford shoes and black stockings; no jewelry, no flowers, no ornaments for the hair, no fancy hairpins.

It would seem to the average man that these costumes were quite fitting for the commencement exercises. If any criticism could be passed upon woman it is her silly desire to outdress her less fortunate sisters. This may have its desirable features, but in many instances it might be a hardship for the parents of certain girls to provide their daughters with costly dresses for commencement time. But this is not the worst of such a custom. Some girls at graduation time—and I am speaking now of graduation in any city or village—cannot, in their circumstances, secure costumes that exhibit the expenditure of large sums of money. They must be content with

Good Form

The Week End Party.

As the time approaches for what are called "week end" parties at country homes all sorts of questions about just the right thing to do in many ways arise such an invitation as received and accepted are asked:

Whether "tips" are to be tendered for services rendered; whether a note to a hostess is necessary afterward; whether one's stay is to be exactly defined, and so on.

As far as tips are concerned, it tends greatly to making the stay of the temporary guest far pleasanter to be prepared to tip on all occasions, even if it be but small amounts. The maid who makes up the room, the man who attends the door, the chauffeur, the coachman, if there be such an important individual left in these days of motorcars and electrics; the waiters and the caddies where golf is offered—indeed, all those who serve in any capacity expect a tip nowadays.

The up to date hostess is demanding of her servants that they refuse to accept tips; that she will pay them enough to allow her guests to feel free to accept services without paying for them. Happy, indeed, should be the guest who is informed by the hostess that "tips" are forbidden.

After a visit, either short or long, a note of thanks is surely due a hostess. It should be written just as soon as possible after one reaches home, and in some cases, especially where a hostess has had to extend such courtesies as paying car fare and the like, a small but appreciable gift may well be sent, something pretty for the dressing table or for the library or a fine artist proof sketch in the picture lover. These are small things to do where one has been delightfully entertained.

Such visits are usually strictly defined as to duration. From Friday to Monday forenoon is called the "week end" visit—that is, Friday evening, giving the two days of Saturday and Sunday for pleasure.

An important thing to be remembered is that a guest should try to be agreeable to other guests. There should be no favorites, and the sweet but bad, all the more reason why guests should be careful to make the house gay with cheerful pleasures.

So the guest who will make the fourth at a game, even if the other three be elderly and somewhat difficult; the other guest who will plan an evening of story telling or improvise charades or cotillons; another who will ask the artists of the party to give them of their plenty in the way of songs, dances and all such amusements, these will always find themselves eagerly sought for. They will be favored with invitations when others are not, and their coming will be welcomed and their going regretted. As one young woman said who had contributed largely to the pleasure of an evening party, "I have had such a beautiful time, Mrs. A——," to her hostess. The reply was interesting: "How could you help having a 'beautiful time' when you are so charming yourself and so entertaining?"

Announcing an Engagement.

With regard to the method of announcing an engagement, here, as in so many other social matters, the simplest is the best. We do not advise inserting a notice in the newspapers. This is not customary in this country, different, since the parties enter into a civil and religious contract, which is made a matter of record by the laws of most states of the Union.

The best way is to name a day to the dear Purins when the engagement will be announced to the world at large. In the meantime the young people may send telegrams and intimate friends the wonderful tidings, asking them to keep it secret until the date selected. It is usually necessary to write some notes, especially to those living at a distance. If the young people have a large circle of relatives and others to notify the mothers usually write some of the letters, which is of an informal character.

Some young women invite their intimate friends to a luncheon, where they announce the engagement. Various ingenious devices may be used for this purpose, but care must always be taken not to give the matter a frivolous aspect. To have the engagement ring make its first appearance at the lunch table would be to take a serious matter altogether too lightly. In these days, when we so often hear the sad news of a divorce, it behooves our young people to enter into the new bond in the right spirit. This should be a spirit of joy and happiness surely, yet touched with the seriousness demanded by the sanctity of a union to last "until death do us part."

If the prospective bride feels that she cannot make the pleasant announcement herself, her mother or sister may do so for her in a few simple words while the guests are still at the lunch table.

The Dinner Invitation.

The invitation to dinner or luncheon should be answered without delay. And in the reply it is well to repeat the date and the hour to prevent any mistake.

Never accept an invitation with the proviso "if nothing happens." Remember that your hostess may want to fill your place with another guest if you cannot accept.

Summer Hand Bags.

In the region of hand bags plaque is being made up for white summer wear. Many bags are now of crochet, and this looks charming with a linen frock, but one can not as a rule say much, for the sake of colored crochet, a thing that contrives to look vulgar even when it happens to be in complete harmony with the tub frock with which it is carried. Macrame is successfully worn with linen or flannel.

Bags are at the moment in a transition stage, or perhaps they have fallen into line with the fashion in regard to other accessories of clothing and show individual whim dictates. Anything some of these are enormous, suede trailing from long cords and hung with deep fringes, while others are quite neat and small, so small, indeed, that they are merely sleeve purses and hold no serve no vanity purposes at all.

The "Sunty" Bonnet.

Children's millinery is really bewitching. For everyday wear there are some "Sunty" shapes, with rather high crowns of coarse straw, the crown outlying the regulation band of ribbon or black ribbon velvet and bunches of close fitting bush styles in drawn rat fets or pliable pedal, some being completely round and others showing an inclination to stand out a scintillation at either side.

Especially pleasing is a pliable straw with a narrow brim and high, squarish crown—in fact, a vertical Paddy shape. Worn at a saucy angle on the right child, with mingling, piquant face, this Paddy is an assured success. Now is the super and reserve at all our splendors by its absence, aided for the most part to a pliable brim that can be rolled or raised up at any angle most becoming to the small wearer.

SEWING ROOM HINTS.

If seams are pressed over a rolling pin or any rounded surface with open edges they draw straight there will be no shiny streak.

A bit of white paper slipped under the foot of a machine needle facilitates threading if the light is dim.

Instead of using darning cotton for mending stockings, use crochet cotton. The latter does not harden when washed.

To prevent the seams of skirts puckering first pin and baste them flat on the table. This should be done from the waist down.

To prevent buttonholes fraying in loose material neatly overcast the edges with fine silk and work the buttonhole stitches slightly "on the slant."

Doctoring Bumps.

Bumps, such as children often receive, should first be thoroughly cleansed with warm water. A few drops of carbolic acid in the water forms a splendid antiseptic. Put cloths as cold as possible on a bump and continue this treatment until the swelling goes down. You may save a child a fit of sickness by nursing the bumps received now and then.

If you would be a good judge hear what every one says.—Portuguese.

Woman's World

Tablets of Mark Twain Made by Miss Church.

MISS ANGELINA SCHUYLER CHURCH.

Mr. and Mrs. George A. Mahan of Hannibal, Mo., recently presented to their home city the house built in 1844 by Mark Twain's father, in which the famous author first saw the light of day.

Miss Angelina Schuyler Church of New York city is the talented young artist who was commissioned to make the bronze tablets which have been placed on the outside of the house in commemoration of the occasion. People who are interested in the education that does not forget character building are enthusiastic over the legend that the inscription tablet presents. It reads: "Mark Twain's life teaches that poverty is an incentive rather than a bar and that any boy, however humble his birth and surroundings, may by honesty and industry accomplish great things."

Pedagogues who have seen the tablets are suggesting that they deserve a place in the public schools of the nation, not only because of their artistry but because of the lesson conveyed, the comfort and stimulus in the suggestion, which could hardly fail to be advantageous, linked with the fascination that Mark Twain exerts over vast numbers of young people.

Miss Church's portrait of the author in the tablet has been called the best yet made. Concerning it the Rev. Joseph H. Twichell of Hartford, a lifelong friend of Twain, says: "I could not have supposed there could have been made so living a likeness of the man in that form. Really it brings my dear old friend to life again as no picture of him does."

Miss Church until recently has confined her art work to depicting animal life, and her study of "The Runaway—An Episode of Central Park, New York City," has won particular favor from critics.

The artistic education of Miss Church has been radically different from the conventional methods that crystallize the ideals of the schools. The only one she has made of teachers has been for the purpose of acquiring technique. The New York School of Applied Design, Mackie of Paris, an authority on composition, and Heard, the animal painter, have been her instructors. Technique having been acquired, Miss Church turned to the teachers to whom she professes her greatest debt—horses and dogs. These she studied from life until she knew their every bone and muscle and their co-ordination.

Miss Church was recently invited by Uruguay to enter a competition for an equestrian statue of a South American hero especially dear to that nation.

A Morning Exercise.

Rising twenty times on the toes every morning is an excellent exercise to strengthen ankle and instep. This exercise will also keep the ankles from growing thick and will make them supple and strong, so that they will not be apt to sprain easily if a misstep is made.

TRIBUNE APPRECIATIONS.

A FRIEND OF MINE.

(Ezekiel 9.)

I saw a man go through the City,
With a Writer's Inkhorn by his side.
He asked no one to show him the way—
The Bible was his guide.
The Scriptures for him did unfold,
He spoke of things both "now and old."
The Truth he could "rightly divide,"
Many passages heretofore misunderstood,
He explained and made them clear,
Brother Russell, God bless him—
is our prayer!

I saw a man go through the City,
With a Writer's Inkhorn by his side.
He asked none to help him along;
But on the Lord relied.
He wrote of the searing reign of Messiah,
He lifted the gospel higher and higher—
Explained fully why our Saviour died
Many forsook their ways of sin,
And to the Lord grew near;
Brother Russell, God bless him—
is our prayer!

I saw a man go through the City,
With a Writer's Inkhorn by his side.
When the "wise and prudent" offered advice;
Their help he gently denied.
His message was "as lovely song."
The erring hearkened and renounced wrong;
Were made "white and purified."
As he encircled the world around,
The heavy laden flocked to hear—
Brother Russell, God bless him—
is our prayer!

I saw a man go through the City,
With a Writer's Inkhorn by his side.
When the "mist" swept away "their refuse of lies."
Great streams of error dried!
Thus flowed instead a beautiful Stream—
Of Truth, as clear as a poets dream.
Thirsty souls were satisfied!
He exploded the error of "Eternal Torment,"
Which lifted a load of care,
Brother Russell, God bless him—
is our prayer!

I saw a man go through the City,
With a Writer's Inkhorn by his side.
He wrote "Studies in the Scriptures."
Many mysteries opened wide,
The Divine Plan of the Ages,
Which Prophets and Sages—
Desired to look into, and yet, were denied!
"Closed and sealed till the Time of the End."
The Angel to Daniel did aswer!
Brother Russell, God bless him,
is our prayer!

I saw a man go through the City,
With a Writer's Inkhorn by his side.
The nations was gathered into the garner;
All the saints were glorified.
The "man" reported the matter saying,
"The truth," "not me, did the slaying"
"Well done." The Lord replied!
And the Great Highway of Probation,
Was opened up to every nation,
By the Bridegroom and His Bride!
The earth was filled with great rejoicing.
My friend became "Joint heir,"
Brother Russell, God bless him,
is our prayer!

KNEE-DEEP IN JUNE.

Tell you what I like the best—
'Long about knee-deep in June,
'Bout the time strawberries melts
On the vine—some afternoon
Like to jes' git out and rest,
And not work at nothin' else.

Orchard's where I'd rather be—
Needn't fence it in for me.
Jes' the shade's any overhead,
And the weeds airly underneath—
Botto sow a man kin breathe
Free and full, and kindo' has Room to keerlessly
Sprawl out lea'thways on the grass
Where the shadders thick and soft
As the kivvers on the bed
Mother fixes in the loft
Allus, when she's company.

Jes' a-sorto' lazin' there—
S'lazy 'at you peek and peer
Through the wavin' leaves above,
Like a feller 'ats in love
And don't know it, ner don't keer.
Ever'thing you hear and see
Got some sort of interest—
Maybe find a bluebird's nest
Tucked up there conveenently
Fer the boy 'ats up to be
Up some other apple-tree,
Which the swallers skootin' past
'Bout as peert as you could set;
Er the Bob-white raise and whiz
Where some other's whistle is.

Ketch a shadder down below,
And look up to find the sky—
Er a hawk—away up there,
Peacerably cross in the air—
Hear the old hen squawk, and squat
Over ever' chick she's got,
Suddent-like—and she knows where
That air hawk is, well as you—
You jes' bet yer life she do—
Eyes a-glitterin' like glass,
Waiting till he makes a pass.

Pee-wees' singin', to express
My opinion, 's second class,
Yit you'll hear 'em more or less;
Sapsucks gittin' down to biz,
Weedn's' out the lonesomeness;
Mr. Bluejay, full o' sass,
Is them baseball sickines o' his,
Spectin' round the orchard jes'
Like he owned the premises.
Sun out in the fields kin stay,
But fist on yer back, I guess,
In the shade's where glory is.
That's jes' what I'd like to do
Riddy fer a year or two.

Plague, if they ain't somepin' in Work at kindo' goes ag'in
My convictions—fact about Here in June especially—
Under some old apple-tree,
Jes' a-restin' through and through,
I could git along without
Nothin' else at all to do
Only jes' a-wishin' you
Was a-gittin' there like me,
And June was eternity.

Lay out there and try to see
Jes' how lazy you kin be—
Dimple round and scrooch yer head
In the clover-bloom, er pull
Yer straw hat across yer eyes
And peek through it at the skies,
Thinkin' of old chums 'at's dead,
Maybe smilin' back at you
In hevvin 'mid the beautiful
Clouds o' gold and white and blue—
Mebbe a man kin really love—
June, you know, I'm talkin' of.

March ain't never nothin' new—
Apitle's altogether too
Brash fer me and May-I jes'
Nominate 'er promises—
Little hints of sunshine and Green around the timber-land—
A few blossoms, and a few
Chip-birds, and a sprout or two—
Drap asleep, and think it turns
Fore daylight and snows ag'in—
But when June comes—clear my th'oat
With a honey-sentence, stir
Up the dew and hold my coat.
Whoop out loud, and throw my hat—
June wants me, and I'm to spare.
Spread them shadders anywhere,
I'll git down and waller there,
And obleeged to you at that.

Indiana, June 14,

It gives me great pleasure to renew my subscription to your valuable paper once more through the Watch Tower Bible & Tract society. I am also sending you a new subscriber, Mr. Powell Sugg of Muncie, Ind. We think you fre your good and valuable paper. It is a very welcome visitor at our home. We look forward to its appearance every week on account of its reliable news, of the general conditions of the country and we notice that in them the prophesies of the Bible are being fulfilled. We rejoice especially in reading Pastor Russell's Sermons which glorify our Heavenly Father's name and edify our spiritual welfare. The International Sunday School Lesson is also very refreshing and entertaining to us, and the Question Box is also very beneficial. Many perplexing questions are made very simple and harmonized with the Bible through this department. Dear Editor, you will reap your reward for publishing these Glad Tidings and hurling them broadcast for all who are hungering and thirsting after them.

Yours truly,
H. C. KRULL.

Pennsylvania, June 10.

Through the kindness of a friend my name and address placed on the subscription list of your valuable paper, the National Labor Tribune.

I had never read the Tribune before but would not like to be without it now as I am especially interested in Pastor Russell's Sermons, the Bible Question Box, Letters, etc.

May the Lord bless you for thus helping in His Harvest work.

Yours sincerely,
MRS. BELLE BRIDGETT.

OUR OLD COUNTRY CORRESPONDENCE.

London Transport Workers' Strike Becomes National--The New Civilian Police--An English Form of Pinkertonism--London Building Strike Off, Locomotive Engineers Against Amalgamation--French Seamen and Firemen's Dispute.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

LONDON, June 20.--On June 10 the strike of transport workers which had been running for about a month in London and already covered 100,000 workers was extended to all ports of the United Kingdom. Within three days another 60,000 workers had stopped operations as a consequence and the strike is being put into operation on a more extended scale every day. Some of the unions have got to ballot their members before they can take part in the general strike but they are expected to follow along soon. One of these is the National Seamen and Firemen's Union which alone controls about 50,000 of the men who work on the ships. The big provincial dockers' union is also balloting and all of the signs point towards a very great shut down by the time the second half of June starts.

The capitalistic newspapers of the country are conducting a campaign of extraordinary falsehood. Before the London transport workers' strike the papers declared a strike was impossible. When the whole 100,000 struck it was declared that it would not continue. When it did continue for a few days published every day accounts of its collapse. Even when it extended to those sections of dock workers who had not before struck deaths of the strikers were still preached far and wide. Then when the strike was extended from London to the country as a whole and it became a national one the same newspapers talked of it being a fiasco.

This extraordinary campaign of mendacity continues at the time of writing and as the strike grows stronger and stronger and extends further and further so we are told it is a failure, a fiasco, a collapse. This deliberate perversion of the facts might be regarded humorously were it not for the obvious intention behind it all to poison and depress the minds of other organized workers who, though not being actually in touch with the transport workers, are not able to get the true facts of the situation. Fortunately there exists the new labor daily newspaper, the Daily Herald, and although its circulation and influence so far is small it is still doing splendid work in countering the lies of the other newspapers.

All the arguments against the strikers have now been reduced to the simple one of abuse, sheer and unadulterated. We all know that the dispute originally rose over one man who refused to join the lightermen's union, that being a constituent body embraced in the Transport Workers' Federation, and we further know that once the men were out a list of demands was presented to the dock and shipping employers asking for 26 cents per hour for all workers engaged in transport work in the ports and on the docks. All recognition of the transport unions is also demanded.

With the idea of meeting the employers amicably, if possible, the transport workers' leaders voluntarily gave evidence before the Government Commission appointed to enquire into the dispute although the employers refused to submit any evidence at all. The result was that Sir Howard Clarke, the Government adjudicator, decided on the majority of points in favor of the men.

Still the payers denounced the strikers.

Then proposals were put forward by the Government and accepted by the masters to the effect that if men would return to work and leave their demands for later discussion if the employers would agree to be bound wholly by the decisions eventually arrived at. Of course the unions themselves agreed to be bound in the same way. Again the employers refused even to do this. Then once more the newspapers went on blaming the strikers.

Nothing was left therefore but to declare a national strike which, as before mentioned, was started on June 16. So far as London is concerned the work of the docks is almost at a standstill. Some 8,000 more in allare working. These are mainly imported workers from the country districts and professional blacklegs and scabs. The Shipping Federation got one shipload from a remote Welsh port direct to London on a special vessel retained for the purpose. The strikers have the consolation of knowing that these and the other "free" laborers are costing their employers very much more than the work is worth. Practically double rates are being paid to the blacklegs and they have free board and lodgings and, above all, free beer as well. Naturally they work here like fiends on the whole they are not doing the work usually done by a quarter the number of union transport workers. Large forces of police are even then required to keep upon the lines of communication and convoy all the wagons or trade leaving the docks. About fifty strikers have so far been sentenced for alleged intimidation but on the whole the strike has moved with extraordinary peacefulness.

The big provoking influence, however, likely to cause more and more disaster is the introduction of a body of men called the Civilian Police. These are burly ruffians engaged by the Shipping Federation and the dock employers generally to act as kind of volunteer police force. They wear a uniform and carry heavy staffs and frequently revolvers, and your correspondent presumes they are something like the Pinkerton force of which we have read in American strike reports. It is clear more will

UNITED BROTHERHOOD DOING THINGS.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., June 24.--General Secretary Frank Duffy of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters states that the following trade movements have just been reported to him as the result of trade demands during the past week: Maiden City, Ia., secured an increase from 35 cents to 40 cents per hour and a reduction of hours from 10 to 9 per day. Port Colborne, Canada, gained an increase from 30 cents to 35 cents per hour, effective July 1. Worcester, Mass., obtained Saturday half holiday six months in the year in shops and mills. Meadville, Pa., got a reduction in hours from 9 to 8 per day and a minimum wage of 37½ cents per hour. Rome, N. Y., secured an increase in wages from $3.00 to $3.25 per day, Saturday half holiday after July 1. Muncie, Ind., got an increase in wages from 40 cents to 42 cents per hour. Kingston, Ontario, Canada, got increase from 35¾ cents to 37½ cents per hour. Pomeroy, O., increased wages from 45 cts to $5.00 and reduced hours from 9 to 8. New Haven, Conn., signed a three year agreement, including an increased wage of from 45 cents to 47½ cents per hour to May 1, 1913, and from 47½ cents to 50 cents per hour after that date to May 1, 1914. Salem, Ill., increased wages from 35 cents to 40 cents per hour. Lynn, Mass., increased wages from $3.37 to $4.00 per day. Fon du lac, Wis., got an increase from 35 cents to 38 cents per hour. Buffalo, N. Y., after being on strike for about a month made gain have been successful in securing a minimum wage scale of 50 cents an hour, this being a 5 cent increase. Louisville, Ky., gained an increase in wages from $3.20 to $3.60 per day.

A bill for the establishment of free employment bureaus in all the principal cities of the state has been drafted by the law and legislative committee of the San Francisco labor council.

GREAT VICTORY FOR LABOR.

ALL right-thinking persons will rejoice with labor in the victory it has won in its fight for juster treatment from the United States Steel Corporation. The chairman of the corporation, E. H. Gary, announces that henceforward the corporation will pursue a more liberal policy. The overwork which it has for years exacted from its employes is to be no longer required of them, and a working schedule will be adopted which will permit them to live the life of ordinary human beings, with some time for the wholesome recreation without which their existence is mere drudgery.

John A. Fitch, to whose revelation or conditions among the steelworkers may be attributed a good deal of the agitation against the trust, told recently how the employes of one of the United States Steel concerns big mills would have liked to use the Y. M. C. A. privileges in their own but could not. The work schedule of the mills is such as to make it very hard for the workmen to use the Y. M. C. A. facilities. They would be too tired to use the baths and the bowling alleys, even if they were members. The twelve-hour day and seven-day week leave no leisure. Everything is work, work, work. A man who earns his bread by such inhuman toil barely has a chance to get acquainted with his own children. The Stanley investigation committee of Congress unquestionably deserves a large part of the credit for the steel corporation's resolution to adopt a more humane labor policy. The National Labor Tribune extends its heartiest congratulations to the two hundred thousand employes of the trust who will experience the benefits of the change.

Chairman Gary has been somewhat slow, perhaps, in seeing the light of the new day, but it is better to see it a little late than never. Public sentiment will not tolerate in this age the industrial conditions which prevailed in the past. Every man who works, no matter in how humble a calling, has a right to work in decent surroundings. Furthermore, he has a right to sufficient leisure to permit him to enjoy his home and a fair amount of innocent recreation. One of the greatest manufacturers of England, Mr. Seebohm Rowntree, in a published article recently gave a striking expression of the awakening of the moral conscience in this regard, and it will not be amiss to quote him in this connection. "The churches," wrote Mr. Rowntree, "are seriously to blame for not having roused the rich to a keener sense of the moral principle or brotherhood." And then he continued:

"Had the churches played their part in making us vitally conscious that all our opportunities and talents and concessions should be regarded as a trust, to be utilized not for our own ends, but for the benefit of the community, we should never have heard of labor unrest. It is because we have forgotten our trust that labor rises and says to us: 'If neither love nor justice can induce you to share the good things of the world with your coworkers on fair terms, we who have suffered for generations must demand our share by force.' We must recognize that the issue is to be done to the workers, it will mean sacrifice on the part of the rich. No doubt, as the demand for higher wages and better conditions of work becomes more insistent, the employing classes will improve their methods of organization, and, in many industrial, great improvements can be made in the lot of the workers without materially lessening the earnings of capital. But this will not solve the problem. The poverty at one end of the social scale will not be removed except by encroaching heavily upon the great riches at the other end. I think during the next few years we shall see labor organized more effectively than ever before, successfully demanding a much larger share of the wealth annually produced."

ANOTHER SHIP CANAL ARGUMENT.

PITTSBURGH'S need of a ship canal is so overwhelming that no argument is required to show it. But the friends of the canal are nevertheless warranted in pointing to the latest decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission on the coal rates. Sometime ago the commission ordered the railroads to reduce the rate on coal from Pittsburgh to the lakes to 75 cents a ton. It had formerly been 88 cents, which was grossly excessive. And Pittsburgh shippers have been urging the commission to order still another reduction, claiming that 65 cents would be some too low. This rate the commission refuses to allow. Pittsburgh coal operators will accordingly have to continue paying 75 cents a ton freight to the lakes. The canal would hand their coal there for 20 to 25 cents a ton. The enormous saving the canal would thus effect in freights would be of inestimable benefit to the Pittsburgh coal industry. Every other local industry would be benefited in proportion, the steel industry most of all, since the canal would give us cheaper iron ore. So important is the canal to Pittsburgh's industrial future that if West Virginia and Ohio had not decided to help us in spanning it we should have gone ahead and built it ourselves, securing the necessary authority from the state legislature.

NEW OHIO CONSTITUTION.

THE Ohio constitutional convention--one of the most important indexes in many years to the trend of political thought--has been all most overlooked recently in the presidential excitement, but it has gone steadily ahead and is now through its labors. A summary of the principal features of the proposed new constitution shows that the progressive sentiment of the day has had a powerful influence upon it.

Besides the proposals previously adopted, such as woman suffrage, liquor license and judiciary reform, several important ones were accepted and others rejected. One of those adopted is for the regulation of bill-board advertising to prevent defacing the landscape. An interesting contest was between the uniform rule and classification policies of taxation, and the former won. Among other accepted provisions are an inheritance tax, prohibition of prison contract labor and state regulation of insurance rates.

Proposals rejected include the so-called short ballot, which was opposed on the ground that it would virtually make minor state officers appointive. Interest now centers in the fate of the amendment at the polls. It will be submitted to the people at a special election on September 3. A second hard their coal there for 20 to 25 cents a ton. The enormous saving the canal would thus effect in freights would be of inestimable benefit to the Pittsburgh coal industry. Every other local industry would be benefited in proportion, the steel industry most of all, since the canal would give us cheaper iron ore. So important is the canal to Pittsburgh's industrial future that if West Virginia and Ohio had not decided to help us in spanning it we should have gone ahead and built it ourselves, securing the necessary authority from the state legislature.

ABDUL BAHA, HEAD OF NEW RELIGION OF BROTHERHOOD

THIS year's Mohonk peace conference, held among the picturesque Shawangunk mountains of New York, and among its foreign delegates the head of a great religious movement which, though little known in this country, claims 2,000,000 adherents, most of them in the orient. He is Abdul Baha, a Persian, and his followers are called Bahaists. The aim of the teacher is to unite Jew and gentile, Buddhist and Mohammedan, in a brotherhood that shall have no creed but the good of humanity. The Bahaists have no priests and no set form of worship. They discourage the use of wine and tobacco and believe in equality of political rights for women. A number of prominent people in this country and in England have become converts.

LABOR'S INTERESTS AT NATIONAL CAPITAL.

Gompers, Mitchell and Morrison Again Sentenced to Prison and are Expected to Appeal Again to Highest Court, President Taft Signs Eight-Hour Bill Which Thus Becomes Law.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

WASHINGTON, June 21.--Samuel Gompers, John Mitchell and Frank A. Morrison were found guilty of contempt of court by Justice Daniel Thew Wright today.

"Guilty as charged," was the conclusion of Justice Wright's opinion in the labor contempt case. The decision was bitter in language and excoriated the three labor leaders.

President Gompers and Secretary Morrison sat quietly under the denunciation, occasionally smiling faintly when the language was particularly scathing.

Gompers was sentenced to one year in jail and Frank A. Morrison was sentenced to six months in jail. Both gave notice of appeal and were released on $5,000 bail.

John Mitchell, also found guilty of contempt in the proceedings growing out of the publication in the American Federationist of the name of the Buck Stove & Range Company of St. Louis, in an "unfair list" was not present in court, and his sentence was deferred.

Three of Wright's colleagues sat on the bench with him while he read the decision, which was very long. Although the justice skipped many pages, his reading consumed nearly two hours.

After the decision of guilty was read, Gompers and Morrison were ordered to stand and face the court. They did so, and then Wright sentenced them.

It was the second time Wright had passed identical sentence upon Gompers and Morrison for the same offense. The first sentences were set aside by the Supreme Court and the case remanded for a second trial. Another appeal will probably be taken by the defendants to the highest court.

Labor's eight-hour bill has been signed by the president. The history of the enactment of this legislation is interesting. The first eight-hour law adopted by Congress included all laborers, workmen and mechanics employed by or on behalf of the government of the United States, and became a law on June 24, 1868. The law was extended to include the letter carriers on May 24, 1888. The next change occurred a little over four years later, when the eight-hour law was strengthened by specific provisions requiring the Government to not "permit" any laborer or mechanic to work more than eight hours in any one calendar day, except in case of extraordinary emergency, this provision becoming operative on August 1, 1892. The eight-hour bill which has now been approved by the president was passed unanimously by the House of Representatives on December 14, 1911. On May 31, 1912, the House bill, with several amendments, passed the Senate. On June 5, 1912, the House of Representatives concurred in the amendments added by the Senate. The bill then went to the president for his approval or disapproval. On June 19, 1912, the president affixed his signature thus making the eight-hour day a federal enactment. This law will go into effect on January 1, 1913, with the single exception that the law will not be in force and effect in the Panama Canal Zone until after January 1, 1915. The pen with which the president signed the bill was presented to President Gompers.

Efforts are being made to secure the passage of the parcel-post bill recently introduced by Senator Bourne of Oregon. It is understood that President Taft and Postmaster General Hitchcock are in favor of this measure. It is claimed by those who favor the bill that it is the most scientific and businesslike plan yet devised for a parcel post. Six zones of distance are provided by the bill, ranging from 50 to 2,000 miles. The rate of delivery within the first one is 5 cents for the first pound and 2 cents for each additional pound. The rates increase for each pound, which is the rate now charged by the international parcels post. It is provided that distinctive stamps will be used for the postage on parcels post matter, so that an accounting of receipts from that service may be more accurately kept. The chief opposition to the parcels post, it is stated, comes from the country merchant, but it is argued that it would eventually help him, for he will undoubtedly profit by the increased volume of business created by the measure.

Organized labor has successfully carried the fight into the enemy's country and declared victorious in so far as one branch organization is concerned. In "Gripe-Nuts town," Battle Creek, Mich., the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes have secured an agreement with the local traction company in spite of the fact that C. W. Post is the "big noise" in and

FALLING OFF OF PARTY VOTES.

IN VIEW of the tremendous excitement which prevailed last week at Chicago and in Baltimore, it is rather surprising to be told that the voting habit appears to be falling off among Americans. That they take more interest in elections than formerly is hard to believe, and yet the election returns tell that very story. Even in the recent primaries there was a small vote in all states. Very little more than forty per cent of the Republican vote turned out anywhere. A study of a recent bulletin from the census bureau at Washington shows that voting is not nearly as general as it should be.

The census reports that there are in round numbers 27,000,000 males in the United States of voting age. Besides, women vote in some states. And yet there has been practically no increase in the total vote since 1896, when McKinley and Bryan put up a fight which had the people really interested. The total popular vote in 1896 was 13,813,345. In 1900 the vote was only a trifle larger. In 1904, in spite of eight years' increase of population, the vote was a little less than in 1896. In 1908 the vote was 14,888,442, an increase of a little more than a million in twelve years, during which population had increased nearly a quarter.

The Philadelphia Record is right when it says neither party vote is increasing as the population would justify. The Democratic vote has actually decreased, and the Republican vote in 1908 was only half a million greater than twelve years earlier. On the basis of the vote of 1836, 12,000,000 votes ought to be cast next November, and there are no statistical means of estimating how the three or four millions who have not been voting lately will act. The decision of the contest rests with the Democrats and Republicans who have been absenting themselves from the polls because they did not care for their candidates, or their respective parties' policies, or both. Failure to vote is one of the gravest crimes a citizen can commit against his own self-interest. It is one of the highest duties, as well as privileges, of citizenship, and it is to be hoped the indifference which has been reflected in the primaries will not be repeated in November.

WISCONSIN'S LIFE-LINE.

WISCONSIN throws out a lifeline to her people in the shape of state insurance and an old-age pension. She calls it the "Life Fund." The plan brings insurance of $2,000 and yearly income of $300 after 50 years of age, within reach of all. The cost is cut down to the lowest notch.

We violate no confidence in saying that private insurance interests regard this policy as radical, dangerous, revolutionary and fraught with the direst dangers to civilization. However, the private insurance interests are less numerous than the people of Wisconsin.

TOLEDO'S CONCILIATION BOARD

TOLEDO, June 24.--The Central Labor Union of this city has issued a call to the unions to nominate candidates for the position of arbitrator and conciliator on the new municipal board which has been created at the suggestion of the city solicitor. The board is to consist of one member of organized labor and one employer, these two to agree upon the third. The board will have no arbitrary powers, but will extend its good offices as conciliator or act as an arbitrator at the request of both sides of any controversy arising.

THE POWER OF CHRIST'S GOSPEL.

Brings the Unworthy Back to Fellowship With God—Through Jesus' Sacrifice—Pastor Russell Explains How the Wicked May Be Transformed by Divine Grace—Those Who Surrender Their Hearts to the Redeemer May Be Their Companions in Glory—Reconciliation the First Step.

CLEVELAND, O., June 23.—Pastor Russell delivered two addresses here, one in the Hippodrome on Euclid avenue. One of his addresses we report as follows. His text was: "And you who were one time alienated and enemies in your mind by wicked works, yet now hath He reconciled in the body of his flesh through death, to present you holy and unblameable and unreprovable in His sight, if ye continue in the faith," etc.—Col. 1: 21-23.

Our text is a wonderfully condensed statement of the grace and power of the Gospel operating in His Church—His faithful footsteps to lovers. The more we ponder our text and its context the more we must admire the lengths, breadths, depths and heights of the Divine Power enlisted on our behalf, and likewise also the faithfulness and ability of the Apostle as the Divine mouthpiece. It is really too wonderful for the natural man to believe that the grace of God could ever present before the Divine presence and glory, perfected, holy, faultless, irreprovable, such imperfect, unworthy creatures as we by nature are! Who did the poet express our sentiments in the words: "I'm a miracle of grace!"

The Apostle is not speaking of a Power Divine working in the heart of a perfect man, fitting him for glory, honor and immortality on the Heavenly plane. He declares, on the contrary, that His words apply to those who were at one time alienated from God, opposed to Him in their minds as a result of wicked works. Even Divine power is able to transform. The key to this transformation lies in the human will. If it be fully surrender to the great Redeemer His undertaken to bring about the grand results declared in our text. Force instead could be used, and the Scriptures assure us that force to some extent will be used during the period of Messiah's reign, but now, in selecting those who will be Jesus' companions in glory, none are dealt with except such as give to the Lord their hearts, their wills, desiring to "to work in them to will and to do of His good pleasure."

RECONCILIATION THE FIRST STEP.

The great Apostle did not neglect to here reiterate the fact that before anything could be done by way of reconciling sinners to God a sacrificial work was necessary. The great Creator's sentence of death upon the race could neither be ignored by Himself nor by any other. No reconciliation to God could possibly be accomplished which would bring the sinner back into full fellowship and the enjoyment of Divine favor and everlasting life except as the penalty upon Adam's sin should first be met. So the Apostle reminds us that the One who is able to present us holy and blameless and unreprovable is He who has already made reconciliation for us "in the body of His flesh through death."

Let us pause here long enough to impress upon our minds this great Scriptural fact, that it was the death of Jesus which secures for Father Adam and incidentally for all of his race condemned in him, a release from the death sentence which came upon him as a violator of the Divine Law. And let us not forget that there is an infinite difference between a death sentence which God did inflict and an eternal torment sentence, which theocrats of the Dark Ages misled us into believing was the Divine penalty pronounced against the sinner.

It was because the sentence, "Dying, thou shalt die," was pronounced against Father Adam that the death of Jesus was a Ransom-price sufficient to secure the sinner's release—and the release from death by a resurrection of all of Adam's posterity who shared the results of his sentence. Thus we see the force of the Scriptural declaration that "as by a man came death by a Man also came the resurrection from the dead; for as all in Adam die, even so all in Christ shall be made alive—every man in his own order."—1 Corinthians xv. 21-23.

But the Father's grace operating in Christ Jesus designs more than merely the abolishment of the death sentence. To merely redeem us and merely bring us back into the condition in which Adam overcome us is not the Divine Program. It is further reaching: It aims at our complete uplift out of sin, as well as out of death, its penalty—out of weakness and out of imperfection of every kind. It aims to make us holy, righteous; and the Apostle leaves no room at all to be merely a righteous will or a righteous purpose, with an imperfection of accomplishment, but so thorough a work that when it is finished we will be faultless and unreprovable, not only in the sight of our Redeemer, but also in the sight of our Heavenly Father. Ah, no wonder if we are astonished at the wonderful power and grace of God which this declaration reveals!

YE ARE GOD'S WORKMANSHIP.

The same inspired pen explains elsewhere to us: "Ye are God's husbandry," ye are God's workmanship. (1 Corinthians iii. 9.) Let us not lose sight of the thought that "it is God that worketh in us, both to will and to do of His good pleasure." (Philippians ii. 13.) While the Lord Jesus Christ, as our Elder Brother and the Captain of our Salvation and the active agent in our redemption through His death, is associated with the Father in all of the matter in the perfecting, nevertheless we are not to lose sight of the fact that all things are of the Father, as all things are by the Son. The two are in perfect accord, but the Scriptures assure us that the Plan itself was the Father's and that He graciously invited the Son to the participation which He enjoys.

When we think of the wonderful creative Power our minds go out to the wheeling orbs which encircle our earth, to the millions of suns and hundreds of millions of planets which fill the universe around us which we call the Universe: "Day unto day uttereth speech, and night unto night showeth knowledge; there is no speech nor language where their voice is not heard"—declaring the omnipotence and omniscience of our great God, their Creator.

We say that these are works worthy of a Creator, and we are surprised that the Great Eternal should in any sense of the word interest Himself and His great Power in a transforming work in connection with our hearts and lives. Nevertheless, the more we consider it the more we are convinced that the creation of angels was a greater display of Divine Power than the creation of the worlds. Likewise the creation of man in the image of God was a far greater creation than that of the material Universe, because man was made in the likeness of his Creator—Adam was a miniature copy of God in the flesh.

The Divine intention respecting Adam and his race in general, the Bible declares us to be Restitution—restoration eventually to all that was enjoyed by our first parents in Eden and lost through disobedience—sin. The Heavenly Father has arranged that the sorrows and tears incidental to the reign of sin and death are not to be in vain. He purposed man's redemption and restoration from before the foundation of the world—foreknowing as He did the course of Adam as a free agent, his disobedience and fall under the death penalty.

Likewise the description of man as that in the Divine purpose Jesus was "the Lamb slain from before the foundation of the world." And they assure us that the Lamb who was slain will be glorified with the Father in the Divine purpose and energy working in them) they might become partakers of the divine nature.—II Peter i. 4.

Indeed we can perceive the special sense in which Divine Power is being exercised toward the called and elect Church from that which will be exercised toward the world in general. God is creating a new order of beings in the Universe—an order or class on the divine plane, which is far above that of angels, principalities and powers or any other plane in the whole Universe. This is the sense, then, in which we are God's workmanship and newly created of Him in Christ Jesus unto good works.

Only from this standpoint can the beauty and harmony of the Bible be discerned. The Father's providences guided that Jesus should first pass through the trials and difficulties and self-sacrifices necessary to a demonstration of His loyalty, which would prove Him worthy of the divine nature. And so the Apostle tells us that He who was rich, for our sakes became poor; that the Logos humbled Himself and took a bondsman form in harmony with the Divine Program. Then we think of Him as a Man, He humbled Himself still further, even to death, "even the death of the cross." "Wherefore a so (on this account) God hath highly exalted Him, and given Him a name that is above every name, that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, both of things in heaven and things on the earth." (Philippians ii. 8-10.

Nor did the New Creation cease with this exaltation of the Logos, the Redeemer of men, to the Father's right hand of power and honor and glory, that all men should honor the Son even as they honor the Father." (John v. 22.) On the contrary, St. Paul explains to us a Mystery, hidden from previous Ages and Dispensations, but now made known unto God's saintly, name's, that the Divine purpose is that a Church class shall be selected during the Gospel Age, to whom with Logos, Jesus, the exalted glory and honor, dominion and power and divine nature—as a Bride class. Thus we read: "It became Him (the Father), * * * in bringing many sons to glory, to make the Captain of their salvation perfect through suffering."—Hebrew ii. 10.

Thus we see the Father's Representative and agent, for eighteen hundred years the Redeemer has been dying the work of preparing this class to be associated with Him as the Bride and heir in His Kingdom—the class which is to be associated with Him in the judging and blessing of the world of mankind in general.—I Corinthians vi. 2.

"YE SEE YOUR CALLING, BRETHREN."

St. Paul pointing out the privileges of those who are now being called, says, "Ye see your calling, brethren, how that not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble are called," but chiefly the poor of this world, rich in faith, heirs of the Kingdom." (I Corinthians i. 26; James ii. 5.) Those who possess the blessings of the present life in great abundance are thereby disadvantaged respecting this great High Calling, while the poor of this world have their compensation, for the things of the present time having less attraction for them, their ears and hearts and "the eyes of their understanding" are more ready to discern the glorious things of the Divine revelation, which the natural eye hath not seen nor the ear heard—things which God hath in reservation for those that love Him—supremely—for those whose love for God manifests itself in a full consecration of mind and body to know and to do the Divine will.

Our text tells us of the possibilities of our "calling"—of what God through Christ is able and willing to do for us—even bringing us to a perfection of holiness and faultlessness in the Divine presence at the end of our race course. But there are conditions, our text declares, namely: "If ye continue in the faith, grounded and settled, and be not moved away from the Hope of the Gospel, which ye have heard and which was preached to every creature which was under heaven."—Verse 23.

Since there are conditions, we must give them earnest heed; for how could we be careless or indifferent in respect to so high a thing, so heavenly a Prize as this set before us. Carelessness, neglect, indifference in respect to the terms or conditions, would be manifesting a lack of appreciation of the gift, Our privileges, the opportunity; and this in turn would mean that thereby we mark ourselves in the Lord's estimation as unworthy of the proffered honors and glories.

"THE HOPE OF THE GOSPEL."

It should not surprise us that the Apostle lays great emphasis upon the "Hope of the Gospel." God is not working in us with iron of iron and steel or gold or silver to transform or to polish us. His fashioning and transforming tool is the Hope of the Gospel. It is this Hope which the Apostle declares we should "have as an anchor to our soul, both sure and steadfast, entering into that which is within the veil, whither our Forerunner is for us entered." (Hebrews vi. 19, 20.) Thus we will be settled and grounded and safe in all the storms of life, great and small. Our anchor-age of faith will give us the assurance of the Divine promise that all things shall work together for good to those who are the called according to His purpose," to those who are the

"Happy objects of His grace Destined to behold His face."

But the Divine arrangement is that in order to continue in the faith we must feed continually upon the promises of God, and must allow them to have a sanctifying power in our minds, in our hearts and over our words and conduct, making us more and more copies of God's dear Son. As our text intimates and other Scriptures tell us, the Adversary will seek to move us away from the glorious promises of the Gospel, putting fear as an incentive instead of love, or attracting us by worldly pleasures or pride or "the love of money," which is "a root of all evil." Our worldliness to be of the New Creation will be demonstrated by the faithfulness, the persistency with which we will hold on and strive against the oppositions of the world, the flesh and the Adversary, and by our good fight seek to enjoy the fellowship of the Father and of the Son.

If we know these things, happy will we be if we do them. Our blessing is both to will and to do the Father's good pleasure, to the extent of our ability as new creatures in Christ. If we do so, He who began the good work will complete it in the Day of the Lord Jesus Christ—in the Morning of the New Dispensation, in the First Resurrection. This means a gradual growing in grace and in knowledge and in the fruits and graces of the Holy Spirit to the extent of our ability. The merit of our Redeemer compensating for all our unintentional short-comings, He will eventually present us holy, faultless, unreprovable in the Kingdom.

TRIBUNE APPRECIATIONS.

North Carolina, June 21.

As I notice my subscription has expired I am renewing same through Watch Tower office. I also wish to extend to you my hearty appreciation for liberal amount of space you allow for Pastor Russell's Sermons, Question Box, etc. I am sure the dear Lord will not let you go unrewarded for your service you are rendering to advance His cause and spread the good things far, and hear of the coming Kingdom of righteousness. righteousness. I shall continue to subscribe to your paper as long as you continue to print the Present Truths in the good form you are at present it is a welcome visitor to us each week. I do not want to miss a single copy.

Yours very respectfully,
JNO. A. PERRY.

Minnesota, June 20.

We are as usual enjoying your splendid paper with its many religious features, from Pastor Russell's pen. May the Lord bless you in the work you are doing and He will, for be sure no good deed will go unrewarded.

Respectfully yours,
MRS. F. KIMBALL.

Pennsylvania, June 23.

Enclosed you will find P. O. order for another year's subscription for the Tribune. I have about 52 copies and it seems the last copy is always a little better than the one before. While I take the Tribune on account of Pastor Russell's Sermons nevertheless the who's paper is a better weekly paper than any I have been before and I simply could not be without it. The religious part of your Tribune is of such a high value that it can not be put down in dollars and cents and the credit belongs all to you my dear Editor, especially for the prominence you are giving it.

To show you my part in this beautiful work and the appreciation of your paper, I am going to subscribe for about 75 to 24 Erie people at my expense. I also attend every week meeting with the Erie class.

I am with much Christian love
H. F. WYSARD.

Nebraska, June 20.

I am inclosing a money order for the renewal of the subscription of J. Gustafson. This is another who is taking your valuable paper because you are publishing so much Scriptural Truth in connection. I also mean Russell's Sermons, etc.

You are surely doing a great work, and as long as you keep it up you may count on me as a very willing worker for the cause of National Labor Tribune.

Yours very truly,
J. DICKERSON.

Virginia, June 21.

You will find inclosed money for the renewal of your paper to address below. We have found a great deal of comfort from the religious columns of your paper and hope to remain a patron so long as you continue to publish such good sermons.

Yours very truly,
S. M. BRIGHT.

Missouri, June 22.

Inclosed please find money order for one month's subscription to your valuable paper. I appreciate your effort to publish the Truth, regardless of opposition. I am a Watch Tower subscriber. Thanking you for past favors, I am,

Respectfully,
MRS. A. MUNROE.

Minnesota, June 20.

I wish to express to you my appreciation of the National Labor Tribune. I became a subscriber to the Tribune because of the generous space you give to Pastor Russell's Sermons, which I think is well worth the subscription price. I also think interested in the Question Department and letters from subscribers and to me the Labor Department is a very valuable feature, indicating, as the Labor paper always does, the near approach of the time of trouble which Inclosed find money order for a year's subscription to the Tribune. I like to recommend your paper to my friends as much as possible and Pastor Russell in full and large type.

The people want the Truth and prejudice is the only reason a large number of people won't accept it.

To prove what I say I was talking with a Baptist preacher, who had purchased Pastor Russell's work from him and urged them in his study.

He told me he gave a talk to his people on "The Unpardonable Sin," and the burden of what he said was taken from Pastor Russell's writing, he said they were just carried away with the sermon, but said if I told them where my knowledge came from they wouldn't of wanted one more of my preaching.

How glad to know some this bread of Truth will "fill the whole earth as the waters cover the great deep."

Yours for the service of the Lord and the spread of the Truth.

C. E. HARDIN.

P. S.—My own subscription has expired. I will not be able to renew at present, but will speak a good word for your paper whenever possible.

Indiana, June 19.

Inclosed find money order for renewal. All the friends everywhere we meet highly praise the Tribune. Keep up the good work until the end of the harvest work and the father of all good will reward you all.

Yours in His name,
CARL L. McDANIEL.

Maine, June 21.

Am inclosing check in payment of one year's subscription to the Tribune.

From my slip, it seems that I am somewhat tardy in making remittance again, for which, I trust you will pardon me. I do not want to be dropped from your mailing list, however, just as long as you publish the Pastor Russell Sermons. I appreciate the Tribune more and more and especially look for its weekly visits and do not want to miss a single copy. I am always glad to speak a good word for the Tribune and wish that I might do more in securing new subscribers. You certainly publish a very clean and most sane least sheet in every way. While we myself and all of Pastor Russell's friends the readiness [illegible] appeals most strongly and it is for that reason alone that we subscribe to the Tribune, yet we can and do appreciate all of your papers, as we see recorded on its pages from week to week. "Signs of the Times," and can admire and respect the spirit of equity and fairness of its publishers as voiced in the Tribune.

Praying the Lord's continued guidance and love and your work for the uplift of your fellowmen, I am,

Most sincerely yours,
CLARENCE SCOTT.

New York, June 24.

I am inclosing renewal of my subscription to the Labor Tribune which I see has expired.

I take this opportunity to express my appreciation of your well arranged paper. Am so thankful that portion of it is given to ministering to the spiritual side of life.

The Weekly Sermons, Bible Questions, Sunday School Comments and Letters all continue to be of great interest to me.

With best wishes for your success,
Sincerely yours,
MRS. CHAS. BRIAN.

Pennsylvania, June 20.

Inclosed you will find my subscription for another year for your paper, so much appreciated because Pastor Russell's Sermons are in it.

May the Lord bless you for being so liberal toward the Truth to publish so much of the good message that shall be eventually to all people.

Yours truly,
J. L. MILLER.

Illinois, June 20.

I surely wish to tell you how I long for the weekly visits of the Tribune and how I love to read our Pastor Russell's sermons and the Questions asked and answered and those beautiful verses. How it all stirred my heart to be more diligent for God's great and beautiful plan of saving the lost and condemned world. How the light shines more and more brighter as the day is far spent.

And, Mr. Editor, I want to speak a word of praise for your paper. Every line and white its paper size, as it is was to salt the beautiful words printed in it. May God bless you and give you your part with the saints in glory.

Sincerely,
LYDIA MCNISH.

MOTHER.

The meanest men in the world are those who have allowed themselves to forget their mothers. To drift away from them and forget all about them. The best and bravest men in the world are those who have never been so proud as when doing something for their mother and in making them realize their great love and worthy respect.

Never be ashamed of mother. Obedient and gray, shabby, perhaps, and far different in personal appearance than from when you first knew her. Yet she is your mother. She is the party responsible for your being in the world, and she is the one upon whom you should lavish all the affection of your heart and all the love of your soul. She will pass through life but once, as will you, and in that passing there will be only one thing she will ever do to grieve you. That is when she will have to die and leave you. The hero loves his mother; the coward loves nobody but himself. It is a beautiful sentiment, this love of mother, which elevates the soul of man and creates within his bosom a feeling of manhood which without it he would never know. Even the beast loves its mother, therefore, why not you? Think of mother. Keep your heart aglow with a love of her. You may be thousands of miles away from her, but you can have her just the same, and you could write her a fond letter every day if you wanted to. Never be too busy to do this. Don't let anything interfere with it. It will only take you a minute to scribble a word of loving attention. A single line is enough for fond remembrance.

As God commended his love toward us and showed us that not through selfishness, but generosity, at a great cost to himself, he provided us release from our prison, and gave us privileges of sonship, so true love will be willing to sacrifice. Let us judge then of our love for others, for the Lord, for the brethren, for our families, for our neighbors, for our enemies even, by our willingness to sacrifice in their interest and for their highest welfare. If we find ourselves sacrificing nothing in the interests of the Lord's cause, let us not delude ourselves by saying that we love the Lord. If we find ourselves unwilling to endure, to sacrifice in the interests of the brethren and others dear to us, let us not be mistake the matter and call it love. If we find ourselves unwilling to do kindnesses even to our enemies when they are in need, let us make no mistake, for the Lord hath declared that a course of goodness and mercy and self-denial is the only index of a loving heart. If once we can see that such a love of heart is essential to a place in the Kingdom we will make a glorious success in the attainment of such a character. If still farther than this, we see that those will ever gain the Kingdom in the age or that which is to come, except as to or she shall possess a heart of love, it will help to awaken in us the realize that love indeed is the principal thing in the character which may be attained and cultivated by ourselves, yea by all.—Watch Tower.

Love begets love; and so the Scriptures tell us that it was not that we first loved God, but that he first loved us and manifested his love for us in the gift of his Son. So it was the love of Jesus that attracted us and drew forth our love in response. And the way to increase our love is to appreciate more and more the heights and depths and lengths and breadths of the love of God and of Christ, which passes all human understanding, the more our love toward them will increase and abound. And as our increases we ourselves become more delicate and correspondingly also from us proceeds a love for others who love us not; and we learn the love for them which excites them of some in return, and lead them to a greater appreciation of this principle which exists in opposition to the spirit of the world, the love of the world, the selfishness of the world. Let us then seek to cultivate this godlike quality. Let us not only feel the kindness toward others, be the principal thing in the world, but that it is the very essence of the divine character, the very essence of the divine law which is fulfilled in this one word, love. Let us remember then that in the exercise of this quality, we are preparing ourselves for the glorious possibilities to which we have been invited, and which by our Lord's grace we are seeking to obtain by making our calling and election sure.—Watch Tower.

"If you your lips would keep from slips,
Five things observe with care:
Of whom you speak, to whom you speak,
And how, and when and where.
Remember this, or you may sink
From land to sea to day:
Much less depends on what you think
Than on the things you say."

THE MOST COSTLY WOOD.

Timber of the Cabole Tree Esteemed For Beauty and Durability.

Cabole is the name of a beautiful tree belonging to the mangrove family of plants. It is a native of the west coast of Africa and is very common on the island of St. Thomas, where it is found generally in low or medium elevated portions. In the southern part of the island the tree grows so near the shore that its roots occasionally strike salt water. A more ideal situation is on the southern slopes of the mountains, where in its native state it forms a very large tree. Individual specimens may be seen here and there which are from 120 to 140 feet high and from 4 to 7 feet in diameter 4 feet above the ground. Most of the trees are very much smaller, for the reason that practically all the mature trees have been cut down to make room for the cultivation of sugar cane. The large trees which are now to be found on these islands have been spared for the purpose of shade or wind break.

The wood, which is very highly esteemed, has a yellowish or light chestnut brown color with darker colored streaks. It is very fine in texture and when sawed into boards has the appearance of teakwood. It is easily worked and is susceptible of very fine polish. When carefully filed and varnished it takes on a most beautiful appearance. The specific gravity of the wood is about 0.780 or 48.5 pounds per cubic foot. It is the most costly wood in the world and is almost at present only for making high grade furniture and objects of luxury. This wood also serves as material for making fancy doors, parquetry and, in fact, inferior finish of very fine residences.

Cabole was first sold in the city of St. Thomas in 1885 and immediately became very popular for all sorts of fancy work. The first boards which were brought in the market were not waved, but split with wedges. Several of the merchants in St. Thomas at once attempted to introduce this beautiful wood into the English and German markets, but the cost of preparing the logs for shipment was so great that the project failed. The wood retained its popularity in St. Thomas and the cabole wood went up to almost $3,500 per cubic meter. Cabole may therefore be considered the most expensive wood in the world.—Scientific American.

Growing Grain by Electricity.

Very successful effects have been attained by William Stahl of Evanston, Ill., in his efforts to facilitate the growth of vegetables and grain by the use of electricity. He has a network of wires spread over his farm at a point about eight feet from the surface, and after the seeds have been planted a current of electricity is maintained constantly passing through these, and in this manner the air is kept in a constantly charged condition. At times the polarity of the wires and ground is changed, so that sometimes the earth is the negative terminal and at other time the wires are. Specimens grown almost side by side, except that some were in the field of electric influence and others were not, have made a great showing in favor of the use of the current. The gentleman is an electrician as well as a farmer, and he is convinced that electrical farming is a commercial and practical success.

File Pipe Wrench.

Utilizing a Stillson on large or copper piping is bad practice, as it will mark or cut the metal. A handy pipe wrench can be made from an old file, and it has an advantage over the former tool, as it will not injure the piping. An old twelve inch bell round file should be chosen and ground fairly smooth on the flat side, just enough to remove the points of the teeth for a short distance. Next, the end should be annealed and bent into shape. The size of the curve will depend upon that of the piping. A file for steel around an inch pipe will take three-quarters. A hole is best drilled and tapped to take a long set screw. This screw will hold brass or copper tubing securely in a very effective manner.

Monkey Wrench Pipe Cutter.

Sometimes in the repair of gasoline engines or automobiles it is necessary to fit new piping. The usual method of cutting is with a hacksaw, which involves considerable labor. A simple tube cutter and one that is inexpensive and made easily, consists of an ordinary monkey wrench to which cutters are fired. These steel disks can be obtained at any hardware store for a few cents. A small hole is bored through each jaw of the wrench and a stove bolt passed through the disk and tightened. A little square should be allowed for the latter to turn. To cut different sizes of pipe it is necessary simply to adjust the jaws.

Glass Polishing Powder.

A preparation in powder form which may be used to clean or polish the surface of fine glass, such as costly mirrors, etc., may be made by rubbing calcined magnesia down with pure benzine. This must be continued until the mass formed is sufficiently soft to allow drops of liquid to be pressed out of it. Since the benzine is so very volatile the mixture must be kept in closely stoppered bottles, preferably those employing ground glass. To use a little is placed on a wad of cotton or soft rag and the glass rubbed with it.

SECONDARY METALS.

Enormous Quantities Recovered In Smelting of Old Junk.

The "secondary metals" are those recovered from scrap metal, sweepings, skimmings, drosses, etc., and are so called to distinguish them from the metals derived from ores, which are termed "primary metals." The United States geological survey's figures show only the recovery of secondary copper, lead, zinc, tin and antimony. The inquiry by the survey does not include the very large quantity of old iron and steel remelted. Neither does it include the precious metals. The quantity of plumbiferous castings returned to secondary smelters is also increasing rapidly, a condition for which the automobile and the lighter gasoline engine are largely responsible.

That the value of the secondary metals, exclusively of gold, silver, platinum, iron and aluminum, should reach the large total value of $52,580,200 in one year is a fact not generally realized except by those interested in the purchase of metals.

Though junk collectors and dealers pay low prices for small quantities of scrap metals, the competition for the scrap drosses, skimmings and other waste products of large smelters of metals is very active. It is necessary for some uses to employ primary or virgin metal; but as a general rule, secondary metals, in whole or in part, can be used by manufacturers. As they are frequently sold at slightly lower price than the primary metals, they are in active demand and displace an appreciable quantity of primary metal.

It has so far proved impossible to separate the similarities for secondary metal recovered from circuits, as made in the ordinary course of manufacture, from those of metal recovered from drosses, ashes and waste that had entered the trade in manufactured articles and been discarded.

CONCRETE MIXTURES.

Quantities of Materials to Use For Different Purposes.

A rich mixture is composed of one part cement, one and one-half parts sand and three parts gravel or crushed stone. This mixture should be used for structural parts where water is to be kept from columns and other parts subjected to high strain.

A standard mixture is composed of one part cement, two parts sand and four parts gravel. This should be used for machine or engine re-enforced foundations subject to vibrations, for reinforced beams, columns, floors, floors and for water tight works, such as tanks, conduit sewers, etc.

A medium mixture consists of one part cement, two and one-half parts sand and five parts gravel. This mixture is used for ordinary floors and machine foundations, piers, thin foundation walls, abutments, retaining walls, sidewalks and heavy wall sewers.

A lean mixture is composed of one part cement, three parts sand and six parts gravel. This mixture should be used only for unimportant mass work, heavy walls backing stone masonry and for base foundations supporting a stationary load.

The Cause of Iron Rust.

British investigators estimate that the rails of a single railway system in England lose eighteen tons in weight every day and that the larger part of this loss is due to the effects of rust, says Railway and Locomotive Engineering. The problem of rust is of great economic importance, not only because of such losses as that just mentioned, but also because of the great expense involved in repainting iron and steel structures in order to preserve them. Thus $10,000 a year is spent in painting the great Scotch bridge over the Forth. Recent experiments indicate that pure iron in the presence of pure oxygen does not rust. It appears to be necessary for the production of rust that some acid, notably carbonic acid, shall be present. When iron is subjected to the action of water containing traces of acid and in the presence of atmospheric oxygen it always rusts. The rapid rusting of iron in railroad stations is ascribed to the presence of sulphuric acid derived from the smoke of locomotives.

Crucibles Made of Flake Graphite.

One of the oldest and most important applications of graphite is in the manufacture of crucibles for use in the steel, brass and bronze and other industries. Such crucibles must have good tensile strength, and for their manufacture a bronze or flaky graphite is used, the interlocking of the fibers adding to the strength. Ground Ceylon lump graphite is the material most in favor in the United States for making crucibles, although small amounts of American flake graphite are also used. Amorphous graphite has never been successfully utilized in crucible manufacture except for very small crucibles.

Oiling Clocks.

When oiling clocks, typewriters, sewing machines and all small intricate machinery where a small drop of oil is required to be deposited on a difficultly accessible part of a machine, use a piece of bridal picture wire of the necessary length. Unbraid the end for an eighth of an inch and dip it in the oil. A drop may easily be carried by the wire and deposited where desired.

A NOVEL PROPELLER.

Four Bladed Screw That Increases Speed and Saves Motor Power.

The new form of the screw propeller for use from floating boat found or screwed from among engineers, Prince Rupert, states the French acknowledged Germans, an invention of merit, points are taken out each post on new lines in propeller construction. To be sure, only a small percentage of these patents arouse interest or deserve attention, but there is one recently patented type that has stood the test of practical application and satisfactorily. Its inventors are two French engineers.

As they be seen, the blades extend far forward and in rear of the hub and maintain of their whole length the most effective angle for propulsion—i. e., between 60 and 30 degrees. This propeller noises the water glide along its blades from end to end without churning and without creation of a vacuum around the hub, all the water coming within the cylinder described by the rotation of the propeller is passed out behind in a stream of constant velocity.

It has been found by actual test that an motor vessels the speed has been increased by about 12 per cent, which means, the speed being the same, a saving in motive power of 25 to 30 per cent. An unexpected advantage noticed in these tests was that the vibration of the vessel was almost entirely eliminated.

CANNON FARRAR'S WISE WORDS

Cannon Farrar earnestly says: "My brethren, the love that sees goodness and beauty in all human nature, helps to make goodness and to make beauty in human nature. To those who love, even a common person is a human soul who walks in the transfiguring glory of their affection. You think a person dull! Why? That is because you are dull. An angel has been with you and you have known it not; and I imagine that to a spirit full of malice and self-esteem an angel would be very dull. Each human soul is like a cavern full of gems. The coarse observer glances into it through some cranny, and all looks dark, sullen and forgotten. But let light enter into it; lift a torch up to the walls; let God's sunlight fall into it and bend its open recesses, and lo, it will flash with crystals and with amethysts, and each separate crystal will quiver under the touch of brightness with a transportive discovery of its own nature. If souls do not shine before you it is because you are bringing them no light to make them shine. Throw away your miserable, smoldering, lowing torch of sensuality and hatred lift up to them the light of love, and lo, they will arise and shine; yes, flame and burn with an unutterable glory."

"Was it friend or foe who spread these lies?
Nay, who but infants question in such wise?
'Twas one of my most intimate enemies."

THE SAVIOR'S TEACHINGS
BROOKLYN TABERNACLE
BIBLE STUDIES

REPROVE WORKS OF DARKNESS.

Ephesians v, 11-21—June 30: "Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging."—Proverbs xx, 1.

LIGHT and darkness are used as figures and as synonyms for truth and untruth, righteousness and sin. Thus, "God is Light, and in Him is no darkness at all." Thus also Christ is "the True Light of the world." Thus also He said of His followers when leaving them, "Ye are the light of the world." "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your Father" in heaven.

On the contrary, Satan is styled the "Prince of darkness," and his rule of operation is spoken of as "the kingdom of darkness" and those subject to his influence are called "the children of darkness." Evil works are called "works of darkness."

When our first parents sinned they forfeited fellowship with God and then became children of the Adversary. Jesus said to His day, "Ye are of your father, the Devil, because His works ye do." (John viii, 44). This our striking case under the influence of the darkness of sin and death, which has lasted for 6,000 years.

We have also the promise of a glorious morning when Messiah shall reign, when Satan shall be bound for a thousand years, and when the Light-Redeemer shall arise with healing in His beams." God's promises respecting the Millennial morning are "Light" and these constitute the Bible.

Light Reproves Darkness.

There are many kinds of darkness in the world. The census reports 400,000,000 of Christians; but, alas, the vast majority are in a very dim religious light, and many of those who did receive it hid it.

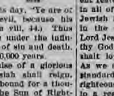
Surely it is no true Christ as it was in Jesus' day that a very small number of humanity, comparatively, have the true light. These are very precious to the Lord. He calls them the saints, His jewels, and tells us that at His second coming, prior to the setting up of His Kingdom in the world, they shall be gathered to Himself: "Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the Kingdom of their Father" (Matthew xiii, 43), scattering all the darkness and sickness of sin, sorrow, injustice and death. When the Father shall give these the Kingdom (Luke xii, 32), and with them the Redeemer, the Prince of Darkness will be bound for a thousand years.

In today's lesson the Apostle is explaining the responsibility of these light-bearers. They represent God in this dark world; they represent His Justice, His Wisdom, His Love and Power. They are not able to let all of this glorious light shine, but they can do much to let it shine more brightly than it does.

These are not expected to convert the world, but to find a sufficient number of such consecrated ones to complete the foreordained membership in the Bride class. Faithfulness and zeal in this matter proves their fitness or not they will be worthy a place in the Kingdom and, if worthy, how high an honor!

We must have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them. Oh, how inconsistent! how positive! More than this: we must not be content with a negative opposition.

However wisely we may seek to fulfil these requirements, they are sure to be a stumbling to many, a disfavor, disappointment of many we love, but as good soldiers of the Lord Jesus we must be loyal to Him. If that is ashamed of the Master and His words, and the principles for which He stands, of him will the Savior be ashamed.



Evidently the Apostle does not mean that we shall undertake to reprove everything out of accord with the Divine will, because he mentions things to be reproved, saying, "It is a shame even to speak of those things which are done of them in secret"—confessionals, hypocrisies, etc. We must manifest our disapproval when we are in close contact with such things.

It may be that we shall publicly denounce the evil, but it surely does mean that our lives shall be a reproof to the sinful and impure practices that all may take knowledge that we have learned of Jesus!

Reproved by Silence.

In view of these things, said the Apostle, the followers of Jesus should be wise, redeeming the time, improving it back from worldly cares and pleasures, to have the more to use in the Master's service. To do this will require that we study the Lord's will.

If others are drunk with excessive use of wine, let us be filled with a different kind of wine—the Holy Spirit. If others seek to find joy and solace in intoxicants, let us find ours by being filled with the mind of Christ. This spiritual refreshment will lead us to psalms and hymns, and to make merry in our hearts to the Lord.

EVERYBODY'S BIBLE QUESTION BOX

YOUR BIBLE QUESTIONS WILL BE ANSWERED IN THESE COLUMNS, OR BY MAIL IF SENT TO THE AUTHOR OF THE "JOURNAL."

Q.—Does the Bible set forth a standard of morality, and if so, will you kindly explain what it is? (J. T. O.)

Answer.—Without a standard as a guide there could be no definite or fixed conclusions regarding any line of thought or action. As it is indispensable to have standards of weights, measures, time, and distance, so also, to prevent confusion and in order that peace and harmony may prevail and the rights of all be conserved, it is necessary that a standard or measure of righteousness should be established, and this must be a perfect rule or guide absolutely in harmony with the principles of justice, wisdom, power and love. The Bible is the only book ever written that contains this standard of morality. The Lord Jesus in His life and teachings manifested the beauties and grandeurs of this perfect degree of righteousness. Throughout the Scriptures we find the constituent features of this standard conveyed in all of the instructions given in the Jewish Law, in the Golden Rule, and in the epitomized statement of the Ten Commandments. You shall love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." All of these attempt in measure up to the standard of morality—perfection in righteousness—we are at once brought to a realization of our imperfections and shortcomings, and to recognize the truth of the Scriptural statement: "There is no one righteous, no not one" (Romans iii, 10). Then, looking to God through His Word, for assistance in overcoming sin, we find that we can be justified by faith in Christ.

Q.—Will the little children that have died or die in the time, and the infants especially mentioned by the Prophet Isaiah (xxxiii, 19) have any experience with evil in the time of Christ's reign, so as to appreciate the principles of right-doing in contrast with that which is wrong? (L. B. F.)

Answer.—There are four ways of acquiring knowledge, namely, by observation, by instruction, by experience, and by intuition. The race for six thousand years has been gaining a knowledge of sin and evil by means of the first three methods, as intuition was the loss of the Divine mind and not of the human. During the period of Christ's reign evil will be gradually eliminated from the earth; as we read, "For He must reign, till He hath put all enemies under His feet" (1 Corinthians xv, 25, 26). Little children and infants who shall attain to maturity in that time will acquire a knowledge of evil by the same methods as those now known, but with this difference. That then righteousness will be established and virtue will be rewarded as it is manifested, whereas now, those who "will live godly in Christ Jesus must suffer persecution," and "the wicked flourish as the green-bay tree" (II Timothy iii, 12; Psalm xcii, 7). The lessons of that time will be fully as impressive as under the present conditions, and those who will fail to profit by them after having at least a hundred years' trial, or opportunity to make progress in the ways of righteousness, shall be destroyed as "the natural brute-beast made to be taken and destroyed" (II Peter ii, 12). Isaiah lxv, 20, where it is stated that all shall live to at least a hundred years, and those dying at that age would be as infants to those who will come into harmony with the Lord during the end of the thousand years of Christ's reign.

Q.—A certain minister defined "Hell" as "a state of separation from God." How can we harmonize this with the Psalmist in Psalm cxxxix, 7, 8, "Whither shall I go from thy spirit? Or whither shall I flee from thy presence? If I ascend up into heaven, Thou art there; or if I MAKE MY BED IN HELL, behold, thou art there" (T. R. C.)

Answer.—Many ministers are weak and illogical in dealing with Scriptural matters. They seem to feel at liberty to guess what they please respecting heaven, hell, and purgatory, and seem to affect to be offended if their wisdom on these subjects is questioned and they require no evidence is requested. No minister has a right to tell of fire-proof devils and a burning hell and purgatory, because the Bible teaches nothing of the kind. Neither has any minister the right to say that hell is merely a separation from God, as a smashing room is separated from a parlor. Why? Because there is no Scripture to this effect. The ministers would tell the truth, would tell just what the Bible says on the subject of hell, then their consciences would all agree. The text mentioned is a forceful illustration of this. The Prophet David is prophetically representing the Divine Wisdom and Power as extending everywhere, so that it would be impossible for any one to get away from God's knowledge and Divine power. Not only are these over us while we are on the earth, but if we were to ascend into the sky, God's power is there, and if we were buried in the grave (sheol, hades, hell, the tomb, behold, God's knowledge of us and His power over us are still to be there. Divine power and wisdom take knowledge of every child of Adam, however forgetful mankind may be; and Divine Power has promised that in God's due time all that sleep in the dust of the earth, all who may have made their bed in sheol, hell, the tomb, shall awake.

Q.—There is considerable agitation in the publications of the day as to the divorce evils of our times and many different ideas and views have been expressed by prominent individuals both in pulpits and pews. Would you mind setting forth your views on the subject, and also any Scriptures bearing on it, if there are any? (Reno.)

Answer.—This is a subject that could not be treated in full in the space limitations of the Question Box. The special instructions given in the Scripture relating to this matter are found in the words of the Lord Jesus and the Apostle Paul. (Matthew v, 32; I Corinthians vii, 1-16; Matthew xix, 9-9). To the Christian a divorce on any other ground than that stipulated by the Lord Jesus, would be a crime, a sin against the law of God. However, there are some cases in which a separation would be advisable on other grounds than that specified for divorce, but the parties are not at liberty to marry again. The rule of action for all of the Lord's people should be the inspired Word of Truth, the Bible, and those who will endeavor to conform their lives to the principles therein laid down, are sure to be richly blessed.

Q.—Is there such a thing as "total depravity"? In my experience I have met with many hardened criminals, but I have always found some trait of merit even in the worst specimens. One of these was executed through a Redeemer. Despite the depravity, we believe that in almost every human being there is some of the original God-likeness still remaining; some little of the impress of the Divine character. It is because we have this little that we are disposed to hearken to God's message and to "Seek the Lord, if haply we might feel after Him and find Him." (Acts xvii, 27.) We do well to look for something of the Divine impress in every fellow-creature, and to seek to help him to Christ, that he may ultimately be restored to everything that was lost.—Acts iii, 21.

Q.—Is not Christianity a failure? Some skeptical friends of mine have, after pointing out the general decline in church membership and influence, even in my own denomination which is one of the largest in the country, fired this question at me and I have not been able to frame a satisfactory reply, much to my chagrin. What would be your answer? (J. H. S.)

Answer.—Perhaps the trouble is that your friends have failed to discern clearly between Christianity and Churchianity. The cause of church-denominationalism is certainly on the decline and its rate of speed on the downward way is being constantly accelerated. The average percentage of church-going people in the larger cities is less than 12 per cent. Church buildings are being vacated or else turned over to moving-picture shows, while ministers are out of a job and some are being forced out; and those who are left are having a most lamentable time in striving to make ends meet. Christianity, however, is going steadily on to a glorious triumph. The Scriptures assure us that God is taking out from the nations of the earth, during this Christian Era, a specially selected class of saints or overcomers to be the Church or Bride of Christ. This Church, when complete, is to be associated with the Lord in the work of the coming Age in converting and blessing all nations. It is the Church Militant now; it will be the Church Triumphant then.

Q.—From many of the sermons that I have heard lately, by different ministers, the general thought seems to be set forth that if one lives a moral, upright life, that is all that is really essential for one's salvation, and it does not make any difference as to what one's belief is. If you are a Hottentot and live a good life, you'll get to heaven, seems to be the idea. What is it to know is, Will morality alone save any one now, or is it necessary that one be justified by faith in the Lord Jesus Christ? (Macduff.)

Answer.—If any one were capable of living the perfect life, of being absolutely moral in word and deed and thought, then God's words would be true, but "there is none righteous, no not one" (Romans iii, 10). All are imperfect, and all come short of the glory of God; a fact that is acknowledged by every right thinking person. There is not a perfect man or woman in existence, either mentally, morally, or physically. In every human heart there are the deformities of selfishness, pride, malice, hatred, bitterness and strife in greater or less degree; our own condition of morality (righteousness) in God's sight is as "filthy rags" (Isaiah lxiv, 6). It is for this reason we need to be justified by faith in Christ as our Redeemer and as our Advocate. "There is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved."

London Transport Workers' Strike Continues--Attempts to Make it National Not Persisted In--Important International Meeting on Labor Legislation Shipyard Workers Meet Their Employers--The French Labor Situation.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

LONDON, June 27.—While the London transport workers still stand out firmly and nine-tenths of the shipping in the London docks and river is tied up the attempt to make the strike a national one is not being pursued. At Southampton there is, however, a practically complete cessation of work so that even the sailing of the mail steamers has had to be abandoned. There, however, the dockers and allied workers do not regard their strike as part of the London one but as a purely local matter for the the remedying of local grievances.

The men who came out in response to the London call at Liverpool, Bristol and other ports have returned to work giving as their reason the fact that the strike was not general in each of these districts and too many allied workers remained at work.

The strike thus remains practically a London one. The 100,000 men who were out when your correspondent last wrote are practically still out in a body but about 10,000 men are working and they are mainly importations from outside. London and are not handling anywhere near the amount of cargo that the London docker can deal with man for man. The lighterMen who operate the large open barges in the dock district are still out to a man, but few lighters are being moved with the help of masters and mates, who are not members of the union, and river policemen. The amount of work, however, that is being done in this direction is exceedingly small.

A special committee of the International Association for labor legislation has been holding a conference in London this week, and as the guests of the Board of Trade its meetings have been held at Winchester House. The leading industrial countries were represented, delegates attending from Germany, Austria, Belgium, Denmark, the United States, Finland, France, Italy, Hungary, Norway, Holland and Switzerland. The delegates were the members of the Special Commission appointed by the association to consider the question of working hours and the feasibility of reducing the hours by international agreement so as to overcome the obstacle of international competition which is now frequently argued as a reason for not reducing or delaying the reduction of hours, even when they are so extremely long as, for instance, is the case in continuous processes. The English members of the Special Commission are Sir Thomas Oliver and A. H. Crosfield, and its secretary, Miss Sanger. Thomas Schirrer the Norwegian delegate, was elected chairman to preside over the sittings of the conferences.

After two days of deliberations the delegates came to the conclusion that a beginning should be made with the industries working night and day and which are at present working mostly two 12 hours on each shift, for rest and where in many countries such long hours as 24 without any stoppage are unfortunately frequent intervals. Resolutions were passed that in the opinion of the conference the entire iron and steel industry of Europe and America is ripe for the introduction of an eight-hour day, and the Special Commission therefore invited the association to take the most expedient to bring this about by international agreement between the nations concerned. Industries such as the glass trade and the paper trade were considered, and it was decided that in these and other continuous industries the introduction of the eight-hour day was also both justifiable and necessary. In view of the character of these trades and of the competition that exists in them it was felt that international co-operation was essential in order that these reforms may become practicable and may be carried out effectively.

At the invitation of the Government the delegates were entertained at dinner at the House of Commons.

At a meeting of the Trade Board, established for those branches of the ready-made and wholesale bespoke tailoring trade in Great Britain engaged in making men's garments a resolution was passed fixing a minimum rate of wages for male workers of 12 cents per hour. Special minimum rates were fixed for male learners (as defined by the Trade Board) at 72 per week when employed under fifteen years of age, $1.50 at fifteen and under sixteen years of age, $1 at sixteen-seventeen, $4.75 at seventeen-eighteen, $3.50 at eighteen-nineteen, $4.25 at nineteen-twenty, $5 at twenty-one, and $5.25 at twenty-one twenty-two. Learners commencing employment in the tailoring trade at and over the age of nineteen may serve a period of six months at $3 per week and thereafter a period of six months at $4 per week, they shall then receive a minimum of $5 and may entitle them to under the above provisions.

The learners' rates are weekly rates, based on a week of fifty hours, but they are to be subject to a proportionate deduction or increase according as the number of hours actually spent by the learner in the factory or workmanship in any week is less or more than fifty. The resolution provides that these minimum rates shall come into force on August 19.

A meeting of the weavers in the hardwaste cotton trade in Bury was held on June 18 to consider the action to be taken in view of the refusal of the employers to grant a 5 per cent advance in wages and to decide whether the operatives should tender notices in order to enforce the prices campaign. The Burks Stove & Range Company some time ago made peace with the American Federation of Labor, which had boycotted its goods, but the alleged sentiment of court committeed through the columns of the American Federationist during the boycott period has never been punished.

In other words, Mr. Wright, the judge, thinks his dignity has been impinged upon. The first judgment against the labor leaders was annulled by the United States Supreme Court, mainly on technical grounds, and it remains to be seen whether the second one will be upheld. The appeal to the United States Supreme Court will in all probability not be heard and an opinion on it handed down until after the presidential election, so that the fate of the appeal cannot figure in the campaign to any degree. The Baltimore platform of the Democrats, however, will probably contain the same anti-injunction plank that appeared in the Democratic platform of 1908, and that was dolctated in the main by Samuel Gompers, and the case will give emphasis to this issue.

Next year's Scottish trade union congress will be held at Dumfries.

STRIKE IS OFF ON THE PENNSYLVANIA.

PHILADELPHIA, June 29.—There will be no strike of the men employed by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company on its lines east of Pittsburgh and Erie, an acceptance by a committee of the men of an arbitration proposal and a concession offered by the company today bringing about a satisfactory way of settling the grievances at issue. The Federated Committee of the Brotherhood of Trainmen, Order of Railway Conductors and Brotherhood of Firemen and Enginemen regard the agreement as a victory for them.

It is provided that, in the event of the company extending the electrification of its lines, the steam railroad men affected shall hold their positions or others paying the same wages. In regard to the McAdoo tunnel between New York and New Jersey, it is provided that the steam men who lost their positions because of the electrification shall be reinstated by July 1, 1913, at the rate of wages they formerly received.

The delay in the reinstatement of the men, it was stated, is due to the fact that the Pennsylvania Railroad Company has an agreement with the company controlling the New York tunnel by which no change in wages can be made without a year's notice.

The question of wages to be paid the employes in the Monongahela yard at Pittsburgh will be arbitrated by four officials of the railroad and four representatives of the employes. If they fail to agree, Commissioner of Labor Neill will be asked to act as the ninth member.

Label Prosecution.

CHICAGO, July 1.—The Cigarmakers' International Union has recently had a unique experience. One of its own members was charged with, tried and convicted of misusing the union label, and as a consequence the label was taken from him. The aggrieved member sued the International Union for damages and the case was stubbornly contested before a jury, the result being that the International Union was awarded a verdict in its favor.

PRESIDENT FEEHAN'S RESIGNATION.

IN THE retirement of Francis Feehan, President of the Pittsburgh district organization of the United Mine Workers of America, the cause of organized labor loses one of the bravest and most incorruptible men who have ever served it. The National Labor Tribune does not know what Mr. Feehan's plans for the future are, but it does know that he has been vilified by the foes of organized labor as no man whoever led a labor cause has been.

In spite of the incessant attacks upon him by paid tools of antiunion coal companies, who have spent $250,000 in three or four years endeavoring to put a man at the head of the miners' organization whom they could control, he has managed to bring the Pittsburgh district to the highest degree of organized efficiency in its history, besides securing better wage settlements for the miners than any of his predecessors. He has therefore been repeatedly honored by re-election, and that he deserved to be thus honored all honest and intelligent members of the United Mine Workers know. His resignation follows close upon a complete vindication of his entire course by the investigating board, which decides that the contest of his last re-election was utterly without foundation of reasonable foundation.

Mr. Feehan will always be a loyal union man, and we hope that his services to labor in an official capacity are not at an end, for to a sturdy integrity and incorruptibility he adds unusual force and ability. The enemies of union labor will no doubt continue their attacks on the organization, but all honest workmen will know by whom they are. Van Bittner, who succeeds Mr. Feehan, should receive the hearty support of all union miners.

THE LABOR CONTEMPT CASES.

COMMENT throughout the country on the sentencing of the labor leaders, Gompers, Mitchell and Morrison, reveals a general tendency to sympathize with them and disapprove the conduct of the District of Columbia court by which the case is being tried. Even men of the business interests who are naturally inclined to condemn the boycott as a measure liable to be unjustly used admit that Justice Wright has shown a feeling in the matter which is most unbecoming to a judge. He has no right to let personal vindictiveness enter into his judgments. Yet Wright has shown a vindictiveness all through his opinion reaffirming the prison sentences. He seems like a small man. Anyhow, the contempt process, as an adjunct to the injunction process, is deservedly in more or less disrepute. There is a growing idea that no matter what crime an American citizen is accused of he has a right to trial by jury. That he should be deprived of his liberties for a year or more on a judge's mere dictum that has committed a constructive crime known as contempt of court is intolerable to the American sense of justice.

The Springfield Republican points out that while the case is an old story it takes on new possibilities owing to its coincidence with the presidential campaign. The Burks Stove & Range Company some time ago made peace with the American Federation of Labor, which had boycotted its goods, but the alleged sentiment of court committeed through the columns of the American Federationist during the boycott period has never been punished.

In other words, Mr. Wright, the judge, thinks his dignity has been impinged upon. The first judgment against the labor leaders was annulled by the United States Supreme Court, mainly on technical grounds, and it remains to be seen whether the second one will be upheld. The appeal to the United States Supreme Court will in all probability not be heard and an opinion on it handed down until after the presidential election, so that the fate of the appeal cannot figure in the campaign to any degree. The Baltimore platform of the Democrats, however, will probably contain the same anti-injunction plank that appeared in the Democratic platform of 1908, and that was dolctated in the main by Samuel Gompers, and the case will give emphasis to this issue.

Next year's Scottish trade union congress will be held at Dumfries.

FRANCIS KOSSUTH, SON OF THE HUNGARIAN PATRIOT.

MEMORIES of the revolution led by his father are recalled by the action of Francis Kossuth, leader of the opposition in the Hungarian parliament, in moving to take up the question of electoral reform after the revolutionary outbreak of the Budapest Socialists, who demanded universal suffrage. He was a civil engineer, but years ago abandoned his profession to enter politics, and his name and his abilities have made him a thorn in the side of the Conservative government. In the country from which his father, Louis Kossuth, was driven as an exile after the temporary success of the revolution he led against Austria he is now a magnate and has lived to see accorded to Hungary through peaceful developments most of the rights for which the elder Kossuth fought, apparently in vain.

VINDICATED, PRESIDENT FEEHAN RESIGNS.

Francis Feehan, president of District No. 5, United Mine Workers of America, who has been the object of unscrupulous and slanderous attacks by hired tools of certain big coal companies for years, has resigned. Mr. Feehan tendered his resignation Saturday to the Executive Board of District No. 5 which will act upon it in the near future and, if it accepts it, will elect a new president to fill Mr. Feehan's unexpired term.

In his letter of resignation Mr. Feehan declares he has been driven to such action by conspiracies, plots and persecution to which he and his family have been subjected for years. The ambitions which inspired him when he first was elected to office, he declares, have been shattered by unscrupulous persons who would wreck the miners' organization.

"Although nature provided me with a rugged constitution," said President Feehan in his letter, "there is a limit to the physical endurance of every human being, and I must confess that limit has been reached by myself and other members of my family.

"But a few days ago President Feehan was exonerated of the charge of crookedness in connection with the recent annual election of officers of District No. 5.

"The district organization has been split over the question for some time. A faction headed by Michael Halapy, held a second convention at which its members threatened to elect a new president and executive board. Feehan's exoneration came from a committee of the International Executive Board of the United Mine Workers which took testimony in the Labor Temple in Pittsburgh. The committee, several days ago, announced that the charges made by the Halapy faction were absolutely and utterly without foundation.

"Francis Feehan was elected president of District No. 5 seven years ago after a stormy session of the organization held in Moorehead Hall. The late Patrick Dolan, who had been president of the organization for many years, was ousted. Ever since his election Feehan has been battling to hold his position. He has been compelled to contest suits in the courts of nearly every county of the State and in the courts of his organization as well. It is believed that the non-union operators have spent $250,000 in trying to stir up movements against him.

Mr. Feehan is now in Harrisburg. He is a member of the new industrial accident Committee of the State and declares he will devote practically all his time and attention to securing legislation for the protection of the workingman. Van Bittner, vice president of District No. 5, will act as president until Feehan's successor is elected, should the resignation be accepted.

Mr. Feehan's letter to the executive board of District No. 5, dated June 26, follows:

Dear Sirs and Brothers:—

In accordance with the laws or our union, I hereby wish to inform you, and through you to the membership of our district organization, that I will this date resign the position of president of District No. 5, United Mine Workers of America. I have esteemed it a proud privilege to be chosen from among the many thousands of mine workers in our union and honored with the position of president, having been elected seven successive terms of one year each.

In order that there shall be no misunderstanding, I wish to make it plain that the principal reasons which influenced me to take this action is my inability to submit any longer to the unjust persecution which myself and family have been subjected to. For years the enemies of your organization, both on the inside and outside have conspired, plotted and planned to destroy your union and my reputation. They have resorted to every unscrupulous practice to secure my conviction in the courts of our own organization and in the courts of the commonwealth, and in every instance they have miserably failed because I had the ability to expose their conspiracy and treachery.

These traitors and hirelings have pursued me like a pack of hungry wolves. Supported by subsidized newspapers, fake labor sheets and other agencies with an unlimited supply of funds, they have succeeded to some extent in deceiving a small portion of our membership who have not taken the pains to investigate the ob-

LABOR'S INTERESTS AT NATIONAL CAPITAL.

Samuel Gompers, John Mitchell and Frank Morrison are Again Sentenced. Mr. Gompers Makes a Statement Scoring the Injunction Judge, Wright. Impeachment Proceedings Against Judge Archbald Formally Decided Upon.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

WASHINGTON, July 1.—After digesting its every breath the second time through the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, the case against President Gompers and Secretary Morrison has reached a conclusion by the infliction of prison sentence of one year for President Gompers and six months for Secretary Morrison for alleged contempt of court. Justice Wright handing down his decision on Monday, June 24, 1912. John Mitchell, a co-defendant in the suit, not being present in court at the rendering of the decision, and who was formedly sentenced to nine months, did not receive any sentence at the hands of the judge. It is understood, however, that upon Mr. Mitchell's return to this city sentence will be pronounced, it being believed that the former sentence of nine months will be reimposed, from the fact that the opinion delivered by the judge indicated that he considered Mr. Mitchell as culpable as the other two defendants officials. After the justice read his decision and imposed the sentences attorneys for the Federation gave notice of appeal. Bonds pending an appeal were provided for and the Federation officials will remain at large until the higher court has an opportunity to review the case. Immediately after the cases were disposed of President Gompers gave out the following statement:

"The expected has happened. Justice Wright has held Mr. Mitchell, Mr. Morrison and myself guilty of contempt of court. He has sentenced Mr. Morrison to six months, and me to twelve months' imprisonment. When Mr. Mitchell can come to Washington he will receive his sentence. This decision typified in an acute manner the contention which labor has made against the practice which has been usurped by courts of equity in dealing, not with property rights, but with personal relations—normal personal activities, a practice entirely at variance with constitutional government, with government by law. In this case the judge has acted the initiator of criminal contempt, appointed the attorneys of private litigants to prepare a complaint and prosecute it to a conclusion. The judge has heard the evidence. He himself determined the credibility of witnesses. He then formulated his decision and executed it by imposing prison sentences.

"Facts and the evidence in the case have been suppressed and perverted, and the purpose and motives of my colleagues and myself entirely misrepresented. There is not in the entire dance, nor can there be found therein or elsewhere, one single fact upon which to base the statement of Justice Wright that we have violated any law of this nation, or the District of Columbia. We have contended that a court has no right in advance to enjoin or prevent publication, that anyone who speaks or publishes anything which is either seditious or libelous should be made to answer before a law court and before a jury, but the attempt in advance to prevent expression of opinion either orally or by publication is an unwarranted invasion of constitutionally guaranteed rights. That for which my associates and I have been condemning was for the maintenance of the right of free speech and a free press, and for these we are contending not alone for the rights of the working people, but the right of every citizen of our country. Today it is the effort to take a way from us right of free speech and free press. If that practice is once established and conceded, it means a sacred precedent to be invoked against any citizen. It is the establishment of a censorship by a judge acting as a chancellor in the court of equity, the establishment of personal government as against government by law, and as personal government establishes itself and advances, so in the same degree is government by law, government by the people, forced back. Justice Wright physically lives in our time, but his decision and sentences disclose a mental concept of more than two centuries ago, when the workman was either a serf or a serf. He does not realize that the workmen, of today, at least in the United States, are citizens with every guaranteed right of the constitution, of the laws, and the normal activities of equality before the law. My associates and I have all our lives been engaged in the effort for the protection and promotion of the physical, moral, political, material and social welfare of the working people, and that means for the uplift and betterment of all our people, for the maintenance and perpetuation of the highest, the best, concepts and ideals of justice and freedom; to make, in modern industry, life the better worth living; to instill the understanding of civic and social duty,

COURT DECISION FOR LABOR.

WASHINGTON, July 1.—Labor organizations have won another victory in the courts. Recently the Illinois State Supreme Court denied the petition for a rehearing in the case of Milford E. Streeter against the Western Wheeled Scraper Company. Streeter was employed by the above company and lost one of his hands due to the fact that the machine at which he was employed was not safeguarded. Suit was instituted to recover and the lower courts decided against Streeter. Upon appeal to the Supreme Court the decision was reversed, the lower courts, and upheld the constitutionality of the factory inspection act, as well as holding that the law requiring machinery to be safeguarded must be observed.

GOVERNMENT AFFECTED BY STRIKE.

WASHINGTON, July 1.—The result of the textile workers' strike in Lawrence, Mass., demoralized conditions to such an extent in that industry that the government was compelled to withdraw its issue of olive drab cotton fabrics used in manufacturing service clothing. Not until the present week were conditions sufficiently improved to again honor requisitions for clothing in the organized militia. Information coming from the Bureau of Labor is to the effect that the widespread labor difficulties or New England during the past few months has caused the cancellation of scores of private contracts, and that undoubtedly many government contracts have been held up for the same reason.

CEMENT WORKERS ORGANIZING

SAN FRANCISCO, July 1.—Local unions attached to the American Brotherhood of Cement Workers have recently been organized in Montreal, Can., by Organizer Flett or the A. F. of L., and in Anaconda, Mont., by Organizer Denny. The Building Trades Council of Buffalo, N. Y., has succeeded in unionizing the cement construction work on the General Electric building, previously having been done by non-union men.

Longshoremen at Vancouver, B. C., are organizing.

THE TRINITY OF THE BIBLE.

More Logical Than the Trinity of the Creeds—The Scriptures Are Logical—Pastor Russell Shows the Bible Students How to Seek the Mind of the Lord on Important Subjects and Acts as a Guide in Helping to Solve Our Man-Made Mysteries.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., June 30.—Pastor Russell addressed two large audiences here, one in the Empire Theater. We report one of his discourses from this text: "To us there is but one God, the Father of whom are all things, and we in Him; and one Lord Jesus, by whom are all things, and we by Him. Howbeit there is not in every man that knowledge."—1 Cor. 8: 6, 7.

For one centuries God's people have been confronting a trinity not taught by the creeds, which was incomprehensible, and meantime they have been neglecting the trinity taught by the Bible, which is more reasonable. If the trinity of the creeds was questioned, holy hands were lifted in horror, and the questioner was told that the subject was a mystery, which he could not possibly grasp or stand, but to doubt it would mean his damnation! Therefore he must profess to believe what he did not understand, and therefore could not believe.

The mysterious proposition was sometimes put in one form and sometimes in another. Some stated it to be 3 x 1 is one. Others stated it different: 1 x 3 is one. No wonder if some of the more intelligent specimens of our race declared themselves incapable of understanding the trinity, and too honest to confess and profess what they could not believe. Many of these honest souls have been forced by their candor to remain outside the various denominations of Christendom.

Under such pressure it should not surprise us that there has sprung up an equally unscriptural theory, styled Universalism, desiring to worship God, yet too honest and conscientious to make false professions of faith. These have been driven to an antagonism to the popular theory of the trinity to the extent of ignoring the Divinity of our Lord Jesus Christ, and the teachings of the Bible to this effect. In a word, the great Adversary, during the Dark Ages, succeeded in swinging the pendulum first to one extreme and then to the opposite extreme, while the very Truth, which the Bible presents, lies midway between them. As Bible students, let us seek to know the mind of the Lord on this subject, as well as on other subjects, assured that the Wisdom which comes from above is alone capable of giving us proper instruction and guidance, and of solving our man-made mysteries.

CONSIDER NOW OUR TEXT.

Note the simplicity of the Bible statement—our text being an example. Not once from Genesis to Revelation does the word trinity occur. Not once is there any hint of such a trinity as the creeds describe—except in the one text—1 John 5: 7—which all scholars, including trinitarians, agree is spurious—not found in Greek manuscripts of an earlier date than the seventh century—evidently "doctored" by some trinitarian Doctor of Divinity to meet his long-felt want. Our Revised English Version omits the interpolated parts of this text—Introduced about the seventh century to support the trinitarian theory—although the revisers all profess to be trinitarians. When one's attention is called to this spurious passage, the bungling character of the addition to the Apostle's words is quickly discerned. St. John is thereby made to say that the Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit are going about heaven testifying to the angels that Jesus is the Son of God. Even a child's mind can discern the absurdity of this statement, for surely the angels knew that Jesus was the Son of God before He came into the world and during His earthly ministry and since, without any necessity for a testimony to this effect from the Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit.

THE TESTIMONY OF THE BIBLE.

The Bible sets forth that Jehovah is the Almighty God, and that our Lord Jesus is His Son, His offspring, gloriously exalted to the Father's right hand of power, dominion and glory—as His Chief Representative and Agent in all matters. The Father and the Son, although different persons, are one in the sense in which our Lord Jesus stated—one in mind, in purpose, in plan, in action, in everything except in person. How clearly the Master stated this to us, and how strangely we overlooked the force of His words when He prayed for His Church that we might all be "one, even as Thou, Father, and I are one!" The oneness of the Church is certainly not a oneness of person, but a oneness of faith, hope, harmony, fellowship, even as is the oneness of the Father and the Son. Read over the Master's words at your convenience at home. They are found in the 17th chapter of St. John's Gospel.

As for the Holy Spirit, the spirit of Truth, the spirit of God, the spirit of Christ, the spirit of holiness, the spirit of a sound mind—it is the antithesis, or opposite, of a spirit of error, a spirit of vacillation, the spirit of Satan, or opposition to God, a spirit of unrighteousness, or unholiness. These are not different spirit beings, but emanations from spirit beings. As the spirit of Satan is a spirit of evil, or an evil influence, mind or disposition, a power emanating from Satan, so conversely, the spirit of God is a spirit of no inconsistencies, truth, the emanation and display of the Divine will, purpose, energy and power. And this Holy Spirit proceeds from God the Father.

And our Lord Jesus Christ, being in the fullest harmony with the Father, His Spirit is the same spirit of holiness and truth. And all of God's consecrated people, to the extent that they have the mind of Christ, the Spirit of Christ, have the Holy Spirit, and therefore this holy influence upon all with whom they come in contact.

Thus we see that there is a trinity of the Scriptures very different from the trinity of the creeds—a beautiful trinity. Before we proceed to demonstrate the Bible trinity and to give an array of Scripture texts proving it, let us glance backward and forward over the conditions and circumstances which gave rise to the erroneous theory of the trinity set forth in our creeds, namely, as stated by some, that there are three Gods in one person—God the Father, God the Son, God the Holy Spirit. Or, as stated by some other persons, There is one God in three persons, or a trinity of Gods with one aim and object.

THE ORIGIN OF THE ERROR.

It will not be disputed that for more than four thousand years there was no suggestion of a trinity of Gods, nor of more than one God, amongst the Israelites. The heathen nations recognized gods many—polytheism—and at least one of these as having a trinity. But God's people were warned against all these, being instructed in these words, "Hear, O Israel, the Lord our God is one Lord—Jehovah. Thou shalt have no other gods (mighty ones, rulers) before me." (Deuteronomy vi. 4, 1). It should be noted that our Bible recognizes earthly gods or rulers, but none of these were ever to rank with the great Eternal One, whose Word and authority must stand supreme with those who would be His people. Indeed, the word elohim, as used in the Bible, and translated gods, signifies mere mighty ones.

Jehovah, being the Mightiest One of all, is frequently referred to by this word elohim. And sometimes, by way of showing His pre-eminence over other mighty ones (elohim), He is styled the All-Mighty One. The word elohim is also used in the Bible in respect to angels, because they are mightier than men, especially when they came to men as Divine agents, bearing the Divine message. In one instance the term elohim, or gods, is used in referring to men—men placed in position of might or authority—the seventy elders of Israel.—Exodus xxi. 6; xxii. 8, 9, 28. Psalm lxxxii. 6.

As we shall shortly show, the words of Jesus and the Apostles fully corroborate the teaching of the Old Testament, adding that Jesus is the Son of God and that the call of this Gospel Age is for the gathering of the Church, to be under and associate sons "partakers of the divine nature."—II Peter 1, 4.

It was after the death of the twelve Apostles that, without Divine authority, the bishops of the church were proclaimed to be the successors of the Apostles, and to possess Apostolic authority, as teachers in the church, and whose words were to be taken as of plenary inspiration. It was these bishops in council who declared the doctrine that 3 x 1 is one—that God is one being, of three personalities or manifestations, all three being equal in power and in glory. The question is, Why did they make such a statement? Why should they consent so unscriptural and so unreasonable a proposition? The answer is that it was done to combat certain errors prominent in their day. They flew from one extreme to another.

As soon as Christianity became prominent enough in the world to attract the attention of the Grecian philosophers, they confessed some of its teachings to be grand and noble, but they attacked the thought that Jesus was more than a man and that His death was in any sense of the word necessary as the Atonement price for the sins of the world. In proportion as they endeavored to discredit the Redeemer and to deny His prehuman existence, proportionately did the other parts exalt and extol Him, until they claimed for Him that which neither He nor the Apostles ever claimed, namely, that He was the Father as well as the Son—that He was not only equal to the Father in power, wisdom and love, but was the same in person, etc., etc.

HEARKEN TO THE WORDS OF JESUS.

A little Scripture is worth far more than a great deal of reasoning, much more than all the statements in all the creeds, because the Word of God is Truth, and the reasoning of men creeds has long ago been proven untrue in many particulars. We will take the words of Jesus first, of whom the Father said, "This is My beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased;" "Hear ye Him!"—Matthew iii. 17; Luke ix. 35.

Jesus declared, "My Father is greater than I."—John xiv. 28.

"My Father is greater than all."—John x. 29.

"Of Mine Own Self I can do nothing."—John v. 30.

"As the Father hath sent Me, so send I you."—John xx. 21.

"I came not to do Mine Own will, but the will of Him that sent Me."—John vi. 38.

There is a unity here manifested—an absolute unity of mind and purpose, because the Redeemer sought not to do His own will, but the Father's will. Nevertheless this was even as we will be one with each other if we as disciples are in harmony with the Father's will and Word, and in harmony with our Redeemer's counsels.

Hear Jesus again: After His death, after His resurrection, when speaking to Mary, He said, "I have not yet ascended to My Father. * * * I ascend to My Father and to your Father; to My God and to your God."—John xx. 17.) Say ye of Him whom the Father hath sanctified and sent into the world, Thou blasphemest, because I said, I am the Son of God?"—John x. 36.

Perhaps the strongest testimony of the Scriptures respecting the exalted position held by the Redeemer in the word of our Lord Jesus Himself. That all men should honor the Son, even as they honor the Father."—John v. 23.) This is in harmony with the thought of the Father and the Son being at one mind, one will, one purpose; for it distinctly shows that they are separate personages, otherwise we could not reverence the one as we reverence the other.

Our text is to the point. It declares the faith once delivered to the saints and says nothing about the trinity—three Gods in one person. "To us there is one God, the Father," is the context shows that the Apostle is contrasting our faith with the faith of others who recognize gods many and lords many. We Christians, says the Apostle, recognize only One Supreme God of all gods—"The God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ," as St. Peter styles Him.—1 Peter 1, 3.

Our text declares that all things are of or proceed from the Father. He is the Source and Fountain, the Father of mercies, "from whom cometh every good and perfect gift." His great Gift to mankind was the Gift of His Son, our Lord Jesus Christ, whom He sent into the world to be man's Redeemer.

Three Gods, equal in power and glory, could not be sent to each other; neither would they pray to each other, as Jesus prayed to the Father—"Who in the days of His flesh, when He had offered up prayers and supplication with strong cryings and tears unto Him (Jehovah) that was able to save Him from death, was heard in that He feared." (Hebrews v. 7.) An angel was sent to comfort Him and to assure Him of the Father's love, that the Father had not forsaken Him, that He was well pleasing in His sight, and that He should have a glorious resurrection by the Father's power in due time.

Our text proceeds to acknowledge our Lord Jesus, saying to us, "There is one Lord and Savior Jesus Christ"—only one. "The Son of the Highest," our gracious Redeemer, "The chiefest among ten thousand, and the one altogether lovely"—He who is to be the Bridegroom, the King of the future; He who is shortly to receive the Church to Himself as a Bride and Joint-heir in His Kingdom; He who, as King of the world and as Lord of the world, will reign for a thousand years and, backed by Divine power will bring all into subjection to the Divine will.

It is He who will thus deliver up the Kingdom to God, even the Father, that Jehovah may be All and in all, and that the glorified Christ may be at the right hand of the Majesty on high—next to the Father—and we as His glorified Bride next to Him, at His right hand.

THE LOGOS—"FIRST AND LAST."

The Scriptures very explicitly declare to us that the Heavenly Father is from everlasting to everlasting God. But not so His creatures. From time to time He has exercised His Omnipotent Power and Wisdom in a variety of creations. Necessarily, however, there had a beginning—one was first, and the Bible most clearly and repeatedly and distinctly tells us that that first one, "The Beginning of the creation of God," was the Logos.

And the Bible explains that Jehovah's First-Born Son was highly honored, in that the Father used Him as the Channel and Agency through whom all subsequent creations were effected. He it was who was given the honorable commission and privilege of being man's Redeemer, and of thereby proving His loyalty to Jehovah, and of being exalted to the divine nature, "far above angels, principalities and powers." From the very beginning He was above all other creations effected through Him; but by this last exaltation He attained, in His resurrection from the dead, a place far and away above all others—next to the Father—at God's right hand, where He shall ever remain without a peer.

And wonderful thought! The Call of this Gospel Age is to become heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Jesus Christ our Redeemer, by a manifestation of His spirit of obedience to the Father, and drinking the cup which the Father has poured, and thus attesting our loyalty to Jehovah and to His perfect will in all things, even unto death.

"THE LOGOS WAS A GOD."

In the opening of St. John's Gospel we have a record of the greatness of the Logos. And it is much more clear and distinct in the Greek than in our English. The word logos, I remind you, signifies the "word," the "message," and hence is a proper term for a special messenger. In olden times kings addressed their people, not directly, but through such a messenger, or logos, who stood before the king, the latter being screened behind a latticework. As the logos or messanger received the message from the king, he uttered or proclaimed it to the people; hence he was styled the logos, the Word.

This is one of the grandest titles given to our Redeemer. He was the Father's logos, or Messenger, or Mouthpiece. He was the Channel of the Highest in all His dealings with the angels, and in His creative work; and later He became to men the Voice of Him who speaketh from on high, for God hath spoken to mankind peace, through the blood of the cross of Christ.

Let us read together the inspired record of St. John (1, 1-3, 14, 10, 11): "In the beginning was the Logos and the Logos was with the God, and the Logos was a god. The same was in the beginning with the God. By Him were all things made that were made, and without Him was not one thing made. * * * And the Logos was made flesh and dwelt amongst us, and we beheld His glory, as the glory of the Only Begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth." "He was in the world, and the world was made by Him, and the world knew Him not. He came to His own (people—the Jews) and His own received Him not; but to as many as received Him, to them gave He liberty (privilege) to become sons of God" (partakers of the divine nature). "I am the Good Shepherd; I know those who believe on His Name, who were begotten, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God—at Pentecost and subsequently."—Diaglott.

How beautiful, simple and straightforward and non-mysterious is the Divine record respecting the Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit, and their absolute oneness or harmony! How different from the nonsense which for so long we endeavored to believe, because we thought it supported by the Bible! Brother Wesley was one of those honest souls who was seriously troubled on the subject. He remarked that only the one text, 1 John 5: 7, could be used as a foundation for this doctrine. He knew not that the difficulty lay in an interpolation—an addition to the Apostle's words. It is only in comparatively recent years that the three original Greek manuscripts have been brought to light, namely, the Sinaitic, Vatican No. 1209 and the Alexandrian.

THE BEGINNING OF GOD'S CREATION.

Let us hearken to the Apostle Paul's statement respecting our dear Redeemer and His glorious station. He uttered not a word favoring the absurd theory that our Redeemer was His own Father and His own Son—one in person. He declared in harmony with St. John's statement that our Lord Jesus was "the beginning of the creation of God" (Revelation iii. 14). St. Paul declared that Jesus was "The First-Born of every creature that in all things He might have the pre-eminence" (Colossians i. 15). In these standard references we spoke of our Lord Jesus as though He were the Father, the Apostle promptly followed the statement with another, saying, "It is manifest that the Lord of Melchisedec were he could send back Towers to any who wished. * * * I would be very thankful for any from 1895 to September, 1906. Thanking him for any or all and will pay extra charges.

California, June 30.

Our attention was called to your valuable paper through the kindness of Brother J. A. S. of Los Angeles, Cal., and we sent in our subscription through the Bible Tract society. We wish you to know that we are enjoying each number of it. The presentation of Present Truth appeals very strongly to us, and we feel certain that you will continue in this helpful way of ministering to the Gospel Message to us many homes, so long as it is needful or until it shall have accomplished its purpose. Your servant in the Lord,
HERMAN FRANK COLYST.

New Jersey, June 30.

I am very much interested in the Tribune, especially the religious part of it and Pastor Russell's Sermons, as I understand he speaks the Truth. May you continue in publishing "the Words of Truth and Soberness." Acts 26: 25.

H. GUSTAFSON.

Canada, July 1.

I meant to advise you before of my change of address. I have left Edmonton Alberta, for Revelstoke, British Columbia. I don't want to miss any of my Tribunes. It is quite the best Truth paper aside from the Watch Tower that I have seen, and I recommend it to the friends constantly. I am sure you will receive a blessing for the good work you are doing.

Yours truly,
MRS. R. S. ROBERTSON.

Friendship love is not a miner's but results from certain combinations. The one we love need not necessarily love us. Love should be but father would appeal to us more as a counterpart possessing qualities which we admire but do not so strongly possess. Darkness, however, never loved the light; the light never love darkness. Hence for friendship love on a noble plane both friends must have high ideals, noble aspirations, even though there may have been in different measure. Each should see in the other something to esteem and to look up to; although in the case of the Almighty this cannot be true, love for us must be chiefly along the lines of sympathy for us and appreciation of our endeavors to attain to His character standards. We may be sure, too, that as Jonathan's case was reverence for the Lord had much to do with so flowing any feeling of rivalry and with encouraging his admiration for his rival. Who will not admit that such an appreciation of the divine will and providence would be a help to all friendship, a hindrance to all spirit of rivalry and in general a most valuable uplift in every Christian character? How much it means to us in the way of contentment to know that our heavenly father is at the helm as respects all the affairs of his people? How much rest it would give to our own hearts. How much weakness, gentleness, kindness and love in prompting toward others, both to realise that they as well as ourselves are subjects of divine care, and to be thankful so fully submitted to the Lord as to desire that His will shall be done irrespective of our own temporal interests or those of others.—Watch Tower.

All of the Lord's people are sheep. All are under the Good Shepherd. But amongst the sheep he has appointed some to measurably represent him and to assist and guide the sheep in right paths. They may get the special blessing from the lesson by applying the suggestions to some extent to the present reasonable to the people of God. None of the elders of the Church of Christ should ever be heard saying, "My people." "My flock." "My church." "My congregation." Rather in humility he should be feeling himself as little child needing the Divine wisdom to guide, and as one of the sheep, even whose interests are so great, so momentous and the corresponding need of watchfulness the way to the King dom.—Watch Tower.

TRIBUNE APPRECIATIONS.

Canada, June 30.

Inclosed find subscription to pay for six months subscription to your valuable paper. As I appreciate your paper very much, especially Pastor Russell's Sermons, the Question Box and Sunday School Lessons.

JOSEPH THOMAS.

Pennsylvania, June 30.

Am glad to enjoy the privilege of renewing my subscription to the Labor Tribune for another year, we welcome its weekly visit with a deep appreciation of the grand Truths contained in its columns; and feel assured you will realize a blessing from the Lord as you continue to be faithful in spreading the light, "the wise shall understand," and glorify our Father which is in Heaven.

Yours respectfully,
MRS. MARIAN HOSKIN.

Maine, July 1.

I believe my subscription to your grand paper soon expires. Please find herewith renewal to July, 1913.

Appreciated by both of us chiefly on account of Pastor Russell's Sermons and the other religious features.

May the Lord bless and reward you according to His will for all your kind assistance in thus aiding in extending the Harvest Truths, the Everlasting Gospel, Glad Tidings of the Kingdom, which very soon now will reach all people.

Would you kindly publish the following request?

I was very much disappointed in being unable to secure the 1911 convention report as my order was sent in too late, therefore if any of the friends have or know of any one else who has an extra copy that they would spare and will kindly communicate with me. I would be so delighted to secure one.

Sincerely yours,
MRS. G. T. BROOKS.

Pennsylvania, June 30.

I heartily endorse the sentiment of the letters of appreciation published from time to time, and wish to add my appreciation and to commend you for the part you are doing in spreading the Harvest Message. The Truth is clear all through. With very best wishes.

Yours very truly
F. M. GARDNER.

Pennsylvania, June 30.

I renew my subscription to your paper for another year. What opening of the eyes to the Truth and now the Sermon, Question Box, Sunday School Lessons will help us give light on the Blessed Book, and we know that this paper and others are circulating the Light and Truth, that it will be said of dear Pastor Russell as to the Lord's days, never a man spake as this man. I would say there has not been a man since the Apostles day that has spread the Gospel Truth through the pulpit and press on sea and land as our dear Pastor Russell. May the Lord bless you and your printing press.

Yours in the present Truth,

Have received your paper since last April and appreciate its clear type so restful to the eyes and will continue my subscription as long as it keeps up its present standard of preaching Pastor Russe l's Sermons. The Question Box, the Sunday School Lessons and the Letters of Appreciation are all so helpful to those seeking righteousness. In your last issue of June 30, Bro. Hunt of Missouri wrote he would send back Towers to any who wished. I would be very thankful for any from 1895 to September, 1906. Thanking him for any or all and will pay extra charges.

POPULAR MECHANICS

DUAL PURPOSE STOVE.

Combination Range and Fireplace Invented by England's King.

England's king has joined the list of royalties who have now and then proved their ability as inventors, says Popular Mechanics. The invention of King George V. is a combined kitchen stove and dining room fireplace, designed to be placed in the wall sep arating the dining room and kitchen. After the meal is cooked the grate in the kitchen is transferred, with its charge of burning coal, into the dining room fireplace simply by the operation of a lever.

The idea of such a cooking and heating combination is said to have come to King George after he assisted a

Test For Firedamp.

One of the simplest of the many suggested tests for firedamp in mines is that described to the Scientific Society of Arts. It is an attachment that may be applied to any oil or spirit safety lamp and consists of a loop of platinum wire supported on a brass rod passing through the oil vessel. To make the test the loop is moved into the flame. This becomes instantly incandescent, but if firedamp is present in the air the gas ends is clearly seen to burn. It can be made in a moment at any time without turning down or putting out the light. It is claimed that the 1 per centage of firedamp the method will detect is exceedingly small, and the results of trials in both laboratory and mine go to show that this is one of the most sensitive, accurate and expeditious means of revealing the presence of inflammable gas in mine or other air.

The World's Largest Crane.

There has been recently erected at Govan, on the river Clyde, what is the largest crane in existence, the test load of which was 230 tons.

The jib head of the crane is of the hammerhead type, built on the cantilever principle and stands 160 feet above high water level. The jib has a total length of 230 feet and extends outward 101 feet from the center. The motors for operating the crane vary from sixty to ninety horsepower.

The stability of the structure of the crane depends upon four huge steel cylinders, one under each corner of the tower. The cylinders, fifteen feet in diameter, are filled with concrete and sunk seventy-four feet below ground.

Salt Production.

Michigan is the second salt producing state in importance in the Union, being surpassed only by New York. The output of salt in the state in 1910 according to the United States geological survey, was 9,452,022 barrels or 1,323,283 tons, valued at $2,221,502. Our total salt production in 1910 was 30,305,650 barrels against only 27,- 300 barrels imported, valued at $370,- 922. At the same time we exported salt to the value of $320,926.

A Shop Hint.

A piece of metal of such a shape that it is hard to hold and to use small nut or bolt on a drill press table makes a difficult thing for drilling. Such a piece of metal can be kept from turning by placing a stiff piece of paper or emery cloth between it and the table. This method is very effective.

To Remove Verdigris From Half Tones.

A mixture of acetic acid and common table salt is a good remedy for the removal of verdigris from the face of electro and half tones. Dissolve the salt thoroughly and apply with a toothbrush.

AERATING FISH PONDS.

Simple Method of Supplying Air to Fresh-water Small Fish.

In the accompanying illustration is shown a simple method of aerating small fish ponds. The water fed to the pond is first discharged into a trough or open tank, provided with an outlet pipe which receives the water when the trough is two-thirds full and discharges it into the pond below the surface. The trough must, of course, be above the water surface of the pond. Protruding from the vertical end of this outlet pipe is a small air pipe, and the current of water causes air to be sucked through this and carries it into the pond.

METHOD OF FURNISHING PONDS.

A WONDERFUL CLOCK.

French Timepiece That Performs Many Diverse Functions.

A remarkable clock has been invented by a Frenchman, M. Antoulliat. This device is described in La Nature by Louise Faucher. She writes:

"The device rings an electric bell for twenty seconds at 1 p. m., lights a lamp automatically between 6 and 7 p. m. and finally works an electric motor on Mondays and Tuesdays from 9 to 10 a. m. These simultaneous acts are sufficient to show the aim of the inventor.

"These diverse functions are accomplished by skimographs, which are set at the hours chosen for the working of the apparatus and which are regulated by the hour hand, specially made for this purpose.

"The signograph is a sort of disk movable about an axis fixed to a rod that is part of a ring turning about the axis of the hands, but having no relation with it. We may thus change the place on the dial without influencing the clockwork. The movable disk, made of several superposed plates having each its special use, bears three ring shaped protuberances arranged crosswise. These are kept on the plate by a central screw. One receives the impact of the hour hand at the moment of its passage, turning the signograph and closing the circuit of the bell, for example. If the circuit is to be kept closed for some time—a few minutes or a few hours—two signographs are used, one to close the circuit and the other, pointing to the hour when the service is to end, to break it. The signographs may be moved daily, hourly or universal, and in the hourly signograph, two of the ivory rings diametrically opposed are covered with conductive white. They are so arranged that the white ones are on a radius of the disk, the point of the signograph being at the hour at which the apparatus is to work. When the hour hand passes it over the white ring it shuts and turns the signograph. The circuit is made and then broken after a period of time that varies according to the way the device is set. If it is desired that the signograph shall not work the red rings are placed radially."

Refrigerator For Camping.

Set a bowl containing butter, cream or fruit in a saucer and cover the bowl with a moistened napkin, allowing the edges to hang in a larger saucer filled with water, and place the whole in the air out of the sun's rays. The article to be kept cool may also be placed in a pan with an earthenware crock turned over it and covered with a small towel or cloth the edges of which extend into another outer pan partly filled with water.

The method can be applied on a larger scale by using a shallow galvanized pan which will contain many articles and more water. This manner of cooling is especially adapted to camping parties and will prevent sloppy butter, thicker milk and spoiling fruit. The articles are also kept free from ants and flies.

Rare Earth Metals.

Monazite and zircon are minerals containing rare earth metals whose properties on becoming incandescent when heated render them valuable in certain forms of gas and electric lights. Monazite is employed in the manufacture of incandescent gas light mantles and the Welsbach type, and the oxide obtained from zircon enters into the composition of the glower of the Nernst electric light. Both minerals are found in the United States and have been produced to a considerable extent.

Poisoned by Electric Furnace.

According to the Brass World, a recent experiment in copper melting in an electric furnace produced a peculiar physiological action. Some 5,000 pounds of pure electrolytic copper were melted in a three phase arc furnace. After a few hours all of the ten men employed experienced difficulty in breathing. For the following twenty-four hours the men were attacked with a severe nausea, followed by a soreness of the entire system similar to that of acute influenza.

A PONY TYPEWRITER.

Miniature Writing Machine That Can Be Carried in the Pocket.

The extraordinary little pocket typewriter recently invented by a young German is shown in operation in the accompanying illustration. It is small enough to be carried in a vest pocket.

POCKET TYPEWRITER.

It is claimed to write perfectly and is guaranteed to remain in good order for three years.

When writing, the little machine is supported by means of a handle held in one hand, the thumb of the other hand turns the wheel or drum which brings the letters or figures into the required position, and the forefinger of the same hand operates the spring lever which makes the impression.

A Substitute For an Expansive Bolt.

If in need of an expansive bolt when there is none at hand use an ordinary screw. Pick out a size a little smaller than the hole bored to receive it. File a few grooves in the outer surface and insert it in the hole with wood wedges between the legs. As the wedge strikes the bottom of the hole it forces the legs of the outer spurs and expands it against the sides of the hole. Small metal rings can be very easily fastened to sidewalls or walls in this manner.

THE ROAD TO LAUGHTERTOWN

"Oh, show me the road to Laughtertown,
For I have lost the way.
I wandered out of the path one day,
While my heart was broke and my hair turned gray.
And I can't remember how to play,
It's quite forgotten how to be gay,
It's all through sighing and weeping
they say.
Oh, show me the road to Laughtertown,
For I have lost the way."

"I used to be one to Laughtertown,
Before I lost the way.
For I danced and laughed the livelong day,
But my heart was broke and my hair turned gray,
So it ought to be easy to find the way
But crying has made me blind, they say,
And still toward Teartown my sad feet stray—
Oh, show me the road to Laughtertown,
For I have lost the way."

"Would ye learn the road to Laughtertown
O ye who have lost the way,
Would ye have young heart though your hair be gray?
Go learn from a little child each day,
Go serve his wants and play his play,
And watch the fit of his laughter gay,
And follow his dancing feet as they stray;
For he knows the road to Laughtertown,
O ye who have lost the way."

THE SAVIOR'S TEACHINGS
BROOKLYN TABERNACLE
BIBLE STUDIES

SINS NEVER TO BE FORGIVEN.

Mark iii, 29-35.—(R. V.)

"This is the condemnation, that light is come into the world and men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil."—John iii, 19.

JOHN THE BAPTIST declared of Jesus, "He must increase, but I must decrease." After John was put into prison Jesus' ministry became more public, through the numerous works performed by Him. Multitudes followed the Great Teacher, and His friends became solicitous.

The Scribes and Pharisees considered themselves the representatives of the Jewish orthodoxy, qualified to pass upon everything theological; the public waited for their message, saying, Have any of the Scribes and Pharisees believed on Him?" Hence Jesus declared that these representatives of Divine things were doubly responsible, for they would neither enter into discipleship themselves, nor would they permit the public to do so.

That Jesus did many miracles could not be disputed, and that on many occasions He cast out

"By Beelzebub the casteth out devils" demons could not be denied. The Scribes explained this, however, by saying that Jesus had collusion with Beelzebub (Satan), and that by his power He was able to cast out demons. But Jesus answered that if it was true that Satan's kingdom was divided and was opposing his own minions, the demons, then it proved that his kingdom would shortly fall.

Blaspheming the Holy Spirit.

The fact that today many religious systems practice faith-healing is claimed to be a mark of Divine approval, on the strength of our Lord's words. Yet we have, in opposition to their assertions, to remember that those who claim to exercise this power very generally deny the existence of the Godhead of Christ. Some of them deny that man is a sinner, and declare that there is no such thing as sin. Practically all of them deny the redemptive value of Christ's death, and that He will come again and establish His Kingdom and through it bring to mankind the promised blessings of restitution to human perfection.—Acts iii, 19-21.

There is only one answer to these and to the claim that these faith-healings prove the truth of these various unscriptural doctrines, and that answer is the one which Jesus here states. If their faith-healing power be not of God it must be of the adversary; and if it be of the Adversary it proves that he is upholding false and counterdoctory doctrines, and that the cohesion of his dominion is sure. This view is impressing itself upon Bible students.

Addressing the Pharisees, who charged Him with being Satan's prime minister and agent, Jesus declared that all manner of sin and blasphemy of which men commit are forgivable, except blasphemy against the Holy Spirit.

Jesus did not say that the Scribes and Pharisees had committed this sin. He did, however, give the warning repeatedly that they were in danger of the righteousness of His teachings, how He glorified God in His words and acts, and how the impure influence of this, to Satan, must be perverse in their hearts, and if so, they would be in danger of eternal condemnation, the Second Death; they would be like "natural brute beasts, made to be taken and destroyed."—II Peter ii, 12; Acts iii, 23.

"Hath Never Forgiveness."

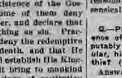
The Bible teaches that the penalty of Adam's sin was death, but that under



"Behold My mother and My brethren!"

the divine providence the work of Jesus is to release all mankind from that death sentence and give to all an opportunity of returning to harmony with God by bringing all to a clearer knowledge of the Truth. To some this knowledge comes now, with the privilege of becoming members of the Bride class.

But with the world the period of Messiah's Kingdom will be the testing time, and then all will be on a certain human perfection, otherwise to be cut off in the Second Death. Meantime, we know that the Lord is applying will be either helpful or injurious, as they shall deal with it.

Those who have only transient experiences and ignore the light which they enjoy and sin against it, will find themselves proportionately hardened when they shall come under the Kingdom influences and tests.

Brothers, Sisters and Mother.

Today's study closes with the Master's explanation of the class to which He acknowledged relationship. An opportunity of serving the household was the basis for His sympathy came when Jesus' mother and brethren on the outside of the building sent Him word that they desired to see Him. How beautiful the lesson of the Great Teacher's breadth of spirit, regardless of caste and class, when He said, "Who is My mother and My brethren?" And then, looking upward like disciples who were sitting near Him taking in His teachings, He said, "Behold, My mother and My brethren! for whosoever will do the will of God, the same is My brother and My sister and My mother."

EVERYBODY'S BIBLE QUESTION BOX

YOUR BIBLE QUESTIONS WILL BE ANSWERED IN THESE COLUMNS, OR BY MAIL IF YOU PREFER.

Q.—How can you reconcile the almost unanimous claim of orthodoxy of only a six thousand years' antiquity of man and the earth, with the fossil evidences of his handiwork, stone hatchets, hammers, arrow-heads, etc., and even his skeletonized remains found in deep deposits which geologists affirm cannot be less than 240,000 years old? (M. D.)

Answer.—Human history is authentic back to about five thousand years ago. Beyond that time it is practically valueless so far as chronological reckoning is concerned, aside from the Scriptures. To ascertain the antiquity of man from whatever evidences may be presented in the discovery of fossils, crude instruments of warfare and domestic utility, etc., is recognized by all genuine scientific authorities to be entirely in the realm of speculation and guess work. As proof of this, one need only to gather together a number of these so-called scientific estimates of the antiquity of man and compare them. The general public is not taking these statements seriously and have Jesus Christ and His crucified." (I Corinthians ii, 2). Throughout the history of the Gospel Dispensation, wherever the ecclesiastics have meddled with the affairs of State, the results have been disastrous—a lowering of the standard of Christianity and a consequent spiritual decline.

Q.—Napoleon Bonaparte is said to have remarked that the Book Christ Jesus can you quote his words? (E. A. D.)

Answer.—The following expressions are credited to Napoleon: "I myself am not Jesus is the same; always the same—majestic and simple, infinitely severe and flexible in His character—but a life passed under the public eye. He never gives occasion to find fault. The prudence of His conduct compels one admiration by its union of force and gentleness. Alike in speech and action, He is constantly consistent and calm. Sublimity is said to be an attribute of Divinity: what name, then, shall we give Him in whose character was united every element of the sublime? * * * His birth, and the story of His life; the profundities of His doctrine, which overturns all difficulties, and is its most complete solution; His Gospel; the singularity of that mysterious being, and His appearance; His empire, His progress through all centuries and kingdoms—all this is to me a prodigy, an indisputable mystery. I see nothing here of man. Near as I may approach, closely as I may examine, all remains above competition—great with greatness that crushes me."

Q.—Will morality alone guarantee one an entrance into the Kingdom of Heaven? (M. N.)

Answer.—From the general teachings of the Scriptures it will be seen that the Lord, throughout this Christian Era, from the time of the Savior's first advent down to the time of His second coming, has been selecting or gathering out a special class (Acts xv, 14; I Peter ii, 9) to be the Church or Bride of Christ, and His joint-heir in spiritual or heavenly honors and glories. These are to be a spiritual class and not an earthly or human class. They will be changed in the resurrection from the human conditions to the Divine or heavenly ones. (I Corinthians xv, 16-52.) The members of this class are said to be begotten of the Spirit in this present time, and developed and quickened, and finally will be born of the Spirit when they shall experience their change. (John iii, 9-6.) There is a vast difference between morality and spirituality. Morality alone will not guarantee any entrance into the heavenly Kingdom, but one must attain to conditions of spirituality. Morality relates to human or earthly conditions of righteousness, and spirituality relates to heavenly conditions of development. When the church is completed and glorified, then, "whosoever will" of the world, that will attain to moral perfection, will have eternal life.

Q.—Will you please explain Ezekiel 37th chapter and the first fourteen verses in which is described the resurrection of the dry bones? (A. G. E.)

Answer.—The dry bones represent the Israelitish nation. As a people they had lost heart, lost hope, and said, "Our strength is dried, and our hope is lost, we are cut off from our parts"—from all tribal and national union. They were then in captivity to Babylon, strangers in a strange land, with the future dark before them and little or no prospect of their ever being restored to Divine favor and the literal valley of dry bones. The message which the Lord would have conveyed to the people through this vision was that God had the power and would exercise it, by which those who had died and decayed as respects their national hopes, would be gradually revived, would gradually become one homogeneous people, a nation in their own land. First the dried and hopeless ones would come together, then they would begin to unite one to another, and gradually assume a national existence, and finally would be infused with the Spirit of the Lord as the breath or energy of national life, begotten of faith in the promises, would return, and they would stand again as a nation.

London Transport Strike Continues as Strongly as Ever--Tom Mann Released from Prison Before Expiration of His Sentence--Trouble Threatening in the British Ship-Building Trade --- Strike of French Seamen Spreads.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

LONDON, July 3.—We still have the transport workers' strike with us despite the daily statements of the newspapers here that it is collapsing. Never before was a "collapse" so long drawn out and from all that can be seen it is a "collapse" that might very easily at any moment convert itself into a victory. The busy season for the London docks is approaching and especially the grain importing trade will soon be in trouble. A great number of big cargoes of this and other foodstuffs will soon be arriving and it will be impossible to handle them even with the ten or eleven thousand men who are said to be working in the docks. Any diverting of cargoes to other ports will be promptly met by the ships being blockaded wherever they arrive. This policy has been adopted in preference to a national strike of transport workers.

Attempts have been made to induce the organized railway workers of London to join the strike but these have failed owing to the strict orders against sympathetic striking given by officials of the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants. These officials point out that their members by striking would render themselves liable to actions for breaking contracts but at the same time they are leaving all their work cut out for them to hold back their London, and especially their dock areas, members.

The release of Tom Mann from prison and the London transport workers in hope that he would take charge of the strike but he has had to take a little holiday before doing any active agitating work. It will be remembered that he was imprisoned for infringing an act of Parliament 110 years old and which had not been put into force before for nearly a century. The real idea behind the prosecution was to get him out of the way during the coal strike his influence as a strike leader being exceedingly great.

Completely overmastered by the trouble among the transport workers little has been heard of the strike of some 10,000 Jews and aliens in the East End of London according to the ladies' costume and meat-making trades. After being in progress for over seven weeks, this cheerful misery did receive a sympathetic movement in connection with the recent strike of West End tailors has just terminated.

The strikers are employed by masters' tailors, most of whom are in a small way of business, and make for the large City and West End wholesale and manufacturing houses. The majority of the latter supported the masters against the men, declaring that the workers were fairly remunerated. At a recent meeting over $6,000 was subscribed by the wholesale firms in under ten minutes on behalf of the smaller master tailors.

Several of the City wholesale houses, however, went behind the master tailor who supplied them, and signed the men's conditions, and even set some of the men up as "masters" in competition with their former employers. As a consequence, the master tailors were compelled to give way, and the men have come to terms with the masters individually, securing, in practically every instance, all their demands.

These were: A rise in prices; union labor only; a shorter working day; and the abolition of the "dual system"—the latter an important technical point which had been keenly contested. Delegates from the men's union have called upon the individual employers, and if the master tailor has not immediately conceded all the demands put forward, he has had to pay each man in his shop $1.90 for every day that elapsed before he gave way. As a result it is estimated that the prices of the cheaper grades of ladies' costumes and mantles will have to be advanced about 25 per cent.

The critical condition of labor in the ship building industry, both in its shipyard and in its engineering branches is not the less real because of the smooth working at present. The shipyards are full of work, the men are occupied steadily at good wages and to all appearances the industry was never so prosperous, yet there are those who predict that before the summer is over the trade will be in the midst of the severest struggle it has ever experienced.

The first danger signal, though by no means the first warning, was the failure to settle the apprentice question at the recent conference in Edinburgh between representatives of the Federation of Shipbuilding Employers and of the Society of Boilermakers, Shipwrights and Steel Shipbuilders. The question at issue was the action of the executive council of the Boilermakers' Society, who some three or four months ago instructed their district councils to gather together the apprentice riverets, platers, caulkers and angle-smiths, and form them into juvenile branches of the society. The society issued "apprentice cards" without the possession of which no young worker was to be recognized as a legitimate apprentice entitled to claim admission into the society when he becomes a journeyman.

An important provision was that payment of "out of work" benefit should be made out of the funds of that society to apprentices made idle in consequence of any dispute sanctioned by the executive council of the society. This was the institution of strike pay for apprentices and an alleged breach of agreement under which apprentices were always to be

NEW CONSTITUTION EFFECTIVE.

QUINCY, Mass., July 8.—On July 1 the rules and regulations forming the new constitution of the Granite Cutters' International Association went into effect, and James Duncan, International President, reports that the membership of the organization, as well as employers, are favorably impressed with the provisions in the new constitution, which from a humanitarian standpoint, provide for more healthful conditions for the man who bind the hammer, more leisure, in that overtime is to be understood, and one with a Saturday half holiday now baseball leagues have been formed among the cutters, which means better health, more cheerful manhood, release from the dust of the shop, and breaking up of the "lceberg" between granite cutters and their employers, for the latter are joining with the former in baseball contests. This brings the best that is in them to the front and cultivates better feelings than six full days of hard, unremitting toil, and no possibility of employer and employee meeting for an outing and becoming better acquainted.

FOX MONUMENT DEDICATED

CINCINNATI, July 8.—On July 5 the monument erected to the memory of Martin Fox was unveiled at Calvary cemetery. Martin Fox was one of the brilliant figures in the organized labor movement, and as practical, together with numerous other well known trade unionists.

JUDGES FACING IMPEACHMENT.

IT SEEMS there is no longer much, if any, doubt that Judge Archbald of the United States Court of Commerce will be tried by the U. S. Senate on impeachment charges. The House Judiciary Committee has formally recommended that the house proceed to arraign him at the Senate bar, and the House will probably act upon the recommendation. The trial is not likely to occur this summer, although the date will be fixed at the Senate's pleasure. The evidence thus far published certainly supplies abundant foundation for impeachment, for it leaves little doubt on Archbald's guilt in the culm-bank transaction. He is a man whose affiliations should have decided the President not to appoint him in the first place. The people of Pennsylvania, at least, were not astonished by the exposure of his connection with the culm-bank matter.

The impeachment will be an event of great importance at this particular time, when the demand for a more direct accountability of judges for their conduct is one of the chief issues in politics. If Archbald is promptly placed on trial and convicted and unseated, the spectacle will be of considerable influence in counteracting the agitation for recall of judicial decisions. There have been eight impeachments of federal officeholders (not all judges) in the history of the country. The first was William Blount, a senator from Tennessee, who was acquitted of treason (1797); the second, of Judge John Pickering, who was convicted of drunkenness (1803); the third, of Judge Samuel Chase for misdemeanor and overbearing conduct, who was acquitted (1805); the fourth, of Judge James H. Peck, impeached for "arbitrary conduct," who was also acquitted (1830); the fifth, of Judge West H. Humphreys of Tennessee, who was convicted of rebellion (1862); the sixth, of Ar Orew Johnson, President of the United States, who was acquitted of violating the laws of Congress (1868); the seventh, of W. W. Belknap, secretary of war, accused of receiving money of post traders among Indians, who was acquitted for want of jurisdiction (1876), and the eighth that of Judge Charles Swayne, accused of various misconduct, who was acquitted. Some of these men, in spite of their nominal acquittal, were held guilty by public opinion, and their reputations were never again restored.

It is significant that while only five federal judges have been impeached in one hundred and twenty-five years there have been three impeachment at the present time—Archbald, Speer and Ford, the judge out in the State of Washington who proved his unfitness for the bench by revoking the citizenship of a man because the man is a socialist.

THE NO-SECOND TERM AMENDMENT.

WHILE there is some significance in the editorial that the New York Tribune publishes, giving a hearty endorsement to the proposed constitutional amendment making a President ineligible to re-election and so lessening the term to six years, it is significant also that the Tribune may be fairly regarded as ultra-conservative. Its acquiescence is so important a change is therefore a tribute to the formidable strength of progressive tendencies. The editorial is significant in the second place because the Tribune has been a stalwart and still is, one of the most unqualified supporters of President Taft. Its declaration that Presidents in general should not have second terms is at the strongest an admission because of its anxiety to see a second term bestowed on this particular incumbent.

The arguments the Tribune advances in favor of the proposed ineligibility amendment are familiar but none the less worthy of consideration on that account. As it truly says, had neither Mr. Taft nor Colonel Roosevelt been available for the nomination there would have been no split in the Republican party, and the President and an ex-President would not have been dragged into so serious personal debate conducted from Pullman car back platforms. The existing methods of choosing party nominees for President and Vice-President puts a premium on the use of patronage in order to control national conventions.

Both parties face the same difficulty, a Republican President being able to exercise a powerful influence on the choice of delegates in states where the Republican party is weak and a Democratic President in states where the Democratic organization is more or less of a skeleton. In either case an executive serving a first term subjects himself, rightly or wrongly, to the charge of having neutralized through the aid of delegate office-holders the will of the states in which his own party is strongest and which must furnish the votes with which to win in the electoral college. The amendment has been favorably reported by the judiciary committee of the Senate and there is as encouraging an outlook for it in the House.

BUSINESS ACTIVITY IN PITTSBURGH.

PITTSBURGH cannot claim to be monopolizing the marked improvement which has been in progress for several months in business, but it can claim, and prove, that it is enjoying a very generous share of it. The truth probably is that there is not a city in the country where the outlook is more encouraging than here. Our exceptionally gratifying prospect is due to a variety of causes, one of the most noteworthy of which is the fact that the defeat-ion of a few years ago affected the iron and steel industry perhaps more severely than any other. It is certain that the depression at least lasted longer in iron and steel than in almost any other basic industry that can be mentioned. The coal trade, too, suffered greatly from the dull iron trade, as well as from the unfair competition to which Pittsburgh coal operators have been subjected by the discrimination of certain railroads in favor of the West Virginia mines.

Whatever the cause of past iron and steel trade depressions, there is no longer any excuse for pessimism. The mills have more business on hand than they can take care of, and orders are not being accepted, as a rule, save for delivery at distant dates. Not within recollection has the approach of a presidential election held back business as little as at present. Apparently distributors in all lines are going ahead in the fullest faith that no matter which of the two parties is victorious in November there is no reason for business distrust or hesitation.

Possibly a radical tariff plank in the Democratic platform might have chilled business confidence, but the plank actually adopted at Baltimore, while declaring unequivocally for tariff changes, promises that they shall be so made as not to injure any legitimate industry. In the meantime, Pittsburgh's weekly bank clearings show large increases and we have realized our old place as the fifth city of the country in volume of commercial transactions.

MASSACHUSETTS MINIMUM WAGE LAW.

ATTENTION has been called by the National Labor Tribune from time to time to the progressive labor legislation of Massachusetts. Pennsylvania has not yet provided itself even with a progressive employers' liability act. Massachusetts, on the other hand, has already got to the point of having a law fixing a minimum wage. This law went into effect on Monday last. It establishes a commission with power to organize wage boards in any industry in which it shall appear that the wages received by women are insufficient to supply the necessary cost of living and to support them in health. These wage boards are empowered to recommend a wage scale and to publish the names of employers who fail to comply with their recommendations. The argument was strongly urged upon the legislature that the value of such "boards will consist in the element of publicity rather than in their power to bring about a radical rise of wages. It is certain to secure an important test of the force of public opinion on employers. Action under the new law will not be immediate, as the commission has yet to be appointed and to organize. It will be noted that the wages received by males are not subject to regulation. The law concerns itself with women's wages alone, but this is a long step toward prescribing the minimum wage which shall be paid to all workers. The act rests on the police powers of the state and these is little reason to doubt its constitutionality.

ALEXANDER MEIKLEJOHN, NEW PRESIDENT OF AMHERST.

LIKE several other heads of American colleges and universities, Dr. Alexander Meiklejohn, the new president of Amherst, was born abroad. He is an Englishman of Scotch descent and came to this country when a boy, receiving his education at Brown University, of which he was dean when called to Amherst. He is the first president of that institution, with one exception, who has not been an alumnus of the college and a clergyman. He belongs to the class of "young" college presidents, being only forty. He is a member of the American Philosophical society and the American Psychological association and other learned societies.

LABOR'S INTERESTS AT NATIONAL CAPITAL.

Injunction Judge Wright's Reply to the Charge that He Held Up His Decision in the Contempt Case Until After the Chicago Convention--Illiteracy On the Decrease--Methods of Irwin Coal Barons Exposed in a Report to Congress.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—Justice Wright has signed the formal judgments of contempt against President Gompers and Secretary Morrison, but declined to pass sentence upon John Mitchell in his absence. The justice expressed doubt as to the wisdom of passing sentence in the absence of the accused, but advised Attorney Halston, in charge of the Federation's defense, that a written request from John Mitchell would be considered, that course will be pursued. In reply to the interview given to the press immediately after sentences were passed, Justice Wright criticised President Gompers for having asserted that he (Gompers) had been informed that the opinion had been prepared for more than a month, but held up until after the Chicago convention." The Justice stated that "he was deliberately and falsely misrepresented." On its own initiative the court refused to assess the costs of the contempt proceedings, amounting to $1,500, against the respondents, although a motion to that end was prepared and presented by the "committee of prosecutors" appointed by the court.

According to a statement just issued by the Census Bureau it is averred that, despite the heavy immigration to this country during the ten years, 1900 to 1910, the proportion of illiterates for continental United States was less in all of the nine geographic divisions and in all states, except New York and Connecticut. In these states, in which the proportion of illiteracy was about the same, the actual number of illiterates was much larger because of the heavy influx of foreign born whites. Owing to the same cause the number of illiterates has increased in many other states, though the proportion, with regard to the native population in each state, has diminished materially.

The manner in which the coal operators and the State of Pennsylvania co-operated during the coal strike in Westmoreland county to crush out labor unions and to defeat the purpose of the strike is shown in an exhaustive report of an investigation into conditions there made by the Department of Commerce and Labor, and recently transmitted to Congress in response to a resolution introduced by Congressman George of Pennsylvania. Much of the matter included in the report was made public at the time of the strike. It is not likely now that the reports will be published and given wide publicity for the purpose of showing the extreme methods resorted to in the effort made by the coal operators to crush out the miners' unions.

As reported in this correspondence before there is a movement on foot in various places to amalgamate organizations in line shoe manufacturing industry, there being numerous local organizations outside the regular and recognized Boot and Shoe Workers' union. The latter organization has been hampered in its work by unions in the shoe trade not affiliated and antagonistic, but withal the Boot and Shoe Workers have steadily made advances in wages and conditions. The Artisan, published at Holyoke, Mass., is sensitivity for the statement that meetings have recently been held between the representatives of unions in the shoe trade with a view to "getting together" under the banner of the recognized organization, and with a prospect of final success.

The North Dakota Advocate, published at Fargo, N. D., prints the following: "Words comes from Grand Forks that a number of the county officers from various parts of the state are demanding the union label on their blank books and they are being readily supplied. When it is considered that outside of the large cities of this state the average person rarely comes in contact with trade unionism this is indeed a tribute to trade unionism. The knowledge of the public in an agricultural state, such as North Dakota, is confined principally to reading the highly colored stories in the daily press about a strike in some part of the country, which is intended to prejudice the mind of the reader."

At the headquarters of the American Federation of Labor here word has been received from London that the recent decision of the federated employers to refuse the demands of the shipyard workers for an eight-hour day and an increase of wages to piece workers has brought about a situation that may develop into a big strike. The shipbuilding trades have been preparing for a contest, and all organizations involved have been assiduously engaged in strengthening their unions. If a strike occurs it will involve 50,000 men directly, and indirectly a half million more. It is stated that a the conciliatory machinery has been brought into play, but without success. The result of a strike vote seems to be a foregone conclusion as being favorable to a strike.

WAGES ONLY $8.76 A WEEK

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 8.—Labor conditions in the big textile mills at Lawrence, Mass., got drastic criticism by the Federal Bureau of Labor in its report to the Senate on the textile workers' strike last winter. The report states that in order to live the father of a family must add either his wife or child to the mills' roll of wage-earners and that the average pay received by 21,000 employes during a week late in 1911 was $8.76, probably reduced during other weeks by lack of work.

The report said the workingmen's apartments were crowded and sometimes unsanitary that in certain cases from 15 to 17 persons lived in a five-room apartment, that "entirely inadequate" building regulations intervene every great risk of life and property.

UNION LABOR DRAFTS LAWS

Labor's draft of its ideas on employers' liability and workingmen's compensation legislation was prepared in part last week at Harrisburg at a meeting of the Capitol of the executive committee of the American Federation with President James H. Maurer in the chair.

Besides Maurer, the following were present: J. McDevitt, Philadelphia; A. P. Bower, Reading; A. W. Garrew, Erie; Robert Williams, Wilkes-Barre; Joseph I. Bunty, McSherrytown; A. C. Houck, Scranton; Francis Feehan, Pittsburgh; C. F. Quinn, Nanticoke, and J. J. Gallagher, New Boston.

Among our visitors this week was that fat, good-natured Welsh citizen now of Chicago, but formerly of Pittsburgh, Morgan as we are always glad to see you and shake your hand.

Pastor Russell's Sermon

DECLINE OF FAITH AND GODLINESS

Pastor Russell Warns Mankind Against Selfishness — Blight of Financial Greed—God Forgotten in the Scramble For Wealth—World is About to Learn a Great Lesson on the Sin of Avarice—Then the Messianic Kingdom Will Be Inaugurated and a Reign of Love and Righteousness Established—Thousands Gather to Hear Pastor Russell.

TORONTO, Canada, July 7.—Pastor Russell addressed two audiences here, one in the Royal Alexandra Theater composed of several thousand persons. About a thousand of those in attendance at a Convention of the International Bible Students Association, which was in session here during the week and adjourned yesterday, decided to remain and hear both discourses by Pastor Russell. We report one of his addresses from the text: So is he that layeth up treasure for himself, and is not rich toward God.—Luke xii. 21. He said in part:—

Ours is the day of wealth. Nothing in company with it has ever been known in the world's history, and the wealth is increasing. Not merely have we discovered rich deposits of gold and silver and precious stones; not merely are these being mined in a more rapid and successful manner, with which nothing in the past could compare, but additionally the world is growing rich in every conceivable way. Our cities are growing in size and beauty; in sanitary conveniences, in spacious parks, in good, paved streets, and boulevards all the world over.

Furthermore, machinery perfected within the last fifty years is being multiplied and turning out articles of convenience and value which add to the world's comfort and material wealth—not merely in perishable articles, such as clothing and bric-a-brac, but most liberties, public and private, are being acquired; and many of these luxuries are becoming cheap, because of the facility with which they can be produced. These all, however, constitute riches, one phase at which would amaze our ancestors.

But are we as a race growing rich toward God, as our text intimates would be the proper thing? Is that the very reverse true, namely, that faith and godliness are on the decline? Is it not true that within the last fifty years the love of money, which the Apostle declares is "the root of all evil," has intensified? Is it not true that financial greed has become so strong and so persistent as to make necessary our recently passed Pure-food Laws for the protection of the lives of the people—because life and health were in jeopardy?

Is it not true that although we are all better housed, better fed and better clothed than were our forefathers, there is a general unrest, because of the trust in riches? Is it not true that even with all the modern safeguards of police and detective systems, and the telegraph, telephone, etc., still human lives and property are in peril, because of the everwhere prevalent hunger for wealth?

"WHOSE SHALL THESE THINGS BE?"

Our text is a portion of one of our Lord's parables. In it He pictures a man whose fields were fallen in pleasant places. The smiling sun and genial showers prospered his undertakings and his wealth grew. The opportunity came to him for helping his friends and neighbors and relatives less favored—the opportunity for turning his material wealth to a good account in the cultivation of the generous traits of his character, and thus to develop more and more the Divine character (for God scatters His blessings, the rain and the sunshine, upon the evil and upon the good.)

But instead of becoming rich through the cultivation of the noble qualities of his character, he allowed selfishness to dominate. He pulled down his barns and built greater. He accumulated instead of dispensing the wealth which Divine providence permitted to flow into his lap. Are there not many today who are patterning after the character which the Lord portrayed in this parable?—many who are saying to themselves, "I will accumulate wealth and then say to my soul, You have plenty; eat, drink and be merry." Think not particularly of your loss favored brethren or neighbors, nor of the miserably poor, live for yourself." Does it not appear that the Lord has here given a picture of practically every man in the world, some of whom are really doing these things and others only longing for the opportunity?

HEAR THE LORD'S ESTIMATION.

If the Lord declared that the man in His parable was a fool, what may we suppose is His estimate of the masses of the world today—blessed as men never before were blessed, privileged as men never before were privileged, and therefore responsible as men never before were responsible in the use of money? Alas! We fear that the Lord is not well pleased with the world in its scramble for wealth, witnessed today on every hand. In our text God's people of today have the reminder that the message to them the opportunity of becoming rich toward God because they have the opportunity to cultivate the Christlike spirit through generosity, liberality and brotherly kindness.

Not in the world, however, does the Lord address His reproof and admonition, but merely to His Church—the consecrated few. The world is about to learn a great lesson along this very line of selfishness. Having sown to the wind the seed of selfishness, it is about to reap a whirlwind of trouble, the fruitage of selfishness, in which the interests of the rich and poor will clash in the great conflict between capital and labor, between those who have secured wealth and those who will strive to take the wealth from them—a time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation.

Are any so blinded as not to see the awful growth of avarice, which is gradually settling down upon the highest civilization to which the world has ever attained? And are there any so blinded as to be unable to see that the conflict will be along the lines of "selfishness" desire on the one part to hold and on the other part to acquire? But God is not asleep to the world, and indeed an appeal would be useless, so intense is the spirit of avarice.

God, therefore, is allowing the world as a whole to learn its great lesson that selfishness is an integral part of sin, as love and benevolence are integral parts of righteousness. We have already seen that by the time the lesson of selfishness and its results shall have been fully learned by the world it will be ready to carry out for Divine acceptance.

And by that time, too, God's assistance for the poor world will be ready. The Messianic Kingdom will be inaugurated and a reign of love will be established which will contrast sharply with the present conditions in all its blessed results to peace, joy, love and good will amongst men. And we may reasonably assume that there is no better way than this for teaching the world its needed lesson on this subject.

THE LESSON TO THE CHURCH.

God's lessons are for the Church—not for the church nominal, which is merely a more civilized section of the world—but for the Church real, for God's saintly people in and out of the various sects and parties, and in every nation, kindred and tongue. These, anxious to know and do the will or God, receive special instruction such as the world is not prepared to receive. To these saintly footstep followers of Jesus, the Lord says, Let not your riches, your treasures be of an earthly kind. Rather, go to the opposite extreme and spend and be spent in the interests of others, in the service of God, in the service of His message of love; and thus, along the lines of the Divine promises, seek for a share with the great Redeemer in the sufferings and self-denials of the present life, and in the glory, honor and immortality of the life that is to come.

"Therefore, take no thought for your life (soul) what ye shall eat, neither for the body what ye shall put on. The soul is more than meat, and the body more than raiment."—Your Father knoweth what things ye have need of." Therefore, "seek first (chiefly) the Kingdom" and the right-ousness which it demands and all needful things shall be supplied according to your Father's wisdom. "Fear not, little flock, for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the Kingdom. Sell that ye have and give alms; provide yourselves bags which wax not old, a treasure in the heavens which fadeth not away, where no thief approacheth, neither moth corrupteth; for where you treasure is, there will your heart be also."—Luke xii. 32-34.

"CHARGE THEM THAT BE RICH."

We are not for a moment to suppose that the Apostle referred to the worldly rich when he wrote to Timothy, "Charge them that are rich in this world that they be not high-minded, nor trust in uncertain riches, but in the living God who giveth us richly all things to enjoy." (I Timothy vi 17.) Most evidently the Apostle refers to some of the consecrated people of God as having wealthy they are to consider it a stewardship, and not their own—not to be disposed of according to their own worldly caprices, and surely not to be diverted or according to the dictum of their friends and neighbors and relatives.

If they are the Lord's, all they have must have been consecrated to Him, else they were not accepted as His disciples as He said. The charge which the Apostle directed to be given to the brethren possessing wealth is stated, "that they be good, that they be rich in good works, ready to distribute (for the necessities of others), willing to communicate" (liberality), willing to share with others of the brethren as members of a community, somewhat along the lines of Christian communism.)

The effect of so doing, the Apostle states, would be "laying up in store for themselves a good foundation against the time to come. The word foundation here is used in the same sense as when we say that a wealthy man gave a foundation of a million dollars for a college. His present constitutes the foundation or basis for the carrying out of the college plans and arrangements.

Thus a Christian who generously sees in the Lord's service his financial stewardship is laying a foundation for the future—a foundation for his spiritual interests, and by means of his influence and wealth any of us can lay up thus in doing good in forwarding the interests of the brethren and the Lord's work, the more are we laying up treasure in the heavenly and lessening those on earth. And the advantage of this procedure is that it helps to center our hearts on the things of the heavenly, and more the things of the earth, for where our treasures are there will our hearts be also. And thus, says the Apostle, we will be able to "lay hold on eternal life," now possessed.

LIKE UNTO YOUR FATHER.

It helps God's intelligent children to follow in the "narrow way" and to learn the lessons of the present life, if they can see the principles involved, and how the lessons in the School of Christ are advantageous. For instance, many at first are inclined to say, "I do not see how it will make any difference to the Lord what I do with my money, my talents, my influence. He is rich, He needs nothing. Moreover, if any are needy, He is quite able to supply their needs without in the slightest degree impoverishing Himself. Why, then, should He desire His children, who are far from rich in the world's estimation, to use their little talents of time and money and influence, and why make this a test for them, which will determine whether or not they shall attain to the Kingdom at all, and if they attain at all, whether they shall be among the greatest or among the least in the Kingdom? What is the philosophy of it?"

The philosophy is this: Man as originally created, in the Divine likeness and image, was perfectly unselfish. It was after sin entered the world and the strife for a living began that selfishness gradually became the predominant influence, producing hard-heartedness—carelessness of the interests of others—self-love.

TAKE AWAY THE STONY HEART.

God proposes that during the thousand years of Messiah's reign the hard heartedness of our race shall gradually be dissolved. Satan will be bound and his allurements will be sealed. The curse will be lifted, the earth will yield its increase, the thorns and thistles will give place, and so will the pests. The stress being lifted from mankind it will be easier for him to learn the lessons of love and brotherhood, and to rise up out of his present condition of selfishness and hard-heartedness, selfishness—back to the glorious image of God in which man was created. This will mean the dissolving of the stony-heartedness of our race; or, as the Scriptures put it, the Lord will take away the stony heart out of their flesh, and give them a heart of flesh—a heart of sympathy. All under that favorable condition who will refuse to return to harmony with God, and to the likeness of God, will be destroyed from amongst the people in the Second Death—Acts iii, 19-23.

But while such restitution under the favorable conditions of the Messianic Kingdom is God's provision for the world, He has a different provision for the Church, now being called, tested, proven. By nature our hearts are hard and selfish; and, as the Apostle says, "We were children of wrath, even as others." The fact that God has called us to joint-heirship with His Son in the glorious Kingdom that is shortly to bless the world does not signify that He will accept us in our present condition of hard-heartedness and selfishness.

On the contrary, if we are to be His bride, joint-heir with Him in the world, in association with our Lord and Head, the great King, we can readily see that we ourselves must get rid of this condition before we could be properly capable of helping the world up out of its hard heartedness.

"WE WALK BY FAITH."

In various respects the Lord's dealings with His called Church at the present time are different from what His dealings will be with the world by and by. This is because ours is no high an honor, and, correspondingly, it is appropriate that we should manifest the more love, the more zeal than will be expected of the world.

To illustrate: We must walk by faith and not by sight, and voluntarily accept the Lord's providences, and voluntarily undertake to co-operate in putting away the stony heart, accepting instead the Spirit of the Lord, and the Spirit of the Father—a spirit of love, kindness, gentleness, meekness, patience and long suffering toward all. Accordingly, among the thousand years of the world's recovery from sin and selfishness and hard-heartedness, doubtless each individual will have several opportunities for his gradual development, but the Father seeks in the Church class such as will manifest so much zeal for Him, and such as will give such zeal to His instructions, and show such earnestness to copy His character, that they will succeed in attaining a heart condition of tenderness, sympathy and love like unto the Heavenly Father, in the present years of their Christian experience.

And if we shall ultimately demonstrate this fixity of our hearts, the Lord will own us as His children in the First Resurrection and grant us perfect bodies on the spirit plane, when it will be possible for us to be absolutely like Him. That is the glorious condition by which we are waiting, hoping, praying, striving. And it is within our reach, for the Lord has not called us in vain: "Faithful is He who shall call you."

So then, dear fellow-Bible students, let us gird up the loins of our minds, determining that with the Lord's help we will be rich toward God. Let us think less and less of earthly riches and more and more prize the Kingdom which the Lord has promised to His faithful ones. All who shall attain to it will be rich in the highest sense, rich toward God. Not only will they be rich in the possession of the highest prize that God has to give —His very best—but following the process and lessons of our Great Teacher we shall be rich in His character-likeness, rich in experience, rich in faith, rich in benevolence, rich in all that is good and great, however poor we may be in earthly goods, at the finish of our course.

Pennsylvania, July 7.

I certainly do appreciate your paper, the Labor Tribune. I know the Lord will bless you for publishing Pastor Russell's Sermons. I have been reading them for some time. The Question Box and Sermons are what caused me to subscribe for it.

Very truly yours,
ALBERTUS K. BUPP.

Canada, July 6.

I prize your paper very much on account of the religious Department, it is the best I have seen and I look for its weekly visits. The Sermons, Question Box, Sunday School Lessons and Letters from the subscribers are all fine. You are surely doing a great work in spreading the Glad Tidings.

Yours sincerely,
J. A. AGNEW.

Pennsylvania, July 5.

God bless you for your faithfulness that you are not ashamed to publish Pastor Russell's Sermons which are Good Tidings of great joy which shall be to all people. Your paper is welcome in our home.

Please find my subscription for another year for your paper because of Pastor Russell's Sermons.

Yours truly,
F. K. SLAGLE.

Maryland, July 7.

I have this day renewed my subscription to your most valued paper through the Watch Tower office. I anxiously look forward to it each Thursday and expect to remain a subscriber as long as it maintains its present standard of proclaiming the Glad Tidings of great joy which are soon to be inaugurated. What a wonderful privilege it is yours to call to the public mind the great blessings that are soon due to all mankind and that were spoken by all the prophets of God of old. The Question Box is indeed helpful and instructive and I certainly do enjoy this added feature of your paper. I am sure your labors in behalf of God's Holy Word will meet with abundant blessings and reward.

Respectfully,
LEONARD R. STINCHCOMB.

Pennsylvania, July 6.

Words cannot express my appreciation of your paper, since I have received it through reading of the paper which is becoming more interesting on account of the good healthy spiritual food of Pastor Russell's Sermons which you are printing on such clean paper and large type.

Yours sincerely,
ANNA W. MARTIN.

Washington, July 5.

It gives us pleasure to send a new subscriber along with the renewal of our own for your ever welcome paper. We wish to thank you for the benefit it has been to us, especially the Bible questions and Pastor Russell's Sermons.

Yours very respectfully,
CHARLES VERNER.

Massachusetts, July 6.

I am sending you a new subscriber to your truthful paper and also renewing my own subscription.

I sincerely thank you for the great work you are doing in sending out the light and Truth by publishing Pastor Russell's Sermons. God's bringering and thirsting children now in a time when darkness covers the earth and gross darkness covers the people. Let God be true though it make all men liars.

MRS. SARAH JAMES.

Canada, July 5.

Please change address on Tribune and greatly oblige a very appreciative subscriber in behalf of Pastor Russell's Sermons, Question Box and Tribune Appreciations. May the grand good work go on until it reaches into the uttermost parts of the earth and his will, not ours, be done on earth.

Yours faithfully,
MRS. FRANK JACKSON.

Colorado, July 6.

I am renewing my subscription to the Labor Tribune through the Watch Tower Bible and Tract society. I wish to express to you my appreciation of the Tribune to which I am a subscriber for the purpose of having Pastor Russell's Sermons. I congratulate you upon the manner in which you print these Sermons and will continue to do so as long as I can get them in such nice form.

Respectfully yours,

TRIBUNE APPRECIATIONS.

THE HEAVENLY BRIDEGROOM AND BRIDE.

The day star rises in our hearts,
We're in the harvest time.
The Bridegroom comes to seek his Bride,
And he is walking by our side,
And shows us truths sublime.

Our earnest prayers, they will prevail,
And soon will pass beyond the veil;
The Bridegroom there to meet.

The loving Master then will bring
Us, in the palace of the King,
And we shall see his face.

The new creation then complete,
Will sit upon the judgment seat;
And reign a thousand years.

The ransomed then came forth the truth,
Isaiah said,
With joy and gladness on their heads;
The earth yields up the dead.

The Heavenly Bridegroom with his Bride,
Then reigning on the other side.
From sea to sea and shore to shore:
Till pain and death shall be no more,
All obedient race restored.

The reign will cease, then all will look,
And find as written in God's Book:
Its Paradise Restored.
—Geo. M. Pike.

Ohio, July 6.

I desire to express my appreciation of your paper for the splendid manner in which you publish Pastor Russell's Sermons, also the other very helpful matter from his pen which has been such a help to me and to many others I have come in contact with. The bright clean style and large type are features that make me proud to offer the paper to others. Wishing you success, I am,

Sincerely yours,
THOS. FOULKES.

Scotland, June 25.

I herewith enclose a postal order being renewal of my subscription to your paper for another year, as my present subscription concludes at the end of the month. I have subscribed to your paper for the last two years through the Watch Tower Bible and Tract society, London, but I am sending my subscription direct for next year.

I say that I appreciate your paper very highly and specially for the full reports of Pastor Russell's Sermons, for the Question Box columns, etc., and I purpose as long as you continue giving so full reports of Pastor Russell's Sermons to be a subscriber to your splendid paper.

I pray the Lord to bless you and guide you in the continuance of devoting so much of your valuable space for the publishing of so much helpful matter from Pastor Russell.

Thanking you in anticipation of your careful attention and with best wishes, I am,

Yours faithfully,
ALFRED JOHNSTON.

Missouri, July 7.

I am writing to express my appreciation of the many good things in the Tribune on the Tabernacle Bible Studies Truths. As I read these wonderfully cheering and helpful articles I regret that I cannot write to each one and express my thanks and would be so pleased to write the names in my Manna if I had the full address, so I could send Birthday cards. My birthday text will be found at the November 18 date. "The angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear him and delivereth them." Psa. 34: 7.

Is not that comforting?

The Tribune certainly has "thrust in its sickle" and is reaping while the harvest is ripe. May God add bring your two hands full to the altar.

Yours in the Harvest Work,
MILLY MAY TAYLOR.

California, June 6.

Inclosed please find amount covering up subscription to your paper up to next April. I like reading Pastor Russell's Sermons very much, such a good account and also the labor situation in England, my old home. It appears the working people have got to work and strike and fight for a living.

Yours truly,
H. FERN.

Oregon, July 6.

My Dear Brother in Christ:—One of those parties of whom I sent you subscription to the Tribune a few months ago has moved away to another place and now asked me to write to you how you change his address on your books.

His wife writes me in her letter that the Tribune feeds all papers. I don't know what I would do without it.

I get the paper after a while but have to wait so long and then I get five or six at a time (because the paper goes to the old address while the new address or postoffice is close by them.

God bless you, dear editor, for the noble work you are doing in the interest of the Lord's Truth and His righteous cause. Verily, your labor is not in vain in the Lord (I Cor. 15: 58.) I fully agree with the statement of Sister Reed, that it would be a great hardship to be without the Tribune, but thank God we do not have to do without it, at least (20c.) In your issue of June 20 I read a letter from Mrs. C. H. Burke, of New Hampshire. I most highly appreciate and indorse with my whole heart the sentiments and expressions in that letter.

The letter is a mild and yet a powerful rebuke to the false charges made by a certain Rev. Haldeman against the whole light of Truth presented by Pastor Russell and substantially corroborated and affirmed by the Word of God. Mrs. Burke truly strikes the right keynote when she said: "Yet in things religious I think we would be safer to follow the one who sticks most closely to the Word of God and whose teachings is in harmony with that Word, however, it may differ from the doctrines of men." Yes, surely, the traditions of men are not the Word of God, listen to the Master's Words on the subject: "Why do ye also transgress the commandment of God by your tradition? Thou ye have made the commandment of God of one effect by your tradition." . . . "But in vain they do worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men." Matt. 15: 3-6, 9.) And again we read, "for the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears." . . . And they shall turn away their ears from the Truth, and shall be turned unto fables." II Tim. 4: 3-4.) And many other texts like the above are plainly set forth in the Word of God in the same strong and upon which it would be much more profitable for the Rev. Mr. Haldeman to devote his time and strength instead of vainly striving to make people believe that "black is white" and ignorantly fighting against the plain and purpose of an Almighty God and diligently declaring void and useless the suffering and death of Christ on the cross by claiming that man was created immortal and death proof —I say contrasting the Word of God which repeatedly declares over and over again all through the Bible that man was and is mortal. "He that hath not the Son hath not life." I John 5: 12.) Thy word (the word of God) is Truth. John 17: 17, and His word of Truth will abide forever" while "every plant (doctrine of men) that is not of my Father, planting shall be rooted up," etc. Matt. 15: 13; Rev. 12: 14; Rev. 14: 12. Haldeman to the contrary, notwithstanding.

Yours in the love of that eternal Truth and the Great Teacher who taught it.

RASMUS F. JOHNSON.

Tennessee, July 8.

This is the second time I have renewed my subscription to your highly appreciated paper. Enclosed find money order for same. Please renew my subscription for one year. I love the Tribune much better than I did when I began to take it.

So eager am I to get it that I can scarcely wait until it arrives. I appreciate it most for the wonderful Sermons of Pastor Russell. I also appreciate the Question Box and the Letters of Love and Appreciation, as well as the items of labor news.

How the mists and fogs clear away before the rising sun of God's eternal Truth!

How glad I am that you are not being influenced by the advocates of the dark ages, for surely the dark ages refuse to publish the Good Tidings of Salvation, as did the editor of our own town paper. Glad you have the backbone to stand up for the Truth in its publication, in the face of opposition and the protests of the D. D.'s who are seeking to keep the "Key of knowledge" hidden from the reading public.

How the dear Lord will bless you for the stand you are taking. With best wishes for your success.

Yours for Truth,
F. A. LONG.

Alabama, July 6.

A dear friend of mine was kind enough to send me a year's subscription to your valuable paper and I appreciate more than I can express. It is a clean sheet and I very much enjoy its weekly visits. While it gives a large space to the labor troubles of the world, it also gives us Glad Tidings of great joy concerning a better world, through the agency of that good and wonderful preacher, Pastor C. T. Russell. A great man than Paul (I think), in that he filled labor covers the whole earth, also the millions of the "meat in due season" for the housedoll of faith. He is a "wise steward," for devising ways and means for dispensing these precious truths to "all the families of the earth." I trust the dear Lord may guard him and use him in a way to bring many glorious Truths to every hamlet in the "Lord's Moral Vineyard," also I pray God's rich blessings on you in abiding in its service.

Yours for continued service in the Harvest Work.

POPULAR MECHANICS

Chief Editor

NEW WATER PURIFIER.

Quicklime Recommended by London's Chief Water Expert.

Dr. A. C. Houston, director of water examinations for the metropolitan water board of London, has developed a new process of water purification of unusual interest. It is, he says, a "singularly simple and apparently perfect method" if one leaves out of account the question of cost. It may be said in passing that it shares this peculiarity with many other water purifiers. But, according to Dr Houston, the expense in this case is not so great as to preclude its use in London and presumably in other large cities, particularly in emergencies. The doctor's method may be briefly described as follows: When one part of quicklime is added to 5,000 parts of raw Thames water a slight excess of Ca O is left in the water, most of the lime being used up in neutralizing the carbonates normally present. This excess, which amounts to but .007 of 1 per cent, is sufficient to kill the germs of epidemic water borne diseases—typhoid fever, etc.—in from five to twenty-four hours. Now, by adding 1,250 parts of untreated water the excess of lime is neutralized and a supply of safe potable water is immediately available—if the water need for sanitization was pure.

Dr. Houston proposes to use the method, which he calls the "excess lime method," as follows: At present the London water supply is drawn from storage in settling reservoirs for thirty days or more and by filtration through sand. This is obviously a slow process, and the storage reservoirs in London are already becoming inadequate to maintain a safe margin above the daily demand. By applying the excess lime method to unfiltered Thames water the latter could be rendered potable at the end of twenty-four hours by the mere addition of a small quantity (25 per cent) of slaked water. Obviously this automatically multiplying the capacity of the storage reservoirs by between 300 and 400 per cent. It also has the advantage of the ordinary lime softening process, giving a soft water pleasant to use and requiring much less soap for washing than the raw water.

VARIED USES OF MICA.

Mineral Extensively Used in Many of the Industries.

The production of mica in the United States is one of the important lesser mineral industries; but, although mica deposits are numerous and well distributed, the imports still exceed the domestic production, according to Douglas B. Sterrett of the United States geological survey, the total value of mica produced in the United States last year amounted to $355,804, but the imports were valued at $502,163. These imports, however, were less by $222,362 than those of 1910.

Mica has a wide commercial application. The most particular use of sheet mica is in the manufacture of electrical apparatus, but a considerable quantity is still used in the glazed trade for stores, gas lamp chimneys, etc. Only the best quality and the larger sheets are available for such purposes, but both large and small sheet mica is used in the electrical industry. "Shingle," or built up mica board, in the making of which small sheet mica can be used, is substituted for sheet mica in many of the electrical work. Mica serves as a perfect insulator in various parts of dynamos, motors, induction apparatus, switchboards and in nearly every kind of electrical apparatus. Black "specks" of iron oxide in mica are peculiarly supposed, according to Mr. Sterrett, to render it worthless for electrical insulation. But that this is not the case is proved by the continued production of such mica in the United States and its use by large and reputable manufacturers. Tests made on domestic "specked" mica have shown that it is safe to use with currents of 1,000 volts and that it has a capacity to withstand even much greater voltage.

Scrap mica is ground in large quantities and used for the decoration of wall paper and in the manufacture of lubricants and fancy paints. It is also molded for electrical insulation. When mixed with grease or oils finely ground mica free from gritty matter forms an excellent lubricant.

The principal mica producing countries are India, the United States, Canada, Brazil, Ceylon and South Africa.

Black and Gold Varnishes.

A black varnish for covering leather and which can be roughly handled without fear of breaking is made as follows in the following manner: Mix thirty parts of rosin with the equal quantities of turpentine and turpentine oil; add six parts of sandarak gum and 120 parts of shellac, after which dissolve the whole mixture in 960 parts of alcohol of 90 per cent. Filter the liquid through fine linen and then mix it thoroughly with fifteen parts of lampblack which has been dissolved in a little alcohol.

A good gold varnish is made in the following manner: A suitable quantity of abeltac is dissolved in the same weight of concentrated alcohol. To this solution is added a 0.5 per cent solution or boric acid in alcohol, which gives the varnish its consistency. How ever, the varnish made in this manner is colorless, and in order to produce a golden shade picric acid is added until the desired degree of yellow is reached —Blacksmith and Wheelwright.

NEW PLATING PROCESS.

Ingenious Invention Deposits Metal on Wood or Glass.

An ingenious invention which is limitable in its applications has been perfected by two Italian chemists, according to Chambers' Journal. Briefly described, it comprises a means of depositing metals of any character upon any insoluble surface by electrical energy. The results so far achieved promise to revolutionize the whole art of electroplating and decoration, as well as many other branches of industry. China, wood, glass, celluloid, paper and other substances which have hitherto been regarded as beyond the electroplater's craft are rooted as easily as the metals generally associated with this process. What is more, the plating is everlasting. It enters into the fabric treated so that it becomes an integral part of the article. Thus, for instance, if an attempt is made to chip the plating from a glass vase the glass will come away with the metal coating.

There is a Westgrowood tea service on exhibition which shows with the pure luster of polished silver. The outer surface is so well covered with this precious metal that the whole resembles a silver set. It is only when the interior is examined and the potters' handiwork observed that one realizes that the silver had been deposited upon the external surface. What is more, the outer sheathing is not a thin film, but a solid sheet of metal, which can be made of any thickness and capable of being worked by the engraver. The authorities have expressed their willingness to apply the foil mark to articles so mounted. The process is likely to supersede the present process of silver mounting cut glass and other articles, instead of the metallic adornment being attached by means of plaster of paris, which is simply a makeshift, the metal deposited upon the glass becomes part and parcel of the article.

The process has extended the electroplater's art to a considerable degree. Any metal and its alloys can be successfully deposited upon some other metal as a base. Zinc, tin and lead can be deposited as easily as silver or nickel. This fact is of vital interest to a host of industries, as is borne out by the action of one of the largest builders of naval vessels, who has adopted the process for the zinc and tin plating or galvanizing of the steel parts of the boats. The deposit is not so thin, as in ordinary galvanizing, that a pin scratch will penetrate the protective skin, but is a solid sheeting of metal associated with the other metal beneath.

The possibility of being able to plate wooden articles seems so remote as to be fantastic, yet it is as efficiently accomplished by the Marchesi process as if copper were being plated. So far as china plating is concerned, the article must be in the unglazed or biscuit condition and is first coated with a chemical agent. In the same manner glass which is to be treated must first be roughened by sand blasting to remove the polish and to enable the metal to secure a grip. Another point is that the deposit, no matter what the character of the base, may subsequently be oxidized, tempered, etc., in just the same way as ordinary electro work.

USES OF ZIRCON.

Rare Earth Mineral Extensively Employed in Various Industries.

The United States geological survey has just published a short report on zirconiferous sandstone near Ashland, Va., by Thomas L. Watson and Frank L. Ross. The sandstone containing zircon, a rare earth mineral, was found on a number of farms, and laboratory tests made in the survey show that the percentage of zircon in it is considerable.

"Should the demand for zircon and further testing of the Ashland deposits warrant such action," the report states, "operations could be carried on with comparative ease. The rock can be crushed easily, the zircon and associated heavy minerals could be separated from the quartz by shaking tables, and the concentrates can be picked out by a magnetic separator."

The uses of zircon in its different forms are numerous. It is employed in the manufacture of electric lamps; it is a good insulator for both electricity and heat; it is used as an excellent refractory crucible, as well as linings for electric furnaces; it is well adapted for coating paints and lacquers, as it is unaffected by gas, acids or alkalies. In one form it is a valuable abrasive and is capable of cutting thick glass as readily as a diamond. Clear zircons of brownish or reddish color are cut for gems and are then known as hyacinths.

Fusing and Molding Quartz.

A new process of fusing and molding quartz was recently described at a meeting of the French Academy of Sciences, Paris, by the process, which is claimed to be very inexpensive, it is possible to produce not only lenses and other optical materials or implements, but many chemical utensils used for purposes for which platinum has heretofore been the only available material.

Fusing of quartz had already been accomplished by a German manufacturer in making mercury vapor lamps, but the molding of a variety of articles has never been attempted before, it is said.

Appreciations

Pennsylvania, Jan. 1, '13.

One thing I know, that whereas I was blind now I see. (John 9: 25.) Spiritually much suffering in this world by trying to read between the lines, yet the wise man states, seest thou a man that is hasty in His Words for there is more hope for a fool than for him. Prov. 29: 20.

So in your patience possess ye your souls. (Luke 21: 19.) A Job-like patience.

The Lesser or natural minded man cannot see in because of the veil of human mindedness which comes between them and the sacred things; and the only way to get in under is by consecration and sacrifice wholly the human will and nature. So, have you the Midnight Dawn. Smile both in heart and face we try keep it, let it be a seven day smile.

As so as to rejoice in tribulations as well, not after them, while also being, under God's "hammer and chisel" and His personal skill through Christ as well, if so rejoice do not flinch from the Master Workman's stroke—for God is Love—it is not the stroke of a foe.

The darkness is past and the true light now shines. (1 John 2: 8) so he that believeth on the Son of God hath the witness in himself; he that believeth not God hath made him (Christ) a liar; because he has believed not the records that God give of his Son. (1 John 5: 10.)

How sweet are thy words unto my taste! yea, sweeter than honey to my mouth. Psa. 119: 103; as I found thy words eat them. Jer. 15: 16. So grow on apples of the cross.

With a appreciative prayer for the Editor of the Tribune for his publishing "Pastor Russell's" Sermons and other helpful features, including the labor news, of this our wonderful age, a grand day with awful time yet a honor to live in them especially with a heart subject to God, in praise not only for the privilege of Christ's Body Members in this age, but the glorious light into the coming Age, and of the door of the worlds, hope, when the trial of glory shall come to pass, and the Hope or desires of all nations will have come, world without end, the end of the way is not merely to control capital and labor, but the fulfilment of the law (divine law), is love. Going also to build a road, (the highway of holiness, Isa. 35: 8), which will reach to the four corners of the earth, its designer and builder is God through Christ. Its boards material is love—for God is love.

Respectfully,
ROBERT J. CRAIG.

Mississippi, July 4.

You certainly get out a nice paper, and the way you handle Pastor Russell's Sermons ought to merit the approval of all the friends in the Truth everywhere. Brother John C. Coyle's letter in the issue of June 28 was worth the price of the paper. You are working for a noble cause and we hope you will keep the good work going.

Your friend,
C. E. EDMONSON.

Bible Students Oppose Doctrine of Hell Fire

WASHINGTON, July 8.—By unanimous action today the International Bible Students' Association adopted a resolution unreservedly repudiating as thoroughly unscriptural the teaching of a place, state or condition of "hell" fire and brimstone for the torment of the wicked."

At the same time the 4,000 delegates in the convention received that the vast majority of ministers of all Protestant denominations of the United States have privately repudiated the "hell fire" theory but for supposedly good reasons had hesitated to inform their congregations. It was the sense of the convention that on account of this hesitancy and attitudes of thousands were being driven into skepticism or infidelity.

BIBLE STUDIES FROM THE BROOKLYN TABERNACLE

THE MYSTERY OF THE KINGDOM.

Mark iv. 1-20—July 14.

"Rejoice with exceeding joy, and peace and mercy unto all that walk according to this rule."—Galatians vi. 16.

THE SALVATION open at the present time has been obtainable only through faith, and faith is dependent upon a measure of knowledge, or revelation, and this knowledge, or revelation, came to us from God; for, as said St. Peter, "Holy men of old spoke and wrote as they were moved by the Holy Spirit." God in this Age is calling a class composed of appreciators of His Message. These are chiefly the poor of this world, rich in faith.

The object of today's lesson is to show the importance of having the right kind of spiritual food, and not that which is unsuitable, or becomes choked by earthly ambitions. Such as thus overcome will be inheritors with Jesus of the glori ous Messianic Kingdom.

Jesus gave the parable of the Sower of the "good seed." The disciples were perplexed and inquired its meaning.

His answer was that it related to the Gospel Age. It was not to be understood by outsiders. It was for this reason that Jesus spoke in parables, because only according to faith and appreciation of heavenly things could they be understood. Only such persons as were willing to understand the conditions governing the "narrow way" were to fully and clearly understand the parables. This is in harmony with all God's dealings in the present time. We read, "The secret of the Lord is with them that fear Him, and He will show them His Covenant."

In verse 13 the Master indicates that the parable was the key to all the several key to the interpretation of all His parables. "Seed" does not mean literal seed, "tares" do not mean literal "thorns" do not mean thorns, etc. Proceeding, the Great Teacher expounded the parable as follows:

Seed Represents the Kingdom Message.

(1) The seed that was sown represents the Word of God; it represents that participating nature of God's Word which relates to the Kingdom. This is shown by St. Matthew's account of the same parable. (Matthew xiii. 19.) Our lesson says that the Wicked One is Satan. Satan and his evil agents are therefore represented in the parable by "birds." The import is that we use the benefit of that which we do not understand.

Evidently the use of Bible study and religious reading is lost. "The "good seed" does not enter into the understanding and heart that is not in a receptive attitude. Like the wayside path, it is hard.

(2) The seed sown in the stony place represents those who, when they hear the Kingdom Message, are delighted with it. They may say, How beautiful! What a grand time there will be when Messiah rules in righteousness to bless the world! All who have had the privilege of becoming members of the Bride of Christ, to be associated with Him in His Kingdom work, this class represented have little depth of character; they are merely emotional.

(3) The seed sown in the good ground represents those whose hearts are divided. Let us remember plainly that these thorns do not represent gambling devices, card parties, dances or other places of liberty, nor secret sins. Such are not the things should appeal to Christians. The Master distinctly tells us that the thorns represent "the cares of this life and the deceitfulness of riches." Christian who has received the Message of the Kingdom and has allowed the cares of life and the deceitfulness of riches to choke and frustrate his prospects of the Kingdom is represented in this parable.

(4) According to the parable there will be one class who will attain the Kingdom in the sense that they will bring forth the kind of fruitage acceptable to the Lord; but the difference will be in the amount of fruitage—some thirty, some sixty and some a hundred fold.

The Lord does not explain the difference between these fruitages, but the fully consecrative and loving will be the most energetic to know and to do the Master's will, and will bring forth the largest fruitage and will have the chief places in the Kingdom.

St. Paul declares that no star differs from star in glory, so it will be with those who attain unto the First Resurrection. Jesus assured James and John that if they were willing to drink of His cup and be baptized into His death, they should surely sit with Him in His Throne; but as to the chief places of honor, it was not for Him to say. Those places will be given according to principles of justice and of mercy.

EVERYBODY'S BIBLE QUESTION BOX

YOUR BIBLE QUESTIONS WILL BE ANSWERED IN THESE COLUMNS OR BY MAIL IF SENT TO THE EDITOR OF THIS JOURNAL.

Q.—I submit the following query: Can you disprove the Evolution Theory by natural facts and by arguments based upon human logic and reasoning? (R. J. S.)

Answer.—The Evolution Theory, several years ago, was quite in vogue among a certain class of scientists. The trend of thought has swerved around to the opposite course, and those who retain the theory are regarded now, by their more enlightened brethren, as being sadly undisciplined or obsolete in their line of reasoning. Some of the world's foremost scientists have declared that there is not a single shred of evidence to support the theory of evolution. In the thousand years of the authentic history of the race, there has never been known a single instance of one species changing into another species. No one has ever heard of a cat becoming a dog, or of a monkey becoming a man. There are people who would like to fly, but we do not know of any one growing wings. All intelligent people who are awake to the Divine Revelation know that the human race in place of evolving is higher conditions is rapidly decaying to the morally, mentally and physically. We must concede, if we are logical and reasonable, that the Pyramids of Egypt, built 2170 B.C., whose measurements, dimensions, angles, passages, etc., teach scientific truths only recently discovered by modern scientists? (A. V. R.)

It is a subject for us to think of ourselves as more brainy than our forefathers. The fact that we are living in the day of steam engine and electric light, the telegraph, telephone, phonograph, etc., does not prove, as has been asserted, that we are more brainy than our forefathers. As a matter of fact, statistics show that our race in most civilized lands is steadily deteriorating. Announcement has recently been made that the last manufacturers of Great Britain notice that the demand for smaller nuts has been increasing and the demand for larger nuts decreasing, as shown by their records for years back. The Evolution Theory, which is directly opposed to the Bible account of the skill of the ancients, which those of Evolution fame would have us think were mere uneducated monkeys. Every thoughtful person examining the Great Pyramid, or reading accounts thereof must be impressed with the wonderful practical scientific knowledge of its builders—a precision supposed to have been impossible for us to living prior to our day. The Pyramid, however, is but one per evidence in contradiction of the Evolution theory.

Q.—Should we understand from the words of the Scriptures that the race of mankind is incapable of governing itself properly? In all of the thousands of years in the history of the world there has never been a satisfactory form of government. Empires Kingdoms and nations have come and gone and all have proven unsatisfactory. And now, in our day we are all over the world conditions of dissatisfaction, unrest, wars, bloodshed, strife, tyranny, corruption, and great industrial and social disturbances developing alarmingly, and resulting in strikes, lockouts, mobs and rioting, until there seems to be a constant struggle in all along the line between capital and labor, threatening a revolution the world over. Would you make the French Revolution look like a picnic party," as a great labor leader said the other day. What is the matter in the world, anyway? Does the Bible explain the situation? (Marx.)

Answer.—Yes; the Scriptures clearly explain the situation, pointing out the cause of all the difficulty, what the outcome of the present conditions will be and also setting forth the only remedy—the only arrangement that could by any possibility bring about the time of trouble foretold for the "last times," which will result in the sweeping aside of present institutions, and thus make way for the perfect Government of the Lord, the Kingdom of Heaven, which will establish conditions on a new basis, the basis of love, and in this way "Peace on earth, good will amongst men" will be brought to pass.

Q.—How can a business man live up to the "Golden Rule" in these days of keen competition when all are seeking to take advantage of one another, and when there are so many unscrupulous individuals resorting to every unfair means to get all they can seize? This is an Age of greed and graft and corruption and if one desires to do to others as he would have them do to him, he is a simpleton in the lurch. It's a case of "dog eat dog" in the business world! What do you think? (Vera.)

Answer.—There now exists a noble minded men in the business world who are striving to conduct their affairs in accord with the principles of the "Golden Rule," but who find that with all their efforts, situations will arise in which it would be impossible to fully conform to those principles and succeed in their business efforts. Because of the imperfections of the flesh, and the adverse conditions by which we are surrounded, it is impossible to do the things that we would. The Apostle Paul expressed this very thought in his day—Romans vii. 19-25. However, we should cultivate the desire in our hearts to live up to the principles of justice and love, and be active in so doing as far as possible, being assured by the instructions of the Word of the Lord, that in the end it will be well with us, both present and future, is worth while.

Q.—If God the Creator died upon the cross at Calvary in the person of our Lord Jesus Christ, then for three days the Universe was without a God, and how could He resurrect Himself if there was no God? (W. P. H.)

Answer.—Your difficulty lies in that you have taken the statement of some creed in place of the Bible teachings. The Scriptures declare that our Lord was neat to the Father in every sense of the word, and that the Heavenly Father made Him the honored instrument in connection with every feature of His work. Thus we read: "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with the God, and the Logos was a God. All things were made by Him, and without Him was not anything made that was made."—Corrected Translation. (John 1, 1-3) St. Paul declares that all things were of the Father and all things are by the Son. (I Corinthians viii. 6.) In harmony with the Father's plan, He became the Son of God, who was rich, became poor; exchanging His spirit nature for the human nature, He is made the "the Just for the unjust" to reconcile us to God. This humbling to human nature was necessary because it was a man who had sinned and only a man could redeem man. Thus, "The man Christ Jesus gave Himself a ransom for all, to be testified in due time." (I Timothy ii, 6.) Jesus' death was not the death of the Heavenly Father, but the death of the Heavenly Son.

Q.—Does the soul of man sleep when the body is dead? (J. H. L.)

Answer.—In the experiences of those rendered unconscious by drowning, by drowning almost to the point of death, or by various other means, the unfortunate individuals say that they have been in a condition void of knowledge or realization. Their minds became a blank exactly similar to the conditions relating to sleep. Throughout the Scriptures, the condition of death is likened to that of sleep. (Psalm xiii, 3; Daniel xii, 2; Acts vii, 60; I Corinthians xv, 18.) The old Pagan idea of a condition of consciousness after death, is absolutely contrary to the teachings of the Bible, which declares in unmistakable terms that "Soul dance not anything." (Ecclesiastes ix, 5, 10.) The condition of death would mean annihilation if it were not for the fact that Christ died to redeem the race. (I Corinthians xv, 18.) As the result of Christ's redemptive work, all are to be awakened from their graves and come forth from heaven, hell, or purgatory. It is the soul, the conscious, intelligent being, and not the body, that is coming forth from the tomb, the sleep of death, for it was the soul that sinned. (Ezekiel xviii, 4, 20; Acts iii, 23; Psalm civi, 4.

Q.—What are we to understand by the thousand year period of time as spoken of in Revelation 20th chapter? (W. S.)

Answer.—The words, "But the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished.", are not found in the oldest Greek manuscripts, and evidently are spurious. With these words eliminated from the fifth verse, the meaning of the following words becomes clear. Christ and His Bride, the Church, the saints gathered out from the world during the nineteen centuries of the Gospel Age, are to be seated upon thrones and to reign during that thousand years. (Verse 4.) They surely would not reign over each other, and the Scriptures declare that they will reign on the earth (Revelation v, 10) over the world of mankind." (Daniel vii, 27). The object of this great reign of The Christ is to give to the entire race of mankind a full, completed opportunity of salvation; and all who will accept of the Lord's grace and kindness upon the conditions of loyalty and obedience, shall be blessed and restored to eternal life. (Revelation xxi, 17). This will not constitute a "second chance," as only the Church Class is now on trial, and the world in general knows little or nothing about the way of salvation.

Transport Workers' Strike Refuses to Collapse--Well Known English Miners' Leader Dies--Readjustments of Wages in the Cotton and Railway Industries--Important Figures Regarding Cost of Living in United Kingdom and Wages.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

LONDON, July 10.—That general strike of transport workers which the newspapers here have, daily for week part, informed us was collapsing is very far from having done so yet. In fact, a livelier corpse has rarely been seen. Starting in the early part of May it persisted with undiminished vigor through that month and June and the end of the first week in July finds it still flourishing. Only about 10,000 men are working throughout the whole of the port and the long beaches of the commercial part of the River Thames. The men worked are all non-unionists and typical blacklegs which means that the employers have to put up with exceedingly inferior services per man and so pay for it in money and kind at rates very much higher than the men on strike are asking for. A half dozen great strike meetings are held daily in all the great dock and mercantile river districts and other big demonstrations are held weekly in either Trafalgar Square or Hyde Park, both of which are in the well-do-do West End of London and at least five miles from the edge of the trouble.

The 100,000 men who are on strike have, of course, a great number of women and children dependent upon them and as strike pay has ceased in most cases owing to the exhaustion of union funds their position is very serious. Philanthropical funds have been raised to feed the women and children and these funds have been well supported both by the unions and the general public. England's only labor daily newspaper, the Daily Herald, has raised over $10,000 in a few nights. Still of course, there is much misery that cannot be reached in this way but no complaints are heard and the men are resolved that when they go back they will exact compensation in one form or another for the pain and loss they have suffered. Particular attention persists in the case of ships with numbers of grain and timber ships arriving, the docks are getting chocked with vessels that cannot be unloaded. There are also over 1,000 barges idle on the Thames.

The newspapers declare that a reign of terror exists in dockland but an examination of the facts put forward to support the numerous stories of intimidation and outrage by the strikers reveal very little to support the extravagant press allegations. Picketing is, of course, very strict and those occasional blacklegs who venture out of the docks are sometimes chased and pummelled. These occasional little melees, however, do not make a "reign of terror."

A well known English miners' leader has passed away with the death of Enoch Edwards, president of the Miners' Federation of Great Britain and a labor member of Parliament. He was sixty years old. Like other labor leaders who passed away in recent years, Enoch Edwards has fallen a victim in the front line in the service of the men who honored him by electing him to high office in the Federation. All through the anxious days leading up to and following the recent miners' strike no man toiled more earnestly to further the interests of the men than did the dear miners' leader.

The personality of Edwards was a picturesque one, and the strenuous life he had lived for the beyond was reflected in the outlines of his rugged features. At the age of nine he began work in the mines, passing through all the stages from pitboy to checkweighman. At the age of 21 he joined the North Staffordshire Miners' Association, of a lodge of which he subsequently became treasurer, and, five years later, in 1877, he was appointed secretary of the association.

In that capacity he played a prominent part in organizing the Midland Miners' Federation. In 1888 when the Miners' Federation of Great Britain was formed, Erwards who was even then coming into prominance as a national asset of the labor movement, was chosen for the responsible post of treasurer of the new organization.

Sixteen years of faithful service in that capacity was rewarded in 1906 by election to the presidency of the body, a position he occupied up to his death. He entered Parliament in the labor interest in 1906.

The Lancashire cotton weavers and those subsidiary to them work this week at the advanced rates of wages arranged at the conference held between employers and operatives on March 1. Generally this is 2 per cent though there are exceptions above and below, and these additions to the present rates will be a substantial help to those who have been struggling to cope with the higher prices of commodities. It is with the help of the Weavers' Amalgamation, that advances in wages of 15 per cent on grey goods, 13 per cent on plain colored goods, and 5 per cent on fancy goods have been arranged since 1899. Of course, these advances in wages do not exhaust the benefits received by members of the societies that make up the Amalgamation, for it has successfully for better conditions of labor and the great increase in membership testifies of that to the recognition of its advantages and to its strenuous endeavor to serve them even upon those who do not see them. The Amalgamation has now a membership of 173,000 and a considerable increase is expected. All the advances have been obtained without the stoppage of a single loom or winding frame and without even a threat of marching notices.

TIN PLATE TRADE SUFFERS.

According to an article in a recent United States consular report the recent coal strike in Great Britain caused great damage to the tin plate export trade in Swansea. The exports of tin plates for May, 1912, show a total of only 23,342 tons, a loss of 18,775 tons compared with the same mon of 1911. Swansea has lost not only its entire export trade of tin plate to the United States, but many of its important markets, especially in the far east, where the Welsh tin plates were in competition with the American product. In the warehouses of the Swansea dock and in stock there is a larger supply of tin plates than ever known in the history of the port. This record increase in stock is due to the loss of markets as well as to the congestion in shipping following the resumption of work in the coal mines. The present stagnation in the shipping trade of this port will no doubt tend to lose further markets to the Welsh tin plate trade.

MINNEAPOLIS BUILDING TRADES

MINNEAPOLIS, July 9.—During the past year the building trades organizations have been bitterly fought by the Builders' and Traders' Exchange. The latter organization has been endeavoring to destroy the unions by devious means, the principal manner in which they have worked being the insertion of alluring advertisements for mechanics in the newspapers in the North west, misrepresenting the condition whereby large numbers of men are idle. The building trades council, however, in prosecuting a vigorous campaign against the unfair tactics, and headway is being made.

THE BIG REPUBLICAN FREE-LIST.

NOMINENCE given to the tariff in both the Republican and Democratic platform, foreshadows the prominence to be given it by the spell-binders during the campaign inasmuch as the present schedules are on the defensive, and are being furiously attacked by radical revisionists on the ground that they encourage domestic monopolies, it is worth while to study the latest official reports of our foreign commerce. The tariff's opponents represent it as a prohibitive barrier which practically no foreign products can pass and which therefore denies the consumer any relief from extortionate prices. Furthermore, we are constantly being told by the Democratic press that the needlessness of a tariff to protect home manufacturers is proved by the fact that we are actually exporting manufactures largely—that is, "underselling the foreigners in their own markets."

Now, the truth of the matter is that while we are very fortunately assisted by the skill of American labor (made more skilful than European labor by higher wages and better living) to export increasing quantities of manufactures, we are at the same time importing large quantities of foreign-made goods on which no tariff whatever is levied. Where a duty is needed to protect home industry it is levied. But where the duty may safely be dispensed with, the article is placed on the free list. This is the professed Republican policy and it appears to have been followed closely.

The facts upon which we have based the above conclusions are found in the report of the department of commerce and labor on the country's foreign trade for the fiscal year ending June 30. The figures make a remarkable showing of the country's commercial growth and prosperity at the same time that they correct some popular misunderstandings in regard to tariff affairs.

The total value of the merchandise entering and leaving the country, in the trade with foreign lands and its own inland possessions in the fiscal year was $4,009,060,000; the value of manufactures exported was more than $1,000,000,000; and the value of nondutiable merchandise entering the country was $1,000,000,000. Of this $1,000,000,000 worth of nondutiable merchandise entering the country during the year about $200,000,000 worth was from foreign countries and $100,000,000 worth from Hawaii and Porto Rico. The merchandise coming from foreign countries only but not including that from Hawaii and Porto Rico) 53.5 per cent centered free of duty, against 44.3 per cent during the fiscal year 1911. The free lists have been arranged since 1899. Of course, these advances in wages do not exhaust the benefits received by members of the societies that make up the Amalgamation, for it has successfully for better conditions of labor and the great increase in membership testifies of that to the recognition of its advantages and to its strenuous endeavor to serve them even upon those who do not see them. The Amalgamation has now a membership of 173,000 and a considerable increase is expected. All the advances have been obtained without the stoppage of a single loom or winding frame and without even a threat of marching notices.

The principal articles forming the $1 billion dollars' worth of duty-free merchandise entering the continental United States during the fiscal year were foodstuffs and manufactures of raw supplies. Of the more than $1,000,000,000 worth of manufactures exported during the year, those of iron and steel aggregated about $275,000,000; copper and mineral oils each more than $100,000,000; lumber and other manufactures of wood nearly $100,000,000; leather and manufactures thereof about $60,000,000, and cotton manufactures about $50,000,000. Put the full fiscal year manufactures formed about 46 per cent of the total domestic export. It is an interesting fact, consequently, that the country's exports of manufactures alone in the last fiscal year nearly equaled all exports in the year 1900. The tariff policy which has made such growth possible should not be suddenly revolutionized.

ON ADVISING MOTHERS.

TRACT published by the American Economic League offers some good advice to those who offer advice to others. The advisers to whom it specially addresses itself are the writers of "Hints for Mothers" and like stuff, whose purpose is commendable and whose hints are often quite practicable but who quite as often forget the circumstances of those for whom they write. For example, the mother is told not to work too hard before the baby is born. She is also told that the baby should not have to share a bed with older persons, but should sleep alone. She is warned against letting the baby play about the kitchen. He should have plenty of fresh air, and in fact should be kept out of doors the greater part of the day when the weather is favorable. Mother is also warned against consulting the neighbors when baby is sick. There is only one thing to do—send at once for the doctor. Also, the house should be kept spick and span all the time. It should have plenty of air and sunlight, the walls should be freshly papered, and all garbage dumps, pools and dirty water, or other unsanitary conditions in the neighborhood should be removed. Furthermore, baby should have pure, sweet milk at any cost—and it should not come from a bottle.

Advice of this sort to the mothers who live in tenements has become very familiar. We are all of us apt to say in reading it: "Very true. Now if mothers don't have big healthy babies it's their own fault. They have been told how." Yes, they have been told how. But those who have told them have not seen the mothers, or the places the mothers dwell in. "Don't work too hard before the baby is born"—was there ever finer sarcasm?

We sympathize with the protest of our trade union contemporary. The fami iar advice to mothers is all well enough in its way, but it surely is mockery to offer it to the poor women that the baby-saving shows and the "Advice to Mothers" pamphlets are intended to reach. It is like a good deal of the well-meant but wasted philanthropy of the day. What is needed is not alms, or advice which it is physically impossible for the under-nourished and overworked mothers of the wretched tenement quarters to live up to, but more social and industrial justice. When honest and fair economic conditions are established, most of the alms and most of the advice to mothers will be needless. However, it will probably be a long time before society will adopt real corrective incisions of more palliatives.

EXPRESS MONOPOLY MUST REDUCE RATES.

HE Interstate Commerce Commission has again rendered a great public service. Its decision ordering the express companies to reduce their rates will affect a large number of people, freeing them from an extortion which has been of long standing and finally become intolerable. The reduction ordered by the commission apply mainly to packages of less than twelve pounds weight. The bulk of ordinary express traffic probably comes under this classification, however, and the order is therefore of the greatest practical importance aside from the great principle involved. The express monopoly is one of the greediest and most detestable in the country. The express companies were almost without exception started on such small capital (compared with their vast earnings) as to deserve to be called shoestring affairs. Combining with one another, and holding up the public for rates which are two or three times what they ought to be, they have managed to prosper inordinately, waxing richer and richer as the country grew and maintaining their monopoly partly by their pull in Congress and partly by their "stand-in" with railroad officials. Many of these latter are believed to be big participants in the unrighteous profits of the express monopoly. The monopoly should be abolished in this country, as it has been in most other countries, by the establishment of a parcels post. As both parties have been forced to place a pledge for a parcels post in their platforms, this will doubtless come in the near future. In the meantime, it means a great deal to the people to be protected from further robbery by the express-company combine. This protection the public receives in the decision of the commission announced today.

DEMOCRATS MENTION GOV. BALDWIN FOR PRESIDENCY.

CONNECTICUT'S "favorite son" for the Democratic presidential nomination is Governor Simeon E. Baldwin, the first Democratic executive of the Nutmeg State in seventeen years. Colonel Roosevelt's characterization as "reactionary" of one of his decisions as justice of the Connecticut supreme court of errors attracted wide attention during the fall of 1910, but did not prevent the judge's election as governor the same year. Governor Baldwin has been president of the American Bar association and the International Law association and is the author of several well known works on legal topics, among them "Cases on Railroad Law" and "Two Centuries' Growth of American Law." He is seventy-two years old.

LABOR'S INTERESTS AT NATIONAL CAPITAL.

A Vote Will be Had in the House On the Department of Labor Bill This Week. Its Passage by a Decisive Majority is Predicted--Labor Union to Amend Constitution to Safeguard Political Endorsements--Railroad Wrecks Due to Defective Rails.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

WASHINGTON, July 16.—On Wednesday, July 10, Chairman Wilson of the House Labor Committee, called up for discussion the Department Labor bill, which had been reported out of the Labor Committee some time ago, the committee unanimously recommending that it pass. Almost the entire session was devoted to the consideration of the bill, and numerous amendments were submitted and accepted by Chairman Wilson, who had charge of the bill during the debate. The bill provides, as its name implies, for a department of labor, with a secretary at its head who shall be a member of the President's Cabinet, power being conferred on this official to use the good offices of the department in industrial disputes. Mediation and conciliation between employer and employe is one of the distinctive features of the measure. It is expected that a vote will be had on the next to consideration this week. No opposition to the bill has thus far been had, and it is likely pass the House by an overwhelming vote.

During the consideration of the naval appropriation bill in the House the eight-hour bill was inserted as an amendment for the reason that while the House had passed the eight-hour bill the Senate had not yet taken action. In order that the Senate might be compelled to act upon this legislation it was incorporated in the naval appropriation bill as an amendment. The Senate finally concurred in, with slight amendments, with the Hughes eight-hour bill, and it has been signed by the President. However, the Hughes eight hour bill does not become effective until January 1, 1913. In the consideration of the naval appropriation bill in the Senate an effort was made to eliminate the eight-hour amendment on the plea that the eight hour day was already established by law. It was contended by the friends of the eight hours amendment that its effect was to make the eight hour provision effective, so far as naval construction was concerned immediately, and that if it was stricken out contracts could be entered into prior to January 1, 1913, which would not extend the provisions of the eight hour law to contractors and sub-contractors, on this naval appropriation bill, and which is a distinct feature of the eight hour law that goes into effect in 1913. An amendment was finally adopted that carries the eight hour law into effect immediately on all contracts provided for in the naval appropriation bill. The amendment follows: "That the provisions of the act of Congress entitled an act limiting the hours of daily service of laborers and mechanics employed upon work done for the United States, or for any territory or for the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, approved August 1, 1912, shall be in force as to all contracts under this act from and after its passage."

Experts connected with the Interstate Commerce Commission have for many months been conducting an investigation for the purpose of securing data relative to defective railroad rails. From information gathered it is shown that during November and December, 1911 and January, 1912, there were 2,760 accidents attributable to rail failures, and of this number 336 occurred as the result of defective rails. The defective rails are due to the process of manufacture, and H. W. Belnap, chief inspector of safety appliances of the Interstate Commerce Commission, states that "under specifications and tests of rails, in so far as the detection of longitudinal seams is concerned, appear to be inadequate. It would seem to be time that some definite action be taken toward eliminating this source of danger and securing structurally sound rails."

During the fight that occasional application is made by political aspirations to the organizations of labor for endorsement, and from the further fact that in this city the political audacities is ever simmering, the local Plate Printers' Union, whose members are employed in the printing of currency has under consideration an amendment to its constitution covering this question. The amendment, if adopted, which it probably will be, will prohibit the giving of any endorsement for political preferment to anyone aspiring for any office of importance in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, or any position of prominence under the supervision of the Treasury Department, except upon approval by a vote of the membership, with a still further approval by the executive council of the American Federation of Labor.

NEW MINE SCALE BEING CONSIDERED.

What gave promise of being the mildest convention in years of District No. 5, United Mine Workers, opened in Labor Temple yesterday, and after the preliminaries went into executive session to consider certain unsettled details of the district wage scale. The convention, a special one, called to adopt the wage contract with the Pittsburgh district operators for the ensuing year, met with the storm center of other conventions, former President Francis Feehan, present simply as a delegate from Castle Shannon.

The convention recessed at noon in await the result of another joint conference between the operators and the scale committee of 18 mine workers, which went into session at 2 p. m. Several points are in dispute, the principal ones being the uniform outside-day wage scale and abolishing machines in cutting rike in mines.

COMPENSATION ACT LAUDED

SEATTLE, Wash., July 15.—Eight months' administration of the workmen's compensation act adopted by the last state legislature has been completed. The total number of claims filed and approved is 3,500; employes listed and protected, 185,000. There has been paid into the fund from assessments, $640,961.20. The number of claims allowed total 4,823, while to meet these claims $210,455.31 has been expended. The expenses of administration is 11 per cent, but will undoubtedly be reduced, as the initial cost of inaugurating the act will not have to be met again. The expense incurred in administering the law does not come from the fund paid in by the employers, but is taken from the general fund of the state derived from general taxation.

Pastor Russell's Sermon

ONENESS OF THE CHURCH OF CHRIST.

Everywhere Made Prominent in the Scriptures—Bible Studies Overdone—Pastor Russell Says Sects and Parties Are Nowhere Recognized in Holy Writ — There is but One Church, and Jesus is Its Head—Sectarian Divisions Arose from Neglect and Lore of Faith—An Address to Bible Students.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 14.—Bible study must be coming quite into vogue if we may judge by the interest manifested by the thousands gathered here for a ten-days' Convention. Nothing boisterous or ludicrous has manifested itself. All day, and every day, appears to be spent in searching the Scriptures and in quiet, spiritual rejoicing in the promises found therein. The testimony of many citizens is that we never before had such a Convention in our midst.

The people are from the middle walks of life—poor rather than rich. They have no outward badge of special gathering, but seem to be adorned with a meek and quiet spirit. The entire Bible is their creed and they truly walk in its light, which they tell us is growing daily brighter as we near the Morn of the New Dispensation of Christ's Kingdom.

A peculiarity of these Bible Students is that during the entire series of the meetings, in which more than forty speakers have participated, no appeal has been made for money; it has not even been mentioned from the platform. Asked why this is, the answer was that each tries to give to the service of the Truth what he is able according to his ability—as unto the Lord. And so far as is known here is no lack, because the expenses of the propaganda are kept within the limit of the offerings. The Convention closes today. Extracts from Pastor Russell's Sunday address follow:

His text was, "But ye are come * * * to the General Assembly and Church of the First-born, which are written in Heaven." (Hebrews xii. 23.) He said in part:—

The oneness of the Church of Christ is everywhere made prominent in the Bible. Sects and parties are nowhere recognized. Nowhere is it intimated that Christ has various Churches—for instance, the Roman Catholic, the Anglican, the Greek, Presbyterian, Congregational, Lutheran, etc. On the contrary, there is but the one "Church, which is the Body of Christ," and that Body of Christ has but the one Head—Jesus.

We not only find that Christ and the Apostles established but the one Church, but we cannot think of any reason why these should have added to it had more than one. Nothing is plainer than that our sectarian divisions arose from our neglect and loss of "the faith once delivered unto the saints." (Jude 2.) As the divisions came in, the errors came in with them; and, as the errors got out, so also will sectarianism pass away.

THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF THE SAINTS.

As we are assembled here today, not under and human or sectarian name, and not divided by sectarian creeds, but united as one people through our consecration to the Lord, through our desire to know His will by the study of His Word, we well represent the Scriptural or ideal Church of Christ. Regardless of nationality, language, caste and of all sectarian creeds and bondage, we are here simply and solely as children of God, and Bible students in the school of Christ, to learn of Him—to be fitted and prepared for glorious joint-heirship with Him in His coming Kingdom, and meantime to learn at His feet the lessons necessary for so great a coming service.

Let us correct myself and say rather that our little home classes very fittingly represent the Lord's Church —as it was in the days of Jesus and the Apostles. And our Assembly here today, far away from those class es, in these beautiful grounds, is a picture rather of what the Apostle describes in our text, namely, "The General Assembly of the Church of the First-born"—from every quarter, as it will be by and by, but gathered on the heavenly plane by the change of the First Resurrection.

How many of us have during the past said with reference to our own lowship in spirit with the Lord, "It is good to be here! But oh, dear brethren, I am sure that I voice the sentiment of everyone present when I say, It will be better to be there! oh so much better!" When by God's grace we shall reach that Heavenly shore and participate in the joys of that greater and better Convention. "The General Assembly of the Church of the First-borns." It will be better than this grand Convention; and I will seek to enumerate some of the reasons why I think it will be so.

ENTER INTO THE JOYS OF THE LORD.

(1) The joys of our present Convention are merely a foretaste of the perfect glory we will experience when we enter into the joys of the Lord—beyond the veil. Now we see only part the wondrous things of our Heavenly Father's character and Plan, and of our Redeemer's love and sympathy, and of each other's love and sympathy; then we shall know even as we are known, is the guarantee of the inspired Apostle.

Now we see as through an obscure glass the things which the natural eye cannot see nor hear, neither can enter into the heart of the natural man, but which God has revealed unto us by His Spirit. But they are still more or less obscure to us. We cannot weigh nor appreciate the wonderful glories which God has in reservation for us, but then we shall see Him face to face, as St. Paul declares.

(2) As we meet here today as New Creatures in Christ, we seek to know each other as God knows us, not after the flesh, but after the spirit. But for all that we experience difficulties. It is often difficult for us to entirely overlook the flesh of our fellows, as we also doubt save of whom, in looking our blemishes in the flesh. But oh, what will it be to be there! All the imperfections and weaknesses of the flesh, against which we must now fight—all these will then be gone.

Have we not the promise, "We shall be like Him, for we shall see Him as He is?" Have we not the promise again that, sown in weakness, we shall be raised in power; sown in dishonor, we shall be raised in glory; sown in animal body we shall be raised a spirit body? Have we not the further promise respecting that glorious resurrection change, which shall lift us completely out of the human and into the divine nature, in the which all be changed? "Of flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of God." (Corinthians xv. 50, 51.)

FURTHER TRIALS — FURTHER BATTLINGS.

(3) Another difference between this Convention and the great one promised in our text is that we shall go from here to our homes to engage afresh in warfare with sin within and without—to continue our warfare as good soldiers of Jesus Christ under the Captaincy of our Redeemer. We shall go from here realizing that our trials and testing are not yet ended, that the "cup" which the Father has decreed for us we have not yet drained.

We shall go forth from here remembering that we "have not yet resisted unto blood, striving against sin" and fighting "the good fight of faith." We shall return to our homes with the thought that we still have need of the Scriptural exhortation, "Watch," and "stand fast!" "Quit you like men!" "Put on the whole armor that ye may be able to stand in the evil day, and, having done all, to stand."

We will go from here realizing that in all probability this season of refreshment we have enjoyed has been a part of the Father's good providence for us whereby we shall be the stronger, the more courageous, the better prepared for further trials, betsetments, difficulties, and conflicts with the world, the flesh and the Adversary.

But when we reach the glorious Convention mentioned by the Apostle, all the fightings and trials and testings will be in the past. For us, therefore, there will be no more sighing, no more crying, no more dying, no more fightings, no more crosses, no more sufferings, but instead, life eternal, joy eternal, glory, honor and immortality at our dear Redeemer's right hand of favor. Well do I know that this hope of sharing in the General Assembly of the Church of the First-borns strengthens your heart and nerves you to loyalty and faithfulness to the Lord, the Truth and the brethren as the days go by.

Let us console ourselves with the thought that whatever is the will of God concerning us final necessarily be for our highest welfare and best interests. If, therefore, it is not yet time for us to pass beyond the veil, it is because our Heavenly Father and Redeemer have a work for us to do in the present life—either a work of further polishing upon our own characters or a work of helping the brethren. For in the Apostle's declaration that the Bride is to make herself ready for that event. We are to build one another up in the most holy faith, encouraging, strengthening, sympathizing with and assisting one another in running the race for the great Prize.

Another happifying thought we should take with us as to our homes is the Lord's promise, "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee." And again, "My grace is sufficient for thee, for My strength is made perfect in my weakness." And again, "We know that all things work together for good to those who love the Lord, to the called according to His purpose."—Romans viii. 28.

So then, dear friends, we will not return to our homes like an army corps in retreat, but rather as a company of good soldiers who have been refreshed and encouraged and stimulated; we will return to our homes full of good courage, full of joyful anticipation of the coming Great Convention of the Church of the First-borns; full of renewed determination that, by the grace of God, and with the assistance of our great Advocate, we will make our calling and election sure by so running in His footsteps as to obtain the great Prize which He has offered to us.

THE CONTEXT IN AGREEMENT.

Let me detain you a little longer that I may point out afresh that the context confirms our glorious hope respecting the Great Convention of the future, and shows that it is nigh at hand. St. Paul pictures before us the fact that God's dealings with Israel, in bringing them out of Egyptian bondage and to Mt. Sinai, pictured the work of this Gospel Age, in the calling of Spiritual Israel out of the bondage of the world—of the flesh and of sin and death. The Apostle thus shows that the giving of the Law Covenant to Israel at Mt. Sinai typically represented the giving to them of the Law Covenant at Jerusalem in Mt. Zion in the end of this Age.

The Law Covenant was given through a mediator, Moses, and the New Law Covenant is to be given through a greater Mediator than Moses, Jesus the Head and the Church His Body. It has required all this Gospel Age to gather out of the world, and to try, test, polish and fit the members of the Body of Christ, who, under His Headship, will be the Antitypical Moses, who will be the Antitypical Mediator between God and men.—Jeremiah xxxi, 31; Acts iii, 22.

As Moses went up into the Mount to commune with God before the Law Covenant was completed, so the entire Church will go up into the Mountain, into the Kingdom, with our glorious Head and Redeemer, by the change of the First Resurrection. As the time for Moses' going up into the Mountain was the time of the great manifestations of the dignity of the Divine Government. And just so in the closing of this Age. The Apostle informs us that the world will have terrifying experiences on a still greater scale. He says that then the mountain trembled and smoked and that the Divine voice was heard, so the people were so terrified that they entreated that they might not hear further, but that Moses would act as mediator, and he did so.

So it will here. There will be such manifestations of Divine Justice and opposition to sin and all iniquity that it will cause the "time of trouble" mentioned by the Prophet and by Jesus, "A time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation, no, nor ever shall be"—Daniel xii, 1; Matthew xxiv, 21.

The result of this great time of trouble upon the world will be a realization that they need a Mediator—a Mediatorial Kingdom. And this is just what God has provided for them through the arrangement of the New Covenant.

THE SHAKING ALREADY COMMENCED.

Contrasting the experiences at the inauguration of the typical Law Covenant with those to be expected at the inauguration of the antitypical, the New Law Covenant, St. Paul says, "God's voice then shook the earth, but now He hath promised, saying, Yet once more I shake not the earth only, but also heaven." And the Apostle explains that the expression, "Once more," signifies that this second shaking will be so thorough that no further shaking will ever be necessary, but everything of injustice and unrighteousness which ought to be shaken loose will be shaken; and this, says the Apostle, implies everything except the Church and the glorious Kingdom which we shall then receive: Wherefore we, receiving a Kingdom which cannot be moved, let us have grace whereby we may serve God acceptably with reverence and godly fear.

Can we not see the shaking already beginning? Let us remember that this time it will not be the shaking of the literal earth, as at Sinai, but the shaking of the symbolical earth—the shaking of society to its very center. Do you not already hear the rumblings—the rumblings of discontent, anger, malice, hatred, strife? These forbode the "great earthquake," which was symbolical of the great Revolution, whereby the present order of things shall collapse and give place to the New Order of Immanuel's Kingdom of righteousness, justice, equity.

And, says the Apostle, God intends this time to shake not merely the earth—the social fabric—but also the heaven—the ecclesiastical powers of the present time. Not the true Church will be shaken, but the many systems which more or less misrepresent the true Church and "the faith once delivered unto the saints." Do we see evidences of this shaking? Yea, verily. In all denominations there are forebodings of coming trouble. We may even fear that some of the leaders in the Christian unions are not made with the proper motive, but through a realization of the shaking which the Lord is about to permit to come upon the ecclesiastical systems of this present time.

"WAIT YE UPON THE LORD."

My dear brethren, in these coming days of trouble, which may be very near, the opportunity may come to you and to me to be either strife-breeders or peacemakers. Let us see the will of the Lord in this matter, that we are called to peace, and that the declaration of the Master is, "Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called the children of God."

Let us seek rather to subdue and calm the passions of men in the coming strife, and to do nothing to augment them or to add to the fires of passion which we know are about to consume the present social fabric. Let us point out to those with whom we have any influence that the work of government in the whole world is better than no government—better than anarchy, a thousand times. Let us remind them of the fact that in God's providence we have the best of all earthly governments.

Let us remind them, too, that the Lord has told us to wait for Him and not to take matters into our own hands, His words are, "Wait ye upon Me saith the Lord, until the day that I rise up to the prey; for My determination is to gather the nations, that I may assemble the kingdoms, to pour upon them Mine indignation, even all My fierce anger; for all the earth shall be devoured with the fire of My jealousy. For then will I turn to the people a pure language (Message), that they may all call upon the name of the Lord, to serve Him with one consent."—Zephaniah iii, 8, 9.

The Tribune is by far the one best paper that reaches Paris from almost every standpoint, and the fair and fearless stand it takes in publishing Pastor Russell's Sermons shows its management to be absolutely honest.

Yours very truly,

I appreciate your valuable paper very much. It's a paper I like to hand to my neighbors and send to friends who are interested in Bible Study on account of the Sermons of Pastor Russell, the Question Box and Letters of Appreciation, etc. They are certainly a great help to me as a Bible student in the study of the Scriptures and I purpose to have the paper in my home as long as these sermons are published. I am sending you some verses if you think best you may print.

Respectfully yours,
GEO. M. FISK.

A LETTER FROM CHRIST

Two Interesting Documents Recognized as Authentic That Bear Upon the Life of the Saviour.

The Greek church preserves a very interesting tradition which seems to rest upon some evidence which many Biblical scholars accept as quite convincing. The children of Israel, while Christ was working His miracles in Palestine the report of His divine power spread throughout Asia Minor, until it reached the ears of Abgar, the Prince of Edessa in Mesopotamia. Abgar was afflicted with leprosy, and at last, in his despair, he is said to have written a letter to Christ beseeching Him to journey to Edessa and heal the prince of his disease. To this appeal the legend says that Christ dictated a reply by the hand of St. Thomas the Apostle, and this letter the crucifixion St. Thomas sent Thaddeus, one of the Seventy, to Edessa, where he cured Abgar, who, with all his people, became converted to Christianity.

The tradition is very old, and is believed among the Eastern Christians to be the first found in the Greek writer, Eusebius, in his "Ecclesiastical History," written about the year 300. Eusebius gives copies of the letters. Christ took until the year 494 that the Roman Church declared the letter of Christ to be fictitious. The Greek Church has never made any such declaration. Among those who believe to have accepted the letters as authentic are Tillemont and the German theologian Weite. The following is a translation of the two documents:

Abgar to Jesus Christ.

"Abgar, Prince of Edessa, to Jesus, the merciful Saviour who has appeared in the confines of Jerusalem, health. I have been informed of the prodigies and cures wrought by you without the use of herbs or medicines, and by the efficacy of your words alone. You restore sight to the blind, cripples to walk, that you force devils from the bodies possessed, that you give new life to the dead as well as the grave and prison house of death. This great Babylon with all her abominable idolatry and infidelity will sink to rise no more at all. Pity her not, as she rewarded you, reward her double and let her own adversaries say Amen! Amen! Time my head may yet reach the air and my kingdom enjoy that peace you may not be partakers of her disastrous fate.

For the National Labor Tribune, which I prize and greatly appreciate as one of the most liberal exponents of the Truth in the publication of Pastor Russell's Sermons and helpful Poems and Articles in the interest of the Truth. May the Lord bless you and your grand work.

I have renewed my subscription to your valuable paper through the Watch Tower office. I do not feel able to afford it, but I must be lovingly visible to my home so much general news, but the best news of all is contained in the Sermons and Bible Study Lessons and the Question Box. Much good is hidden from the man within, and soon guided him out of his difficulties. Visiting this labyrinth with Deacon Offer, I purchased a chart for our guide, remembering my friend's experience. When the time came for us to find our way out, we took the chart, and by careful study found the path to us following the designated way, we threaded the maze of the labyrinth with success. Life is such a labyrinth. No person knows enough to guide his course unaided. He needs to study the paths laid. The picture of the future is a sealed book to all."—Zacharie.

TRIBUNE APPRECIATIONS.

Ohio, July 10.

If I were a parable writer in this age I certainly would not pass the late Titanic disaster by unnoticed. There is not a figure from start to finish of all the forces on both sides that have not their fac-simile in the prophetic film of the whole picture. The first poetic picture I see is in the background is

The Titanic said I'm coming through,
Get out of my way or I'll spit you in two.
The proud leviathan just curled up her nose
At the millionaire craft and down she goes.

We have many prophetic pictures of this from Genesis to Revelation. A fair warning seems to have no speed limit-brakes against fate. It was just as true in Noah's time. It was just so with Belshazzar—with Zedekiah, et al. The Revelation description of the fall of great Babylon is a good film of the further development as a result of the case of the Titanic. She had fair warning of danger ahead, and like Belshazzar, she reveled in the castle and zenith of her pride and splendor. She was a real Destiny Babylon sitting upon many waters. Her structure and freight of fine and costly merchandise as well as the souls of men was the combine that ever floated from a sea port and nothing will excell it till the real fall of great Babylon. In this case as in Noah's time, had the captain and crew left the vessel to save themselves the disaster would have been greater. We see a prophetic picture of this in the fifth chapter of James, which foretells a greater than the Titanic. It has its political—financial—social and its ecclesiastical features all combined in the miniature facsimile of the Titanic in comparison to the fall of Great Babylon. Could any one have believed when this great millionaire palace left her docks she would meet the fate she did? Rev. 18: 19. Seems to be so literally verified that we only have to wait for a parallel for the fall of Great Babylon. Already we hear the wares and the merchanting—souls hearts failing them for fear; and for things coming on the earth. Is these things a cause for Christian dispondency? No. We should look up, and lift up our head knowing that our redemption draweth nigh. As relief was in hearing distance of the Titanic to save many, so will the awake and help the ones, so it will be in the fall of great Babylon, but the great heads of wealth and monopoly will go down with their rich diamonds on their person and their bonds in their pockets.

If gentile nations (represented in Christendom) could realize how near the end of power was, perhaps there might be some—like the unjust steward, provide friendship for their future. The Railway Carnegie will have a good steel library to fall back on. But the one thing they will be subjected to have cost many times the fifty thousand pieces of silver. A veritable Judas though. The great Liberty that stood in the path of the Titanic before the iceberg and underwater disconcent of society, her silent and unobserved presence in the underlying structure of anarchy and the almost too water is a fair representation of the world's organized forces, with the masses that can render no help to monopolistic inflated wealth. Though the Titanic was mightily stuck into like brave men to save the weaker ones, the sacrifice was more coercive than loud enough. But that is more hope for these Titanic convicts than for the "Mystery Babylon" and "Mother of harlots" (false religious system) for the sea must give up the dead as well as the grave and prison house of death. The great Babylon with all her abominable idolatry and infidelity will sink to rise no more at all. Pity her not, as she rewarded you, reward her double and let her own adversaries say Amen! Amen! Time my head may yet reach the air and my kingdom enjoy that peace you may not be partakers of her disastrous fate.

Through the kindness of some brethren unknown to me, I am receiving the Tribune regularly for which I thank them and also you for the good reading it contains, more especially Pastor Russell's Sermons, the Sunday School Lessons and the Question Box. I think grand, as it gives to the readers an opportunity to gain information on difficult texts in the scripture. I have a question to ask but will give it on a separate sheet.

I have read with much interest Pilate's Report. I think it strengthening to the Christian faith in Jesus. If the out-of-substantiates the Apostle's words, but adds to them, the story of the morning of his resurrection, told by eye-witnesses of the Saviour, and by them that was not interested as his followers.

Well may we sing how firm a foundation ye saints of the Lord, is laid for your hope in this sinking world. The Lord has a blessing in store for him, friend Editor, he will not let such work as you are doing go unrewarded. Your work for the laborer, for the harvest, for the Truth, for that you give us a clear-cut clean paper.

LABYRINTH OF LIFE.

"A labyrinth is a species of structure full of intricate passages and windings, so that when once entered it is next to impossible for an individual to extricate himself without a guide. One was in ancient Egypt, near Lake Moeris, was composed of twelve great palaces containing according to Herodotus, three thousand chambers and halls. The palaces were connected by corridors, around which ran a vast number of most intricate passages. Around the whole was a wall with only one entrance."

"Some years ago," writes Hawthorne, "a labyrinth was rambling in the famous labyrinth of Hampton Court near London, where the ingenious children's puzzle is wrought out on a large scale by paths between high and thick evergreen hedges. Before we entered it for a time, but when the time for closing drew near, with all his efforts he could not find his way out, and he feared that he might have to remain there all night. At length he met and saw a man in the tower in the center of the labyrinth, who had been watching him all the time, and waiting to catch his attention. The guide above could see the hidden from the man within, and soon guided him out of his difficulties. Visiting this labyrinth with Deacon Offer, I purchased a chart for our guide, remembering my friend's experience. When the time came for us to find our way out, we took the chart, and by careful study found the path to us following the designated way, we threaded the maze of the labyrinth with success. Life is such a labyrinth. No person knows enough to guide his course unaided. He needs to study the paths laid. The picture of the future is a sealed book to all."—Zacharie.

FIRE KILLED TIMBER.

More Durable For Some Purposes Than That From Green Trees.

Large bodies of fire killed timber in the west are now cut for fenceposts says the Scientific American. The demand for durable posts by ranchmen has hitherto been met by the use of red cedar (Juniperus), but the supply is now almost completely exhausted in a good many localities. The average life of a red cedar post is about twenty years, while other species last only from three to ten years. Fire killed lodgepole pine when properly treated will last equally as long as red cedar. The forest service has demonstrated that dead timber treated with preservatives may be utilized at a moderate cost when compared with red cedar posts, which are expensive. Enormous quantities of dead timber in the west are being disposed of each year; which will considerably reduce the drain upon the forests. The removal of this material leads to the improvement of conditions in the forests, because it lessens the fire hazard and insures quicker and better crops of young trees.

In extensive burns in the west fire killed timber is often the only kind available. Its chief uses are for small lagging, fuel, house logs, lumber, mine props and railroad ties. In proximity to a mine or to a spur of a railroad dead wood has been used for many years for mine timbers and for cross ties. For mine props all species are used. In Colorado one mine alone uses approximately 4,500,000 board feet of dead timber every year. There are a great many mining camps that use dead timber exclusively because of its lightness, durability, stiffness, all due principally to its better seasoning.

For many purposes fire killed timber is preferred to green timber because it is thoroughly seasoned and is in excellent condition for preservative treatment, as the moisture has completely evaporated, which gives it more durability than green timber. It also renders it lighter, so that transportation charges are less. In parts of Colorado burned timber of all kinds is made into ties, some of the material having been burned over fifty years ago. This timber is still standing on the ground and is said to be almost as hard as that and very durable. The species used are red fir, yellow pine, lodgepole pine, white pine, Douglas fir, mann spruce and blue spruce. It is asserted that dry ties last in many cases longer than green ties. They hold a spike better, and a tie plate does not cut into the wood as readily as it does in the case of a green tie.

AUTOMOBILE WASHER.

Self Closing, Button Operated, Hose Nozzle of Soft Rubber.

A button operated self closing nozzle particularly designed for hose used for washing automobiles is a recent invention that offers simple and perfect control of the water.

The main portion of the nozzle is made of aluminium, but it is provided with a soft rubber discharging end which may be compressed by the fingers to discharge the water in the form of a spray. The soft rubber also prevents scratching of any paint on the automobile body with which it may come in contact. The nozzle contains a shut off valve, which is normally held open by a spring.

Rimless spectacles and eyeglasses frequently give trouble as the lenses are apt to become loose and wiggly disagreeably in the mountings to which they are attached. This trouble may be cured by a hose screw, or the back of the straps that grasp the lenses may not be set sufficiently close to the lenses. Remove the lenses, bend the straps so that they will engage the edges of the lenses properly, replace the screws carefully and the trouble will be remedied.—Popular Mechanics.

Valuable Sludge.

The sludge of lead peroxide and sulphate which collects in course of years in storage batteries has a value in view of its lead content, but according to the Zeitschrift fur Electrochemie, the treatment to lead smelters has been costly and difficult on account of the associated acid. Washing and precipitation are the question, mainly on account of the extremely fine state of division of the peroxide, according to a recent patent (No. 295,340), these difficulties are overcome by mixing the sludge with slaked lime. The resulting mixture quickly sets to a firm cake. An alternative plan is to mix the sludge with the sulphite liquor from sulphite cellulose works, the lead peroxide being thus reduced to lead sulphate. Molasses may also be used for the reduction of the peroxide. In all these reactions so much heat is set free that much of the water is evaporated.

NOVEL CANAL TOWBOAT.

Electrically Driven and Operated on a Submerged Rail.

A novel method of towing canal barges, in which the towboat, which can be exceptionally small, operates on a submerged rail, has been recently tried out on the Dortmund-Ems canal, Germany, says Popular Mechanics. Because of the economy and simplicity of the system and for the reason that it eliminates the disturbance of the bottom and sides of the canal, thus eliminating dredging to a great extent, it is said that it may take the place of all other systems in Germany.

The single rail on which the towboat runs is loosely anchored at the bottom of the canal in such a manner that it can be easily lifted even higher than the surface of the water when repairs are to be made without disturbing any of its joints or anchorages. While at the same time any excessive displacement in a horizontal direction is prevented by the particular method of anchorage in use. Two driving wheels mounted under the towboat and driven by electric power grip the head of the rail between them, normally lifting it from one foot at its lowest to three feet twenty-five inches above the bottom of the canal. By lifted, the weight of the rail gives friction or tractive force to the trolley wheels, thus just reversing the means of traction of the ordinary railroad in that the tractive power is provided by the weight of the suspended rail instead of by the weight running over it.

In the experiments so far made it has been found that 75 per cent of the electrical energy consumed is transformed into motive power and that a saving of 50 per cent in cost of towing is effected. The power is taken from an overhead wire. The towboat can be very small, as its size has nothing to do with its towing capacity, and therefore it can be lifted out of the water under any bridge crossing the canal for the purpose of readjustments or repairs.

SPECTACLE LENSES.

Method of Tightening Glasses. When They Become Loose.

Persons using spectacles are sometimes annoyed by a loose lens—one that persists in dropping out of the frame. This trouble is caused by some slight defect in the edge grinding of the lens or to an imperfection in the size of the eye wire of the frame.

If the spectacles cannot be taken to an optician or spared to be sent for repair, simply place a strip of tin foil in the groove of the frame, reset the lens and trim off any tin foil that may remain in sight with a sharp knife. When this is carefully done the foil will not show and the lens will be held securely in place.

Rimless spectacles and eyeglasses frequently give trouble as the lenses are apt to become loose and wiggly disagreeably in the mountings to which they are attached. This trouble may be cured by a hose screw, or the back of the straps that grasp the lenses may not be set sufficiently close to the lenses. Remove the lenses, bend the straps so that they will engage the edges of the lenses properly, replace the screws carefully and the trouble will be remedied.—Popular Mechanics.

The Life of a File.

We cannot discover a file whenever it has lost its first keenness, but there comes a time, much sooner than is usually supposed, when an old file does not pay. It is not difficult to calculate when this time has come. Say a man receives 25 cents an hour and is using a file that costs 25 cents. Whenever the use of an old file takes that man half as long again to do a piece of work as a new file would take, then in three hours' work with an old file the price of a new file has been lost. The time to throw away the old file has come before that stage was reached.—Blacksmith and Wheelwright.

Bottled Gas For Home Use.

Dr Walter O Snelling, consulting chemist of the bureau of mines and of the Panama canal commission, now doing laboratory work in Washington, has developed a liquid gas of which a little steel bottle will carry enough to light a home for a month Snelling puts 2200 feet of gas into a steel container four feet high and six inches in diameter

Cleaning Shellac Brushes.

A shellac brush may be cleaned readily and easily in soap and water if it be taken in time and the work done quickly. Before the shellac has had time to set Alcohol is generally used for this purpose without the friendly action on the gum, which is the principal ingredient

Removing Tin From Scrap.

Tin can be removed from tin plate scrap by boiling in caustic soda. The tin is the solution and can be recovered as a sheet tin plate by electric deposition

Welding Compound.

Take two parts of powdered borax to one of resin sand. Be sure the sand is cleaned of all dirt. For welding you want a flux that will flow over the work. In welding scrap you may use iron chips from the bolt cutter, placed on the scarf or lap

Appreciations

Illinois, July 12.

I have been an appreciative subscriber to your paper for six months and can truly say that I am so well pleased with the looks of the paper that I do not want to take one less issue, so I will send you my new address, so you may send from this date to above address. I am well pleased as to the way you handle Pastor Russell's Sermons, who is witnessing to the redemptive work of our dear critic cised Lord. "The Lord bless thee and keep thee." ## How the Twelve Apostles Met Death

According to the generally received traditions of the church here is the way the twelve apostles died: Andrew suffered martyrdom at Patrae, in Achaia, on a cross of the form known as St. Andrew's cross; Bartholomew was crucified at Albanopolis in Armenia; James, the elder, son of Zebedee, was beheaded; James, the brother of our Lord, was probably stoned to death; Matthew died a natural death; Philip died a violent death at Hierapolis, but by what mode is uncertain; Simon Peter was crucified at Rome; Thaddeus or Jude, probably suffered martyrdom, in Persia; John, the beloved disciple, lived according to Jerome to be about 100 years old and died at Ephesus; Simon Zelotes was crucified at 120 years of age; Thomas was put to death in India and Judas Iscariot hung himself.

THE SAVIOR'S TEACHINGS
BROOKLYN TABERNACLE
BIBLE STUDIES

EMBRYO KINGDOM PARABLES.

Mark iv, 26-32; Matthew xiii, 33. July 21.

"Thy Kingdom come. Thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven."—Matthew vi, 10.

MANY OF US in the past have overlooked the fact that nearly all of the teachings of the Redeemer appertain to the Messianic Kingdom. Some of us had the unscriptural thought that Messiah's Kingdom would counte merely of a sovereignty in the hearts of His followers.

Now we see the real import of the Great Teacher's utterances on this subject. As He taught us to pray, "Thy Kingdom come. Thy will be done on earth, even as it is done in heaven," it is meant that we should have in mind God's glorious promise that eventually, through Messiah's Kingdom, ignorance, sin and death will be overthrown, and the obedient of mankind will be released from them until "every knee shall bow and every tongue confess" to the glory of God.

Today's study sets before us a number of Jesus' parables respecting the Kingdom. The mystery of the Kingdom pertained to the Kingdom class of the present time rather than to the Kingdom in its fully developed state. All of God's consecrated people since Pentecost constitute the Kingdom in embryo. Some of these embryo members may yet fail to make their calling and election sure, may fail to hear the "well done."

"A vase for every purpose in the household."

The Kingdom's Development Slow.

The first illustration of our lesson is that God's Kingdom to its embryotic condition is of slow development, requiring the entire period of this Gospel Age. It is like seed cast into the ground, which brings forth no harvest when it is harvested. Jesus and the Apostles did the seed sowing, not only for their own day but for the whole "wheat" class. The gathering for the heavenly garner will be accomplished by the First Resurrection.

The different parables do not view the embryo Kingdom from the same standpoint. The parable of the mustard seed appears to represent the Kingdom from the viewpoint of the world. From that little seed we have a great institution today in the elf. which the Lord elsewhere describes as representing the Wicked One and the angels. The birds of the air are in the Church if it were to proclaim only the true Gospel.

Indeed, it is the neglect to preach the Gospel of the "narrow way" that has brought such prosperity to nominal Christianity and made it a desirable place for "the fowls of the air"—Satan and his deluded ones. This seems to be the picture in the Great Teacher's grave us in Revelation xviii, 2: "She hath become the hold of every foul spirit and the cage of every unclean and hateful bird."

The word "cage" seems to imply that these "birds" are considered very desirable, and are held on to by nominal Christianity—probably because regarded as so being honored their best paying members.

Parable of the Leaven.

Throughout the Scriptures leaven is used as the symbol of sin. Thus when Jesus to His purity was to be symbolized by the "bread from heaven," the Jews were directed to use unleavened bread. Again, at their annual Passover season the Jews were directed to cleanse their houses of leaven. St. Paul, commenting on this, writes to the Church, "Purge out, therefore, the old leaven" [sin, malice, hatred, strife, etc.], that you may be, with Christ, the unleavened Lord."

It is true that in one of the official sacrifices bread was to be baked with leaven, but this was because for the very purpose of symbolizing the fact that we, the Church, were by nature sinners, "children of wrath, even as others." This leavened baking represents the experiences through which we must pass in order that sinful and corrupt tendencies may be completely destroyed.

Comparing the three our Lord represents measure of meal. a woman adding leaven to three measures of meal that the whole mass was leavened. Consequently, if any of the family described there, a woman, is a figure of the Church, all of God's people must be understood to be undistributable. What does this represent? We reply that in Scriptural symbology a woman represents an ecclesiastical system. The "woman" in the parable represents a system possessed of the same three loaves of pure food provided by the Lord for the house-hold of faith.

The Word of God, originally pure, is no longer accepted. The leaven has spread so that today the entire mass of theological doctrine is offensive to all Christian people. The parable was a prophecy of what has occurred. It is time all true Christians were hearkening back from the creeds of the Dark Ages to the Words of Jesus, the Apostles and the Prophets.

EVERYBODY'S BIBLE QUESTION BOX

Your letter questions will be answered in this column, on any subject in the Bible or the Word.

Q.—Are there not remains of buried cities in Egypt containing evidence, pictorial drawings, hieroglyphics, etc., which antiquarians are in general agreed evidence a civilized, prosperous, and opulent people living about 7000 years before the Christian Era? And how many more thousands of years must it have taken for these to rise from conditions of barbarism—the universally conceded, primitive state of the entire human race (R. J. S.)

Answer.—It is passing strange that antiquarians while acknowledging the skill, ingenuity and wisdom of the ancients, evidencing a degree of civilization far in advance of any other period in the history of the present day, persist in calling the ancient peoples of the earth "barbarous" and "primitive." The Egyptian ruins have been and are the marvels of modern times. Engineers and architects who have examined those mighty monuments of a former age have declared their skill and of our boasted civilization and enlightenment. It is doubtful if there is sufficient wisdom and knowledge in the world today to even duplicate those wondrous structures. The oldest building in Egypt is conceded by all recognized authorities to be the Great Pyramid, and the date of its construction is well established about 2170 B. C. It is still the wonder of the world as it was in ancient times, when placed by the Greeks at the head of the list of the "Seven Wonders of the World." The seven thousand years antiquity of the ancient cities of Egypt has long been recognized as being fictitious as pictorial representations of the Pyramid age have been discovered in all of those ruins showing that they were erected after the Great Pyramid had been built. Therefore, there is nothing in Egypt to disprove the Bible chronology, to the effect that the race had its origin 4128 B. C.

Q.—May I ask your views on the "Woman's Suffrage" question? Should women have equal rights with men? What is the attitude of the Bible toward this momentous subject? I use the term "momentous" advisedly because the Suffrage Movement is growing around the world, and to my mind is one of the most important signs of the conditions now existing in these hyperbolical times. (F. E. W.)

Answer.—It is very evident to the close observer that men and women, the world over, are more and more approaching a condition of equality. This is largely due to the changing state of affairs in the industrial and social realms. Women are entering upon every line of accomplishment in the commercial world, and in the realms of art, science, and literature. They have been driven into the world of business and industry by the harsh competitive system of the day, and having taken their position side by side with men in every other walk of life. It is the logical sequence in the trend of events that they should enter in upon conditions of equality in the political arena. This is well, and is certainly in agreement with what the Scriptures indicate will be brought to pass in the "times of restoration" (Acts iii, 19-21), the thousand years in which the race of Adamic sin will be restored to the perfect conditions represented in the first man, Adam, before Eve had been taken from his side. Adam combined in himself the masculine and feminine qualities, and when Eve was formed from him sufficiently to fill the role of feminine qualities were incorporated in her personality. When the race has developed sufficiently to fill the earth (Genesis i, 28), propagation will cease and the members of both sexes will become "as the angels" before Eve was formed. See Matthew xxii, 30.

Q.—To my mind, the following text of Scripture is one of the most puzzling to be found in the Bible—"Some men's sins are open beforehand, going before to judgment; and some men they follow after."—I Timothy v, 24. (C. M.)

Answer.—The Scriptures point out two general classes among the Lord's people, one class of which will be kings and priests unto God, and will be seated upon the throne of Divine authority and power. This is a comparatively small class, and is called the "Little Flock," the "elect," the "chosen generation, a royal priesthood," etc. The other class is a "great company," and they are represented as "sitting before the throne, as servants and messengers. (Revelation vii, 9-15.) These two classes are referred to in the parable of the "Wise and Foolish Virgins." The first class, "the very elect," have all their sins so far judged as to have a hand, before the general judgment time for its world. They are on trial in this present time and have all their sins atoned for and expiated. The other class, "the great company," will have to go down for judgment following after the judgment of the "Little Flock," having "come up through great tribulation, and have washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb." The Apostle's letter was addressed to Timothy, a child of God, and his instructions relate to the interests and welfare of the Lord's people and have no reference to the worldly ones outside of the Church of Christ. Indeed, the world's sins, both Adamic and willful, are all fully atoned for by the above two classes in association with the Lord Jesus Christ as the "sin-offering" of this great Atonement Day.

Q.—Will you please tell me what is the soul? (N. U. M.)

Answer.—The Bible gives the correct definition in your question. We read "And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and the man became a living soul." (Genesis ii, 7.) God did not give a soul to man, but He created man a soul or being. The word soul is translated from the Hebrew word "nephesh," which means, "a breathing, sentient being." That is to say, an animate being, capable of sensation, perception, thought. When God formed Adam of the dust of the ground, the body was not the soul; neither was the breath of life which God breathed in there into his nostrils, the soul. The body was inanimate, lifeless, until God breathed into the nostrils the breath of life and the result was a living, breathing, animate being, then for the first time properly termed a soul. The word soul is also applied to men only. Animals are souls. In the first, second, and ninth chapters of Genesis, the words "living soul" are applied in the Hebrew language to the lower animals nine times. Man as a soul is distinguished from the lower animals or souls by reason of his higher organism, by the superior mental endowments. He is the highest order of animal creation.

Q.—What does this mean: "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord from henceforth: yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; but their works follow with them"—Revelation xiv, 13. How can the dead continue their works when there is no consciousness, and everything in the grave? Ecclesiastes ix, 10. (M. J. E.)

Answer.—Addressing the members of the Church of Christ, the followers of the Lord Jesus, the Apostle says "Ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God." (Colossians iii, 3.) From the Syriac viewpoint, as far as we are earthly existence is concerned. These are reckoned dead, and alive as new creatures in Christ. It is these dead who die in the Lord. Theirs is a sacrificial death, and they die daily (I Corinthians xv, 31), until they have finished the dying process in actual death. But now, from a certain time, those of this class who die, in place of sleeping in the tomb, at the moment of death enter into the glorious heavenly state where their works will continue with them. St. Paul refers to this very matter when he says, "Behold, I show you a mystery: we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump." (I Corinthians xv, 51, 52.) From henceforth, from that time, we understand the Scriptures to teach, the Lord's people have entered at once into their reward.

Q.—Will you kindly explain the words of the Apostle as found in I Peter iv, 6? "Who were dead that the Gospel was preached to? And when and by whom? How will they be judged in the flesh and live to God in the spirit? (J. P. H.)

Answer.—In the preceding verses the Apostle says "Speaking evil of you who shall give an account to Him that is ready to judge the quick and the dead." From these words it is manifest that he is addressing the followers of Christ who have become dead to the things of the world and alive to the heavenly or spiritual things. The Apostle continues with this thought, saying that it is for this reason because we who are dead to the world and alive toward God are being called out now, as the Lord's elect class, therefore the Gospel is preached to us who are (thus) dead, so that while the world judges us in the flesh, like all other men, the Lord may judge us in the spirit, begotten to a newness of life. These spiritual new creatures have their judgment time in this present life and are judged in the spirit, the desires and intents of the heart, and not judged according to the flesh with its weaknesses and blemishes inherited from Adam.

Q.—What is a spirit being?

Answer.—According to the Scriptures, it is a creature, or personality, inhabiting the spiritual plane of existence—a higher plane than that of the human or earthly creatures. Just as the Divine nature, the nature of God, is the highest order of the spiritual realm, so man is of the highest order of the animal or earthly existence. Angels are spirit beings. (Psalm civ, 4) and we read that man was created "a little lower than the angels." (Psalm viii, 5.) A change of nature is promised to the Church who will be of the Church of Christ; those who "make their calling and election sure" and who eventually will be associated with their Lord and Savior in the glories of the Kingdom as His "joint-heirs." This "change" of nature is wonderfully described by the Apostle in the fifteenth chapter of I. Corinthians 42-52. Those who will experience this transformation of nature are said to be "born of the spirit" and this will take place in the resurrection. These then will be powerful, and invisible to mortal eye, just as the angels are all around and Jehovah's messengers in past ages, yet unseen. Jesus described this matter to Nicodemus and used the illustration of the "wind" to picture the condition of those who shall be born of the spirit in the resurrection morning.—John iii, 6-8.

Much Public Help for London Transport Strikers--Labor Party in Parliament Angry With the Government at Last. Two Important Bye-Elections--International Miners' Congress in Holland. French Seamen's Strike Still Serious.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

LONDON, July 17.—Still the London transport workers strike continues, although strike pay has now almost naturally ceased. Newspaper campaign is still dead against the men except in one or two instances but despite this there are signs that the strikers, who number nearly 100,000, are at last securing a large amount of public sympathy. In the first place there has recently been financial help received or promised from other trade unions to the amount of about $20,000. Furthermore, a number of philanthropical funds are being raised and continued to feed the women and the children. Even the leading bishops of the established church have organized a relief service for the sufferers. It cannot be said that the strikers have not offered the masters ample opportunities for coming to terms. The position now appears to be that the strikers will return to work in the docks at once upon a pledge being given by the dock warehouse and ship owners that all grievances would be promptly investigate and settled by mutual agreement. Some help has been given by Parliament by two members of the Labor party who have raised the question of the strike several times. These two members, Jim O'Grady of the furniture makers, and Will Thorne of the gasmen, laborers, have done this and they have also attended daily to address strikers' meetings. Other members of the Labor party appear to be kept so busy in the House of Commons and with bye-elections that this momentous labor struggle receives no direct support from them.

Your correspondent, however, should not omit to mention in this connection that there have been signs at last of the Labor member in Parliament kicking away some of the chains which appear to have bound him for so long to the Government. Two constituencies have fallen vacant—at Hanley, a mining and pottery center, and Crewe, a railway shop town. Hanley was represented by Enoch Edwards, a Labor member of Parliament, whose death was reported in these columns last week. Originally a Tbouth always a trade unionist, he was in politics a liberal but in response to a resolution of the Miners' Federation of Great Britain ten years or so ago the miners in Parliament who had formerly all sat with the Liberals as Government supporters passed over en bloc to the Labor party and Enoch Edwards with them. The Liberals claim Hanley as a Liberal seat because of these older associations and the Labor party claim it as a Labor seat owing to the latter associations. The result is that both the Liberals and Labor committees are sending candidates and there will of course also be the inevitable conservative candidate. The fight is now waging very strongly and it is in connection with this quarrel between "labor" and "liberalism" that the Labor party in Parliament is revolting although only mildly, against the Government.

The seat at Crewe having also fallen vacant owing to the passing away of the former Liberal member, the Labor party has seized the opportunity of carrying the war into the enemy's country and putting in a Labor man there as well in the person of Hudson, the general organizer of the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants. If both seats are won the Labor party in Parliament will be strengthened by a net gain of one member. Most of the Parliamentary Labor members are speaking and electing in these two constituencies.

Though there is little evidence observable to the public, the gathering difficulties in the British engineering and shipbuilding trades are rapidly assuming a serious aspect. The relations of the employers to the organized workers are much more strained than appears on the surface and a small occurrence which would in normal times be regarded as inconsequent might easily precipitate trouble. The fact is that the terms of settlement under which the trades are now working are obnoxious to the men. There is a strong movement in all the skilled trades for their abolition or at least their drastic modification. A widely-proval idea gets amongst the men is that these settlements, carying in detail but almost uniform in principle, are not only bad for them, but are arbitrarily dictated by the employers. The fact that they were imposed as a form of war indemnity by the victorious party in past struggles may account for this to a large measure.

The "terms of agreement" which govern the five chief unions in the engineering trade are only slightly modified version of the agreement which closed the great lockout in 1897. In the seventh clause which has pressed most heavily upon the skilled men, the most objectionable point is that it gives the employer the absolute right to remove skilled men from machines and replace them with less skilled or quite unskilled laborers, by the following words: "Employers have the right to so'ct, train and employ those whom they consider best adapted to the various operations of the trade on their workshops, and will pay them according to their ability as workmen. Employers in view of the necessity of obtaining the most economical production whether by skilled or unskilled workmen, have full discretion to appoint men they consider suitable to work all their machine tools and determine the conditions under which they shall be worked."

The employers have taken full advantage of this provision. Innumerable disputes have arisen, and many conferences have been held to consid-

WORKMEN'S-INSURANCE UPROAR.

That this distance the uprising in England against the Lloyd-George workingmen's insurance law seems unaccountable. Lloyd-George is the staunchest champion the English working class has had in a long while. The insurance law was devised for the express purpose of protecting them from the hardships of accident and sickness and in addition to that providing a competence for their old age. Under the circumstances it is surprising to see them violently protesting against it in more than one of the big industrial centers. At some places the workers have refused to register as the act requires, at other places they have struck on account of it.

A London cablegram says employers and employes alike object to paying their assessments. The former object, they will have to cut wages. It is argued that while the law promises to provide sick benefits, medical treatment and hospital care for 14,000,000 people the scheme seems to give their services for the sum allotted and the tuberculosis sanatoria are not yet ready. One sin of the law is to keep the toiler and his family from payment to times of idleness and to inaugurate a national campaign against consumption. Whether the dissatisfaction among wage-earners with the working of the law is general, or merely a here-and-there outburst which will simmer down as time goes on we'l soon appear. An act of such importance naturally involves more or less friction at the start. The process of readjustment is not always easy. Perhaps the dissatisfaction now voiced, built in Liverpool, Birkenhead and other points will subside as the mass of Englisn workingmen realize how much lasting good will come to them out of the temporary inconvenience. They will not soon find another champion as able or as courageous as Lloyd-George, and to the outside world it looks as if he had won a great victory for them in the passage of the workmen's insurance statute.

SCHOOLHOUSE SOCIAL CENTER WORK.

EDMUND J. WARD, concerning whom there is an interesting article in one of the August magazines, is a man who has been

LORD AVEBURY, EMINENT BRITISH NATURALIST.

AMONG the "grand old men" of science few can claim higher rank for work done in what for most of us are the declining years of life than Lord Avebury, for most of his life known as Sir John Lubbock—banker, politician, philosopher, philanthropist, naturalist and antiquarian. He is best known as the author of "The Pleasures of Life," which ran through 224 English editions and has appeared in thirty foreign editions. He originated what has become a British institution—bank holidays. Of his scientific writings, those on insects and flowers are probably the most widely read. He was the intimate friend of Darwin, Huxley and Herbert Spencer.

doubt been of great service to his fellow men by his work for the schoolhouse social center idea, an idea which is making life a much brighter and better thing to millions. Mr. Ward created the first schoolhouse social center in the state of Rochester, N. Y. As explained by the magazine article, the Rochester school board had in hand an appropriation of $400,000 for the purpose of befitting the wider use of the public school buildings and grounds, for a blind man could see that a that half-day, conveniently located public property would be put to some larger use, and they were looking for a man to take charge. Mr. Ward had been director of the toughest recreation field in Buffalo and president of the Directors' Association there, acting pastor of the Church of the Covenant in Washington, organizer of the Men's Club in Silver Creek, had seven-eight years of football and other athletics; had won highest oratorical honors at college and thrown the champion heavyweight of Cornell. He was according, the sort of person not easily frightened, and especially not the sort to frighten at a thing because it is new. He took hold of the new work in Rochester and at the end of two years the people's school buildings all over Rochester, some of them equipped with gymnasium, library, games, reception meetings in gasoline lines. Officials of the mine workers hailed this as a victory, for, they declare, they have machines in sight now equal to a wage scale for the first time and are in a position now to control it hereafter.

Text of Agreement.

The agreement in full follows:

First—Machine men and loaders will not be required to cut or load coal in pillars and stumps where it is impracticable and unsafe. Where pillars and stumps are cut and loaded by machines all dead work performed in connection therewith shall be paid for at the rate of $3.54 per day; clay veins, spars, etc., to be paid for at prevailing scale rate, all tracks to be laid by operators.

It is agreed that ribs and stumps shall be cut with short-wall machines, mined out walls are attacked, after the coal is shored up to prevent caving. Operators use machines, available each of doing the work of six men, to extract this coal.

Operators at the joint conference conceded the right of the miners to operate machines in gaseous mines. Officials of the mine workers hailed this as a victory, for, they declare, they have machines in sight now equal to a wage scale for the first time and are in a position now to control it hereafter.

PITTSBURGH MINE SCALE AGREEMENT.

Peace for another year in the Pittsburgh mining district was assured late Monday afternoon, when the special convention of District No. 5, United Mine Workers of America, probably by a two-thirds vote the wage scale tentatively accepted by the miners' scale committee in joint conference with the operators. This action guarantees uninterrupted work during what promises to be especially prosperous season for the 45,000 organized mine workers in the bituminous coal fields of Western Pennsylvania.

The Pittsburgh district miners, because of differences in the union, are the last of all the district organizations composing the United Mine Workers to close contracts with the operators.

About one-third of the delegates, acting under instructions from their locals, voted to the last against that feature of the new wage scale dealing with "machine rib cutting."

Ribs in mines are the walls between rooms and are, on an average, three feet thick. As these walls consist of coal, when the room has been

LABOR'S INTERESTS AT NATIONAL CAPITAL.

Arbitration Commission to Pass On Engineers' Demands is Finally Named. Department of Labor Bill Reaches the Senate--Workmen Cannot Waive Their Rights Under Liability Act. Status of the Anti-Injunction Bill.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

WASHINGTON, July 23.—The Arbitration Board selected to hand e the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers demands for an increase of pay on all railroads East of Chicago, have been selected by Chief Justice White of the United States Supreme Court, Charles P. Neill, Commissioner of Labor and Judge Knapp of the Commerce Court. The board will consist of Oscar Straus, chairman, former Secretary of Commerce and Labor; Dr. Albert Shaw, Editor of Review of Reviews, Otto Eidlitz, of the New York Building Trades Employers' Association; Frederick N. Judson, attorney of St. Louis; Dr. Charles R. Van Hise, President University of Wisconsin; Daniel Willard, President Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, and P. H. Morrissey, former Grand Master of the B. R. T. Messrs. Willard representing the railroads and Morrissey the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. This is the first arbitration board appointed through the medium of the Erdman Act. It is claimed that the engineers demands would total $7,500,000 annually. The firemen have also asked for an increase, which would amount to $20,000,000 annually. Demands by other railroads employes will lay in abeyance pending the forthcoming award.

As stated in our letter of last week, that it was expected a vote would be taken in the House of Representatives on the next calendar Wednesday, July 17, on the Department of Labor bill, this has materialized, and on Wednesday July 17, the motion for the engrossment and third reading of the bill was put. The House of Illinois, withdrew its demand for the right to order a roll call on the final vote. The bill has now been referred to the Senate Committee on Education and Labor and it is confidently expected to receive favorable consideration in that committee.

The United States Supreme Court in a recent decision, upheld that feature of the Employers' Liability Act which prevents an employe from waiving his right in order to obtain employment from a railroad by signing a contract for benefits in a company's so-call ed "Voluntary Relief Association."

It cannot in the future be held as a defense for the railroad and a prevention from the recovery of damages in case of negligence. A brakeman employed by the Washington Terminal Company lost his arm in a collision. A suit for damages follow-

JUSTICE ORLADY'S REBUKE TO JUDGES.

IT will readily be recalled that a recent decision of a of the prisoner's parole system and indeterminate-sentence law unconstitutional on account of an alleged defect in its title. It is gratifying to note that what was said in these columns in criticism of the decision now receives full confirmation and warrant in a decision and opinion handed down by Justice Orlady of the Superior Court. In reversing a lower-court decision in which defect of title was held to invalidate an act Justice Orlady says:

"The authority of the courts to declare statutes unconstitutional is a power of high responsibility and not to be exercised except in cases free from doubt, and all doubt is to be resolved in favor of the constitutionality of a statute; and when a statute is susceptible of two constructions, one of which supports the act and gives it effect and the other renders it unconstitutional and void, the former will be adopted, even though the latter be the more natural interpretation of the language used."

There is sound sense in this exposition of the law and of a court's duties and obligations under it. There is no question whatever that many judges have exceeded their prerogatives, encroaching upon the legislative power in a lawless manner. They ought not to need the rebuke administered. The District of Columbia Court cited the section of the Employers' Liability Act, relied upon by the company, was unconstitutional." The case was appealed and was reversed. Another trial was had which resulted in the court directing a verdict for the company, this time upon the ground that it was not a common carrier. The District Court of Appeals ruled the company was a common carrier. The United States Supreme Court now finally settles both issues by deciding in favor of the crippled brakeman and allowing him $7,500 damages.

Congressman Wilson, Chairman of the Committee on Labor, on July 15, made a favorable report to the House of Representatives on the Pepper bill, prohibiting the officials of the Army, Navy and other manufacturing departments of the Government from insituting the stop watch, "Taylor" or other high speed working system in shops, navy yards and arsenals of the United States Government. Senator Borah, of the Senate Committee on Education and Labor, has also been authorized to report this bill favorably to the Senate.

The Injunction Limitation bill, H. R. 23635, is still before the Senate Judiciary Committee. The attorneys for the manufacturers and railroads are appearing in opposition to the measure. When they have concluded President Gompers and a few others will make arguments in behalf of the bill. Letters coming to the Senators from trade unionists are having a very perceptible effect in favor of it. If this practice is continued and the Senators are given to understand that they will be called back responsible if Congress adjourns without this legislation being enacted, the Senators undoubtedly will heed the directions given them by their constituents.

The Contempt bill, H. R. 22591, was brought before the House with a special rule on July 1. The rule was adopted by a vote of 132 to 27. After considerable debate the bill was passed on July 11, by a vote of 140 "ayes" to 13 "nays." The opposition to labor measures is gradually growing less. If labor watches its interests vigilantly the following 19 members who voted for the motion more opportunities to vote "nay" when its interests are before Congress for action: Cannon, Talbott, Danforth, Dodds, Gilnet, Harris, Howell, Howland, Langham, McCreary, Maddox, Mann, Moore (of Pa.), Payne, Sterling, Tawney, Utter and Weeks. The passage of this measure (the Contempt bill), again certifies the conviction made by labor that if the bills ad-

IMMIGRANTS REFUSE TO SCAB AMERICANS

"He got the gang—and in a jiffy. When the other man came back with the rations his birds had flown.

"That's how employment agencies and great corporations are fighting today in Pittsburgh for laborers—and its very few they are fighting over."

The above is taken from a Pittsburgh paper. The corporation referred to is the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, who had a strike on their hands at platform men. The company brought a load of Italians from the Eastern cities, but when they arrived they positively refused to scab. The strike has been settled satisfactory to all concerned, all the old hands going back to work and getting better conditions. The day of breaking strikes by foreign workmen seems to have passed.

Safety Act Sustained.

WASHINGTON, July 22. — The Standardization of Equipment Act passed by Congress in 1910, on appeal by the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway has been sustained by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, for the Seventh Circuit, and the penalties assessed against the Santa Fe Railroad ordered enforced.

Pastor Russell's Sermon

THE DEAD AWAIT A RESURRECTION.

In Dreamless Sleep Until Second Coming of Christ—According to the Bible—Pastor Russell Corrects an Erroneous Impression—Selfishness, Ignorance and Faulty Theories of Creeds Responsible For the Belief That the Dead Are Immediately Rewarded or Condemned—No Man Hath Ascended Into Heaven.

ON THE ATLANTIC, July 21.—Pastor Russell is on his way to the Continent to serve his pastorate at the London Tabernacle and to lecture twice each weekday in many of the principal cities. His appointments will detain him abroad until the forepart of September. His text was: "If I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you unto myself; that where I am there ye may be also."—John 14:3. He said in part:

The error of supposing that men are alive when they are dead has close to the foundation of every theological error the world over. We have all erred in taking the guess of Plato instead of the Word of God, and we can get rid of our difficulties and theological entanglements only by returning our steps. Notwithstanding all that I have said and written, calling attention to the words of the Scriptures, the question frequently arises, Do you mean to tell us that our friends do not go to Heaven immediately when they die?

That is exactly what we are endeavoring to demonstrate to be the teaching of the Bible. The Bible alone, of all religious books, teaches that a dead man is dead, and knows nothing, and that his only hope is in the Divine arrangement through Christ, by a resurrection of the dead—"both of the just and of the unjust."—Acts xxiv, 15.

When we remember that, according to nearly all the religious creeds and theories of the world, 999 out of every thousand pass immediately at death into most horrible sufferings, one would think that all would be glad to promptly accept the Bible testimony that death is a dreamless sleep until the resurrection awakening. Why anyone should prefer to think of his friends and neighbors and the heathen millions as suffering torture, rather than to think of them as being asleep, is beyond our comprehension. The fact probably is that selfishness has such a hold upon the masses that they care and think little respecting others than their near relatives and friends; and the same selfishness inclines them, with infatuation, to believe that they and their relatives, though no better than the rest of mankind, are special favorites of Heaven, and will be granted the reward of the saints, however unsaintly their lives may have been. Some one has suggested that the ideal prayer for such is:

"God bless me and my wife,
My son John and his wife;
Us four, and no more."

In harmony with this we find that when death invades a family circle this selfish egotism assumes that the deceased is accepted as to God as a saint, and wafted immediately to heavenly bliss—regardless of how unsaintly had been the life and how little of the Spirit of Christ was ever manifested. The deception is reinforced by the Christian minister ordered to conduct the funeral service. Whatever he may read from the Bible to the effect that, if there be no resurrection, they that have fallen asleep have perished, his sermon is sure to give the inference that the deceased needs no resurrection, because he has not died, but has merely been transferred from a lower plane of life to a higher one.

Proof of this is not given and not asked. The proof is not given because there is no Scriptural proof to give. It is not asked because the people are not sufficiently intelligent on religious subjects to demand a reason and a proof for what is presented to them. The remedy for all this will come when we become more intelligent, more reasoning. No minister of Christ should be ashamed to be asked the reason for his faith. St. Peter exhorted that every Christian should be so thoroughly informed respecting the Divine Message as to be able to give a reason to whoever would ask concerning his own faith and his presentations to others.

Here note our text. In it the Master says not a word about our going to Him, but quite the contrary—that He would come again and receive us unto Himself. This is in full accord with the teachings of the Apostles. Do they not tell that at the second coming of Christ the resurrection of the Church will be the first item in order, that then that which was sown in weakness will be raised in power, that sown in dishonor will be raised in glory, that sown in natural body we will be raised a spirit body, and that so we shall ever be with the Lord? Do they not tell us that this will be an instantaneous change? Is it not stated in awakening from the sleep of death?

Hearken to St. Paul: "Behold, I show you a mystery: we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump (seventh trumpet): for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we which are alive and remain shall be caught away together to a meeting of the Lord in the air."—(1 Corinthians xv, 51, 52; 1 Thessalonians iv, 16, 17.) How plain, how simple! That will be the first meeting of the Church with her Lord. All of her members dying before that time will "sleep," while those dying since that time will not need to sleep and wait for the glorious change. But says one, does not the second coming of Christ take place whenever His holy ones die? Does He not immediately come to receive them unto Himself?

Surely only a very lame theory can seek to bolster itself up by such a perversion of the Scriptures. If Christ were to come every time one of His saints died, one day, would it be a mean many comings instead of merely a second coming? And even if His faithful were very few indeed, would it not seem that this would keep the Redeemer busy coming and departing every few minutes?

Only crass ignorance of the Bible could excuse any such misapplication of its teachings. Not merely one statement of the Scriptures bears up on this subject, but hundreds of statements of Scripture, by Jesus and the Apostles; and all contradict any such thought.

"NO MAN HATH ASCENDED TO HEAVEN."

Hearken to Jesus' words, "No man hath ascended up to Heaven." Only the Son of Man has ever been in heaven. He has ascended up where He was before, with additional glory and honor. He is now preparing the Bride class for the place—the place of honor at His own right hand. He is overseeing her experiences and causing all things to work together for her good, that she at His Second Coming may be prepared and be accepted as His Bride and granted a share in His glory, honor and immortality.

It is in full harmony with this that a little later on the Great Teacher declared that all the dead are in the grave, and that at His second advent He will first call forth His faithful ones to the perfection of life; and later will call forth the remainder of mankind, not as yet found worthy of life, that they may have an opportunity, a testing as respects their worthiness or unworthiness of everlasting life on the human plane.

Hear His assurance again respecting His faithful ones—that they shall share in His resurrection, the chief resurrection, to glory, honor, immortality, on the spirit plane. He said, "Blessed and holy are all they that have part in the First Resurrection; on these the second death shall have no power, but they shall be priests of God and Christ, and shall reign with Him a thousand years."

Be it noted that in all these assurances the Church is spoken of as a class, all of whom will enter into glory together, at Christ's second coming, and not separately, as each may die. True, each has an individual trial or testing to determine whether or not he or she will be accounted worthy, or fitted for a place in the glorious Body of Christ, in the glorious bride company, but the statement is repeatedly made that we shall be glorified together, shall have part in one resurrection.

"DAVID NOT ASCENDED TO HEAVEN."

In full accord with all the foregoing is St. Peter's statement on the Day of Pentecost: "For David is not ascending into the heavens; his sepulchre is with us unto this day." St. Peter's words imply that if King David had ascended to Heaven he would have no sepulchre on earth. Similarly, we might say of all the Prophets, and of all other persons that if once they ascended to the heavenly plane they would not be said to have any sepulchre on earth, for the very thought connected with the word sepulchre is that of a person's awaiting a resurrection, awaiting deliverance from the state and condition of death. So the Scriptures always favor, not to a resurrection of the flesh, which would be an absurdity, but to a resurrection of the dead.

Note the connection in which the Apostle Peter uses the expression: "David is not ascended into the heavens." He had just called attention to the fact that David prophesied of the resurrection of Jesus, in his prophecy he persuaded Jesus, and said, "Thou wilt not leave My soul in sheol (hades), nor suffer Thine Holy One to see corruption." St. Peter explains that he was not true of David, that he did see corruption, that his soul was left in sheol, and is still there, and will not be reclaimed until Messiah, in the resurrection morning shall call him forth.

"BE WITH ME IN PARADISE."

But, says some one, did not the dying thief go with Jesus to Paradise the very day in which they both died? And if so, does not this prove that all in harmony with God go to heaven when they die, whatever may be the condition of others at death?

No, we have made a stupid blunder and misinterpretation of our Redeemer's dying words to the thief. The wrong thought being in our minds we misinterpreted in harmony therewith. And our interpretation has done an immense amount of harm. Thousands of people have been encouraged to continue a life of sin, trusting that with their dying breath they may have the opportunity of saying, "God be merciful to me" and then be immediately ushered into glory, honor and immortality, as a joint heir with the Savior, and in as honorable a station as those who "have fought to win the prize, and sailed through bloody seas" of trial, persecution and selfdenial.

What a travesty of Justice to suppose such an application of this principle! For instance, two ungodly persons quarrel. Both draw revolvers and both fire, each intending to kill the other, the worse of the two, lives a moment, in which he says, "God, be merciful to me." Then, theoretically, he passes into glory, while his victim, not having the opportunity for a cry of mercy, we are told by the same theory, is doomed to endless torture.

Note the circumstances. Jesus hung between two thieves, one of whom joined with the multitude in railing at Him as an impostor, crying out, "Thou, if you be the Christ, save yourself and us from death." The other, or better heart, honestly admitted his own guilt and the guilt of his comrade, but defended Jesus, declaring that He was innocent. Following this, he addresses Jesus. We paraphrase his words: "Lord, I have defended you against an unjust attack, but remember this good deed if you ever have an opportunity to do a kindness to me in return. I heard you before Pilate say that you have a kingdom, and I suppose it is the good heavenly Kingdom. I therefore presume. I know little about such matters, but from what I have seen of you I can well surmise you King of such a Kingdom. My request is: Remember me, when Thou comest into Thy Kingdom."

To this Jesus replied, "Verily, verily (so be it, so be it, as you have asked correctly, I say unto thee this day (this dark day, in which it would appear that I have not a friend in Heaven or on earth—this dark day in which I am crucified as a malefactor, a falsifier and a blasphemer—I say unto thee this day), thou shalt be with Me in Paradise."

Paradise has not yet come. Messiah's Kingdom has not yet been established and it must come first before Paradise Lost can be restored and the whole earth be made God's glorious footstool, as He has promised. But when the time shall come, when the Kingdom shall be established, when Paradise conditions shall be introduced, the resurrection of that thief will be in order, for all that are in their graves shall hear the voice of the Son of Man and shall come forth." The thief will then find himself in Paradise—not merely because of the kindness done to Jesus, but especially because his kind words indicated a sincerity and honesty of heart such as the Lord is always glad to bless and reward.

On the day of their dying all three went to hades, to sheol, to the tomb, to the state of the dead. The two thieves still remain there, and with them and the whole earth be made God's glorious footstool, as He has promised. But when the time shall come, when the Kingdom shall be established, when Paradise conditions shall be introduced, the resurrection of that thief will be in order, for all that are in their graves shall hear the voice of the Son of Man and shall come forth." The thief will then find himself in Paradise—not merely because of the kindness done to Jesus, but especially because his kind words indicated a sincerity and honesty of heart such as the Lord is always glad to bless and reward.

On the day of their dying all three went to hades, to sheol, to the tomb, to the state of the dead. The two thieves still remain there, and with them and the whole earth, amongst those mentioned by the Prophet Daniel when he refers to those "who sleep in the dust of the earth," who will come forth in the resurrection morning. Daniel xii, 2. But Jesus arose from sheol, from hades, from the tomb, from the state of death, on the third day. He had not been to Paradise, for Paradise is not even yet in existence. He had not been to Heaven, for He had been dead. Let us hear His own words to Mary on the morning of the resurrection. "I have not yet ascended * * * to My Father, and your Father, to My God, and your God."—John xx, 17. Could anything be plainer, simpler, more harmonious?

DEPART AND BE WITH CHRIST.

Ah, says one, I have great faith in St. Paul, and I remember his words: "I am in a strait between two things, having a desire to depart and to be with Christ, which is far better." If St. Paul expected to depart and be with Christ, why is it not reasonable to suppose that he did so, and that all others, at least of the saints, at death so depart and pass at once into the presence and fellowship of Jesus?

Yes, such a misunderstanding of St. Paul's words and thoughts are exceedingly able in view of the general trend of Christian thought on this subject for centuries, and as in view of the error made in this case by the translators. We are not faulting the translators, because they had the erroneous thought firmly embedded in their minds and presumably were trying to make the Apostle here say what they conscientiously thought he ought to say.

But what we are interested in knowing is, What did he say on the subject? Let us read the Apostle's words critically. He was in a strait between two things—whether he would prefer to live and labor further for the Truth's sake, and assist the brethren, or whether he would prefer to die and rest from his labors. He never threw two counters for the choice. But there was a third thing—and if this had been a possibility he would have had no difficulty in deciding—he had a real, positive desire respecting it; namely, that he might live which were possible to him would have stood in comparison at all, this third thing would have been no desire at all.

Now what was that third thing? It was not to live and suffer and help the brethren, nor was it to die and be at rest from his labors. The third thing according to a literal translation, is expressed thus: "I have a desire for the returning, and being with Christ, which is far better"—far better than either living under the present trying conditions or dying, sleeping, resting and waiting for the Kingdom.

But, says one, by what authority do you render the word depart by a word of very opposite meaning, namely, return. We answer that we give this rendering on the authority of the Greek text. The Greek word is analuein; it is found in another place in the Bible, and there it is rendered return, in this other case there can be no question as to the proper translation.—See Luke xii, 36.

Let us, then, dear fellow Christians, turn from the follies of the Dark Ages and take the inspired words of Jesus, the Apostles and Prophets, and have, indeed, "beauty for ashes, the oil of joy for the spirit of heaviness," in respect to the understanding of the Heavenly Father's Program. Thus we will find fulfilled in us more and more the Master's prayer: Sanctify them through Thy Truth; Thy Word is Truth."

TRIBUNE APPRECIATIONS.

Indiana, Pa., July 15.

I believe I have again allowed my subscription to become delinquent, as I notice by last week's label on the wrapper. Thank you for continuing the paper, as I do not want to miss the good Sermons, the Question Box and Sunday School Lessons.

We can see the fulfillment of the Scriptures when Man's hearts failing them for fear and looking forward to the things coming on the earth," and there is much Land of hard times, present and coming, and Pastor Russell certainly points out the Scriptural solution and it is certainly Good Tidings to me to know that "the desire of all nations" is so near at hand. It seems remarkable that so few are ready to believe that "Good Tidings" till we remember that the Apostle tells us that the god of this world was blinded the minds." I am glad to be able to tell you that I believe and rejoice in the gospel Pastor Russell preaches and in the realization that the god of this world—Satan—will soon have his dominion taken from him. As Daniel says, "The Kingdom and the dominion and the greatness of the Kingdom under the whole heaven shall be given to the people of the Saints of the Most High God, whose Kingdom is an everlasting Kingdom and whose dominion shall not pass away." Ah yes, our Lord Jesus adds "Fear not, little flock, it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the Kingdom."

And so I shall hope to continue to get the Tribune so long as I remain in the flesh and it continues to give us the message—the good tidings—the Gospel of the Kingdom. Our Lord's vital Scripture which will soon fill the who's earth, the Kingdom which, by His Lord, I hope to share in the fulfilment of His promise. "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with Me in My throne, even as I overcame, and am set down with My Father in His throne."

And they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years." Again thanking you for your promptness in changing the address of my paper so promptly, and in bearing with my negligence in renewing my subscription promptly on time. I remain,

Respectfully yours,
E. S. MASON.

"FEAR HATH TORMENT."

I see some of the press comments editors by ruling to the "brimstone" theory, notwithstanding the International Bible Students association went on record at Washington, D. C., repudiating the monstrous idea attaching thereby to the Almighty's good name. Certain statements were given out in a Chicago print which cited hell law and exacting real summary punishment for criminals. But where in human statutes, we ask, do we find stipulated the burning, tormenting of the diabolical Dantesking of the most degenerate criminals? Instead, do we not have the electric chair for the dispatching of the incorrigible?

But leaving aside all this, can we not see the least intraction of the Divine Character in the following from the arrows of the Great Judge upon some who might make themselves ex pure as snow in water, under the reflection in one point books him guilty of the "mint, anise and cummin" for the full transgressor, and "death" for the lawless. Hence in public speech how grave the responsibility of those who "hold down" the truth on these vital matters, for the gospel results. Now, what judgment you judge you shall be judged." How many would like to read for 9,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000 years and then get turned over? Bless your soul, this is a boomerang beyond the ken of human sensibilities. While admiring the mystery of the Divine Justice our eyes open. Oh! so wide, to the dimensions of the grace yet to be manifested world-wide from the Abrahamic stores included in the myriads of systems which infinite wisdom formed for the pleasure of restored mankind and other new creations. Let us liberally circulate "Scripture" and drink in the comforts of the sensible doctrine.

Yours in the true light,

Minnesota, July 20.

Through the kindness of a dear friend of the Truth I am receiving your valuab e paper, and it is certainly the best one I have ever seen for printing Pastor Russell's Sermons and then also the Question Box, Sunday School Lessons and Letters of Appreciation. I am very much interested in it all. Your reward will be great for doing this. If Mrs. C. T. Brooks will send her address to me, I will send her a copy of the 1911 convention report, as I have an extra copy.

Sincerely yours,
MRS. MINNIE PETERSON.

Texas, July 20.

Please find enclosed money order to renew my subscription to your valuab e paper. Aside from its being a Christian paper in every way I take it because of its religious features. I say our dear Heavenly Father's blessing upon your efforts in sending forth the Harvest Message.

Very truly,
B. G. HOWARD.

Ohio, July 20.

Answering the request of Sister Mrs. C. T. Brooks of Maine, will say I have a copy of 1317 convention report which may be had by sending address to cover the expense of mailing, twelve or fifteen cents perhaps. Please send full address to S. H. West Conway, National Military Home, Ohio. Will avail myself of this as another opportunity to make favorable mention of the good work now being done by the Labor Tribune, both in the matter of furthering the interests of the working class and in the still nobler work of spreading the gospel, the good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people." Luke 2: 10.

With warmest regards,
S. H. WEST.

Maryland, July 18.

Enclosed please find two new subscriptions for your esteemed paper. We are very happy to note the weekly increase of your subscription list from those who appreciate Pastor Russell's Sermons. I firmly believe that the dear Labor Tribune is a powerful factor in the promulgation of present Truth and a useful and willing instrument in the Lord's hands for the distribution of the Truth respecting the divine plan of the ages, and for pulling down the strongholds of error and false doctrines when are so deeply intrenched in the minds of Christian people generally. We were glad to see the resolution adopted at the Washington, D. C., convention of the I. B. S. A. which sets forth in concise form our belief regarding the subject of hell and eternal punishment of the wicked and which will bring before the public the Bible teaching according to which Jesus intended all Christians to search the Scriptures themselves as to whether or not they really believe in the God dishonoring doctrine of a literal hell. We are also grateful for the eternal torture of the unsaved. In other words we want to know at once whether the Bible when it declares "The wages of sin is death," all the while it is true that the wicked will they perish, sleep in death where they know not anything," means the very opposite of what Jesus intended to be the gospel in all Christian denominations to declare

HORSESHOES OF ROPE.

Invention That Is Coming Into General Use in Germany.

Owing to the rapid increase in the mileage of streets paved with asphalt and wood blocks and to the congestion of traffic in the large cities it was found necessary to afford greater safety for horses, to prevent their slipping and to enable them to come to a quick stop. This has been attained by fitting them with "rope" horseshoes. These shoes were first manufactured some twenty-five years ago, but it is only during the last decade that the industry has grown to large proportions.

Various forms and shapes of shoes are used. Some are open at the back, like an ordinary horseshoe. Others are closed, and very often, besides being closed, there is a bridge or cross piece joining the two sides. When this is the case the bridge is constructed like the rest of the shoe, inclosing a tarred rope. There are usually eight nail holes in each shoe, and in order to strengthen the bottom, and especially to make the nail holes more secure, the walls of the groove are sometimes reinforced by braces. The space in the center of the shoe is often covered over with various kinds of inserts to protect the frog from injury. The latest novelty, which has been adopted by the royal stables, is the insertion at the back of the shoe of a block of wood into which are inserted bars of iron. This is an additional preventive against slipping. When the ground is covered with snow a special ice plate is inserted in its stead.

It is customary to use special nails with long heads in attaching the shoes to the hoof. When the long headed nails are used it is possible to drive them in and to extract them without taking out the rope. These nails, which are driven between the outer side of the groove and the hoof, serve also help to hold in the rope. The tarred rope wears down simultaneously with the rest of the shoe, and it is only on rare occasions that the rope must be withdrawn and new inserted. This change can be made without removing the shoe. The average life of a rope horseshoe is six to eight weeks.

The advantages and disadvantages of the rope shoes can be summarized as follows: Advantages—They are light and comfortable for the horse; they help to prevent slipping; they break the concussion and deaden the sound of the hoof. Disadvantages—The driving of the nails requires more care; the blacksmith must have in stock a larger quantity of shoes of various shapes and sizes; great care has to be taken in the preparation of rope horseshoes not to overheat the iron or to hammer it when too cold, otherwise it will crack on the anvil.—Consular Report.

WELDING MORE COMMON.

Acetylene Blowpipe a Great Economy in Repairing Machinery.

It would not be too much to state that the use of autogenous welding has revolutionized motor vehicle repairing. Parts which only a few years ago would have been thrown away as useless are now, thanks to the acetylene blowpipe, repaired and again put into use.

Starting first with the repair of cracked water jackets and burning on broken lugs to cooling tubes, the blowpipe has gradually extended until almost any work seems possible with it. The repairing of broken crankshafts is now quite frequent, and it is very seldom, if the work has been properly carried out, that the shaft breaks again at the welded place.

Welding teeth into a gear wheel; welding up a pressed steel frame after a breakage or after having been cut to extend the wheel base; welding on a spring that has broken off in an accident; welding brackets on to frame, etc., are only a few instances of what can be done. There is one metal which has been found impossible to deal with satisfactorily by welding, and that is aluminium. This, unfortunately, is the metal in which the most breakages are found in motor vehicles.

Of course the bar to acetylene welding is the cost of the outfit, which is so high that a good deal of work must be done to make it profitable.—Blacksmith and Wheelwright.

Edibility of Antarctic Animals.

Dr. Llorelle of the "Pourquoi-Pas" recently described to a French audience always interested in gustatory matters—the character of the fresh meat obtainable in polar regions. The ladies taste, Le Monde Illustre quotes him as saying, exactly like an unbled duck, which has been thoroughly steeped in cod liver oil. Penguin soup makes somewhat the idea of boiled beef; it is tinctid with a marked flavor of fish. The various species of whales are of diverse value. Europeans and it impossible to swallow the baleen, though the Japanese eat it willingly. The rorqual is very good for twenty four hours; its meat is pale and oily, recalling veal. The fin whale is exquisite, like veal of the first quality; unfortunately it, too, lacks in keeping qualities.

Malleable Iron.

Blackheart malleable iron derives its name from the fact that in annealing only the outer layers of carbon are oxidized, the carbon of the interior being simply changed to a black amorphous state.

NEW TYPE OF DAVIT.

Apparatus For Launching Lifeboats From a Ship's Deck.

The Martin davit for launching lifeboats at sea is simple, speedy and safe. The arrangement is such that one man can swing out and safely launch a fully loaded boat in less than two minutes.

The davit arms are mounted on cam shaped trucks and are actuated by the turning of a crank which sets in motion a simple worm gear acting on a shaft connecting both arms of the apparatus. By this means the lifeboat is swung to the outboard position and is then lowered as quickly or as slowly as may be desired under the perfect control of a strong hand brake.

The Martin davit does away entirely with the manifold dangers arising from the use of manila rope as falls, being equipped with galvanized wire, specially woven for the purpose.

Other dangers attending the use of manila rope falls have long been apparent to seamen, and where possible manila falls have been replaced by the wire rope falls. The cost is the fire are often deeper, and the edges are made sharper, so sharp as if worked by a file cutter.

Powerful Cloth Cutter.

An electrical machine has been installed in a Massachusetts factory for cutting covers for umbrellas which cuts through 350 thicknesses of cloth at once, making enough shapes to cover fifty umbrellas.

The Mysterious Foehn Wind.

All tourists through the Alpine regions have heard of the foehn wind, the many manifestations of which are most mysterious. The snow and ice of the mountains disappear in a few hours under its action, and many persons experience a sickness of a peculiar character while the foehn wind is on. In some parts of the Alps the wood of the houses is dried out so thoroughly that it is like tinder, and at times when this is at all prolonged it is necessary to prohibit the use of fires within the houses. While this precaution is not usually necessary, it is quite common to see a fire patrol making a tour of the town as an extra precaution.

Production of Phosphate Rock.

The production of phosphate rock in the United States continues to increase steadily. According to Frank B. Van Horn of the United States geological survey, the production last year was 3,053,270 tons, valued at $11,000,000. This is an increase over the production for 1900 of 328,201 tons, or an increased value of nearly a million dollars.

How to Sharpen Old Files.

A method to sharpen old files that has proved quite satisfactory, although it is rather odd, is to clean them of all grease and foreign matter and submerge them from a week to a month in a piece of bare wire in a bath of three parts of sulphuric acid, six parts of nitric acid and 100 parts of water. Several plates of carbon should be immersed in the same bath and connected by wire to the wire on which the work is being supported. The carbon plates in the file are eaten deeper, and the edges are made keener and sharp as if worked by a file cutter.

Appreciations

New York, July 20.

Inclosed find renewal of your valuable paper. I enjoy Pastor Russell's Sermons very much as they are a great help to me.

Sincerely yours,
J. FRIEND.

North Carolina, July 21.

I am renewing my subscription to the Tribune through the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society. I have been a subscriber to the Tribune for several years and I have become so much attached to the paper that I don't feel that I can do without it. Look forward each week to its coming with pleasure and know that I am going to get meat in due season from the sermon of Pastor Russell and the Sunday School Lessons and the Question Box. How I enjoy them. I can not tell you but only say God bless you for publishing the good news and great tidings of great joy which shall be to all people.

Yours in His service,
W. H. HARE.

Mashachusetts, July 21.

I want you to know that we greatly appreciate your good paper. We enjoy the Labor News. We more especially the way in which you handle Pastor Russell's Sermons and other articles from his pen.

Yours very respectfully,
HELEN T. JOHNSEN.

Ohio, July 21.

Enclosed find one year's subscription to your paper. This is the third year I have taken your paper, and must say I appreciate the manner in which you publish Pastor Russell's Sermons and hope you will continue doing so.

Yours truly,

THE SAVIOR TEACHING IN THE BROOKLYN TABERNACLE BIBLE STUDIES

GOD'S WHEAT FIELD.

Matthew xiii, 24-30, 36-43—July 28.

"Gather ye together first the tares, and bind them in bundles to burn them, but gather the wheat into My garner."—Verse 30.

OUR International Sunday School Lessons are specially helpful this year. We are glad that the selection contains so many lessons on the Kingdom. This topic has not had sufficient consideration, considering its prominence in the Bible.

Today's study is another of the Kingdom parables. It is the embryo Kingdom that is pictured; it relates to the Gospel Age, and the work of selecting the Church.

"The Field is the World."

This parable also shows us the very commencement of the Lord's call for His Bride from amongst all nations. He "first did" (Acts 15:14) come to the Jews. "It was necessary that the Gospel should be preached first unto you, but seeing ye reject it, * * lo, we turn to the Gentiles." (Acts xiii, 46.) The entire world constituted the "field" for the sowing of the "good seed," which is strictly defined, "the Gospel of the Kingdom."

Jesus and His Apostles sowed only "good seed," and all His true followers since have been authorized to continue the work in the same line. But the adversary, Satan, he pointed our here in the parable, brought in a different kind of "seed," and sowed it among the "wheat field." The result is that today the "tares" are so plentiful that they choke out the "wheat" in both the world in general so considers them.

The "wheat" class are considered "a peculiar people," full of zeal for good works, the Apostle mentions meekness and humility, and these tend to low their hearts, minds and influence more and more up in the display of their "form of godliness."

The Lord allowed the matter to go on, fully assured that He would have in the end the crop which He desired, and very content to allow the "wheat" class to be taught by the presence of the "tares" and the ultimate treatment accorded them.

The Lord could have hindered the Adversary from bringing in the false doctrines, or He could have separated centuries ago between the wheat and tare classes, but this was not according to His intention. He purposed to "let both grow together until the Harvest."

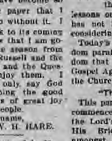
In the Common Version the words, "The Harvest is the end of the world," have been seriously misunderstood. It does not mean the end of time, nor the end of the earth—its destruction—but the end of Divine favor. It merely means the end of the present Age.

"In the Time of the Harvest."

This expression signifies that the Harvest of this Age will not be an instantaneous work, but a gradual one, requiring time. There is good reason for believing that the Harvest of this Age is a period of forty years, as the Harvest of the Jewish Age was of that length. In this time of the Harvest two things will be accomplished: (1) The "tares" will be gathered into "bundles," ready for the "burning"—destruction. (2) The "wheat," at the same time, will be gathered into the "garner"—the heavenly Kingdom.

"They shall gather out of His Kingdom all things which offend, and them which do iniquity; * * * there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth." There will be two classes amongst the "tares" class. These will "do iniquity"—unrighteousness, the other class, those that have caused others to stumble. Doubtless this will include many teachers and preachers, and many deeply of wonderful works.

But we must not forget that we are considering a parable, and that the "tares" are symbolical, and likewise the "furnace" and the "fire." The interpretation is that, in the end of this



"The harvest is the end of the age." the "tares" will not be saved, but they will be cast into the trouble and have their portion with the hypocrites.

That trouble will not last forever. Many Scriptures seem to show that it will be terrific, but of very short duration. It will be "a time, and not a time, and a half," and a great "time of trouble" for all nations, security, governments, financial institutions, etc. The "wheat" class will be saved from that "time of trouble" by the overruling Age, the Harvest time, there will be a great "time of trouble" for all nations, and a great deal of anarchy and confusion. It will be "a time, and not a time, and a half," and a great "time of trouble" for all nations, security, governments, financial institutions, etc. The "wheat" class will be saved from that "time of trouble" by the overruling providences and influences of the Lord's care for them. Their experience will be similar to that of Israel in Egypt, when the Lord passed over their dwellings and left them unmolested, while the Egyptians suffered the plagues.

The Time of Separation.

The separation of the "tares" from the "wheat" will be gradual, and will be accomplished by the Lord's angels, the messengers of the Church. The "tares" will be gathered into "bundles" and bound for the "burning"—destruction. The "wheat," at the same time, will be gathered into the "garner"—the heavenly Kingdom.

"They shall gather out of His Kingdom all things which offend, and them which do iniquity; * * * there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth." There will be two classes amongst the "tares" class. These will "do iniquity"—unrighteousness, the other class, those that have caused others to stumble. Doubtless this will include many teachers and preachers, and many doers of wonderful works.

But we must not forget that we are considering a parable, and that the "tares" are symbolical, and likewise the "furnace" and the "fire." The interpretation is that, in the end of this Age, the Harvest time, there will be

London Transport Workers Continue Heroic Struggle in Face of Starvation of Themselves and Families. Condition of Workmen in Germany Compared With Rest of Europe. Closing of International Miners' Congress.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

LONDON, July 25.—The London transport workers strike keeps on. The dispute is now in its ninth week and wide-spread suffering and misery are being endured by the strikers and their families. One man stands in the way of a peaceful and prompt settlement and that man is Lord Devonport. He is the chairman of the Port of London Authority. This governing body controls the London docks and Devonport as the head of that body has become the leader of the allied employers. He is a ruthless and obstinate man and demands that the strikers shall surrender unconditionally. Until they do so they are to be starved. Through his savage immobility not only is the port suffering with the strikers but merchants generally are losing heavily through being unable to get their goods out of the docks and shops. A few words on Lord Devonport may not be out of place. He is a self-made man, an organizer and a leader, his title was given him by the Liberal party for his political services a few years ago. He is really Hudson Kearley and was born at Tadridge, the youngest of the ten children of a well-to-do builder and contractor. When he was 14 he went into the city as a clerk in a firm of tea merchants in Fenchurch street. It is a trade which has greatly developed of late years, and Kearley when he was 21 started on his own account. Five years later he was joined by P. T. Tonge, and together they gradually started grocery stores all over the country under the title of the International Tea Company, which ultimately had 200 shops and a capital of five million dollars. In conjunction herewith, their wholesale firm of Kearley and Tonge, became a vast enterprise.

Originally Conservative Kearley entered Parliament for Devonport as a Liberal. In 1905, when Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman came into office he appointed Hudson Kearley Parliamentary Secretary at the Board of Trade, of which Lloyd George was then president. Kearley piloted the Port of London Authority Act through Parliament with such skill that he was at once selected as its first chairman. So it has come about that the Port of London Authority, which it was fondly hoped would regularize and humanize dock labor and rescue the workers from the private companies has proved to be the chief stumblingblock in the way of peace and conciliation. For that ironic consummation Lord Devonport is responsible.

Vernon Hariahorn, a member of the National Executive, Miners Federation of Great Britain, addressed a mass meeting of miners on July 18 said in his opinion it was imperative in the interest of the trade union movement as a whole, that a joint meeting of the executives of the transport workers, railwarmen and miners should be called immediately, and that the co-operation of these three great organizations of labor should be enlisted to save the dockers of London from the hell which had been prepared for them by the tyrants who would starve starveling itself. Being enlisted upon coupling with it humiliation and degradation.

He ventured to assert that if a joint meeting of the three executives was convened and a resolution passed to the effect that unless a satisfactory and honorable settlement was come to, the whole of the workmen in the three organizations would be advised to withdraw their labor within twenty four hours, the dock strike would be at an end, and Lord Devonport and his co-tyrants would soon learn a lesson.

Unless he (Hartshorn) had sadly misread the characters of his colleagues on the National Executive of the Miners' Federation, they would be quite willing to join the other unions to save the dockers from defeat and humiliation, and he could not believe that the other executives would have one iota lesserly feeling for the men who had put such a pathetically heroic fight in London.

It was for the dockers to ask for such a joint meeting, and any responsibility for refusal must rest with the other unions. He did not think a national strike would be necessary. He felt sure that once the three organizations had declared their intentions a settlement would be arrived at.

A scheme is on foot to effect a combine of the 200,000 workers in the engineering (not locomotive engineering) trades in the event of a national lockout. The Amalgamated Society of Engineers (127,000 members), the Shipbuilders' Society (60,000 members), and the Shipconstructive and Shipwrights' Association (24,000) members) are jointly considering permanent amalgamation proposals and temporary measures for joint action, in the event of a national dispute when the present agreements with employers expire. It has been arranged that the two latter organizations shall combine their present arrangements for fusion before a scheme for the complete amalgamation is drawn up. Ballots are now being taken on the details of the preliminary fusion.

An attempt which is being made to formulate a temporary working agreement between the Boilermakers and Engineers in view of the decision of the members to withdraw from the National Agreement between the Engineering and Shipbuilding Employers' Federation and the Engineering Trades Federation is meeting with every success, the members being determined to take advantage of the present trade boom to make another bid for an eight-hour day.

PEACE CONGRESS OF NATIONAL LEGISLATURES.

A GREAT deal can be said and little or nothing against, the bill introduced in the House of Representatives at Washington by Mr. Sulzer of New York, providing for a congress of the legislatures of all the nations of the world, at the invitation of the United States, to meet in Washington during the fall of 1913 to discuss matters relating to universal peace, and make recommendations for such action as will enable said national legislative bodies to be of greater service in promoting concord and peace among the nations of the earth. Such a congress of congresses would not bring an immediate end to war and to the ruinous waste of the people's money in the ceaseless building of ships and feeding and drilling of armies, but it would be another step—perhaps a long step—toward it. There are still a few statesmen who love war but their place is with a bygone age. The world is made for peace and the arts of peace. The congress of nations proposed by Mr. Sulzer would help measurably to bring about (to quote his own language) the genuine peace conditions which would save to the pockets of the taxpayers the $2,500,000,000 annually now expended on armies and navies, this being the greater factor in the high cost of living from which all people are suffering at the present time."

The next regular meeting of the International Congress of the Peace Societies will take place at Geneva, Switzerland, August 21 to September 1 next, and the Interparliamentary Union will commence its sessions on September 7 next, also at Geneva. These will be followed by a conference of representatives of the three great republics, United States, France and China, doubtless with representatives of other nations as well, at Paris in October, all working to forward the success of this coming joint meeting of the parliaments of the world for the good of the world. So far, 262 members of the present United States congress out of a full membership of 487 have enrolled themselves as members of the Interparliamentary Union and with their signatures have approved the invitation from the United States congress to the parliaments of other nations, which the Sulzer bill would make official. The executive committee of our greatest organizations, states, universities, colleges, great religious, commercial, labor, etc., have recorded with the signatures of their presidents heads their approval of the proposed peace congress of national legislatures.

SHIP CANAL LOOMING UP.

PITTSBURG'S proposed ship canal to Lake Erie is making progress, as is indicated by the announcement from Washington that the bill authorizing the engineers of the United States government to take charge of the work of construction has been favorably reported by the House Committee on Military Affairs. It has already passed the Senate. There is the greatest confidence among the friends of the canal that the House will pass it at the present session. The work, only a commencement of action until the whole session is expected.

The reasons which secured favorable consideration for the measure in the Senate will be even more powerful and compelling in the House, where railroad influence is if anything weaker than in the other body. The fact that the Senate found no good ground for a refusal to adopt the measure is regarded as the strongest guarantee of its adoption by the House. That the President will approve it is assured.

The placing of the entire work of construction in this manner in the hands of the government's engineers will be a bond to the states directly interested that the money they devote to the enterprise will be effectively expended and that the canal will be built by the best engineers in the world. Although the sanction of the government to the project as an engineering proposition has already been given, active government participation in the construction gives the sanction new force and emphasis. It will remove all doubt of the passage of bills by the Legislatures of West Virginia, Ohio and Pennsylvania creating a joint tri-state commission to take charge of the waterway after it has been made ready for operation.

Legislation to enable counties adjacent to lease bonds to aid in building it has been enacted in all three states. Action by the counties to provide the funds will not be long postponed after the government signifies its readiness to proceed with its share of the undertaking. As matters now stand, there is a very bright prospect indeed that within the next five years Pittsburgh and the great Ohio valley will be connected with the lakes and the whole of that wonderful valley, with Pittsburgh at its head, will enter upon a new era of industrial development by which even the most marvelous of its former periods of prosperity will be made to look almost insignificant.

A CONTEMPORARY'S UNCONSTITUTIONALITY.

THE prevalence of mistaken notions as to the constitutional method of electing a President in case there is a failure to elect in the electoral college is revealed by an editorial in a Cleveland contemporary which, after stating that 1913 may be a repetition of 1824, says:

"What if there are three political parties in the field this year, nearly equal in number, with the Socialists sapping the strength of each and so mixing up the vote in November that no candidate can get a majority in the electoral college? In that case the election would be thrown into the House of Representatives as now constituted, and its heavy Democratic majority. The House, under the constitution, must choose a candidate from those receiving the three highest votes in the electoral college. Doubtless the Baltimore nominee, even if third in the race, would be chosen with a whoop."

Our contemporary evidently is ignorant of the fact that when the election is thrown into the House the constitution does no permit the members of that body to vote in the same way as on ordinary matters. Instead of each member's having a vote, but one vote is allowed to each state, and in case as directed by the majority of that state's House representatives. Now it happens that in the present House, as has already been pointed out in these columns, the House is evenly divided between the two parties, reckoning on the state-unit basis. Some twenty-four states have a majority of Republican members, and an equal number of states have a Democratic majority. The heavy majority that the Democrats have in the aggregate membership on individual roll-call would cut no figure in an election of President. There is every reason for believing that if the House is called upon to elect a President it will be deadlocked, with a final outcome which it is hard to foresee. This is a very good reason why the voters of the country should settle the thing at the polls. The third-party combination would tend to make the result at the polls much more uncertain than if there should be a straight contest between the two old parties. However, it is too soon to worry about the undesirable possibility of a failure of the ordinary election machinery. In spite of some unusual things in the way of attacks, the probabilities are that the experience of 1824, when the election was thrown into the House, will not be repeated.

Conditions Improving.

HOLYOKE, Mass., July 29.—The papermakers' organizations have secured the eight-hour day and what is known to the trade as the "three tour system" in seventeen mills in and around Holyoke. None of the men now enjoying the eight-hour day have received any reduction in wages. Some received an increase. The rates running from $2.75 per day to machine tenders and beater engineers to a $1.75 a day to fourth hands.

C. R. VAN HISE, PRESIDENT OF UNIVERSITY OF WISCONSIN.

CHARLES RICHARD VAN HISE, president of the University of Wisconsin since 1903, is one of the most distinguished of American college presidents. In politics he is independent. He voted for Grover Cleveland and for Colonel Roosevelt and has at all times voted for Senator La Follette, being in full sympathy with the principles which the senator has so consistently advocated. Dr. Van Hise is fifty-five years old. He has held a number of important professorships in leading institutions of learning, is the author of a number of scientific works, holds membership in a score of scientific and educational societies and has been honored with degrees from nearly all of the big colleges and universities. He was lately appointed by the supreme court as member of the commission to arbitrate the differences between the railroads and the locomotive engineers.

LABOR'S INTERESTS AT NATIONAL CAPITAL.

Congressman Wilson, Representing Labor, Tells Some Plain Truths in the Debate on the Anti-Injunction Bill--Bureau of Labor Submits a Vigorous Report on Lawrence Strike. Another Startling Exhibit of the Anarchism of Railroad Presidents and Managers.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—During the House debate on the Contempt Bill Congressman Wilson of Pennsylvania, said: "This bill is the natural complement of the Anti-Injunction bill in so far as it applies to cases arising in trades disputes. It is within the Constitutional power of Congress to enact. It will extend the right of trial by jury to indirect contempt cases where the acts alleged to have been committed are of a criminal character and removes the suspicion that bias on the part of some judges does injustice to innocent parties. It will regulate the exercise of judicial power so as to protect the people in the exercise of all their rights." Congressman Kendall said: "The protest against the abuse of the injunctive process has become national within its character. It is not unreasonable clamor. It is too insistent to be ignored as temporary discontent. There is a confirmed conviction that the equity powers of the Federal judiciary have been employed not exclusively to preserve property from destruction, but frequently to compel the settlement of industrial disputes. This Contempt bill regulates the procedure in prosecutions for contempt, is complimentary to the Anti-Injunction bill recently passed. If they both become law it will not be possible in future for the injunction to be invoked and abused in labor disputes as it has been in the past. The court then will entertain an application for the restraint of men in their lawful, peaceful rights. The system under which we have been operating can no longer be successfully defended. A judge appointed for life and responsible to nobody, sitting as a chancellor, issues an injunction invading the natural rights of men and then when vindication is alleged, he appropriates to himself the functions of prosecutor, court and executor. The situation is intolerable, and it is to correct it that legislation is universally demanded."

The Bureau of Labor, under the Department of Commerce and Labor, in filing its report with the Senate on the textile workers' strike at Lawrence, Mass., made no recommendations, but handled the matter in a vigorous manner. The Senate has ordered that the report be printed. The report declares that the father of a family must add either his wife or child to the pitiful roll of wage earners in order to live and that the average pay received by 21,000 employes during one week late in 1911 was $5.76, probably reduced during other weeks by lack of work. The workingmen's apartments were crowded and sometimes unsanitary; that in certain cases 15 to 17 persons lived in a five room apartment; that entirely adequate building regulations involve a great risk of life and property.

Railroad officials are evidently a blind set of men and apparently imagine they can continue to fool the whole of the American people all of the time. They water the stock with impunity, they charge exorbitant rates for service, they attempt to cheat the tax collectors in every conceivable way in every state, they manipulate party politics for their own interests. They furnish unsatisfactory and lamentably dangerous service, they harass the organizations of labor and discriminate wherever possible against members of trade unions. They oppose the enactment of humanizing laws, they have persistently attempted to block the passage of every safety appliance measure, they claim the right to abuse the writ of injunction and make the Federal courts the police officers for the nation in their interest and they defiantly and brazenly violate state and national laws on every hand, as witness the following summary violations of the 14 hour law compiled by Warren S. Stone, Grand Chief Engineer of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, from the monthly reports of the railroad corporations to the Interstate Commerce Commission. This table shows that in eight months, or from July, 1911 to March, 1912, inclusive, 79,906 violations of the hours of service laws were committed in the employment of engineers alone and does not include other workmen in road service to whom the law applies. C. C. C. & St. R. R. 11,200 violations. B. & O. R. R. 6,651. Erie R. R. 4,254. N. Y. N. H. & H. R. R. 415. B. & M. R. R. 382. P. R. R. 3,975. Wabash 1,402. L. S. & M. S. 1,038. C. M. & St. L. 691. Total 29,000 violations in nine of the large roads east of the Mississippi river. To this must the total would be upon all the railroads of the country. Comment upon these facts is left to the imagination of the reader.

The War Department has been instructed by the Attorney General that it must observe the eight hour provision included in the fortification appropriation act of June 5, 1912, in so far as it applies to the manufacture of ordnance and ammunition: the Attorney General advises. "The underlying purpose of this legislation is to confer upon workmen the physical and moral benefits which flow from a reduction of their labor to eight hours a day." The sole purpose of this proviso was the betterment of the conditions of our laboring class." So far as small purchases made abroad are concerned, the attorney holds that the requirement of the act does not apply.

WEST VIRGINIA TROOPS GUARD MINES.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., July 29.—After a conference between Adjutant General C. D. Elliott and Sheriff S. D. Smith of Kanawha county, Governor William E. Glasscock last evening ordered Major Thomas Davis, in command of the Third Battalion, composed of the three Huntington companies and the Terra Alta Company, to proceed at once from Mount Gretna by special train to Paint Creek, near here. Major Davis will have 225 men which with the three companies now on Paint Creek, will make 356, besides a company of 65 at Peytonia.

The company under Captain George Ford, sent from Mapkiow to Tomsburg, late last night, following a call for assistance, returned to Mackiow this morning and reported no trouble after their arrival.

James Roberts, a bookkeeper at one of the Lewis mines at Cheyan, several miles from Paint Creek, was shot in the hip, but not badly injured, as he walked toward a train. At the time a number of strikers and other people were congregated about the station. Warrants are being issued tonight and will be served in the morning and a preliminary hearing held tomorrow before Justice of the Peace Crawford and Eskins at Cheyan.

Precautions will be taken to avoid trouble by sending a company of militia to Chelyan. The authorities have been informed that the armed miners will make a demonstration when the accused of being implicated in the shooting of Roberts are brought before the justice of the peace.

It will be up to the justice of the peace to have the warrants served and it is not known whether they will designate special constables or turn the warrants over to the mine guards to serve. If the arrests are made by the latter trouble is practically certain to result.

The miners held many meetings throughout the trouble section yesterday. The principal speakers were candidates for various offices on the

FOURTEEN MEN KILLED IN MINE FLOOD.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., July 24.—Fourteen men lost their lives today, when Evan Mines No. 2 of the Superba Coal Company, at Evan station, six miles from here, was flooded.

When the waters from the Jeaking Cool Spring reservoir came rushing down the mountainside this afternoon, only seven were in the mine. The water was seen going in the manway of the mine by William Gear, the pit boss; Solomon Wilson, a machinist, and Joe Borders, who were outside the mine. They rushed in and passed the warning along that the mine was being flooded.

The fourteen who perished were 4,000 feet back in the main line, in what is known as the sump, and the word either failed to reach them or they did not heed the warning.

The water rushed into the mine with such force through the manway that a hole 75 feet in diameter was carved out. The wires and families at the miners in the mines gathered at the manway opening, and picking out pieces of wood, stones and everything that they could carry, threw them into the waters rushing into the opening manway.

The rubbish, which was intended to keep the water from getting into the mine, hindered the miners who were rushing to the outside for safety. The men were overcome by the rush of the water up to their necks.

Officials of the mine say it will be sixty days before the water can be got out of the mines so that the bodies can be reached.

Every mine in the district was flooded this afternoon, and it is reported that three men were drowned in Lemont mine No. 1, a half mile from the Evan mine. There have been no railroad trains in or out of Uniontown since noon and street car service is at a standstill.

Many thrilling escapes from the death-dealing water were narrated by several survivors of the disaster this evening as they gathered about the mine entrance to await news from the

CHIEF OR FIRST RESURRECTION.

Pastor Russell's Address to Bible Students—Pastor Speaks in Glasgow—"The Rest of the Dead Lived Not Again Until the Thousand Years Were Finished"—Explanation of Doctrine That Has Proved Puzzling to Many Believers and Unbelievers.

GLASGOW, Scot and, July 28.—Bible Students of this vicinity numbering hundreds have held a three day's convention. One session, attended by several thousand, was addressed by Pastor Russell twice. We report one of his discourses, based on Rev. 20: 5. It was announced that next Sunday he will address a similar convention in London. He said:—

The resurrection of the dead seems to be the most difficult thing in the Bible for the worldly minded to grasp by faith. This must be because the human mind instinctively realizes the majesty of the Power and Wisdom necessary to the production of the same individuality which lived and thought centuries ago, before passing into the silence of the tomb. The Bible makes no denial of the stupendousness of the resurrection miracle—so far beyond the widest flights of human imagination—it confesses this and calls upon us to exercise faith in the great Creator, the Omnipotent One, whose greatness we can but feebly sense and surely cannot comprehend.

Hence, the doctrine of the resurrection of the dead, from its first announcement in the Scriptures, has called for the strongest faith on the part of believers and has excited the greatest amusement of unbelievers, who seem to find it easier to believe anything than respecting the dead. Undoubtedly this is the reason why so many who give evidence of several intelligence accept the absurd theory that when a dog dies he is dead, but when a man dies he is more alive than ever.

Those properly claim to hope for ever-lasting life, but not having faith enough to believe in the Divine power to perform the resurrection of the dead they are driven to the theory of Plato. Indeed who has not heard Plato quoted by ministers and other learned men when discussing the future life? They do not quote Jesus and the Apostles, because the explanations of Jesus and the Apostles are all to the contrary, proving that the dead are dead, and that the only hope of a future existence is by a resurrection.

JESUS ANSWER TO THE SADDUCEES.

Note the answer of Jesus to the Sadducees of His day, who, we are told, specially denied the resurrection of the dead. Jesus answered, "That the dead are (to be) raised was shown to Moses at the burning bush," when God's message was, "I am the God of thy fathers, the God of Abraham and the God of Isaac and the God of Jacob." (Mark xii. 26; Acts vii. 32.) Jesus commented that God would not declare Himself to be their God if they were dead in the absolute sense that brutes die. Jesus' argument was that the fact that God still recognized them as persons who's dead implied that their souls merely slept and will be granted a resurrection of the dead, in God's due time and in better bodies—under more favorable conditions than those under which they died.

We remember that St. Paul's tracts and sermons abound in references to the dead. We call to mind his great resurrection chapter (1 Corinthians xv), in which he declares that "As all die in Adam, so all shall be made alive in Christ—every man in his own order." (Verses 22, 23.) He does not say that every man is alive, but that they shall be made alive in the resurrection. The intermediate state he declares is a sleep, from which, by Divine arrangement through Jesus they will all be awakened in the resurrection morning at and after the second coming of Christ.

We remind you afresh of his positive statement that if there is no resurrection of the dead, then all whom we have supposed have fallen asleep have perished. (Verses 16-18.) But that God is able to raise all the dead he declares is demonstrated by the fact that He raised up Jesus from the dead on the third day; and so likewise on the third day of a larger scale—the third thousand-year day from the time Jesus was raised—God will raise up all those who have died because of Adam's sin.

That Third Great Day, the Millennium, will be the Great Seventh Day or Sabbath. So to speak, our Lord gave Himself a Ransom-price in the Fifth Day, from which the Seventh would be the Third Day, the day of the world's resurrection—"the last Day"—the end of the present Week of 7,000-year days in which sin and death have reigned, ushering in the glorious Epoch when God's will shall be done on earth as it is done in Heaven.

THE CHIEF RESURRECTION.

The tenor of all the Scriptures is that the Church alone will participate in the First or Chief Resurrection—the word in general we have no share in it. Hearken to Jesus' words on this subject, and note their explicitness of statements to the effect that all who participate in this First Resurrection will be the elect overcomers of this Age, and they will be the Royal Priests, or Priest-Kings, of the next Age, in which the world will be dealt with, and so far as willing, uplifted from sin and death. He says, "Blessed and holy are all they that have part in the First Resurrection; on such the Second Death hath no power: they shall be priests unto God, and unto Christ, and shall reign with Him a thousand years."—Revelation xx. 6.

The word in this text rendered first signifies chief, foremost, superior. It will indeed be first in order of time, but not the particular thought in time. It is superior. Its superiority rests in the fact that all who share in its blessings will not only attain life, full perfect and everlasting, but additionally they will receive life on the highest plane, being made partakers of the divine nature, by the "change" which this resurrection will bring to them.—II Peter 1. 4.

The sharers of this resurrection will not only receive ever-lasting life, but more, they will thereby be made death-proof—immortal in the Divine sense, in which it is declared that God alone hath immortality. God has also given immortality to our Redeemer in His resurrection, and has promised the same to the elect Church, the Bride, the Lamb's Wife, in this First Resurrection. Aside from these, so far as the Bible teaches, this special kind of immortality goes to no other creatures in the Universe.

Even angels, both the holy and the fallen, possess only the ordinary immortality known as everlasting life—an immortality or deathlessness dependent upon the Divine pleasure and supported by necessary elements of Divine provision. The Church, on the contrary, sharing in this Chief Resurrection, will possess inherently of life, the same kind of immortality possessed by Jehovah Himself.

From the context it will be seen that none will participate in this Chief Resurrection except such as shall successfully pass their trial and be accounted worthy of joint-heirship with Messiah in His glorious Kingdom, for it is distinctly stated that they are to "reign with Him a thousand years."

SHARING "HIS RESURRECTION."

From what we have seen it must be evident to all of us that to gain a share in this Chief Resurrection is to gain the great Prize held out before us in the Gospel Age—the Prize which our Lord referred to as the "Pearl of great price," for which a man would be willing cheerfully to sell all that he has that he might purchase it.

It will be admitted on all hands that the great Apostle Paul is represented amongst the loyal ones who sacrificed every earthly interest, aim, hope and ambition that he might attain the Kingdom blessings and joint-hairship with Christ. We are therefore deeply interested in St. Paul's words respecting his hope, his sacrifice and his anticipation of attaining a share in this better resurrection, which he styles "His Resurrection"—namely, the resurrection of Christ.

The Scriptures continually maintain the thought that Jesus is the "Head or the Church which is His Body," and that these saintly Elect constitute the members of His Body. Carrying out this figure, the whole Body, all the members, should share in the same resurrection as that experienced by the Head—the Redeemer. And to this the facts agree. More than eighteen centuries ago our Lord Jesus was raised from the dead by the Father's power.

St. Paul declares that because of His obedience in carrying out the Divine Program as our Redeemer—even unto death—"wherefore God hath highly exalted Him, and hath given him a name (honor, station), above every name (except His own—He is excepted), that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, both of things in heaven and things on the earth." (Philippians ii. 9, 10.) To this end we must all be changed from earthly to heavenly nature, because "Flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom."

It seems a long time indeed before even our Lord's resurrection and the resurrection of His Mystical Body, the Church class (Col. i. 18, 24), but the period is long only from our limited human standpoint—not from the Divine standpoint, in which a thousand years are as one day. (II Peter iii. 8.) He who brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus, that Great Shepherd of the sheep, will bring us also (from the dead) by Him," and with Him, as members of His Body.

It is to this that St. Paul refers saying, "I count all earthly things but as loss, * * * that I may win Christ (win a membership in His glorified Body—in the Kingdom class) * * * that I might know Him and the power of His resurrection (that I might experience that great power of God which in the Redeemers case lifted Him not only out of death, but to the very highest plane of existence, the divine nature, with its glory, honor and immortality). * * * being made conformable unto His death, that I might share also in His resurrection."—Philippians iii. 7-11.

Oh the Apostle gives us the key to his hopes; he did not hope that the Heavenly Father who had raised up Jesus a manifestation of His holy unto death before He could prove Him with immortality at His own right hand—he did not expect that the same God would not also share in that great glory and honor, except as he shou'd have the mind of Christ and shou'd demonstrate similarly his loyalty to God even unto death, by being conformed to Christ's death.

There is a lesson here for us. It is in vain that we shall hope to share the resurrection of Christ if we fail to share His loyalty, His ignominy—to be dead with Him to the world, its praises, its ambitions, its rewards. "If we suffer with Him, we shall also reign with Him." Only those who endure even to the end, to that reign of glory will be through the power of "His Resurrection"—the Chief Resurrection.

"BUT THE REST OF THE DEAD"

The statement of our text that the rest of the dead will not live until the thousand years are finished again emphasizes the fact that Messiah's Kingdom is to be the means of restoring to human life the race redeemed by the precious blood of Christ. Only when the thousand years are finished will the work of restitution be completed and the world of mankind be in a condition to be judged, tested and proved worthy or unworthy of everlasting life.

It is very easy for all to grasp the thought that Messiah's Kingdom is to last a thousand years, and that all who shall be alive at that time, all who shall be born during that period, will participate in the wonderful blessings and privileges which it will bring to the human family. They are ready to see that the resurrections of giving an equal opportunity to those of our race who have gone down into death with either no knowledge of Christ, as was the case for four thousand years, or with too limited knowledge to benefit them, as has been the case during the past two thousand years, and today, only this year respecting the "rest of the dead" stands in their way. I should be glad if any such are present here today, because I know I can relieve them of their difficulty. Yes, I shall be glad if my words through the press shall reach many others who have been perplexed by this Scripture.

It is not necessary for us to set this Scripture aside, even though all Bible scholars know, or should know, that this portion of Revelation xx. 4, 5 which relates to "the rest of the dead which live not again until the thousand years are finished" is spurious—that it is not found in any of the old Greek manuscripts. It is supposed that it got into the text, not through any desire to corrupt the same and falsify the record, but that in the days when the manuscripts were copied by pen, some copyist made this memorandum on the margin of his manuscript as a helpful thought, and that other copyists, using his manuscript, supposed it to be a part of the original and incorporated it in the text.

However, the additional words are in no sense in conflict with the facts, which are these: Adam, created in his Maker's likeness, perfect, was alive in the sense that he enjoyed perfection of life and that he had a right to a life everlasting, except as he should forfeit the same by disobedience. The moment he disobeyed God's command he came under the sentence of sin, namely, death. From that moment onward he was reckoned dead, even though the dying process lasted for more than nine hundred years.

Similarly, all of his posterity, from the Divine standpoint, are dead, "children of wrath." Jesus carried out the same thought in His teaching, saying, "Let the dead bury their dead." Only those who have accepted Him as their Life-giver are even reckonedly considered alive, from the Divine standpoint.

And so, throughout the thousand years of Messiah's reign, "All in their graves shall come forth," "every man in his own order:" but they will still be, for the Divine standpoint, judicially dead—without the right to everlasting life. The work of the Lord Jesus, as the Great Prophet, Priest, King and Judge, and the Church with Him, will be the instruction and assistance of these for their gradual uplifting out of sin and weakness and imperfection—toward perfection—toward acceptance with God—toward everlasting life. Such as reject the assistance offered will die the Second Death. Such as avail themselves of the blessed privileges of that time will attain human perfection. But still they will not have everlasting life accorded to them. They will merely be in a good, suitable and ready condition for God to grant them everlasting life, if they shall stand His tests.

The tests for eternal life will come at the close of the Messianic reign—when the great Mediator between God and men, having accomplished His work of restitution for men, shall deliver over everything into the hands of the Father—the hands of Justice. Everlasting life will not be given as a matter of mercy, but as a matter of justice—to those who shall demonstrate their loyalty and worthiness of everlasting life. The mercy of God will be exercised in the bringing of them to this condition, by the perfect provision in word, deed and thought will be possible.

The great temptation which will then come to all the world, through the losing of Satan's chain, Revelation's permission of evil in the world—will demonstrate which of these resurrected from the dead God can approve and consistently grant the great gift of eternal life. All those who fail in their trial will be destroyed with Satan in the Second Death, while all who prove their loyalty to God, acknowledged worthy of everlasting life.

Thus the rest of the dead, aside from those now on trial, the Church class, will not live in the full sense of Divine recognition as worthy of everlasting life, until the thousand years of Messiah's reign shall have ended.

But, beloved brethren, much as we are interested in the glorious blessings that the Messianic Kingdom shall bring to the world of mankind, the Lord wishes us to be specially interested in the glorious opportunity and privilege which He has accorded us of having fellowship with our Redeemer in the suffering of this present time, and being counted worthy to share with Him in the glory which shall follow—into which the faithful will be ushered by the power of the First Resurrection.

IS IT WORTH WHILE.

Joaquin Miller.)

It is worth while that we jostle a brother,
Bearing his load on the rough side of life?
Is it worth while that we jeer at each other,
In blas—ness of heart—that we war to the knife
God pity us all as our pitiful strife!

God pity us all as we jostle each other;
God pardon us all for the triumphs we feel,
When a fellow goes down; poor, heart-broken brother,
Pierced to the heart—words are keener than steel,
And naught's so far woe or for weal.

Were it not well in this brief little journey,
On over the isthmus, down into the tide,
We give him a fish instead of a serpent,
Ere folding the hands, to be and abide,
For ever and aye, in dust at his side?

Look at the roses painting each other;
Look at the lilies all at peace on the plain;
Man, and man only, makes war on his brother,
And dotes in his heart on his peril and pain,
Shamed by the brutes that go down on the plain.

Is it worth, while that we battle to humble
Some poor fellow traveler down into the dust?
God pity us all! Time too soon will us humble,
All men together, like leaves in a gust.

All of us humbled down into the dust.

An Exclusive Church.

An old darkey wanted to join a fashionable city church and the minister, knowing that it was hardly the thing to do, and not wanting to hurt his feelings, told him to go home and pray over it. In a few days the darkey came back.

"Well, what do you think of it by this time?" the preacher asked.

"Well sah," replied the colored man. "Ah prayed and prayed an' the good Lawd he says to me, 'Rastus, Ah wouldn't bother mah head about dat no mo.' Ah been tryin' to get dat church makes I'm to de last' twenty years, an' Ah done had no luck."

ONLY A SACK OF CEMENT.

(By Mrs. C. E. Keller.)

As I rushed forth one morning,
With thoughts of the busy day,
I stumbled and had nearly fallen
Over a burden that I beheld my way.

Twas only a sack of cement,
But to me seemed more,
Because it had not been molded.
When the water was applied.

As I gazed all 'round about me
There were no signs of life,
Grand domes, or in they cottage,
Where love is said to abide.

All formed from the cement in season,
And my heart have a cry of pain,
Lest the gifts to me He had given,
Had been watered with truth in vain.

Never to be used by the Master?
Never be shaped by His hands?
Never to do his bidding?
Never to heed His commands?

Oh! who can picture such sadness?
Oh! who can measure such woe?
Oh! take my life, Master, and mould it
While the water and truth overflow.

Oh, grant that I never may stumble
A fellow in a song the way,
But while the water of Truth is flowing
Crystallize my life each day.

Into His perfect image;
Then I shall be satisfied,
When I shall awake in His likeness,
And in His presence abide.

TRIBUNE APPRECIATIONS.

Washington, D. C., July 23.

In renewing my subscription to your excellent paper I am indeed glad at the same time to add my tribute of praise and commendation to the many which appear in its columns from week to week relative to the liberal space being given to the publication of the Good tidings of the coming Kingdom. It seems indeed most pitiful in stating that a journal devoted to the interest of the laboring classes find having at heart their real welfare should be thus able to point out to them a genuine hope of deliverance through the Kingdom of God's dear Son. Such, Sir, "They shall not build and another inhabit; nor plant vineyards and another eat the fruit thereof, but every man shall enjoy the labor of his own hands," etc.

Tell the whole world the joyful tidings,
Speak of the time of rest that nears,
Tell the oppressed of every nation
Jubille last a thousand years.

With very best wishes,
S. C. KENDALL.

New York, July 25.

Enclosed please find money order for renewal of my subscription to your worthy and valuable paper. The many letters of appreciation which appear in the columns of the Tribune are well deserved. Pastor Russell's sermons, the Sunday school lessons and question columns stand side by side with the most powerful influences of the day in giving the public the proper conceptions of the Divine character and its purposes. It is a great privilege to know "The Truth" and to stand for it, in this evil day, and God has provided wonderful blessings to those who do so.

Yours for the Truth,
WM. F. EUSTACE.

Ohio, July 26.

Just a few lines to show my appreciation of your featuring of Pastor Russell's Sermons, the Question Box, Sunday School Lessons, etc. My subscription to the Tribune expires in September, but I shall certainly expect to receive it. In the expectation of seeing the afore-mentioned features continued.

Respectfully yours,
MRS. H. C. SWAN.

Indiana, July 29.

I will say I appreciate your paper very highly for the full report of Brother Russell's Sermons and the good clear plain type you use in your valuable paper. Enclosed find P. O. order for the renewal of my subscription and the other for two new names for which I rejoice to send you. Wishing you much success in your noble work of helping to spread the Truth.

WILLIAM DARBY.

Washington, July 29.

Enclosed please find money order for renewal of my own subscription and the other for a new subscription for a friend of mine who of late has become very much interested in the reading of Pastor Russell's Sermons and the other religious features. Be assured, dear sir, as long as you continue to furnish Pastor Russell's Sermons in such clear type I will remain a subscriber and recommend your paper to my friends. May the Lord bless you with the riches of his grace in the years of

Sincerely yours,
F. SPEAKTRA.

New York, July 25.

Having just returned from Washington, D. C., where I have been in attendance at the International Bible Students Convention, it seemed to me that this would be a very appropriate time to express my thanks to you for the very prominent part you are taking in spreading the Glad Tidings by printing the Sermons of Pastor Russell. Every issue is filled with excellent one. Considering the many good features the Tribune may well be called the "banner" newspaper.

Gratefully yours,
MRS. P. H. HULST.

Virginia, July 29.

On the 6th or 7th of July I renewed my subscription for your excellent paper through society at Brooklyn.

I am so thankful God permitted me to be zealously interested in this matter which is foolishness to the worldly wise. Faith in this matter is the "gift of God," and those who feel no interest should know and will finally learn that they are not gifted in this measure. Pastor Russell's Sermons are very dear to me, for I know him as a man as true as the gospel he preaches.

Sincerely,
J. R. LIEDY.

Canada, July 26.

I enclose an amount for the continuance of your good paper. It has been a regular visitor for several years and weekly I look for its arrival. While I am interested in labor news, being an honorary member of the International Association of Machinists, yet I am particularly interested in Pastor Russell's Sermons, the Question Box, the Sunday School Lessons and the correspondence of the very many and apparently ever increasing number of Mr. Russell's admirers. There must be a reason for this admiration. I ask myself what is the cause of the popularity of his presentation above Scriptural lines?

Well, I do not presume to speak for others but I can perhaps express my own opinion.

For years I had a desire to know something of our Father's Word, His plan and purpose. I knew He had a plan and a purpose, for He says so, but in vain I looked to the so-called shepherds of our locality. I called upon a number of them, asked them questions for information, for I was hungry to know. I was particularly interested in the 19, 20, 21 verses of the third chapter of Acts, but do you know, that the Bibles here I called on did not know one thing about those times or "refreshing," "restitution or all things spoken."

At that time I was a trade unionist and a Socialist, and I believed the little was God's word, and was glad to read that there were better times ahead, so impressed by the words to think that the toilers some day would sit each one "under his own vine and fig tree," that "they would build houses and inhabit them, plant vineyards and eat the fruit thereof." That was all the most ardent Socialist could ask, that was his who's platform, but so, not a preacher knew a thing about it. I was taught like the majority of others, that the few saintly ones would go to heaven, the vast majority to torment and the earth would be burned to a cinder.

Socialism I saw was being permeated with those who thrust aside the Bible, because they believed the preachers were its true representative, but I am glad I stuck to the Bible and saw that the shepherds were "hirelings," not interested in the good pasture for the flock.

In a word, Mr. Russell's Studies in the Scriptures made me see. I saw at once that here was a key to the Scriptures that churchianity had lost the key. I am still rejoicing in the "key" but more so in the treasure-casket it unlocked, truly I find there the "gospel," "good news," "glad tidings," which also I be unto all people, but more precious to me is the "hope set before us" that "if we suffer with Him we shall reign with Him." I desire to express thanks for the blessings that have come to me through the columns of the Tribune.

Respectfully,
J. C. WATT.

Massachusetts, July 27.

I am so well pleased with the Tribune each week that I look forward to the day it comes every week. I cannot take up the space to enumerate all the different features of interest with which it deals, but I think Pastor Russell's Sermons are the most interesting feature. They do indeed fulfill the prophet's words in Isa. 61: 1, 2, also Lu. 4: 18, 19.

Blessed are the poor.
JNO. A. McMANN.

Ohio, July 27.

Your valuable paper, as a weekly visitor to our home is greatly appreciated. The plain type and newsy columns excell all other periodicals, but the features which we appreciate above all else, is Pastor Russell's Sermons, Everybody's Bible Questions and the International Sunday School Lessons and the Letters of Appreciation from so many friends of the Truth. This feature alone spreads a rich feast of food for many far from readers; and it is difficult to understand why any minister of the gospel (Good News, Glad Tidings), would object to this presentation of Bible Truth, unless he has been fed on Creed Husks for a time, he has become dyspeptic, unable to appreciate God's rich provision from the store-house of truth, (the Bible), now due to be dispensed and appreciated by the household of faith. So long as your paper continues this feature I shall surely continue to be a subscriber.

Sincerely yours,
H. C. TEMPLE.

NOW!

If you have kind words to say,
Say them now,
Do a kindness while you may,
Tomorrow may not come your way,
Loved ones will not always stay;
Say them now.

If you have a smile to show,
Show it now,
Make hearts happy, roses glow,
Let the friends around you know
How you love them, are they so:
Show it now.

Conversely, if we suffer, if we are distressed, miserable and unhappy, we may know that we have been guilty of excess. Disease is excess. Pain is an expression of excess. Its cure is poise, moderation, equanimity. Consequently, the remedy for every defect is beauty, proportion, organic adjustment.

First, then, know yourself as a bounded being. Discover your needs and tendencies.

Then obey Nature's way of realizing the ideals of beauty and love through gradual evolution, and adjust yourself to Nature's requirements, knowing that impatience is ugliness.

POPULAR MECHANICS!

CLOTH FROM TREE WASTE.

Silk and Canvas Made From Wood Pulp in Germany.

From Germany we can learn how to make the most out of a tree in an industrial way, for in Germany a tree which is not wood is worth little more than three-fourths of a cent; for a cent a pound is converted into artificial silk worth $2 a pound and into artificial bristles of cellulose acetate worth $4 a pound. Thanks to the German chemist, trees may now serve for clothe a man, says the Scientific American. A whole industry has sprung up in the last decade for the express purpose of scientifically converting wood into cloth—wood, moreover, which would otherwise be wasted in fashioning round tree trunks into rectangular boards and beams. In Saxony, for example, a yarn called "xylolin" is made from paper as well as directly from wood pulp. From that paper yarn, twine, cord, carpet, imitation canvas and even whole suits of clothes have been made, all of them proof against the action of both hot and cold water. A large corporation has built a factory not far from Berlin for the purpose of making "artralla" yarn from paper, of which there are fairly large tracts in Germany. Like its cousin "xylolin," "artralla" can be worked in the same to produce whole pieces of cloth which in their essence are nothing but transformed trees.

The whole German cellulose and artificial silk industry is a brilliant example of what efficiency means in the utilization of wood. The production of artificial silk from wood is alone a triumph of the application of science to industry. The credit for the original discovery belongs to Chardonnet. The process that he devised has not been very radically changed to this day. An ether alcohol solution of nitrocellulose is employed. At first the liquid was squirted through a fine opening, the resulting thread congealing in cold water. But the pulley is composed of a tube with a liquid interior. As it emerged from this fine opening it was rolled perfectly. It was spun into a thin filament later. Nowadays very fine openings are used as small as 3/800 of a millimeter.

Self Registering Weighing Machine That Counts the Loads.

A new type of automatic self registering track scale, which can be operated by the movement of a hand lever or wheel, but preferably by a small electric motor is being built by a scales company of Milwaukee, Wis., says Popular Mechanics. The scale is fitted with three registering dials, which indicate the net weight of each load, the second records the total of all the net weights passed over the machine, and the third counts the number of loads.

The action of the loaded truck coming upon the scale platform starts the weighing and recording mechanism by closing a clutch, causing a worm which is part of the shaftyard to revolve and carry the pulley weight until it reaches the balancing point. The instant the beam drops this weight stops traveling, and thus the net weight of the load is immediately accurately recorded. The pulley weight returns at high speed to the zero position as soon as the load is removed, and the scale is ready to receive a new load.

Disinfecting Shops.

To disinfect a room having machinery in it is difficult to do for many reasons. Sulphur cannot be used, as it injures the machinery, and corrosive sublimate is harmful to the flesh on the metal. The following method will be found satisfactory: The room should be saturated with steam and tightly closed. In a few minutes a goodly amount of formaldehyde gas should be liberated by a formalin lamp which can be secured at any drug store, or if this cannot be had a quantity of 40 per cent formalin may be purchased, an ounce for each room, and placed in a tin pan and heated by setting the pan on hot sand or clay. The heat method is to heat the sand in an oven while steaming the room. After the room is well moistened with sand holding the pan should be placed in the room and all openings tightly closed. After a few hours the room should be well aired.

THRUST OF A PROPELLER.

Simple Apparatus For Determining Its Power at Propulsion.

A convincing way of determining the thrust of a propeller, whether of the type used for aeroplanes or of the type used on boats, is by employing some degree of steven seasons and jeered as simple apparatus, says the Scientific American. At the right of the drawing may be seen a bracket upon which the engine that drives the propeller is mounted. This bracket may be taken to represent the boat if a marine propeller is being tested. A line runs from the bracket or the boat over a single pulley fastened to some fixed support, and to the line is attached a weight. The latter may consist of a bag filled with stones or scrap iron and weighing twenty-five pounds. An ordinary twenty-five pound spring scale is then attached to the pulley at one end and to the line at the other with a little slack.

The entire motor weighs only thirty pounds and is operated by two storage batteries weighing twenty pounds each. A clamp is provided to attach the motor and propeller to the stern of the boat, and the batteries are placed in the boat's bottom. The motor develops a quarter horsepower and runs at 2,000 revolutions per minute.

When the propeller is started it must first lift the weight attached to the line before it commences to pull on the spring scale. The thrust of the propeller will equal the amount registered on the scale plus the weight of the bag. If the propeller draws the spring scale out to its full extent a second twenty-five pound bag may be added to the line. Thus with a single twenty-five pound scale it will be possible to measure thrusts running above 50, 75 or even 100 pounds. To be sure, a certain allowance must be made for friction on the bearings of the pulley, but this will be negligible, particularly when the thrust is heavy.

UTILIZING SEAWEED.

Japanese Method of Manufacturing Isinglass.

Six kinds of seaweed are used in the construction of Japanese isinglass or kanten, the method of manufacture being described as follows in a recent United States consular report:

The seaweed is first cleaned, each kind separately, to remove shells or other adhering matter and then washed clean with water. The washed seaweed is placed on a mat and dried until its color becomes white by the action of the sun. Frost aids the operation takes place during September and October, and when bleached the weight of the seaweed is decreased nearly one-half.

After bleaching the six kinds of seaweed—in the proportion of five, tengkusa, four; Misaki, three; Hirakusa, three; Nabbo, four, and Ohikusa, three—are all put together in a pot and cooked for about fourteen hours, until they have become soluble. The liquid is then strained through a cloth and a box with a bamboo sieve on one side, from which it runs into a cistern. From the cistern the liquid is boiled into trays about three and a half feet long and three inches deep. After remaining in the trays for about twelve hours these are placed on a low stand, and the isinglass is cut into strips three inches wide and twelve inches long with a knife and ruler. These strips are then put into a long closed wooden box (the ends of which are three inches square, one end being open and one filled in with a wire sieve) and pushed through the sieve end to the form of long fine strips. The isinglass is then placed on a low stand, which is covered with a clean mat, and dried in the sun during the day and frozen during the night for a period of three weeks during January and February, being watered at midnight.

A Disappearing Lake.

A few weeks ago a small lake near Jacksonville, in Chesterfield county, began to sink out of sight and by night fall had dropped about twenty feet. It was calculated that about 20,000,000 gallons of water had disappeared, and there was much local speculation and some anxiety as to what the phenomenon portended. The geologists, however, soon set all fear at rest by the following explanation: The area is honeycombed with salt deposits. There are ancient salt workings beneath the lake. The sudden subsidence was due to the water's breaking through the bottom and finding its way into some subterranean salt bearing strata. Here it will become impregnated with salt and eventually be pumped to the surface again with its load of salt for commercial use.

To Restore Rubber.

People using articles made of rubber that frequently lose their elasticity through oxidation may restore the material to its original condition by a simple process. Soak the part in a mixture of one part of ammonia to two parts water. This is particularly well adapted to the restoring of rubber bands, rings and small tubing which are ready to become dry and brittle.

OWNER DIDN'T KNOW ONE OF HIS OWN PLAYERS.

One of the New York American pitchers told a funny one recently. "I was pitching," he said, "for a team out in Rockaway Beach one Sunday when a big stout spectator whom I didn't recognize at once came up to me and said, 'Say, young fellow, didn't you belong at the hilltop? We've got a pitcher that twirls just the same as you do.' The spectator was one of the Yankees' owners. 'No,' I said, 'I never saw those fellows play.'

"The next day I went to the club's office to see the secretary on some business and related the incident. He laughed and said, 'Then you're the find I heard about this morning.' It was a good joke. He didn't know one of his own players."

BROOKLYN TABERNACLE BIBLE STUDIES

THE SAVIOR'S TEACHINGS

THE KINGDOM A PRIZE.

Matthew xiii, 44-52—Aug. 6.

"Seek ye first the kingdom of God and His righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you."—Matthew vi, 33.

TODAY we have further precious lessons from the Great Teacher respecting His Kingdom.

The parable of the "Treasure hid in the Field" is not one of the parables which are expounded. It is people, therefore, are left to exercise their judgment of its meaning, under the guidance of the Holy Spirit and the light shed upon it by other Scriptures. Indeed, there might be more than one application of it.

But our preference of thought is that the Great Teacher referred, not to Himself, but to those whom He instructed. By virtue of His own covenant of sacrifice, the Kingdom was already provided for Him, and He, in turn, is the Father's agent, inviting those who had ears to hear, and hearts to appreciate, to become members of His Kingdom class.

He recommends that those should view the Kingdom after the illustration of this parable. He tells us that they should sell all in their journeying they saw a field for sale at a certain price, and suppose, upon examination, they found it to contain a great treasure. The treasure might consist of very excellent soil, especially suited to their purpose, or of a valuable vein of precious metal, or of mines buried overtures ago and forgotten by men. In any event, the owner of the field more than to others who might find it. In such a case any one of ordinary intelligence would be willing to invest everything that he possessed to acquire the title.

"Seek first the Kingdom and all the rightthings shall be added unto you."

So the Master declared to those who heard Him then, and to us who receive His words now, that He has information to give respecting the Great Treasure, a Priceless Treasure, which can be obtained only by the expenditure of time, energy and the investment of everything of value. The Great Treasure is the share in the Heavenly Kingdom that by accepting the terms of discipleship we may become not only sons of God, but heirs of God and joint-heirs with Jesus Christ our Lord to His heavenly inheritance.

A Pearl of Great Value.

In the days of our Savior pearls were among the most precious of jewels, and the larger and more nearly perfect the pearl the greater its value. The Master used this familiar thing as a matter as the basis for a lesson on the value of the Kingdom. The Merchant Man was in search of "goodly pearls," a person in every respect that he considered it cheap to give everything that he possessed to become its owner.

This, said the Master, illustrates the value of the Kingdom, with its glory, honor and immortality, which I am inviting an elect, saintly little flock to share with Me. Those who prize it properly will show their appreciation for the amount they will be willing to pay for it. Whether a man be wealthy or poor, learned or ignorant, influential or otherwise, the cost of this Kingdom Pearl will be—his all.

The wealthiest or most talented person in the world could not obtain a share in that Kingdom if he took but one atom of his possessions; the price of the Kingdom is self-sacrifice, even unto death, and nothing less will secure it. Nor would any sacrifice that we could make secure a share in this Kingdom unless the divine arrangement of sacrifice should first be made acceptable in God's sight through the precious merit of our Redeemer's sacrifice.

The Parable of the Fish Net.

We are not to think of the Kingdom as a net, but that the embryo Kingdom resembles in some particulars a net, in which were gathered all kinds of fish. This is a parable of the embryo Kingdom during it relates to a work done in this Age, in connection with the finding of the "little flock" who will constitute the Kingdom in glory. The Lord during this Age has not been seeking all kinds of people for membership in the Kingdom especially, and dealing with, only the "elect," only the saintly.

But, incidentally, a variety of other kinds of fish have gotten into the Gospel Net, some from worldly ambitions, some because religious systems are in good measure a social field. There because of social privileges and standing, others because they would use religion as a cloak for business enterprises, etc.

The parable tells us that "when the net was full it was drawn ashore" and the fish gathered into the fishing vessel. Who can say that the opportunity for entering the "net" as one of the true "fish" of the kind the Lord is seeking may not be almost at an end? Who can say that the Gospel Net, with its full complement of churchianity of every style, will not soon be drawn ashore that the suitable, the elect, may be gathered into the Kingdom?

BIBLE QUESTION BOX

YOUR BIBLE QUESTIONS WILL BE ANSWERED IN THIS BOX, AS FAR AS WE KNOW THE ANSWER, IF SENT TO THE EDITOR OF THIS PAPER

Q.—Is "hell" to be destroyed? What do you understand by the following words, "And death and hell were cast into the lake of fire"?—Rev. xx, 14.

Answer.—The word "hell" is from an old Anglo-Saxon word helea, and originally meant—to hide or conceal. The word in its true and primitive sense signifies—the concealed or hidden state. And this is the proper sense of the word. The translators of the English Bible used the word hell to translate the Hebrew word sheol and the Greek word Hades; and properly so, for these words all signify the same thing—the hidden, dark state of the dead. There is not the slightest intimation of fire and brimstone or eternal torment in the right signification of either of these words, but the opposite, for the condition of death is plainly described in the Bible as one of unconsciousness, silence, etc. (See Psalm vi. 5; xxxi. 17; Ecclesiastes ix. 10.) If hell were a place of fire and brimstone how absurd to cast it into a lake burning with brimstone! (Rev. xx.) This "lake of fire" suggested by Bible scholars as being the forceful symbol of destruction. Therefore, whatever it is into it is represented as being destroyed.

Q.—Who is the "Prince of this world," mentioned in the following Scripture texts: John xvi. 11, and John xii. 31? (Rebekah).

Answer.—There are three great Ages or Dispensations of time outlined in the Scriptures. The first of these referred to as "the world that was," and the second as "the world that now is." And the last as the "world to come wherein dwelleth righteousness." The "world that now is," or "this present evil world," is the one over which Satan is the "Prince" or ruler. The Apostle elsewhere refers to Satan as "the god of this world." (II Corinthians iv. 4.) It is because Satan is the ruler over this present order of things, during this dispensation, that it is termed an "evil world."

All will agree that evil is very much in evidence, and that the influences of the past and present are naturally inclined towards sin and unrighteousness. How difficult it is for right now, and how easy it is to take the downward way! Our Lord is not ruling over the nations now, but will not until the appointed time for Him to take unto Himself His great power and authority and establish His own Kingdom in the earth. Then, as the Scriptures declare, "the kingdoms of this world will become the Lord's and His Christ's and He shall reign for the Ages of the Ages." (Revelation xi. 15.) This agrees with the Savior's words when He said—"My Kingdom is not of this world."

Q.—"Agree with thine adversary quickly, whiles thou art in the way with him, lest at any time the adversary deliver thee to the Judge, and the judge deliver thee to the officer, and thou be cast into prison."—Matthew v, 25. In what way are we to agree with the adversary? (Weston.)

Answer.—The term "adversary" is a general one, and means an opposer. It is sometimes applied to Satan, the great opposer of the Lord and His people. The adversary mentioned by the Lord does not refer to Satan but to the Divine Law which had been given to the Jews. Owing to the imperfections of its flesh no one could keep the perfect Law of God, and therefore it became an adversary in that it condemned them to death. The Lord Jesus, now preaching to the Jews in the end of their dispensation of favor and extending mercy to them by offering them justification by faith, and not by the deeds of the Law, which they could not observe. Hnd the Jews, as a class, agreed with their "adversary," acknowledging that they were condemned under it, and accepting the terms of salvation offered by the Lord Jesus, they would not have been delivered over to the Judge, the just judge of God, and then turned over to the "officer," the time of trouble, when the city of Jerusalem was destroyed and they as a nation ceased to exist.

Q.—"And the Lord said, Simon, Simon, behold, Satan hath desired to have you, that he might sift you as wheat: But I have prayed for thee, that thy faith fail not: AND WHEN THOU ART CONVERTED, strengthen thy brethren."—Luke xxii, 31, 32. Are we to understand that Peter was not converted at the time of the first recorded sin, and what is the significance of his having left all to follow the Lord? (No. 521.)

Answer.—Peter was one of the most prominent and active of the Apostles, and by his zeal and energy he naturally became a leading one, as he himself probably realized in a measure, and the others doubtless conceded. In the fifth verse of this chapter it is set forth that the Apostles strove among themselves, as to which of them should be accounted the greatest, which, no doubt, took a leading part in this altercation. Because of this disposition of self-exaltation he was specially exposed to the attacks of the Adversary, and therefore, the Lord Jesus prayed for him that he might be delivered from the snares of Satan. Knowing that His prayer would be answered He could say to Peter, "When thou art converted (from this disposition of desiring prominence and exaltation over the others of the Apostles, to a condition of humility and meekness, then) strengthen thy brethren."

Q.—Is "spirit" to be destroyed? What do you understand by the following words, "And death and hell were cast into the lake of fire"?—Rev. xx, 14.

Answer.—The word "hell" is from an old Anglo-Saxon word helea, and originally meant—to hide or conceal. The word in its true and primitive sense signifies—the concealed or hidden state. ## Prospects of Well Organized Strike to Prevent London Dockers Being Defeated--Havelock Wilson and Tom Mann Start National Campaign--Rivelli, the French Sailors' Leader, Describes the Great French Strike and Conditions in France.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

LONDON, August 1.—In the ninth week of the London transport workers' strike after many weeks of semi-starvation and exceeding privation and just when Lord Devonport, the despotic ruler of the London docks, seemed likely to succeed in carrying out his threat of not only breaking strikers' hearts but rubbing their faces in the mud, a distinct change for the better has taken place. This follows directly upon the return to this country of Havelock Wilson, the seamen's leader who went away on a world tour after the successful settlement of the ships firemen's strike of last year. He took immediate counsel with the executive of the Sailors and Firemen's Union and then with the London strike committee which have the present dispute in hand. Armed with this data Tom Mann, who has finished recuperating after his recent imprisonment. Both Mann and Wilson are apparently of the opinion that mistakes have been made in the war the present strike was first called and afterwards conducted. They recognize, however, that this is not the time for recrimination.

The result of the deliberations has been the decision to carry the fiery cross to all the leading ports of Great Britain. The next few days will be passed by Mann and Wilson visiting Hull, Scotland, Glasgow, Liverpool, Cardiff, Bristol, Southampton, etc. These visits will discover how far the organized transport workers and seamen in these ports are now ready for a national strike and your correspondent expects to be able to report very interesting and momentous developments next week.

Between the present dock strike in London and that of 1889 there is no contrast. Apart altogether from any of the divergent views aroused by the present strike of dock employers there was in 1889 a volume of public sympathy which is absent today. The financial support given to the dockers during the first struggle was unique, not only in amount but in spontaneity. A public subscription of $243,936 was raised in a very short period. The strike lasted over four weeks, and the amplitude of the funds at the disposal of the strike leaders allowed them to make arrangements of a most effectual and comprehensive character. The Webbs, in their "History of Trade Unionism," make this comment: "A public subscription solicited by John Burns (then a poor man and a dockers' leader and now a member of the cabinet governing England and in receipt of official salary of $25,000 per annum with an entree to all the most fashionable functions organized by the aristocracy and the royal court of England) to organize an elaborate system of strike pay which not only maintained the honest docker, but also bribed every East End loafer to withhold his labor." All the worst features of a great strike were absent, and with at least enough for sustenance to distribute among the men and their families the terrible aspect of downright destitution—so prevalent now—were absent. As another natural result there was not violence or breach of the law.

Instead of a strike of sullen resistance and starvation, the 1889 struggle was a strenuously aggressive movement. This was largely owing to the forceful personality of Burns and to extraordinary controlling and organizing capacity. The men were at the time of the outbreak without any organization or any funds. But so urgent and irresistible was the work of its moving spirit that unexpected influences were enlisted and large sums of money raised as though by magic. There was no precedent for such a public enthusiasm as was aroused amongst poor and wealthy alike. In Australia the "Dockers' Tanner" (the "tanner" in English slang is the sixpence or twelve cent piece and the strike was for that rate of payment per hour) was as popular as here. All the Australian papers published telegraphic account of the strike from day to day, with descriptions of the dockers' wrongs, which produced an unparalleled and unexpected result." Public subscriptions were opened all over the Australian continent, and money poured in from all sides. The outcome was that over $150,000 was remitted to London by telegraph. The end of the strike, it will be remembered, was brought about by the voluntary mediation of Cardinal Manning and Sydney Buxton, who induced the dock directors to concede the whole of the men's demands, a delay of six weeks being granted to allow the new arrangements to be made. In all our industrial records there is no other instance of such a mass of organized and penniless men being reduced to perfect discipline and made aggressively effective so perfectly and so rapidly.

The text of the bill introduced into the British House of Commons by Ramsay Macdonald, the leader of the Labor party in Parliament, to make arrangements, come to voluntarily between employers and workmen in the Port of London legally enforceable on the whole trade was issued on June 24. Section 1 provides that whenever and so long as an agreement between employers and workmen in or about the Port of London concerning wages, hours and other conditions of labor is registered by the Board of Trade under the provisions of this Act the terms of such agreement shall be implied terms of every contract for the employment of a workman in the Port of London, and any agreement concerning wages, hours or other conditions of labor in

CONGRESSIONAL REPORT ON U. S. STEEL CORPORATION.

WASHINGTON, Aug 3.—The report of the majority of the committee of the House of Representatives directed more than a year ago to investigate the United States Steel Corporation was submitted to the House today by Representative Stanley of Kentucky chairman of the committee.

The report was signed by the chairman, and Representatives Bartlett of Georgia, McGillicuddy of Maine, Beall of Texas and Littleton of New York, Democrats.

Representatives Gardner of Massachusetts, Danforth of New York, Young of Michigan and Sterling of Illinois, Republicans, dissented from the report of the majority.

J. P. Morgan and his associates are held up as being the beneficiaries of enormous profits realized from the overcapitalization of the subsidiary companies of the Steel Corporation and later of the corporation itself.

Judge E. H. Gary and his dinners to steel manufacturers are charged with a scheme by which prices and territory were controlled by the Steel Trust after pooling agreements were discussed.

Former President Roosevelt is indicted for making the control of the Steel Trust absolute and is charged with public responsibility for the gigantic stature which the trust has attained.

The United States Steel Corporation is flayed as an enemy of organized labor, accused of lowering the sociological conditions of its employes and of contributing to American industry workmen and work methods under American and foreign to the best interests of labor.

Principal stockholders of the Steel Corporation are accused of exerting a powerful and injurious influence on

PITTSBURGH LEADS TRADE REVIVAL.

In commenting upon the report of July bank clearings Pittsburg it is well to note that the prosperity they reflect is considerably above the country's average. This is not saying that the whole country is not experiencing good times. The truth of the matter is that business was seldom been better in the United States as a whole than it now is, excepting a very few years when there was a phenomenal "boom"—such a boom, in other words, as is too exuberant to be welcome and is almost inevitably the omen of disaster.

There is no "boom" character to the present business activity, least of all in Pittsburgh. It is not the culmination of years of credit inflation and business skyrocketing. On the contrary, we have just emerged from an exceptionally long period of liquidation and business caution, and the business activity reported from all parts of the country rests on the most substantial sort of foundation. It is no Jonah's gourd growth but sound, solid stuff, accompanied by unusually small speculation. As before remarked, Pittsburgh is perhaps the busiest place on the entire map. Chairman M. Schwab—the latest of the big manufacturers to be interviewed—says, the steel mills are full to overflowing with orders. A good deal of this business was taken at comparatively low prices, but prices will improve in the fall when this low-priced business has been cleaned up, and then the prosperity of the iron and steel trade, and of Pittsburgh that trade's chief center, will take on new emphasis.

Pittsburh's July bank exchanges beat the total for any July on record. In fact, the only two larger months since the Pittsburgh clearing house was established were January, 1906 and April, 1907, when the most gigantic kind of a "boom" was rapidly approaching its climax. The bank exchanges are such an indisputable barometer of business conditions that they make the pessimist at the present time look ridiculous. He is a carpenter, however, to repeat what was said in the beginning, namely, that while the country as a whole is experiencing genuine prosperity, Pittsburgh is experiencing it in exceptional degree. Thus, while it is generally agreed that the demand for common labor here far exceeds the supply, the most recent report of the New York State Bureau of Labor declares that there is still considerable unemployment in various portions of that state, though the amount is rapidly decreasing. There are several reasons for Pittsburgh's taking the lead in the prosperity revival. One is the extent to which the labor disputes have been settled by the municipal improvements, especially the cutting down of the hump. When these improvements were being debated, it was promised that they would create abundance of employment and thus stimulate trade activity and serve as prosperity promoters, and the promise has been more than made good.

THE CHURCH AND THE WORKINGMAN.

According to a writer in one of the religious denominational papers, the church and the workingman are beginning to understand each other. If this is true —and we believe it is—it is a good thing for the church, for the workingman and the world. Christianity is essentially a working religion. Its Founder was a workingman. Although the sublimest of men, He made labor sanctified by being a carpenter. Not only did He labor Himself, but He chose workingmen for His disciples. The church would be unChristian if it were not for those who work. Not only does its origin consecrate it to them particularly and exceptionally, but all the teachings of Jesus emphasize this particularity. It was to the poor and the hard-working that He made His most earnest appeal. "Come unto Me, all ye who labor and are heavy-laden," were His words, "and I will give you rest." He did not send away the rich when they came to Him, but He did tell them first to sell their goods and become poor for the common sake and THEN follow Him. In very truth, if the church is not the workingman's it is not Christ's.

There has been forgetfulness among Christ's ministers in some places. They have not always remembered Who it is that they serve. But if they have occasionally failed to preach the Gospel as He bade them preach it, denouncing the unjust as well as the unrighteous and refusing to give their blessing to the oppressors of the poor, the betrayal of the great Friend of the lowly has not been for long There can be no real or lasting community of sympathy or interest between the proud and overrich of this world and the meek and lowly Jesus. Nor should the poor abandon Him. He never failed to be their champion His gospel is the one deathless indictment of human greed and selfishness. His law is summed up in the great commandment of love—to love God, in the first place, and in the second place, to love one's neighbor as one's self.

And love and unselfishness are fundamental principles of the labor movement, also. To help one another is its vital aim. Just as the Socialists at their international headquarters at Brussels have in the front of their assembly hall a gigantic portrait of Jesus, so might every labor organization well have the image of the Carpenter of Nazareth over before it, with His precepts in the hearts of its members. The workingman who allows the rich to drive him from the church is giving them an advantage and a shelter which the true Head of the church never intended them to possess. The church and the labor movement should go hand in hand. We believe they will. The one should be the right hand, the other the left hand, of the divine spirit of unselfish love which is yet to redeem and exalt human life and transform the universe. The writer whom we have already quoted understates, rather than overstates, the truth in the following:

"The labor movement has a great ethical value, which is so unappreciated and misunderstood. If it were not so primarily and intimately ethical, then there is no question but it would have died long ago. It maintains lecture courses, encourages social features which are uplifting in character, presenting high ideals, and urges better living. A man of good morals and a degree of intelligence soon realizes that he cannot force a particular measure upon others without the good will of his fellows. Nor should the poor abandon Him. He never failed to be their champion His gospel is the one deathless indictment of human greed and selfishness. His law is summed up in the great commandment of love—to love God, in the first place, and in the second place, to love one's neighbor as one's self.

CARMI THOMPSON, PRESIDENT TAFT'S NEW SECRETARY.

CARMI THOMPSON, who succeeded Charles D Hilles as secretary to President Taft when Mr. Hilles resigned to become chairman of the Republican national committee, was taken from the interior department to the White House. Mr. Thompson is from Ohioan and is known to the Republicans of that state as "a man who knows how to do things." His record has won for him high respect. He did splendid service for the president in the Ohio state convention and aided materially in swinging Ohio's delegates at large to the president. Mr. Thompson is forty-one years old and a native of West Virginia, where his father was a farmer. The family removed to Ohio when Carmi Thompson was four years old. He was graduated from the Ironton high school and the Ohio State university. After being city solicitor of Ironton in 1896 he was elected to the Ohio legislature and was selected speaker of the house of representatives in 1905. In the same year he was elected secretary of state and was re-elected two years later. On Jan 7, 1911, he resigned to accept the assistant secretaryship of the department of the interior, which position he held until chosen presidential secretary.

And love and unselfishness are fundamental principles of the labor movement, also. To help one another is its vital aim. Just as the Socialists at their international headquarters at Brussels have in the front of their assembly hall a gigantic portrait of Jesus, so might every labor organization well have the image of the Carpenter of Nazareth over before it, with His precepts in the hearts of its members. # MOVE MADE TO ORGANIZE THE STEEL WORKERS

The American Federation of Labor to Attempt to Organize the Steel Workers Into One Massive Organization. Pittsburgh is the First Place Selected for the Opening Gun--The First Circular Issued.

Simultaneously with the publication of the results of the congressional investigation of the United States Steel Corporation (See another column) the American Federation of Labor makes a sensational announcement affecting the steel industry. The Federation proposes to unionize the steel mills of the country, believing that the most favorable conditions in two decades now exist. The opening gun of the campaign fired the following preliminary circular from the Federation headquarters in Washington, D. C:

"Now is the time when you, the wage-workers in the iron and steel industry, must feel and know your helpless you have become. You have acted as individuals. Do you know and see how powerful you could become if you were to unite and become organized

"Because of your unorganized condition you have become the victims of low wages, long hours of labor, working under most onerous conditions, and this, despite the fact that the cost of living has constantly increased so that the wages paid you has not nearly kept pace adequately meet it. You are powerless to protect yourselves against accidents which are frequent, against sickness which comes to you often, against sickness because of industrial depression, against the ill with which the workers in all industries have at times to contend, particularly when unorganized. Most of these ills can be minimized, or eliminated, when you unite.

"All of the ills incident to your industry can not be abolished at once, but they can be changed and reduced by thorough organization of all the workers in the great iron and steel industries regardless of whether you are the highest skilled mechanics or unskilled laborers.

"The time is at hand when the iron and steel workers, regardless of their mechanical ability, their creed, color, or nationality, should be bound together by a true spirit of fraternity and solidarity—features which are essential if you hope to abolish wrongs, attain rights, and improve conditions.

"The American Federation of Labor has but one purpose for its existence —to protect the rights and to promote the interests and welfare of the working people of our country, that they may be justly dealt with, and that the workers may take the position in life and in our affairs which is justly their due.

"The officers and organizers of the American Federation of Labor have from time to time organized and attempted to organize the iron and steel workers in various places where the industry is located, but because the iron and steel corporations are financially so powerful, it was an easy matter for them to close down the plants where the organizing work was being carried on and to discharge those workers who showed any desire for, or gave any assistance toward, forming a union, thus disrupting the union and starving their employees into submission.

"The American Federation of Labor has decided to start in operation a plan to organize all the skilled and unskilled workers in the iron and steel industry, which only needs the support of the workers to insure its success. The plan is as follows:

"This will be known as Circular No 1, and is to inform you of the plan to organize. It will be followed by another circular at—Circular No. 2—which will explain the aims and objects of organized labor and describe in part the conditions of the mill workers of the present time and will outline what can be accomplished by thorough organization.

"After you have read this circular and Circular No. 2 and given them careful consideration, Circular No. 3 will follow.

"Circular No. 3 will be distributed at the same time in various ways to all workers in the iron and steel industry in the United States and Canada. It will inform all workers the day and date of a meeting, and the name and address of the place in which the meeting will be held, so that all will have the opportunity of attending the meeting, and when you attend, you will understand that similar meetings are being held in every town, village and hamlet in America where the iron and steel plants are located.

"The objects of having the meetings at the same day and date is to effectually prevent discrimination. If you are true to yourselves and to each other, you will be in attendance at these meetings.

"The circular will be printed in the languages spoken by the employees in the mill industry.

"We earnestly render much assistance to this movement started in your own interests. If, when, writing to your friends and relatives across the water, you advise them that it would be to their advantage if they did not come to America for a year or two.

"Read this circular carefully and hand it to your friends, and watch for Circular No. 2 and Circular No. 3.

"Most of the iron and steel workers

INDUSTRIAL DISEASES.

THE report just issued by the American Association for Labor Legislation and containing the full proceedings of the second national conference on industrial diseases shows how little has yet been done either by Congress or the Legislatures of the States, to protect workmen in this direction. It is disclosed that in three years the Illinois commission found 578 cases of lead poisoning in that state and that a hasty and incomplete study disclosed 121 cases of this one disease of occupation in New York City alone. Many of these were due to the absence of regulations requiring the use of simple protective devices and practices which, it is pointed out, are in general use in Germany and England under legislation providing for the payment of insurance benefits in the case of sickness directly due to industry.

What has actually been accomplished in this country is a tale soon told. It consists in the recent prohibition by Congress of the manufacture or sale of "phossy jaw" matches and the enactment of eight states during the past year of the bill prepared by the Association for Labor Legislation requiring the compulsory reporting of certain of the more evident industrial diseases. This is not much, but it may be true, as the association's report declares, that it demonstrates a "growing appreciation of the need of regulating the conditions among what the 30,000,000 wage earners of this country carry on their employment.

Lead poisoning, compressed-air illness (suffered by workmen building the Hudson river tunnels and similar constructions), tuberculosis caused by constant breathing of dusts—these are at least a score of occupational diseases which annually carry off thousands of workers and yet which are entirely preventable, as the successful regulations in other countries show. This is a matter of which vote-seeking politicians say comparatively little for the reason that it is so practicable and they prefer to make promises to which would be easier to dodge when the day for performance arrived. There is no greater service than can be rendered to the wage-earners of American than just this. The American Association for Labor Legislation is doing a great work in keeping the subject before the people and A striking example of what can be done, and eventually must be done, is furnished by Illinois. The medical inspection of factories in that state is shown to have resulted in the reporting of 247 cases of industrial diseases from 31 manufacturing establishments during the first eight months of the law's operation. One plant is cited which had 72 cases of lead poisoning last August due to dry sand papering of lead paint. With the use of a simple respirator for the protection of these workers as recommended by the department, the hazard or this occupation has been so far reduced that there has not been a single case of lead poisoning in that particular establishment in the last four months.

Pastor Russell's Sermon

SAVED BY FAITH, NOT BY WORKS.

Still We Must Work Out Our Own Salvation—Pastor Russell in London—Mankind Will Be Redeemed Through Jesus' Death and by God's Benign Influence and Infinite Mercy Working in Them Through Him by Inspiring Promises of the Holy Scriptures—With the Bible as a Guide We Cannot Go Wrong, in Obeying the Divine Commands.

LONDON, England, Aug. 4—London Tabernacle was crowded both morning and evening to hear Pastor Russell. We report his evening discourse from the text, Not of works, lest any man should boast; for we are His workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them."—Eph. 2: 9, 10.

Ever since Brother Lather's day and his vigorous preaching of justification by faith Christian believers have been more or less perplexed in their endeavors to harmonize the Scriptural declaration respecting faith and works as related to salvation. Pastor Russell believes that in the clearer light God is shedding upon the pathway of His people today through the Bible they are enabled to comprehend with absolute clearness matters once forgot.

This, he claimed, does not signify that our forefathers were less loyal to God, nor less logical in the operation of their minds. It does, however, agree with the Scriptural declaration that we are living in the time when the wise of God's people are to understand the messages previously more or less hidden, but now, in due time, to be revealed.—Revelation x. 7.

The logical thought which appeals most strongly to every mind is that good works must be the basis of Divine favor and bad works the basis of disfavor. This led up to the child-summary of preaching, namely, "Be good and go to heaven; be bad and go to ——." Our Catholic friends, said the Pastor, carry the matter of good works to such an extent that they claim that some have laid up such stores of good works and Divine favor therefor that they are able to appropriate some of these to others; hence the claim that they may be appealed to in prayer and the give of their merits to others as a bounty or donation.

The Scriptural proposition is plain: it is that no man is perfect, that all through the fall are imperfect in mind and body, so that none can do perfect works. Their very best works would be unacceptable to God—imperfect. Instead of ignoring their imperfection God provided a Redeemer, whose obedience unto death He accepts as a sacrifice for the sins of Adam and his race. Evidently all imperfections of word or act resulting from that disobedience and fall will be completely forgiven. The race will be reconciled to God. Divine blessings will come to humanity and the earth, instead of the curse now resting upon them. The effect will be to give all mankind the fullest opportunity for rising up out of sin and degradation, imperfection, sorrow, death, alienation from God, ignorance, superstition, etc., back to the full perfection that Father Adam possessed at first.

But in order to regain all those blessings lost each member of the race will be required to appreciate the privileges of life eternal and Divine favor and will be obliged also to show his appreciation by striving against sin and co-operating with the Savior in the uplifting arrangements which will prevail for a thousand years, during the Messianic Kingdom.

PRESENT AGE SALVATION BY FAITH.

It is in the present Age only that salvation is to be by faith and not by works. True, the world in the next Age will not be faithless while making their progress in good works and being judged according to their works. They will be full of faith, but there will be abundant basis for faith. Knowledge will make their pathway clear as day. Demonstration will prove to them such things as God's people in the present time must accept by faith—"For we walk by faith and not by sight."

This Gospel Age, from the time of Jesus' first advent until the second advent, is the Age of Faith in contrast with the unsuccessful Age of Works preceding and the to-be successful Age of works to follow. The Pastor showed that during the Law Age, from Moses to Jesus, the requirement was works: "He that doeth these things shall live by them." (Leviticus xviii, 5; Romans x, 5.) Israel's failure was because of inability to do things perfectly—the things contained in the Law given to them at Mt. Sinai.

The New Law Covenant, which will be instituted by Messiah's Kingdom, will be on exactly the same lines as the old one, namely, works: "He that doeth those things shall live by them." The difference will be that Christ Himself will be the Mediator of the New Law Covenant, both able and willing to render all necessary assistance to all who will come back to harmony with the Father by Him. On the other hand, Moses, the mediator of the old Law Covenant, while ever willing to help his people, was not able to do so, because his mediation was based upon only typical sacrifices of bulls and goats and not upon the real sacrifice of Christ, which alone is able to make full satisfaction for sin.

"WE WALK BY FAITH AND NOT BY SIGHT."

The Apostle was here discussing the terms and conditions by which God is willing to accept the Church class of this Gospel Age. These, in the Scriptures, are called the Elect or select ones of the race. God is calling and drawing these out of the world for a special purpose and under special conditions, one of which is that only such as have great faith can belong to the select class.

There are some so born, under the Adamic conditions, that they have great difficulty in experiencing faith, even a little, and only after a thorough training could they exercise great faith by experiencing that transformation of the mind of which St. Paul tells us. (Romans xii, 2.) These are not to be blamed for having been born under less favorable conditions than some others. And so God has made provision for all such to come to a knowledge of the Truth and not merely to a faith in it, that they may be saved.

There are others more favorably born, so far as their mental make-up is concerned, who have been unfavorably born as respects environment and place. Born in heathen lands, where they heard nothing of the Message or God's grace, or where they heard it under such unfavorable circumstances that they could not appreciate it, these may indeed lose the special favors of this Age, which go only to those who do exercise faith; but they are not forgotten nor left out of the Divine Plan, but will share in the general blessings coming to the world through the Redeemer's Kingdom.

"WORK OUT YOUR SALVATION."

The favored class who hear the Message of Divine favor, speaking peace through the sacrifice of Christ, assuring them of the Heavenly Father's willingness to forgive their sins and receive them as members of the Body of Christ, are obliged to receive this Message by faith. What is there to prove that Jesus died and rose again? This must be received by faith. What is there to prove that the sacrifice which Jesus made met with Divine approval and that as a consequence all that come unto the Father through Him as their Advocate will be accepted? There is no proof except to the eye of faith and earth of faith. To the natural man these things are imaginable, and those who fully and consecratedly receive them are accused of being rather weak minded.

This step of consecration through the merit of Jesus brings them into such relationship with the Heavenly Father that He is willing to accept them and give them the Holy Spirit of adoption into His Family. Up to this point they have done nothing—merely believed—merely accepted God's gifts, favors, invitations, etc. Here our text applies, "Get of work lest any man should boast."

Every Christian takes these same steps of faith and consecration, or he is not a Christian. There are no other steps to take. True, indeed, as we approached God we thought to put away some of the filth of the flesh; but such endeavor to wash and free ourselves from sin cannot be counted good works. A good work is one that is done for God or for others. Merely seeking to cleanse our thoughts and words and deeds is not good works in the Scriptural sense—but, anyway, none has ever been able to purge himself, to wash himself, to cleanse himself—the successful Age of works to follow. The Pastor showed that during the Law Age, from Moses to Jesus, the requirement was works: "He that doeth these things shall live by them." (Leviticus xviii, 5; Romans x, 5.) Israel's failure was because of inability to do things perfectly—the things contained in the Law given to them at Mt. Sinai.

The New Law Covenant, which will be instituted by Messiah's Kingdom, will be on exactly the same lines as the old one, namely, works: "He that doeth those things shall live by them." # POPULAR MECHANICS!

ATTACHMENT FOR CLOCKS.

Device Enables Timepiece to Run a Year Without Rewinding.

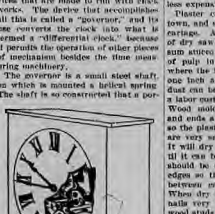
The attachment of a small device recently perfected by a Chicago clock expert will, it is accomplishes what is claimed for it, turn an ordinary eight day clock of standard make into a clock that will run more than a year without rewinding. Says Popular Mechanics. Not only it is claimed that the clock will run a year, but it is also stated that its power plant—its springs and the wheels that transmit their action to the series of the clock—can be used to operate other mechanical devices that are made to run with clock works. The device that accomplishes all this is called a "governor," and by its use converts the clock into what is termed a "differential clock." Because it permits the operation of other pieces of mechanism besides the time mechanism.

The governor is a small steel shaft, on which is mounted a helical spring. The shaft is so constructed that a portion of it can be expanded so that the amount of power from the helical spring can be regulated and no more supplied to the mechanism actuating the time measuring part of the clock than is absolutely necessary. The clock springs are so adjusted to the governor that when the shaft has been expanded and all the power in the unexpanded section has been used these springs automatically turn the helical spring to give it additional power. In this manner the clock springs proper are used into action for just the measuring only when the helical spring exhausts itself and there...re will keep the clock going for a much longer period than without such a device as the governor.

A clock equipped with a governor has actually run 418 days without rewinding. The tension of the helical spring is adjusted with a set screw, and it can be adapted practically to all standard makes of clocks



CLOCK THAT RUNS A YEAR.

New Type of Boat.

A principle absolutely unique in boat construction is now being tested by a foreign inventor who has devised a working model which has been successfully operated. A full sized passenger carrying craft is being constructed. It combines the principles of the catamaran or double hull with a propeller system that is unique. The latter consists of spiral flanges running the entire length of the shaft and floats which support the superstructure. These floats are of metal with air tight compartments and are spear shaped. They revolve on bearings at the points, where they are held by a steel frame. As they revolve the spiral flange, which is set at an angle of thirty degrees to the cylinders pushes the craft through the water with great force. The inventor claims that 90 per cent of power ordinarily lost in water resistance will be converted into forward energy, as the resistance is removed by the spiral flange, and nothing but revolving cylinders is in contact with the water. The engines on the superstructure will supply power.

Improved Quartz Glass.

Mr. Wolf-Burkhardt, a Swedish scientist, announces that he has discovered a new process for improving quartz glass. The new product is known as "spun-glass" and is especially suited to the manufacture of pipes, tubes, receptacles, flasks and other instruments used in chemistry. Most of the articles used for such purposes have been made of platinum.

The new process consists of adding to the raw quartz solutions of oxides of zircon, titanium and other metals difficult to fuse. The resulting product gives a transparent, glassy substance which melts at a temperature of 3,700 degrees centigrade. The advantage claimed for this material is that its strength is 20 to 50 per cent greater than glass, that when tested for bending and 10 to 30 per cent more when tested by pressure.

Damage by Lightning.

Investigations made over Europe seem to justify the belief that the damage by lightning, in the cities particularly, has decreased to a very marked degree in recent years, and it is explained by the presence of electric wires, which act as a protection in diverting the electric bolts. As the wires are put underground it is expected that there will be noticed a great increase in the amount of damage by lightning, and a return will be generally made to the use of lightning rods.

PULP LUMBER FORMULA.

Easily Made Material For Building Walls and Partitions.

The following is a formula for making a pulp lumber or board that will answer every purpose of a plaster board and is very inexpensive and easily made and can be made by every one supposed to do for himself, writes a correspondent of Scientific American. Plaster board is a very useful material in every home, but its sale is confined largely to having to order from the factory and await the coming round in the larger cities, and this pulp lumber can be made by anybody and is less expensive than any plaster board.

Plaster can be had in almost any town, and sawdust can be had for the asking. A mixture of seven pounds of dry sawdust to 100 pounds of gypsum stucco makes three square yards of pulp lumber one inch thick, and where the board is made thicker than one inch a greater per cent of sawdust can be used. It can be made at a labor cost of 3 cents per square yard. Wood moulds having adjustable sides and ends and a rubber covered bottom, so the plaster won't stick to the mold, are very satisfactory and very cheap. It will dry in a few minutes, and until it can be taken out of the mold it should be stacked perpendicularly on edge so the air will pass under and between each board until it is dry. When dry it can be sawed and holds nails very well. It can be used in wood molds to form a wall. For a real cheap wall only the joints have to be pointed, and then it can be papered. It will prove a very inexpensive and yet durable and comfortable home, and if made two inches thick and set between wood studs and such side plastered, and the result is a wall about as durable and fire resisting than the wall with with wood lath and plastered, and an inexpensive test will show the good merits of this material, which is possible for every person to make.

Saving Metal Waste.

In Germany the waste from machine and similar shops is now constantly disposed of by being pressed into the form of briquettes under a high pressure, and in this shape the material is easy to handle and has been found valuable for many purposes. The fragments of metal such as turnings, chips, filings, and so forth, are delivered into a large hopper which feeds the hydraulic press. When the metallic waste has gravitated into the hydraulic press the plunger descends, and slowly, but steadily, the mass is subjected to increasing pressure. By carrying out the task slowly the air displaced by the particles being forced together has time to escape, for if this another can affect its escape. Briquettes made by this method from cast iron turnings with a low percentage of phosphorus can be substituted advantageously for the white iron as used in malleable furnaces, while Bessemer plants and steel foundries having Siemens-Martin furnaces using scrap material find briquettes made from steel waste wrought iron turnings a cheaper and more efficient fusing medium.

Uses of Aluminium.

On account of its extraordinary lightness aluminium is a most useful metal in the construction of parts of automobiles, flying machines, etc. Its use for cooking utensils is well known, but probably the most important metal for use for automobile manufacture. After that would come its use as a conductor of electricity, for next to copper it is the most important substance for that purpose. Other things equal, the most necessary quality for a conductor of electricity is its conductivity. The most perfect conductor of electricity is silver, but the price of which, however, is obviously too high to be commercially available. After silver the best conductor is copper; then comes gold and next aluminium.

Luminous Metal.

For generations the peasants of Cornwall have handed down a legend that at night tin mines may be seen a faintly luminous metal among the rocks brought from the mines of the county. British scientists have proved that this story is by no means based on imagination. A specimen of the luminous metal has been sent to Cardiff in Wales, was sent to him from Portugal because of its shining character. He finds that it closely resembles artificially prepared salts of uranium and that its luminosity is due to spontaneous radio-activity. The light it sheds is stronger than that of nitrate of uranium. Upon parting with its water of crystallization the metal loses its luminosity.

Useful Fishing Line.

"That fishing song in the new opera is clever, don't you think?" asked the critic.

"No," replied the hard luck angler; "it isn't at all natural."

"No?"

"No; the lines are too catchy."

NOVEL FIRE HOSE REEL.

Always Ready For Service Without the Necessity of Unwinding.

The accompanying illustration is shown an ingenious fire hose reel for hotels, business places of all kinds and for homes. Its important feature is that the hose upon it is ready for immediate service without having to be entirely unwound.

The water connection is at one of the bearings of the drum, the reel being constructed with a wrought iron center having a tubed waterway. The hose used is of a noncollapsible type, and there is always a clear waterway, without danger of kinks, no matter how much or little of the hose is unwound.

CAN YOU BEAT THIS?

One catcher was behind the bat for both teams for sixteen innings in the Cotton States league game between Columbus and Yazoo City in Yazoo City, Miss., recently. In the second inning of the first game the Columbus catcher was hurt, and Chance was sent in to take his place. The Yazoo City catcher volunteered to keep the game going, and it was so agreed by all in authority. Yazoo City won both games.

SMELTER FUMES UTILIZED.

Manufacture of Acid Phosphate Cheapened Through Use of Gases.

The revival of agriculture in the south owes much to the natural deposits of phosphate which are found in Florida, South Carolina and Tennessee. Experiments have shown that raw rock phosphate will stimulate plant growth, but the process is slow, and the fertilizing elements may be made available most quickly by treating the rock with sulphuric acid.

On this account the successful manufacture of fertilizer from rock phosphate depends in great measure on a cheap source of sulphuric acid. A plentiful and cheap supply of sulphuric acid means a cheaper and a more readily available supply of fertilizer. The greatest demand for sulphuric acid is in the fertilizer industry. The greatest supply of raw material for this industry is found in the southern states, and the greatest demand for fertilizers also exists in this same section. Few industries, therefore, are of more importance to the south than the manufacture of sulphuric acid.

The sulphuric acid plants at Ducktown, Tenn., were installed with the purpose of disposing of the sulphurous fumes from the large smelters of the copper companies at that place. According to F. G. Lacey of the United States geological survey, who describes these plants in an advance chapter from "Mineral Resources of the United States For 1911," they have been very successful. They use what was, until their establishment, not only wholly a waste product of the smelters but also a menace to all the adjacent country. These acid plants have therefore produced at least three desirable results by furnishing a large supply of acid where it is most needed, by rendering valuable large supplies of sulphur hitherto worthless and by relieving the region of the fumes of the smelter fumes, thus making it possible to continue operating the mines and at the same time to cultivate the surrounding lands.

Wagner Is Great Ball Player.

Heinie Wagner of the Boston American has saved from a fall credit for being a great ball player. This assertion has a little something on a "Wagner" of the short field variety in the game. His work this season has been sensational. He pulls off difficult plays with an ease that deceives the fans.

Life is not so short but that there is always time for courtesy.—Emerson.

A LEGION OF DEMONS.

Mark iv, 35, v, 20—Aug. 11.

Mind is our throne and strength, a very prison and hell is troubles; therefore will we not fear, though the earth be removed, and through the mountains be cast into the midst of the sea."—Psalm xlvi, 1-3.

THE forepart of today's study is an account of a very severe wind storm on the Sea of Galilee. Jesus tired from His teaching and healing, in which virility went out of Him for the relief of the people, had gotten into one of the boats formerly used by some of His disciples in the fishing business, and still owned by them. The purpose was to cross the lake for a season of rest. The Master was soon fast asleep. Suddenly a terrible storm set in which appalled even those accustomed to such experiences. The fear came to Jesus and aroused Him, saying, "Master, carest Thou not that we perish" and He "awoke and rebuked the wind, saying, 'Peace, be still.' And immediately "there was a great calm."

The next at the head of this study draws to our attention another storm it pictures the great storm of trouble which is to be the close of the Age and suddenly burst upon the whole world of mankind and in which "Babylon the Great, the Mother of Harlots," "the great millstone will be cast into the midst of the sea." This same "time of trouble," in some Scriptures, is spoken of as a "whirlwind." The great work of letting loose "the four winds of heaven," that will be held until that time—Revelation vii, 1-3; Jeremiah xxv, 32; Revelation xvi, 17.

The storm at sea.

Again, this trouble is symbolized by a "fire," which will burn up not only the earth (symbolical of organized society), but also the heavens (symbolical of ecclesiasticism). Jehovah promises that this great unchristic blaze, will leave present institutions in "ashes." Upon the ruins, the ashes, of the blasted hopes and ambitions of society, political, scientific and religious, will arise the glorious Kingdom of Messiah to bless the world; and it will be as prophesied: "The desire of all nations shall come."

The next picture that coming "time of trouble" as a great "storm," which will entirely remove, or change the earth; "the mountains" of civil society, and curry the "mountains," the kingdoms of this present time, into the midst of the sea, irretrievable to do with anything in the great "time of trouble" and discontent with which this Age will close and Messiah's Kingdom be established.

On the other side of the Lake, as they landed, a man very much troubled in mind (II. Peter ii, 4), had gained access, and were in control of him. It was these that recognized Jesus and spoke through the man's lips.

The Bible's explanation of how some angels left their original perfection and harmony with God, and of why they seek to gain control of flesh bodies and commune with them through mediums and personate the dead, we have not the space to consider in this study; but as there are many today more or less under the demoniac influence—spiritism—we will send further information upon postcard request.

Jesus gave the demons the privilege they requested. The swine, like the man, were crazed by the strange influence which took possession of their brains. They ran violently down a steep place into the sea and were drowned. Meanwhile the man, released from his obsession, was again in his right mind, and praised God for his deliverance.

Those familiar with such matters claim that probably one-half of all the inmates of the insane asylums are persons obsessed by evil spirits, demons, without any organic disease of the brain. As we see wonderful cures on every hand that these evil spirits are paving the way for a great onslaught upon humanity.

Under the title of Psychic Phenomena spiritism is being examined by some of the deepest scientific minds of our day. They, like other spiritists, are deceived in supposing that the manifestations which come to them are from their dead human friends. The Bible alone makes the matter perfectly clear. It assures us that the dead have no power to communicate, and that all such communications come from the demons, who do not dare to tell who they are, for if they did, humanity would be on guard against them.

BIBLE QUESTION BOX

YOUR BIBLE QUESTIONS WILL BE ANSWERED IN THESE COLUMNS, IF YOU ARE INTENT TO THE BOTTOM OF THINGS

Q.—Are there not a number of contradictions in the Bible? And if the Bible is not in harmony with itself how can we say that it is inspired? (Pater.)

Answer.—There are seemingly many contradictory statements contained in the Bible, and these are due to several causes. One of which are the errors of translation from the original languages in which the Scriptures were written, into the various modern tongues. It is claimed that the Authorised and Douay Versions of the Bible are amenable to twenty thousand mistakes. The Revised Versions, both English and American have corrected many of these errors but not all. No one would claim that the translators were inspired. Another fruitful cause for seeming contradictions, is that many Scriptures have been taken from their proper connections by Bible expositors and interpreted to mean just opposite to what they do signify. In this way the Bible can be made to support any theory that inclination to one place it, and Judas "went out and hanged himself," and then in another place "go thou and do likewise." To those who "rightly divide the word of truth" (II Timothy ii, 15) there is not a single contradiction in all the sacred writings.

Q.—I confess to being a trifle skeptical as to the declaration of the Apostle (Revelation x, 6) to the effect that "there should be time no longer!" in the fury wherein he writes he would not be astrus as time is eternity measured off by sections. There will always be the duration from one event to another. Can you adjust this little difficulty so as to permit the light to shine through it? (W. A. T.)

Answer.—In all languages there are terms, expressions, and phrases occurring in which the meaning is only partly conveyed. Thus all of these must be interpreted, and specially so in regard to the Hebrew and the Greek in which the old and the New Testament Scriptures were originally written. All though the Authorized Version of the Bible will be found words and phrases which signify that these were supplied by the English translators in order to complete the sense of the text. Also, there are instances where the translators did not supply the necessary word or words to complete the meaning, and some misunderstanding has resulted. Such, for example, is the case with the expression of the Revelator under consideration. How simple the matter be come when the words are properly arranged and the missing one supplied! The passage should read "that the time shall be no longer (delayed)."

Q.—If Adam was perfect; how could he have sinned? It seems to me that a perfect man would have acted in a perfect manner. It is the imperfect individual that sins or acts unjustly. Kindly explain this matter as I am frequently brought face to face with this proposition. (Eva.)

Answer.—From the Scriptural narrative of the creation of man, it is evident that God, the Creator, designed to have an intelligent creature made in His own likeness, with an individual will capable of deciding for good or evil. Man has the power of willing to do as he, himself desires. Had he been created otherwise he would not have been in the likeness of God, but a mere machine controlled and directed by the Divine will. We may reasonably suppose that Adam chose to disobey the Lord because of his love for Eve. She had been deceived by the Adversary, Satan, and had partaken of the forbidden fruit, the penalty for which was death. Adam, realizing that she must die, deliberately chose to share her fate, as life without her would not be worth living. Undistinctly told that Adam was not deceived (I Timothy ii, 14), and we could conceive of no other motive on the part of a perfect man in disobeying the Divine mandate, than that of love for his bride.

Q.—Will you please explain Matthew xi, 12—"And from the days of John the Baptist until now, the Kingdom of Heaven suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force?" (T. M.)

Answer.—This is a prophecy relating to the Church, the Kingdom class, the "Kingdom of Heaven in its embryotic state. It has been remarkably fulfilled in the history of the true Church of Christ from the days of John to the present. The "violent," those of the Ishmael and Esau disposition, have always bitterly opposed and persecuted the Lord's true people, and apparently, have triumphed over the Kingdom of Heaven. Many Scriptures teach that this would be the condition of affairs in the world until the time would come when the Lord Jesus, at His second coming, would take unto Himself His great power and authority and establish His own righteous rule in the earth, overthrowing Satan's Empire and setting up the Kingdom of Heaven. The Apostle recommends the Lord's people to be subject to the powers that be (Romans xiii, 1-7), the worldly governments and dominions, but the time would come when these would be turned over to the Lord Jesus and His joint-heirs, and on the ruins of the old, selfish, evil, kingdoms and governments, God's Kingdom would be established, never to be removed.

Q.—A prominent clergyman in one of the leading cities of this country recently stated in a public discourse, that he, in common with most ministers of the Gospel, did not believe in a hell of literal fire and brimstone. He said that the people of this day and generation were too enlightened to accept the barbarous doctrine of a literal roasting and toasting, in actual fire. However, he claimed that the wicked would suffer in great anguish of mind in SPIRITUAL FIRE throughout eternity. Their torment would be a mental suffering and not a physical one. Can you tell me if this is the correct view, and if so, where in the Bible does it speak of "spiritual fire?" (Layman.)

Answer.—It is to be regretted that so many clergymen are wont to give expression to theories and ideas that are without the slightest suspicion of a Scriptural basis. There are so many conflicting theories and opinions that on the sea of religious thought that those who attempt to follow them without the guidance of the compass, the Bible itself, become wholly lost in the mists of intellectual obscurity. They are "at sea" indeed! The people no longer believe in the theory of a great furnace of literal fire and brimstone, and the few benighted clergymen, who still persist in trying to make the people believe in this awful teaching are merely wasting time. The time has come when it would be well for their interest and to the interests of the cause which they represent, to stand forth and tell the people that the Bible is the subject of the punishment of the wicked. The Bible clearly and unmistakably teaches that the wages of sin, and not eternal torment in any form, literal or "spiritual," mental or physical. See the following—Romans vi, 23; II Thessalonians i, 9; Acts iii, 23, 24.

Q.—Do the words "everlasting" and "for ever and ever" as used relative to the punishment of the wicked, mean an eternity of misery, anguish, and torment, or merely punishment for a season? Cannot the wicked be destroyed? If they are fire-proof and indestructible; then have they not eternal life as well as the righteous? And if they have eternal life; how then shall we understand the words of the inspired writer when he says "and ye have not the murderer hath eternal life abiding in him?" John iii, 15. (Sarcleus.)

Answer.—Let no one be deceived regarding the duration of the punishment of the wicked, as it is repeatedly put forth in the Scriptures that it is for eternity and not merely for a season. However, it is not a question as to the duration of the punishment, but it is a question as to the nature of the punishment. Here it is the point that many Christians have been confused. When the Apostle says, concerning the ultimate fate of the wicked, "they shall suffer everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord," they at once get the thought of the eternal feature of the punishment, but do not get the proper idea as to its nature; reasoning generally that "destruction" means preservation in fire and brimstone. Death is the punishment for sin. It is the penalty for disobedience. "The wages of sin is death" (Romans vi, 23), and when death is eternal, it is eternal punishment. There should be no question on this point. The Scriptural proposition is very plain. "The gift of God is eternal life, through Jesus Christ our Lord." The wicked who after full light and knowledge, refuse to accept of the grace of God as manifested through Christ, will never receive the "gift" of eternal life.

Q.—And I heard a voice from heaven saying, Write, Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth." Revelation xiv, 13. Who are the dead who die in the Lord, and how can a dead person die? (A. C. D.)

Answer.—There are three kinds of death mentioned in the Scriptures—the Adamic death, the sacrificial death, the death of Christ; and the "second death."

The Adamic condition of death, passed upon all the human family because of Adam's disobedience. The world of mankind may be regarded as a convict now under sentence of death—"As by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men," Romans v, 12.) The death of Christ is different from that of Adam and his posterity. Adam died as a convict; but the Lord Jesus died, not as a convict, but as a sacrifice for the sin of the world. His was a sacrificial death, and hence a Jubilee when He presented Himself in full consecration to God, and was "buried with" John iii, 30) when He died upon the cross, three and one half years later. From the Divine viewpoint, the Lord Jesus was no longer considered as a man from the time of His consecration; but was regarded as a spiritual "new creature." He was dead according to the flesh, and was alive according to the spirit. Thus it is with the true followers of Christ. Many as were baptized into Christ were baptized into His death." (Romans vi, 3, 5). From the time of full consecration to God, these are counted as being dead, as says the Apostle—"Ye are dead and your life is hid with Christ in God." (Colossians iii, 3.) These are the "dead who die in the Lord"—dying daily in the Lord's service, and in the service of the truth. (I Corinthians xv, 31.) See also Romans vi, 8; Colossians ii, 20.

End of Transport Workers' Strike--Enthusiastic Struggle of 100,000 Men Fails to Achieve Victory--Labor and Politics in Great Britain--Chairman MacDonald and His Government Appointment--South Wales Miners Reorganise Their Federation.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

LONDON, Aug. 5.—The transport workers' strike has come to a sudden finish just when it seemed to be on the verge of taking upon itself a bigger expansion and an added seriousness. The first definite news that the strike had finished after lasting ten weeks and plunging a male, female and child population of about 300,000 into great want and suffering, came out on July 27. At first, owing to a peculiar combination of circumstances it looked as though it was a false finish. After a series of daily meetings the strike could be properly declared ended, however, when the lightermen, the men who operate the long wide open barges in the Thames dock district declined to return to work on July 31. The stevedores and ordinary dock laborers had already refused but of course, their labors were for a day or two limited owing to the continued absence of the lightermen.

Harry Gosling, who is the lightermen's leader, and who with Ben Tillett led the London transport workers' strike, was able to announce to the lightermen that Lord Devonport had agreed that when the men returned they would find all the old agreements in full force except that shillowmen would revert to their former practice of engaging men within the docks. As a result of the strike last year the men secured the privilege of being taken on outside the docks for their daily work and these privileges they valued highly. The Port of London Authority declares that it will deal at all times justly and generously with its workmen and will be willing to consider any grievances brought before it either by the men themselves individually or by any particular union concerned.

All this seems very nice and proper but it does not disguise the fact that the men have been beaten. There is no need to recall now the various demands formulated two or three months ago in connection with which the strike was ordered. It is clear that the dispute was undertaken hurriedly and without due consideration of all the facts of the case and above all without the organized workers in other parts being consulted so that their help could be relied upon in case of need. The opposition to blame Ben Tillett for much of this undue haste is, however, being overlooked in view of the fact of the courage and unquenchable enthusiasm he has displayed in the face of a vindictive adverse press campaign. All through he has heartened the men wonderfully.

The proposed tour mentioned in my last letter which was undertaken by Havelock and Tom Mann was cut short owing to the sudden termination of the dispute.

The casual workers at the docks have been the great sufferers and the lightermen who have regular weekly work and can usually earn on an average fifteen dollars and more weekly have escaped the acutest want. At the moment it looks as though a good many years must pass before a strike in the London docks will be seen discussed upon. Still, we never know. The British trade union movement was never stronger than it is at the present time and it is generally imbued with a fighting spirit—more so amongst the rank and file, perhaps, than amongst the leaders.

The political side of the British labor movement will be included in with the last strike failure as an argument for the more complete and peculiar use of the political weapon by labor, but it cannot be said that the Labor party in the House of Commons has any special victories to detail thereof with recently. Two parliamentary by-elections have just been held. One of these vacancies was caused by the death of a Labor member and the other by the promotion of a supporter of the Liberal government. In the first mentioned constituency the Liberals put up a man against the labor candidate and the Labor party retaliated by putting up a Labor candidate against the Liberal in the second constituency. In each case the Liberal won leaving the Labor party with a loss of one supporter in the House of Commons, the party now numbering forty-one.

Ramsay MacDonald, the prominent chairman of the Labor party and who holds his seat in the House of Commons because no Liberal was put up against him in his constituency, has been appointed by a Liberal government a member of the Royal Commission on the Indian Public Service. This will mean the practical withdrawal of MacDonald from the House of Commons until the session of 1913. The Commission will spend two winters in India, will devote the intervening summer to collecting evidence in England, and will need several months after the visit to India to get the writing of the report. In the meantime the chairmanship of the Labor party in the House of Commons will devolve upon the vice-chairman, Mr. Parker. The Indian visit will begin in December.

The Minimum Wage Act is in full operation on the British coal fields now and great discontent exists in many districts at the awards made under the Act. Our colliers seem to generally feel that nothing can be gained per by relegating the awards daily rates of pay for coal getters.

The South Wales miners held a conference on July 24 in reference to the proposed reconstruction of the South Wales Miners' Federation which was recently involved in the national coal strike. There were present at the time 255 delegates representing 122,900 organized South Wales coal miners. A sub-committee composed partly of

BEARINGS ON LIABILITY ACT.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 10.—The Industrial Accident commission appointed by Governor Tener tonight made public a second tentative draft of the workmen's compensation act and a draft of an act to regulate the employment of women in industrial establishments. Since publishing the original draft of the workmen's act last May, the commission met in Harrisburg last month and heard criticism and suggestions from representatives of the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor.

The new draft will be distributed and public hearings will be held in Philadelphia September 3 and 4 and in Pittsburgh September 5 and 18 to hear further criticisms and suggestions.

Among the changes in the second draft of the workmen's act is a proviso that the receipt of benefits from any association, society, or fund, to which the employe shall have been a contributor, shall not bar the recovery of damages or of compensation provided for by the act.

HARRISBURG, Aug. 12.—In answer to the criticism and suggestions offered in response to its first draft of a law to give compensation to those injured, and to the dependents of those killed, the Industrial Accidents Commission, recently appointed by Governor Tener, has revised its work and yesterday issued a second draft of the proposed law. The second draft like the first is merely tentative and the commission will continue to receive suggestions and improve its work where possible. For this purpose hearings will be held in Pittsburgh and Philadelphia during the early part of September.

One of the most important changes shown by the new draft of the compensation act is that which provides

COAL PRODUCTION OF 1911

EW of the coal mining States produced as much coal in 1911 as they did in 1910, but for all that the decrease in production in the United States was not large. With business of all kinds undergoing a marked revival, it is likely the coal trade will show a marked improvement for 1912.

The coal production of 1910 amounted to 501,596,778 short tons, while the production of 1911 was 490,188,998 short tons. The decrease was only a little more than 1 per cent in quantity and the decrease in value was nominal. The fall off in output is attributed by the United States Geological Survey to the depressed condition last year of the iron and steel trade, which was reflected in the decreased production of coke. The time lost by reason of strikes was not sufficient to affect the industry.

The number of men employed in the coal mines of the United States in 1911 was 722,323. The average number of days worked in anthracite mines was 246 and in the bituminous mines 211. Pennsylvania, of course, continues to lead in production. That State's bituminous output was 144,721,305 short tons, and in addition there was an anthracite production of 90,494,667 short tons. There was a decrease in the bituminous coal which was more than offset by an increase in anthracite. West Virginia is next to Pennsylvania with a production for 1911 of 80,821,330 short tons, a decrease as compared with 1910 of some 3,000,000 tons. Illinois, which comes third, mined more coal in 1911 than in 1910, registering an output of 53,079,116 short tons. Ohio's 1911 production was 39,759,536 short tons, a decrease as compared with 1910. Alabama produced more than 15,000,000 tons, also a decrease. Indiana's output was 14,301,215, a decrease of more than 2,000,000 tons as compared with 1910. Kentucky's 1911 output was 39,706,529, compared with 44,625,819 tons in 1910. Tennessee's production was 6,432,156 tons, and Virginia's was 6,564,667 tons, a decline for Tennessee and a slight increase for Virginia.

Some of the smaller producing States increased their output and others barely held their own. The decrease in the production of bituminous coal compared with 1910 was more than 21,000,000 tons, and this decrease was mainly in three of the big coke producing States.

BRITISH WORKMAN'S INSURANCE LAW.

HE recognized spokesmen of labor in this country are looking to the spokesmen in Great Britain that the outcry against the insurance law is passing. It has the appearance of having been carefully worked up by employers and by the opponents of progressive government generally. Of course, some workingmen were imposed upon by it for a while, and naturally seemed to think that the insurance fund was going to be a burden to them. The complete petering out of opposition now indicates that those see the burden will fall mainly on other shoulders while they themselves are the sole beneficiaries. Somebody ought to send our friend the English working class his bad in power for a long time and to repudiate his pet measure for the abolition of old-age poverty would be a blunder that English labor is not going to commit. A letter sent out from the headquarters of the American Federation of Labor at Washington a few days ago says:

"The labor group in the British House of Parliament, in co-operation with David Lloyd-George, Chancellor of the exchequer, are quite elated at the prospects of the good effects anticipated from the working out of the insurance act, which went into effect July 15, and is another step in the great forward movement which began with the compensation act and the old-age pension measure."

Mr. George's own statement in regard to the act is that the national insurance act will help the mother at child birth and will inaugurate a great national campaign against consumption. Instead of devoting our strength to fight our neighbors abroad, we are now going to organize to fight social evils at home. I am convinced that it will be hailed throughout the whole country as one of the most beneficient measures ever effected by the people, and now that it will soon be in full operation we intend to press forward and put all hands to the great work of freeing the land which was meant for the use of the many, but which has drifted into the hands of the few. We must free it for the people and for their children forever."

The act insures against sickness and invalidity. In seven great selected industries it goes further and insures against unemployment. The selected industries against unemployment are those in the building and engineering trades, deliberately chosen for the experiment because of their especial irregularity of operation. More than fourteen million men and women will be included at the very outset. The initial cost of government sanitaria will be $7,500,000 and the annual allowance for upkeep and maintenance will be $5,000,000. The general pension features of the law apply to the whole of the industrial population, including the army, navy and mercantile marine. Insurance is compulsory for all employed persons in receipt of wages or salaries. Its administrative machinery is largely in the hands of the people interested in the main, trade unions and fraternal organizations. The rates of contribution and benefits are the same for all employed persons, regardless of age, provided they come into the scheme before July, 1912. The cost is divided among employers who will pay six cents per employe per week, the employe who will pay eight cents per week, and the government which will pay four cents per person per week.

The act does not interfere with the existing "compensation for injuries" act, of the "employers' liability" law. It is preliminary to the old-age pension act, persons reaching the age of seventy coming under the provisions of the old-age pension law. It makes special provision for women at the time of child birth. It involves a special effort to deal with tuberculosis. It provides for the preservation of forests and for plan and action, and so stimulates the growth of existing organizations like trade unions and fraternal organizations promoted to advance thrift and co-operative self help. It is compulsory features will be particularly helpful to those who heretofore have been shortsighted and thriftless.

AUGUSTINE BIRRELL, CHIEF SECRETARY FOR IRELAND.

THE MANHOOD IN THE PIT

REAT thoughts are sometimes uttered from unexpected places, this one, for instance—"A man may put me in a pit and keep me there, if he is strong enough. But I will not so that he will know that there's a man in that pit." It was a negro who said this. He was speaking of the wrongs of the negro race. It has a lesson for every man who feels that he is oppressed. Wrongs we must all endure, but the wrong is half undone when he who is in the pit keeps his manhood unscathed. Does your employment seem beneath you? Are you subject to humiliations? You may not be able to cure the evils from which you outwardly suffer, but you may make respectable, and even noble, the pit in which you are placed—by being a man.

Marcus Aurelius Antoninus said that nothing harms a man which does not make him a worse man. Slavery, pain, poverty, the wrongs of enemies—all these harm the enslaver, because they make him a worse man—harm, the inflicter of pain, and the creator of poverty, and the doers of the wrong—but not the person suffering these things unless he allows them to make him a worse man. Marcus Aurelius Antoninus was an emperor, and suffered only those wrongs which emperors suffer. But Epictetus, the slave, whose saying we quoted above, was of the same mind with him. To slave and emperor alike, the way is open to triumph over adversity by keeping manhood unimpaired. And remember this, that no class of men can remain free, if each one sees to it that so far as he is concerned there shall be a man in the pit.

Shackles fall from the limbs of real men. Individuals like Epictetus may be real men and also slaves—though Epictetus may finally rule his master by sheer manhood. But if all the slaves in Rome had been men like Epictetus, would they have remained slaves? No! And if every negro, and every wage slave in the land should suddenly develop high exalted manhood, the race problem and the labor problem would be solved—solved by the manhood of the very man involved in them. When men are in the pit they annihilate the pit. The greatest need of the world is manhood.

LABOR'S INTERESTS AT NATIONAL CAPITAL.

The Officials of the American Federation of Labor Give Their Views of the Congressional Report on the United States Steel Corporation--An Advanced but Truthful Document, Revealing Labor Conditions Which Must be Changed.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—The Congressional Committee which investigated the United States Steel Corporation under a resolution adopted May 4, 1911, which had been strongly urged before Congress for several sessions by the American Federation of Labor and other reform associations, has completed its report and it will be presented in Congress when the minority members of the committee have their reports completed.

It is urged that members of Congress be requested to supply applicants with copies of this remarkable document for use in trade union and central union libraries. From it these unions are gleaned. As a most important economic fact brought out in this investigation which has too often been overlooked is that the true measure of a man's work is the production per man per day, and not the mere amount of wage paid. This important fact should never be lost sight of in the all important question of cost production."

This statement is verified by a table which shows that the trust has secured more pig iron at a lower wage cost and sold it to the consumers at a higher price in 1909 than they did in 1902, and that they actually employed a lesser number of men in a lower number of days in 1909 than they did in 1902 in the State of Pennsylvania.

In 1909 the trust employed in the production of pig iron in Pennsylvania 14,921 men; in 1902, 17,161 men; in 1909 they worked 200 days, in 1902 214 days. In 1909 it cost the trust $2 cents for labor to produce one ton of pig iron, in 1902 they paid $1.25 per ton. In 1909 each man produced 3-4-10 tons of pig iron per day; in 1902 a man produced 1¼ tons per day. In 1909 the trust sold its pig iron at $17.44 per ton, and in 1902 they only got $15.64 per ton. The average wage in 1902 was $2.35 per day, or from $1.88 in 1903 to $2.06 in 1909.

The committee states that on June 17, 1901, six weeks after the Steel Corporation was organized and began operations, Mr. Charles Steele, a member of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., brought forward the following proposition at a meeting of the executive committee of the Steel Corporation, and the president was instructed to convey it to all the presidents of the subsidiary companies. This resolution was extensively discussed, and it clearly and emphatically displays the attitude of this great corporation toward labor, especially organized labor. Mr. Steele's proposition reads:

"That we are unalterably opposed to any recognition of union labor, and advise subsidiary companies to take a firm position when these questions come up, and say that they are not going to recognize it—that is, any extension of unions in mills where they do not now exist; that great care should be used to prevent trouble, and that they promptly report and confer with the corporation."

All of the evidence collected by the committee clearly shows how Americanism ignores fair play after they saw the attitude of the trust following this declaration. They considered they were not wanted in the work of the United States Steel Company, and the process of filling their places with hordes of laborers from Southern Europe began swiftly and has continued up to the present time. These foreign laborers were almost entirely from agricultural localities, they knew absolutely nothing about the conditions of iron and steel work, they were serviceable to fill the American labor unions.

They were absolutely unskilled and could only work as common laborers. In those of special, mutual, especially during the years when the Steel Trust abrogated its last contract with the steel and tin plate men in 1909, the trust openly and brazenly advertised in the Pittsburgh papers that they "need 1,000 laborers, limners, catchers and helpers, Syrians, Poles and Roumanians preferred. Steady employment and good wages to man willing to work; face paint and fire less charged." In response to this attitude of the Steel Trust toward American labor the committee impressively reports that "the result is that 50 per cent of the unskilled laborers are foreigners of these classes. With the guidance of a skilled American foreman such a way can work out results in unskilled labor production.

The profits of this system of employment go to the Steel Corporation, while the displaced American workmen suffer as they must. The committee also says that: "The daily lives and conditions of living of these laborers show conditions undesirable and far below what is ordinarily understood to be the American standard of living among the laborers of our country. Some of the cases are revolting, both as to sanitary and moral conditions. Taking the ordinary family as a unit, the wages paid, even if the head of the family is constantly employed, are barely enough to provide subsistence."

Many other truths concerning labor are brought out in this Congressional report, all of which corroborate the charges which have been made against the United States Steel Corporation by the American Federation of Labor, and which had been placed in the hands of the President of the United States and his Cabinet long before it was possible to secure this Congressional investigation, and the fact stands out prominently that the murderous employment of toilers in the employ of the United States Steel Corporation are little better than serfs in Europe during the Middle Ages.

Labor Tag Day Sept. 2

Tag day for the local labor organizations will be September 2 and the men and women who will help make the $5,000 needed for the Labor Temple debt will be the official badge used in the annual parade to be held that day. A feature will be the passing of the marchers in review before the monument of Thomas A. Armstrong, a former labor leader, which stands in West View park, North Side. This monument was put up by a stock company of this city. "Tom" Armstrong was founder of the National Tube Works in 1878.

Following the parade the annual outing will be held in Kennywood park. The committee has decided to invite the following to speak at that time: James Wilson, Cincinnati, O., international president of the pattern makers union; W. S. Hayes, general organizer of the carpenters' organization; Councilman P. J. McArdle, Attorney William D. Grimes and Rabbi Rudolph I. Coffee.

MAN'S FALL FROM DIVINE FAVOR.

His Condemnation by God as Told by the Bible—Pastor Russell in Paris. The Bible Teaches That Man Did Not Fall From a Heavenly Condition to an Earthly Condition, but From Perfection to Imperfection. The Penalty of Sin—Jesus' Death on Calvary, the Ransom-Price for Father Adam.

PARIS, France, Aug. 15.—Pastor Russell addressed large and attentive audiences twice here, once from the text, "What is man?" (Psa. 8: 4), which we report in part. He said:—

Although I have visited your great city several times, this is my first opportunity for addressing you publicly on the institution of your love. Most of the International Bible Students Association. Indeed, if I am rightly informed, Bible students have not been very numerous in your metropolitan splendors and pleasures. You have undoubtedly had or sought to have, but the great pleasure, the great joy and inspiration which come from an intimate knowledge of the Divine Word, the manna of your people evidently have never full experienced.

The present Pope, I understand, is not so highly appreciated amongst you as were some of his predecessors, but let me speak one good word for him, namely, that more than any of his predecessors he has sought to uphold the Bible, and in America at least he has urged upon the people Bible study. I am sure that he is right in this and that the greater knowledge we have of the true teachings of the Bible the greater will be our blessing and joy, both individually and nationally.

I have chosen for my topic on this occasion what I believe is an important one, yea, a vital question of deep interest to all humanity: "What is Man?" This great question the Bible alone answers distinctly and satisfactorily, as I hope I shall be able to demonstrate. The answer of Science to our query is at least in one respect right and in full accord with the Bible. Science tells us that man is as animal of the highest order—genus homo. The Bible agrees with this and declares man distinctly different from the lower animals, and also distinctly separate from angels and spirit beings. He is terrestrial, "of the earth earthy"—he is not spiritual, not celestial or heavenly. The earth, not heaven, was made for his home.

The Bible does tell of man's fall from Divine favor and of his Divine condemnation, but his fall was not from a heavenly condition to an earthly condition, of perfection to a dying condition of imperfection. The Bible teaches that if man had not sinned his life would have been everlasting, in earthly perfection, and that his home would have been an earthly Paradise in which he would have enjoyed the blessings and fellowship of his Maker.

The death sentence did not alter or change his nature, but merely forfeited his life and all of his blessings and rights which were dependent upon his life. The penalty was not, "To eternal torment shalt thou go, to suffer eternally at the hands of demons," but, "Dying, thou shalt die;" Thorns and thistles shall the earth bring forth unto thee," In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread—till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken, for dust thou art and unto dust shalt thou return." And of the fulfilled sentence of this Divine penalty against the sinner we are all witnesses.

AND YET HOW GRAND IS MAN!

As I stood by the ruins of ancient Memphis, where Joseph rose from being a slave to being the Governor, next to King Pharaoh, I was impressed with some of the mighty monuments which persist despite the ravaging hand of time. I said to myself, What is man? What is king of earth he is, and has been, notwithstanding his deterioration through sin and the fall! As I noted the sculptures of thirty-five hundred years ago I said, Truly the Bible is right when it declares that God made man in His own image—that to man, the highest earthly creature, the great Creator, Himself a Spirit, imparted an impress of His own character and a measure of His own power, so that man really was created a god of earth toward the lower creatures which were put under his care, as his Creator is the God of the Universe.

My admiration for our race and its skill was greatly enhanced as I thus contrasted. The pyramids, and especially the Great Pyramid of Gizeh, near Cairo, impressed me similarly. When I considered the wonderful accomplishments of that long-ago period and reflected that we could scarcely do more today with our most improved machinery, my appreciation of our ancestors was enhanced; and I said, it would be very difficult for many to accept the modern scientific theory that our forefathers but a short time ago were monkeys.

Some of the temples of India and China similarly impressed me, athens, too, with its museums of ancient structure, similarly said to me, Truly man in his original perfection must have been created in the image of his Creator. My visits to Rome impressed upon me the fact that although the work of death has progressed in our race, nevertheless, in a measure the decay of the masses has by Divine providence found compensation; for although we have no Michael Angelos today, we have legions who are inspired by his example, and who have copied him with wonderful success, so that today our treasuries of art are not only multitudinous but grand beyond those of any previous day.

The great St. Peter's at Rome is itself a treasury of art such as never before was known in the world, besides which all the great capitals of Europe abound with art galleries which illustrate the power of the human hand in the appreciation and production of the beautiful. And in this connection I must not forget the similar treasures of my home land, America.

UTILITIES OF OUR DAY.

But, my dear friends, you and I are living in a specially utilitarian Age, and all for one am glad of it. The skill of humanity has during the last century been turned into a new channel, which is making for us in new lines the wonders of the ancient days, and lanes of a century ago, we have broad asphalt avenues and boulevards; instead of ordinary houses of a century ago, our cities are studded with handsome and commodious residences that in comparison are palaces. Beautiful, graceful bridges span our great rivers and serve to consolidate our interests. Wonderful tunne's pierce our mountains and facilitate the movement of luxurious railway coaches. Palatial steamers with regularity connect port to port.

Often of late I have found myself admiring some of our grand hotels and palatial cantiols and engineering feats of bridge work and tunnels, saying to myself, the while, What is man? And then I reflect in his fallen condition has learned gradually to accomplish so much, what may we reasonably hope and look for have been the ultimate capacity of perfect man had sin not entered into the world, and had the experience of centuries been accumulating for many millenniums? Wonderful a being Father Adam might have been!

TIMES OF RESTITUTION.

Then my mind reverted to the great Creator and the Message He has given us in His wonderful Book, the Bible. I remembered the inspired message of consolation that God looked down in pity on us as a race in our fallen condition and that He planned even before our fall for our recovery as a race from the curse, from sin, from death. I hearkened to St. Peter's words of encouragement respecting the glorious blessings to be ushered in by the great Redeemer when at His second advent He shall take unto Himself His great power and begin His Messianic reign for the blessing, recovery and uplift of our race. I will remind you of His words, although you are familiar with them. He said, "Times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord, and He shall send Jesus Christ, who before was preached unto you, whom the Heavens must retain until the Times of Restitution of all things which God hath promised by the mouth of all His holy Prophets since the world began."—Acts iii. 19-21.

Ah, God is better than all our fears! During the Dark Ages a terrible nightmare became associated with the glorious Gospel of God's love and mercy revealed by Jesus and the Apostles. Under that nightmare we lost sight of all the glorious promises of the Bible and lost our confidence in God because of the terrible propositions declared to us to be His intentions toward our race. True, all acknowledged a hope that a favored few would attain an eternal weight of glory on the heavenly plane, but all the remainder except the saintly ones, the elect, were consigned either to a terrible purgatorial fire or to an eternal holocaust of torture. What blasphemies against our God, the God of Grace, we thus unwittingly, undesignedly entertained!

The effect of these teachings in all parts of the world, in every religion, has been to convert man's natural quality of reverence for his Creator into a terrible fear of God, and to make more and more separated us from God and the Bible.

MANKIND AND THE CHURCH.

We are now coming to understand more fully the Bible doctrine of election and we see it to be not salvation from sin and death, but beautiful and blessed, for both elect and non-elect. The Divine Plan was, and still is, a universal Plan—a Plan granting universal opportunity for all Adam and to all his race for a recovery from the penalty of sin—for a recovery from sin and death to all that Father Adam lost in the beginning and which he lost through disobedience, and which Jesus redeemed for him and his race at Calvary, and which all the willing and obedient may have back again at the hands of the Redeemer, if they will, during the period of His Messianic reign.

This is the Restitution which St. Peter tells us God spoke "through the mouths of the holy Prophets since the world began." And the blessing will not be merely restitutionary, but indeed all the experiences of the present life will be an advantage, and Adam and death will be blessed, helpful lessons for the future—guards against any repetition of the scenes of disobedience and death. Divine provisions made for man's comfort, happiness and everlasting joy.

The work accomplished by our Redeemer at Calvary was merely a preparatory work. His death provided the Ransom-price for Father Adam, and hence for all Adam's race who share his condemnation. The work of Divine grace which has progressed for 1,800 years past, is preparatory also a preparatory work. During this period of more than eighteen centuries God has been gathering out of the world a special class, called to pass through specially severe trials and testings of faith and obedience, under the inspiration of certain "exceeding great and precious promises" (II Peter i. 4)—of a share with Jesus in the divine nature and glory, honor and immortality.

This selecting work began with natural Israel, and has extended now gradually the world around, gathering from every nation samples and representatives, but all saintly; all in heart, at least, copies of God's dear Son, the Redeemer. With the dawning of the Seventh Great Day—the Day of Christ—this work of electing or selecting a special class of saints to constitute His Bride and joint-heirs in the Kingdom will be complete. Then will begin the salvation of the world—the reclamation or Restitution of the world from sin and death conditions, made possible by the great redemptive work of Calvary.

"GLORY IN THE HIGHEST."

From what we have seen of the Divine provision for man's recovery we grasp the force of the prophetic declaration following the question of our text—"What is man, that Thou art mindful of him—the son of man, that Thou visitest him?" When we think of the greatness of our God, and the littleness of ourselves, even in our best estate, and especially when we think that we are all sinners, we are amazed that our great Creator was mindful of us—mindful of preparing a great Plan of Salvation—willing to provide for our redemption and making preparation for the Kingdom which is to bless the race! Can we doubt that He who has so loved the world while they were yet sinners will bring His Plan to a glorious consummation? Can we doubt that He will do all that He has promised, exceedingly abundantly more than we could have asked or thought?—Ephesians iii. 20.

In not understand me to say that the Bible teaches a universal salvation of our race to life eternal. No, that would be unreasonable. That would imply Divine coercion of the human will, and such a coercion would be contrary to the teachings of the Scriptures—that man is created in God's image and likeness. An essential feature of the Divine likeness in man is the freedom of his will; his body may be coerced or enslaved or whatever, but the human will is indomitable, like that of his Creator.

It is evident's not the Divine intention to destroy the human will, but to educate it—to allow it to develop as a will, along the lines of experience, so that it may be voluntarily submitted to the Divine will because of appreciation of the wisdom of all the Divine arrangements, regulations, laws, etc. The Divine proposition, therefore, is that as a all mankind shared by heredity the sentence of death which came upon the first man Adam, so the redemption accomplished by the Second Adam shall be extensive with the fall, so that all Adam's race will be as free to turn or turn to God and be abundantly pardoned and finally restored to all that was lost in Adam and redeemed at Calvary.

And what, you ask, will be the fate of those who wilfully, deliberately, persistently, intelligently resist the Divine will and refuse the glorious opportunity or Restitution? The Bible answers that all will be on trial for life eternal or for death eternal, and that those who refuse the conditions of heart loyalty and obedience will bring upon themselves afresh the sentence of death. But this second sentence will differ from the first, not in the kind of punishment, but in its duration thereof.

The first or Adamic death God from the first foreordained should be set aside, and from the very beginning He had made preparations for the Lamb of God to take away the sin of the world, and to consequently make possible for our race a resurrection from the dead and a further opportunity or trial for everlasting life. Wilful sinners under the light and opportunity of that day, when condemned to death, will be no more thoroughly than before, but their death will be a hopeless one; no Redeemer has been apportioned for them and none will be apportioned; so redemption for them will be effected and no resurrection will be granted. As St. Peter declares, they shall perish "like natural brute beasts made to be taken and destroyed."—II Peter ii, 12.

Some at least in this audience, I trust, have been mentally touched with the thought of the great grace of God operating during this Age for the selection of joint heirs with Christ in the Kingdom. I trust that this high and heavenly Calling to a change of nature from human to the divine offered to the "elect," meets with a response in some hearts here present. I would encourage you, that although the night is far spent and the glorious Day of the Kingdom is nigh at hand, it is still worth while to "lay aside every weight" and every besetting sin, and make a full consecration of life and energy, wealth, reputation, little or much, to the Divine service, that thus you may walk in the footsteps of Jesus, be begotten of the Holy Spirit and attain to the Heavenly Kingdom.

This, my dear friends, is my own ambition and daily endeavor. I may not urge you to do more than the Master Himself urged, who said for us to "sit down first and count the cost."

If you decide that you want the "Prize of Great Price" now offered to humanity, it will cost you all that you have to obtain it, but you will be the most wonderful Prize and the most wonderful bargain ever secured!

Appreciations

also is the fire—Matt. 25: 32, 41, signifying future and complete sanctification in the second death. Thus we see that God's reward for the obedient is eternal life, in a glorious perfect condition, either in heaven, or on the perfected earthly eden; while, on the other side, is the punishment of eternal death a non-existence anywhere—b otted out—"for the wages of sin is death (not torment) but the gift of God is eternal life, through Jesus Christ our Lord"—Rom. 6: 23. And God's love is so great (who is there tortures any one? And that through endless eternity?) A man is born in sin and passed in a world of sin, rocked in a cradle of ignorance and superstition, brought up in the midst of errors and confusion all around him, with some 666 or more of sects and creeds, all of them preaching a theology of their own make regardless of any other Bible or creeds, "Teaching for doctrines the commandments of men"—Matt. 15: 9, No. 2. Under such conditions, shall we claim that our God and Creator will be less just, less merciful, less kind and considerate than any human judge of any earthly court would over be? Is the creature then better than his Creator? Oh, no, to claim that God in infinite wisdom, love power and justice, of torture, turned the same over to Satan to be its head and overlord, and that all so-called evil is used to create millions and billions of human beings for it to suffer endless torture in the Devil's hell, is not a short and miserable life of gross ignorance spent in a world of sin over which Satan is the ruler and prince—Ephes. C. 12; II Cor. 11: 14. Such and creed as all of them preaching the mighty God is an outrage, a foul blot on the fair escutcheon of the Name of Him who says, "Their fear is not of me, but is taught them by the precepts of men"—Isa. 29: 13, "For God be true, but every man a liar"—Rom. 3: 4. God has placed eternal life, an eternal death before His creatures, and it is for us to choose one or the other. He that hath the Son, hath life; and he that hath not the Son hath not life"—I John 5: 11, 12. Under the present Truth we can death means to "die." "Let us reason together"—Isa. 1: 18.

Yours for the lift of "Old's Truth," regardless of all man-made acts and creeds. In love,

RASMUS F. JOHNSON.

As Job's comforters, and Job's bodis did not by nature make him innocent with God, so neither is the nature of the obestnut bur—in due time opens up by "free will," Nature's way of the Dove in the ark, and leaves and love through gradual evolution, and not through a deadly evil, and remembering that impatience is ugliness. Yet it is perfect human nature that "love never faileth" and remembers through its merit also free and some will be apportioned; so redemption for them will be effected and no resurrection will be granted. As St. Peter declares, they shall perish "like natural brute beasts made to be taken and destroyed."—II Peter ii, 12.

TRIBUNE APPRECIATIONS.

Maryland, Aug 7.

Enclosed please find money for the renewal of your valuable paper.

I wish to write you a few lines of appreciation for your paper. I have been a reader of Pastor Russell's Sermons, you publish, for nine years, and I don't care to miss a single copy of your valuable paper. May God bless you in the great work you are doing in spreading the true Gospel of Christ which in God's due time will reach all the world of mankind. We are now in one of the greatest harvest periods the world has ever known and the privileges of serving the Lord are great and we shall receive a great reward for our labor.

I expect to be a subscriber to your valuable paper as long as you publish Pastor Russell's Sermons.

Respectfully,
HARRY MACEY.

Virginia, Aug. 8.

One more commendation "add to your list of admirers. Your paper is to be praised. I enjoy Pastor Russell's Sermon, Question Box and Sunday School Lesson and the Letters from the dear Truth friends the world over. Oh, what a power for good, for the spread of present Truth you possess and you are using it so valiantly for God's cause.

I notice in the Religious Herald, Richmond, Va., they advertise Rev. Haldeman's pamphlets to their readers to put down the blasphemous doctrine of "Millennium Dawnism." Even if like Pastor Dorse, one see the weakness of his argument; his rendering shows he is either blinded by prejudice or is so astonished that he didn't give the time and thought necessary. Even the great "D. D." can't contain. The Divine Plan of the Ages can be grasped at our sitting without any study, so each member of us must himself of self, and ask the Lord's guidance and try again. Possibly the spare time he will put into answering God's Truth so vitally that even the unsaved can detect it. The pamphlet may help Baptist pastors to blind and ease the consciences of the flock as they go to them for spiritual advice, but for those who want a "thus saith the Lord," for a guide in life's pilgrimage, it is too flimsy an argument. Misrepresentation, slander and ridicule will not hinder the blind leaders of the blind from falling into the ditch. The Baptists have the keys to the kingdom, in their estimations so long, that to go down in Baptist goes will be a struggle. If the Rev. Haldeman's argument is the strongest weapon they have, I hope to go there

POPULAR MECHANICS.

AUTOMOBILE AUDITOR.

Value of the Speedometer in Checking Up Expenditures.

The popular impression is that an automobile speedometer is used only for telling speed and distance traveled. For the practical autoist, the man who wants his car to give him all the service he has paid for, the speedometer, in conjunction with its odometer feature, has many other applications. First of all, it will pay its cost many times over in a year, for instance, by providing claims for rebates on tires which many manufacturers guarantee to cover a certain number of miles. In the event they do not last the mileage guaranteed a pro rata allowance is made on the next purchase. It is only necessary to make a memorandum of the date the tire is put in use and the mileage recorded by the odometer. Then when the time comes to replace the tire the odometer will show if the tires have covered as many miles as the guarantee calls for. By the same simple process the odometer will save considerable money on gasoline, an item that amounts to no inconsiderable figure every month. The filling of your tanks is generally left to others, and you have no means of knowing if you get the full amount of fuel you are paying for unless you check it up now and then with your odometer.

The odometer will also audit the engine efficiency by permitting you to keep it tuned to a point at which you get maximum efficiency with a minimum fuel consumption. Test it now and then with an odometer and make certain your engine consumes a quantity of gasoline proportionate to the number of miles the car has covered. The same instrument will audit the battery service and help to determine which make of battery gives longest service.

Another and more important thing: When the time comes to purchase a new car to replace the old it is well to know if that make of car gives the service it should. The odometer will help to determine if you will be justified in purchasing another of the same kind.

"Joy riding" is nearly an impossibility with a car supplied with a speedometer, as the first unauthorized use of the machine will show on the odometer.

Electricity Beats Teredos.

The bowels of the Pacific ocean, which attacks all submerged wood work, destroying a wharf completely in the course of a few years, is being successfully combated by the use of electricity. A floating power plant, equipped for salt precipitation, has been designed for this purpose, and current is passed through salt water, releasing chlorine, hydrogen, bromine, iodine and sodium hydroxide or concentrated lye. The teredos are killed within a very few moments by the great volume of chlorine gas liberated. This treatment does not render the piling immune from further attack, but it is claimed that an occasional treatment will keep the borers from penetrating to any great depth, so that the piling can be preserved indefinitely at a comparatively low charge. The operation of destroying the teredos is not at all complex. The wharf is wired first, and electrodes are suspended from it so as to be submerged at a certain or low depth, the details varying with local conditions. The power plant on a large dock—a capacity of 30,000 to 60,000 amperes, but the voltage is exceedingly low. The current is turned on for about an hour.

Extracting a Damaged Screw.

One is often required to remove a screw with one side of the head broken off. The following is a method of drawing out the broken screw with ease and without disfiguring the work:

SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN ADS

EXTRACTING SCREW WITH BROKEN HEAD.

Place the screwdriver against one side of the head and with a small block press firmly against the screwdriver at the same time turning the screwdriver and the block. The screw will come out almost as easily as if the head were intact.

New Type of Oil.

The oil from the large well recently drilled by the Myles Mineral company at Pine Prairie, La., is remarkable, according to an analysis made by the United States geological survey, in that it contains no asphalt, gasoline or paraffin wax. The crude product contains a very large percentage of illuminating oils. In composition the oil stands about halfway between the oil of the gulf field and that of the Caddo field.

HORSESHOES OF ROPE.

German Invention Prevents Slipping on Smooth Pavements.

Horseshoes with rope filling have been in use in Germany very generally for the last fifteen years, the necessity for their introduction having arisen with the substitution of asphalt paving for the old Belgian blocks, and they are now considered indispensable.

Various forms and shapes of shoes are used. Some are open at the back like an ordinary horseshoe. Others are closed, and very often the opening closed there is a bridge or crosspiece joining the two sides. When this is the case the bridge is constructed like the rest of the shoe, inclosing a tarred rope. There are usually eight nail holes in each shoe, and in order to strengthen the bottom and especially to make the nail holes more secure the walls of the grooves are sometimes reinforced by braces. The space in the center of the shoe is often covered over with various kinds of inserts to protect the rope from injury. The kind of rubber, by which has been adopted by the royal stables, is the insertion at the back of the shoe of a block of wood fitted with a spiral bristles have been driven. This is an additional preventive against slipping. When the ground is covered with snow a special ice plate is inserted in its stead.

It is customary to use special nails with long heads in attaching the shoes to the hoof. When the long headed nails are used it is possible to drive them in and to extract them without taking our the rope. These nails, which are driven far between the outer side of the groove and the tarred rope, also help to hold in the rope. The tarred rope wears down simultaneously with the rest of the shoe, and it is only on rare occasions that the rope must be withdrawn and new inserted. This change can be made without removing the shoe. The average life of a rope horseshoe is six to eight weeks.

Use For Waste Mills.

A new and exceedingly profitable use has been discovered for the waste mills produced in such abundance by all cotton textiles. These are places where this waste is used by the farmers who sell their cream to fatten pigs, but which are now being manufactured by the mills, thoroughly skimmed and variety in character, is allowed to run to waste. The products that they make, however, that by mixing the milk with phosphate of lime a most efficient fertilizer can be produced. The proportion of lime is placed in a hollow heap on the floor, the waste milk is run into the hollow, and the lime is gradually added. In course of time the whole is turned and thoroughly mixed after the fashion of mortar. After it has dried and is broken up it is a most excellent fertilizer, containing about 13.50 per cent of phosphate and a little more than 1 per cent of nitrogen. Unlike the manufacture of most phosphates, this process is not attended by any of the disagreeable smells and other nuisances so closely associated with the ordinary fertilizer factory.

Manufacture of Ichthyol.

A peculiar form of asphaltic material found in a certain beds of petroleum, or appropriate chemical treatment, as a medicament under the name ichthyol and used for ointments, etc., it is not procured in the United States. The raw material from which it is derived is a fossiliferous shale which is found near Seefeld in the Austrian Tyrol. The material mined at this place is carefully selected by hand and is subjected to dry distillation. The distillate thus obtained is then sulphonated and subsequently neutralized with ammonia. The finished product resulting from this process is the commercial article known as ichthyol.

Slide Fire Escape.

A new type of slide fire escape, which can be combined with a stair fire escape in the same shaft or allotted space, has been designed by a Chicago inventor. The general arrangement of the slide is the same as that of an ordinary stair escape, with a landing at either end. The slide runs straight from one side of the tower or shaft to the other, then turns by means of a banked curve and continues to another level in the opposite direction. The features claimed for this arrangement are that persons using the escape can be admitted at every floor, that the banked turns correct the pace of the sliding person in such manner that they are sliding no faster on the last lap than on the first and that a choice is had of either the slide or the stair escape as a means of reaching the ground.

A NEW WHITE METAL.

Argental, an Alloy of Silver and Aluminium, Is Acid Proof.

A metal or alloy of very high class qualities has recently been evolved, after many years of research and experiments, by William A. McAdams, says the Scientific American. This new metal will be named "argental," because it is an alloy of silver and aluminium, the affinity of which is produced by chemicals and rare minerals, and it is par excellence as a substitute for silver, having all its qualities except weight.

Argental has been produced to compete with silver, and for general manufacturing and industrial uses it is in many ways far superior to silver, and the reason that, being alloyed with aluminium and cast by means of a patented compound and molds or dies, it has many times greater strength than either silver or aluminium. It is white like silver and not tender or blue like aluminium.

The silver in its composition prevents the aluminium from being attacked by ordinary alkalies, and the aluminium prevents the silver from being attacked by ordinary acids. The alloy cannot be affected by nitric acid, and it will not tarnish or oxidize by exposure to the atmosphere or gases. Its specific gravity is only one-third that of silver and consequently three or four times the quantity of manufactured articles can be produced from the same weight as that of silver, such as watch cases and backs, table ware, fine candlesticks, tableware, ornaments, hardware specialties, typewriters and similar machines, and numerous a number of other incidental articles.

Comparing argental in weight with silver articles, it is found that it is one-fourth the weight of copper, one-fifth that of iron, one-fourth that of gold and one-half that of platinum.

The alloy can be cast, die cast, rolled, spun, drawn into wire, pilled, engine turned and turned by hand in the manner and the finest of threads cut on it. It takes a fine polish.

The metal is made by pure silver altered with aluminium by means of

PROGENY OF SPEEDY TROTTERS IN DEMAND.

"Speed from speed" is the slogan of the present day breeders of trotting horses, with the additional idea that the earlier the evidences of speed in the parents the more likely it will be to make a colt trotter of their progeny.

Now that there are stakes and purses to the value of $75,000 every summer for three-year-old trotters, several of less value for the two-year-olds and a gigantic futurity for foals is what the breeders are trying to get.

Hence it is of interest to know, now that the official returns are in, that the developed dams—otherwise mares with records of 2:30 or better at the two at 2:25 or better at the pace—are the producers of a large proportion of the two and three year old trotters that showed "natural" speed last season under conditions entitling them to a record. Every one of the four yearlings that have entered the list in the trotting brigade is from a cam with a fast trotting record.

Here is the quartet of yearlings:

Belle McKinney, 2:24½; dam Belle Wilkie, 2:29¾.

Lord Allen, 2:30¼; dam Fanny Summers, 2:30¾.

J. K. Madden, 2:27; dam Panella, 2:13.

Peter the Gay, 2:30¼; dam Miss Gay, 2:31¾.

BRAVES SLOW ON BASES.

Boston National Players Hit Well, but Cannot Get Around Sacks.

If there is one evidence stronger than another of the difference between speed in a ball team and the lack of it under the players of the New York and Boston National League clubs. The Bostons can hit well and not infrequently they can worry the life of pitchers, but it takes many and strong blows to get them around the bases. They are compelled to play the safest dice game because so few of their players can take an extra base on a hit which is difficult for the opposing fielders.

JEWS RESTORED TO LIFE.

Mark xi., 21-24, 35-43—Aug. 18.

"And He took the damsel by the hand and said unto her, Talitha cumi, which is, being interpreted, Damsel, I say unto thee, arise."—Tr. ef.

WHEN JESUS and the Apostles returned to the vicinity of Capernaum, the people were on the lookout for them, especially Jairus, one of the rulers of the synagogue. He came and fell at Jesus' feet in great distress. He besought Him to come and heal his little daughter who lay at the point of death. As they went to the house of Jairus the multitude followed and thronged and delayed the procession. Meantime a messenger arrived from Jairus' house, telling that the child was dead. But Jesus said to the bereaved father, "Be not afraid, only believe."

The multitude was left, and only three of the Apostles, Peter, James and John, went on with Jesus and Jairus. When they arrived they beheld a great commotion connected with the customary weeping and wailing. Some entered with the mourners by telling them not to weep, that the child was not dead, but asleep. Whom did He mean? Did the Great Teacher prevaricate? He spoke in the same manner in respect to His friend Lazarus, saying, "Lazarus sleepeth," and then later He explained that he was dead. How shall we understand these words? What were the facts?

"All Live Unto Him."

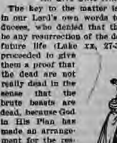
The key to the matter is given us in our Lord's own words to the Sadducees, who denied that there would be any resurrection of the dead or any future life (Luke xx, 37-38.) Jesus proceeded to give them a proof that the dead are not really dead in the sense that the best hearts are dead, because God in His Plan has made an arrangement for the resurrection of humankind. The Great Destroyer, called "the last enemy," Death slays, whereas He has made an arrangement for the resurrection of the brute beasts. The provision for man's resurrection was that God would provide a Redeemer to satisfy the claims of Divine Justice against Adam and all his race, and who thus would become the Father of the world, and, establishing His Messianic Kingdom, would release all mankind from the power of death.



"He will do it."—Psalm.

From the standpoint, God's standpoint, no human being is dead. Their awakening will be a resuscitation to the Messiah's Kingdom, and all will then have fulness of opportunity of coming to a knowledge of God and His Plan. His will revive them; and all will be assisted back to harmony with God. If they so decide, but they may finally reach again the perfection of life lost by disobedience. It is in view of this Divine intention, as a awakening of the dead, that Jesus spoke of death as a "sleep," a period of rest, of quiet, of unconsciousness.

Relating the Bible for an answer as it where they sleep we hear the inspired words, "Thou turnest man to dust of the earth shall awake" (Dan. xii, 2.) Adam and his family were made from the power of death and a deliverance from the tomb, by the power of the resurrection. Hence it is that Jesus who declared, "I am the Resurrection and the Life." The Church will be the first from humanity to receive eternal life, and they will be granted a share with Jesus in His resurrection to glory, honor and immortality, as His Bride, His Joint-heir under His Headship. Next in the call to the Apostle, will come the world of mankind, "every man in his own order."

"Damsel, I say unto thee, arise."—Mark.

Peter put the statement about the maid's being asleep in a forceful way, in order to impress the scribes and Pharisees with the fact that, even though it appears so to do. The awakening which He was about to perform was to be a beautiful illustration of Divine power, which will be exercised toward the entire race under the Messianic Kingdom. Then, as He declared, "All that are in their graves shall hear the voice of the Son of Man, and shall come forth."

The world will come forth. Jesus said, that they may have a resurrection or testing up, up to perfection, even to all that was lost in Eden, to all that was redeemed at Calvary. The awakening will be a gradual one, because it will be accomplished instantaneously, but the further raising up, to mental, moral and physical perfection, will be a gradual work, for which a thousand years has been apportioned, and to which the individual will be obliged to co-operate for his advancement and instruction in righteousness. This resurrection is heralded in general Jesus styled, "The resurrection of judgment"—by disciplines, by trials and testings. Only those who will really reject the Lord and His way will die the Second Death, from which there will be no resurrection.

BIBLE QUESTION BOX

Your Bible questions will be answered in these columns, or by letter to the writer in the interest of the readers.

Q.—One of the commandments of the Bible reads, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself;" how may I know who is my neighbor?

Answer.—Our Lord gives a clear answer to this question in Luke x, 29-37. He describes a man in distress and need. A priest came along and seeing the man passed by on the other side as if he were afraid he would be contaminated by even paying attention to the sufferer. A Levite did likewise. Then came a Samaritan merchantman, were a mixed people, common and despised by the priestly class of Jesus' day, and ministered unto the wants of the sufferer. The principle here taught is, that every man is your neighbor and should be treated kindly, generously, according to the Golden Rule, "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you." "Love your neighbors as yourself" and show that you do love them by dealing with all honestly, fairly and exactly as you would like others to deal with you. The Apostle Paul announces the proper principles saying: "Do good unto all men as you have opportunity." (Galatians vi, 10).

Q.—Does the Bible teach how long man has been living on the earth?

Answer.—The Bible does give a satisfactory answer to this question. Sufficient data is indulged in each specification as to the length of time man has been on the earth. Their guesses have varied over a wide field. One celebrated Geologist claims it has been fifty thousand years since the first man was created. Others say while another makes 250,000 years since the first man was an European self. In contrast with these speculative theories we have the clear and connected chain of Bible chronology, which shows that less than seven thousand years have elapsed since the creation of the first man. The Bible is the oldest and most authentic history concerning man. It makes no guesses, but clearly teaches that Adam was the first man. It gives its own chronology, which is as follows: From Adam to the flood 1,656 years; from the flood to Abraham 427 years; from thence to the Exodus and the giving of the law 430 years; from thence to the division of Canaan 46 years; next the period of the Judges 450 years; the period of the Kings 515 years; period of desolation 70 years; from thence to year 1 A. D. 536 years; from thence to A. D. 1911 makes a total of 6,000 years since Adam's creation. This is the result shown by the best Bible chronologists who have written on the subject.

Q.—How large was Noah's ark, and how did it provide with modern vessels as to size and capacity?

Answer.—The Bible (Genesis vi. 15) gives the dimensions as follows: Three hundred cubits long, fifty cubits broad and thirty cubits high. The length of the ark is variously estimated. The modern cubit is 18 inches, linear measure; the sacred cubit of the Jews was 25 inches. According to the latter the ark was 547.8 feet long, 91.2 feet wide and 54 feet high. The capacity would be 2,799,782 cubic feet. Tonnage, 81,003. It is impossible, however, to do more than merely to estimate the dimensions, as no one can be absolutely sure as to the length of the cubit according to which the ark was constructed. There are some modern vessels of greater length than the ark, but the capacity of the ark was three times as great as any vessel afloat. It provided plenty of room for Noah and his family and pairs of all the 344 species of animals known in it, as scheduled by Buffon, together with all supplies needed for the long voyage. The design has been found in actual practice to yield the best results for safety and stowage.

Q.—What is meant by the "Judgment Day," and when will it be? Is it to be a 24 hour day?

Answer.—The term "judgment" is cindex a testing or trial and the final conclusion or result of that trial. Not all are judged at once. To illustrate, the world is now on trial as to judgment, which trial or judgment has been in progress since Pentecost. The result of this judgment will be rewarded, as we read, "He thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of life" (Revelation ii, 10). The "Judgment Day, as applied to the world in general is entirely a different matter. It is manifest that the whole world could not be tried and judged within 24 hours. The Apostle says, "God hath appointed a day in which he will judge the world in righteousness" (Acts xvii, 31). Again we read: "Know ye not that the saints shall judge the world?" (1 Peter ii, 9). The judgment of the world by Christ will cover a period of one thousand years (Revelation xx, 4-6). That the judgment of the world had not come in the Apostle Paul's day is clearly shown by his words in the Scripture above noted (Acts xvii, 31). This and other Scriptures clearly show that Christ is to be the Judge of the world when he sets up his kingdom at his second coming. In Matthew xxv, 31-46 our Lord gave a description of the judgment of the world, clearly pointing out that it would take place at his second appearing. This is positive, proof that the world's judgment is not yet in progress.

Q.—What is the Scriptural method of ordination? It seems to me that the layman should have something to say as to who shall be their representatives. Have the clergy arrogated to themselves privileges in this connection to which they are not entitled? (American.)

Answer.—Priesteraft, and not the teachings of our Lord and His Apostles, is responsible for the division of the church into two classes, called clergy and laity. It is in spite the spirit of priestcraft that seeks to lord it over God's heritage in every way possible, compromisingly to the laxity of the ignorance prevailing in any congregation. The word ordain, in reference to elders, those who preside over the church, occurs in Titus 1, 5. It is from the Greek which signifies to place down, set in order the things that are wanting, and ordain elders in every city, as I gave thee charge." R. V. On the face of it the text seems to imply that Titus was empowered to appoint these elders, regardless of the wishes of the congregations (churches, ecclesiæ); and it is on this view that the whole clerical system rests. The leading churches all claim for their bishops an apostolic authority to set, to place or appoint, elders for the congregations—without the stretching forth of the hand, or vote of the church. This text is the bulwark of this claim. But it appears to be rather a weak support when we notice the last clause—"As I gave thee charge"—that is, as Paul gave the Apostle would surely not give Titus "charge" or instructions to do differently from what he (the Apostle) had done. The matter, because God appointed these words! What were the facts?

Q.—Is the parable of the vine and the branches, given by the Lord Jesus (John xv, 1-8), are we to understand that the branches represent the different churches and denominations? (A. S. Kreider.)

Answer.—A critical examination of the parable should thoroughly convince any fair minded student that the "branches" could in no way represent the five or six hundred different religious denominations of Christendom. At the time the parable was given, there were no denominations, and none were organized until several centuries afterward. The Lord never authorized the formation of these denominational systems, and furthermore, its has never recognized them as His representatives. If anything, they are of the "vine of the earth" (Revelation xiv, 18) for they are of no earthly or human origin. It is very evident that this fact is coming more and more to be recognized from the dissensions and bickerings of various religious bodies, as, in general, they are advocating a federation of all the churches, and the realization of denominational lines. See what the Apostle has to say about denominationalism—1 Corinthians iii, 3, 4. The Apostle was addressing His disciples and telling them that they were the branches. His language is "I am the true vine, ye are the branches." It becomes more apparent that the vine represents the Church of the various religious bodies, as, in general, they are advocating a federation of all the churches, and the realization of denominational lines. See what the Apostle has to say about denomination—1 Corinthians iii, 3, 4. The Master

PRETTY NEGLIGEE ADAPTED TO NEAT, WELL ROUNDED FIGURES.

CLOSE FITTING HOUSE JACKET.

A DAINTY negligee is illustrated here. Its close fitting lines commend it to those who do not like the kimono and its kind. The jacket is cut on simple lines and is fitted with inside coutilles and under hair-raw ribbons are run. Then when the garment is put on it may be drawn snugly about the waist and the ribbons tied invisibly.

THE SOAP CURE.

A Liberal Application Will Eradicate Kitchen Vermin.

Shave a bar of strong yellow soap into a gallon of water and let it simmer on the back of the stove until it reaches the consistency of jelly. Into this stir one ounce of carbolic acid and pour the mixture into all cracks around the sink and dishpipes to rid the kitchen of roaches or other vermin.

Apply the same mixture with a paint brush to cracks in the wood of a bedstead to kill bugs or around the surbase in a room where vermin hide.

If your shoes are loose and persist in rubbing holes in the back of your stockings rub a little soap in the back of the shoe. You will have no more trouble, for the stocking will slip up and down without wearing out on the smooth surface of soap.

An Asbestos Pad.

An asbestos pad for the table may be made in this way: Get enough asbestos paper to cover the table with double thickness. From a couple of old sheets cut two pieces the size of the table. Baste the asbestos paper between these and quilt it on the sewing machine, using a long stitch. This is necessary, as the paper tears and pulls apart easily. Put this pad on the table under your silence cloth, and there will be no marks made on the polished surface by hot dishes.

THE MAN'S WAY.

A woman with her eyes veiled can fascinate most men, but a woman with her thoughts veiled can fascinate any man.

Nothing makes a man propose to a girl so quickly as to find that her family doesn't think him good enough for her.

The fact that she does the cooking is no proof that a girl is domesticated. Her cooking may be a proof to the contrary.

It has never been explained why a man who will rapturously kiss a lock of hair and strip it next his heart will always laugh if he sees a long hair on another man's shoulder.

MOTOR GARB.

An Outfit That Is Both Chic and Fashionable.

SMART MOTORING OUTFIT.

This handsome automobiling outfit shows what fashionable women favor at this time. The coat is of gray and white, the stripes being adjusted to give a skirt and coat effect at the sides. The deep revers, the collar and the cuffs are faced with gray suede and knowledge of grammar and must understand spelling and punctuating or she cannot hope to hold a good position. The queens in the geographic world are few, but the girl who can take dictation in one or more foreign languages is valuable. The stenographers in the government employ and court reporters are well paid.

The college girl, as a rule, enters a profession. She may be a lawyer, a doctor, an artist, a writer or go in for philanthropic work via the settlement theory. Unless she has been very well educated it is not worth while for any girl to expect to do well in a profession, nor need she expect to earn much at first.

The girl who wishes to establish a business of her own, whether it is the opening of a shop or an office, should learn its principles by first working in a successful business of that kind carried on by some one else. A fruitless shop, a fancy work store, a tea room, a dressmaking establishment, a notion store, a fine laundry, a delicatessen shop and a confectionery or bakery are all lines in which women are especially suited to succeed.

The craftswoman after attending one of the schools which give training along this line will know whether she wishes to design gowns or wall paper, whether she wishes to carve or paint.

Above all, the girl who expects to look for work this fall should decide on something that is congenial and then equip herself for it as well as she can.

One of the best equipments is good health. No worthwhile have much chance in the business world, but no young woman need be a weakling if she will set herself seriously to work to build up her health. Youth can work miracles.

AND THIS IS WOMAN!

A wise old man once gave this good advice to his nephew: "The way to get married is, first, find the right woman; second, having done this, if you have the money, win her. If she has the money go away and forget it."

The woman who makes the head of the worst of it is a fortunate one. Think how happy she will be when she makes the best of the best of it!

When it comes to making trouble a rapid fire gun isn't in it with the dimples in a woman's cheeks. Man's opinion of woman's marksmanship is that she can't shoot straight anyhow, and he gets right in front of her dimples and is lost.

If you really and truly want to know the truth about a man go to his mother-in-law. She knows it and will tell.

The reason brides loafer on trying new recipes on their husbands instead of the dog is because good looking women always can get more husbands, while a blooded dog costs money.

The girl who flirts with everything will meet her Waterloo, although this may not be his name.

HELPS FOR HOUSEKEEPERS.

Cold water, ammonia and soap will take out machine grease.

A warm bath just before going to bed tends to allay the nervous irritability, which prevents sleep. It does so probably by dilating the blood vessels on the surface of the body, and so relieving the brain.

To cure squeaking boots stand the boots in sufficient linseed oil to just cover the soles. Leave them soaking for twenty-four hours. If not successful on the first treatment give another, which will remove all sound.

To clean straw matting put three pints of bran in two quarts of water and boil. When it is nearly cool wash the matting with it and afterward dry it well with a clean cloth. Add a little salt to the water for white matting and vinegar for red.

When spring cleaning, the bedstead should have a thorough cleansing; the interworks should be washed in warm water in which borax has been dissolved. Warm soapy water is required for the brass, and a good rubbing with a leather dampened with sweet oil will remove any rust marks.

An excellent method of tacking down carpets is to use an ordinary metal button as well as a tack. Pass the tacks through the holes in the button and tack down in the ordinary way. This will save you much time when you wish to take up the carpet, and all tacks may be easily removed without tearing the cloth.

Mending a Sweater.

To mend a hole in a sweater use yarn as for darning. Start at the top of the cloth stitch down the length of the hole with a darning needle, catching each loop securely. Too will in this way have a neat piece of work, and no one will notice where the hole has been.

Points for Mothers

A Baby Party.

To plan and successfully carry out a children's party requires a great deal of forethought. Little tots are hard to amuse for several hours at a stretch.

Our small sisters and brothers will have birthdays, and they enjoy so thoroughly their "parties" it would be unkind not to celebrate such year.

Many of our dearest memories linger about our birthday parties. Do not deny the children this pleasure. Invite the small friends to spend the afternoon.

Prepare a room where they may play without fear of breaking anything until refreshments are served.

Have plenty of toys, so that those desiring to may amuse themselves with them. Children love to "act," so select groups to produce the Mother Goose rhymes to pantomime. Then have the others guess what they are trying to represent, awarding a prize to the one guessing the greatest number.

"Silhouettes" always amuse children. To "see pictures of their shadows" drawn by a clever draftsman greatly interests them.

In another room have the table spread for refreshments.

In the center have a miniature garden, with tiny flower beds, in which grow the smallest blossoms. Mark off the walks with pebbles and have doll children playing about.

Serve sandwiches of several varieties, hot consommé, creamed chicken and ice cream. Give them cocoa to drink, and have candies, salted nuts and fruit.

If such plate favs an inexpensive favor for the child to take home.

Fun With Clothespins.

Five cents' worth of clothespins will furnish a whole afternoon of fun for boys and girls who are of an inventive turn.

They make specially fine toys for out of door sports.

For instance, there is a clothespin ninepin game. For this the pins are stuck up in the turf in the form of a wedge with the broad side of the wedge toward the players.

The children all stand at a powerful distance, and the novel technique and endeavor to overthrow them by rolling at them a hard ball. It must be rolled on the turf, not thrown. Each player has three shots at a time, after which another player takes his place. The number of pins thrown by each player are counted, and these represent his score.

After each player has played the men are "set up" again for the next player. The one having the highest score wins the game.

It is great fun to mark out little pens made of four clothespins with cords around them and to each pen to put a wild animal cut from some newspaper or other periodical. It makes a most entertaining zoo. Some of the children can be keepers and explain the animals, while others can be visitors and listen and in each pen to put a wild animal cut from some newspaper or other periodical. It makes a most entertaining zoo. Some of the children can be keepers and explain the animals, while others can be visitors and listen and in search of information. There should be a ticket chopper, who takes up the beans or other tickets which the visitors bring.

Mother's Care For Herself.

In an article on "The Healthy Baby" in the May Woman's Home Companion the author, Dr. Roger H. Dennett, a well known New York specialist on children's diseases, says in part:

"The mother's milk is the only food that was ever meant for a baby during his first year, and any other food is at best a poor substitute. This being so, the mother should be first of all guard her own good health for the sake of the baby if not for herself. She should keep good hours and get plenty of sleep. A certain amount of exercise helps the milk in quantity and quality. Enough fatigue should be avoided, so if the mother has not been accustomed to exercise before the baby was born attention should be given to it afterward. Gradually increase the amount of exercise, perhaps by walking a little farther each day, always being careful to stop just short of the point where one gets tired."

Brittle Nails.

Brittleness of the nails is quite often due to the condition of the general health. To cure this, if you do great deal of dishwork the strong soap which you probably use for cleaning purposes will make your nails brittle. Twice a day hold the tips of your fingers for five minutes in a vessel containing enough olive oil to cover the nails. At night before retiring dip the fingers into cold cream and let the tips take up just as much as they will retain. After this dip them into talcum powder.

EQUIPMENT OF BUSINESS GIRLS

A Fair Education, Common Sense and Good Health Are Among the Chief Essentials For Permanent Success.

GIRLS do not nowadays sit idly around and let father support them. In families whose means are moderate, when the daughter of the house is through school or college, she looks about for some work to occupy her time and provide her with an income. This is a good thing, for it will make her self reliant and self respecting. Many of the tragedies of middle life are the women suddenly thrown on their own resources and absolutely helpless, find they learned to take care of themselves when younger they might have been able to face the world with a measure of calmness. Middle age is not the time to learn a business or profession, and the fact that exceptional women have got on only means that they have attained a measure of the success they might have had with an earlier start.

Even when a girl has a good home and there is no special need for her to be self supporting the training that she will get in her business life will be useful. Not all women have a taste for housekeeping, and when they have not it is just as useless to insist on their devoting themselves to it as to piano playing. They should learn the elements of the art in order that they may direct the affairs of their own households properly.

It would be a good thing if no girl were permitted to enter the business world before she is eighteen. She is not strong enough and her judgment and character are not sufficiently developed for her to be thus thrown on her own resources. Unfortunately many girls are forced to go out and add to the family income as soon as they are through grammar school.

Poorly equipped it is only the brighter and more ambitious who can hope to advance, and for them only the cheaper and the most dreary posts. They may enter factories or stores, and of these two the latter is the preferable choice, not because there is more dignity in one occupation than in another, but because a girl has more opportunities to find a fashionable man as a factory worker. She may start as a cashgirl or as a wrapper, but she may aspire to be foreign buyer of a big department if she has the right sort of business ability. Some of the best paid department store buyers in the country began in the humblest positions and worked their way up. While working their way, however, they did not neglect to supplement their education with everything that would help them in business. One bright young studied French because she wished some day to be the store's Paris buyer, and another took up designing and dressmaking because she wished to be head of the suit department, where she was then only a saleswoman.

In every case the young girl who goes into the business world will find that knowledge is power. If she ever aspires to be in her measure of power she must get knowledge. The woman who whines about never having "had a chance" is invariably the one who hasn't really tried.

Stenography is a useful opening for a young woman because it gives her a chance to learn business under the tuition of experts and to know that business in its ins and outs as no other employee is able to know it. Women who have branched out into business for themselves have as a rule, served an apprenticeship of this sort. A stenographer should have a good general knowledge of grammar and must

If you wish a bright light and do not want your chimney smoked trim the wick round or curved, the shape of the burner. Then cut a small V in the center of the wick. It is a tried and true fact that the wick will not smoke.

TRIBUNE APPRECIATIONS.

Oregon, Aug. 5.

Enclosed herewith I send you a clipping from the editorial page in the Chicago Inter-Ocean and Farmer from a recent issue on the subject "Hell." You will see that said article is published in opposition to the free-thinking as set forth by the International Bible Students Association at its convention in Washington, D. C. As we are told to "earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered to the saints," Jude 3. I wrote a letter on the subject to the said Inter-Ocean and Farmer in defense of the Truth, but my letter as you will see was denied publication and was returned to me with thanks (?)

I here with inclose the said letter for you and ask you to use your own good judgment in regard to publishing it in the Tribune, as we are told to "Be always ready to give an answer to every man as a reason for the hope that is in us, etc." 1 Pet. 3: 15; Col. 4: 6, and as light-bearers in the world it seems to me that we ought always to be ready to defend (by enlightment) the character of our Heavenly Father from foul slanders, falsehoods and blasphemy brought about by the device of Satan and his agents who substituted darkness for light, ignorance for reason, falsehood for truth and produced the hideous Dark Ages on the pages of the world's history when this man made hell was both invented and prematurely opened by torturing and burning of millions of human beings—that fire went out, but the smoke is still here.

This is the article that Brother Johnson refers to:

The Question Regarding Hell.

Many months ago there formed the "International Bible Students' Association," during its recent convention in Washington, made a successful bid for newspaper notoriety by passing some resolutions on the subject of the fate of the wicked after death.

"Declaring unscriptural the Christian doctrine of a literal eternity of a place or state of punishment of the wicked after death, and assuming that the life after death of human persons are kept out of the churches, the convention invited all ministers to go on record on the point, and the press to request ministers to state their position.

"The discussion of questions of Biblical exegesis by laymen and the private of a secular newspaper. The idea that justice is not an attribute of God has become somewhat popular of late years. It is a symptom of the same sort of weakening of faith that has been so widely exhibited by the Hill House type of sociologists, with his notion that crime is 'environment' or 'disease,' and that criminals are to be pitied rather than punished.

"Nevertheless, the fact remains that human society has found it impossible to get on without punishing offenders. All human effort obviously is directly aside in reform is certain percentage of evil-livers and evildoers. For its own protection, and in order that decent people may be enabled to live in safety, every civilized community is compelled to lord certain crimes unpardonable and to punish certain criminals with severity. We either deprive these criminals of life or we treat them as we do dangerous wild beasts in captivity.

"We are taught, and we believe, on the evidence of both revelation and reason, that the mercy of God is infinite. But so is necessarily the justice of God. And aside from the clear scriptural teaching, there is certainly nothing illogical in the belief that he who dies a defiant violator of the divine law and a persistent rebel against it, will after death suffer the consequences of his sin in hell.

"The sociologists of every school and sect agree that the condition precedent to pardon and mercy is repentance. And if there be no repentance, what then? Is God to be mocked by the violator of His laws?

"To put the question in another way: We know that Nature—the laws which govern the material universe—is essentially unforgiving. If a man abuses his body, by excess of any kind, he pretty surely has to pay. By neglect and sobriety the scars of the battle with evil may be healed, or as a tree hides the passing blast of the woodsman's ax upon its bark. But the scar is still there, and the material that coming, perhaps a century afterwards, when the tree is decaying with age, may lay his finger upon it.

"So, if a man continuously and repeatedly abuses his body by debauchery, its wounds become so many that he pays the final penalty by extinction of the body's life. And is it not also possible that the sinner may so wound and scar his moral nature and his soul, and so give sum of offense to the outraged justice of God, that his sins bring to him such punishment after death as to answer all human imagination at hand?

"If it be not so, then God is not infinitely just. And which of the clerical or lay admirers and admirers of punishment will dare say that?

"To deny the possibility of punishment for the perversely sinful soul after death—to seek to deny the existence of a hell—is to deny the justice of God and to uproot the moral sanction for the punishments which human justice, for the indispensable protection of well-doers against evil-doers, always has and always will be compelled to inflict."

To the Editor Inter-Ocean and Farmer:

In your issue of July 12, I notice an article on "The Question Regarding Hell." That with among other things makes the following assertion: "To deny the possibility of punishment for the perversely sinful soul after death—to seek to deny the existence of a hell—is to deny the justice of God," etc. But allow me to say that it all depends entirely upon what kind of hell we refer to—whether God-made hell—or the man-made hell. The hell described in the Bible have absolutely no fireworks of any sort or description. It is a hell of death—no life at any time at all. "The living know that he shall die, but the dead knows not anything." Eccl. 9: 5; Job 14: 21. "Man has no preeminence over the beast. As one die so dieth the other. All go to one place," etc. Eccl. 3: 19-20. Man's soul is as mortal as his body. When his body goes to the grave his soul is dead. It was Adam's soul that sinned, and it was Adam's soul that died. "The soul that sinneth, it shall die." Ezek. 18: 4-20. "Shall save his soul from death," Jas. 5: 20. Also we read, Thou will not leave my soul in hel—hades." (Greek word for grave—the tomb) and trans-ated "hell" in the English language. Psa. 16: 10; Acts 2: 27. Now in regard to the fact that it is the soul of man which dies when the breath leaves the body, let us notice a few of the numerous proofs in the Bible, such as the following: "The soul that sinneth, it shall die," and death that which is lawful and right, he shall save his soul alive," "which are lost unto yourselves and live ye. Ezek. 18: 4-20. Eccl. 9: 5. "My soul draweth nigh unto the grave." Job 33: 22. "Fear Him who can destroy both soul and body in hell," (hades, the grave) Matt. 10: 28. "His soul (Christ's) was not left in hell," (the grave)—Acts 2: 31. "He shall save a soul from death"—Jas 5: 20. "Every living soul died" Gen. 7: 21. The Bible was full of these proofs. So then, grasping the Truth of God and beholding the fact that He did not make the grave a mistake charged against him by Satan of creating the human race only for death or immortal—but, on the contrary, eternal life is conditional (not forced upon any one), but is a gift of God upon His specific terms and obtainable only by such as seeks for it through faith in the redeeming power of Jesus Christ, who Himself died the just for the unjust reasoning them from the grave and the power of death. "The whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life"—John 3: 16.

So, dear friends, we see most clearly that if Christ Jesus had not sacrificed His own human life for our redemption, all mankind would have become eternal and without any resurrection at any time. And the first death (Adamic death) would thus have brought entire annihilation to the whole human race practically as the Bible doc ares the "Second Death" will be to the then willfully wicked and of whom we read, "But as a natural brute beasts, made to be taken and destroyed, . . . utterly perish in their own corruption"—II Pet. 2: 12. Again ——— "Even so shall it be at the end." Though they had not been"—Obad. 16. As though they had never lived nor had been at any time. Such the Bible declares will be the end of the wilful wicked, but no eternal torture anywhere. Our God is a God of Love. Even satan will meet with instantaneous death at the close of the Lord's 1,000 years reign. The Bible is mostly clothed in symbolic language; for instance, both the sheep and the goats in the Lord's parable are symbolic, and so

OUR OLD COUNTRY CORRESPONDENCE.

Last Echoes of the London Dock Strike.

Proposed Formation of New Great National Unions--Ships Officers Form Union and Agitate for More Pay.

Scottish Miners in Convention--New Trade Union Bill to Allow British Unions to Spend Money on Politics.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

LONDON, Aug. 18.—The London Strike Committee which has been carrying on the transport workers' strike, held a meeting on August 7, and after a few hours' sitting the General Secretary of the Transport Workers' Federation, stated that the committee had been dissolved and any outstanding matters will be dealt with by the London District Committee of the Federation. The question of reinstatement is being left to the various trade union officials. It was also stated that there are about 3,000 permanent men not yet employed and about 7,000 casual laborers who have not yet been taken on.

Harry Orbell, the organizer of the Dock, Wharf Riverside and General Workers' Union, and one of the leaders in the late transport workers' strike, made an interesting statement to a great representative on the future of the Federation. The probable outcome of the late strike," he said, "will be the amalgamation into one huge union of the waterside workers, such as the warehousemen, lightermen and the dock workers. So far as the carmen are concerned I think they will amalgamate with all the vehicle workers of London. What I am anxious to see is one Transport Workers' Union for the whole of Great Britain, including railway servants, all waterside workers, embracing lightermen, cranemen, stevedores and dockers. I think that is too much to hope for for the next few years, but there certainly will be an amalgamation of the vehicle workers' union and the waterside workers, and these two huge bodies will federate with a working understanding with the railway servants. One effect, then, would be that instead of having a number of executives to consult and many officials of various unions there would be only one or at the most two executive and one body of officials governed by the same executive, which would enable us to prevent the playing of one union against the other, which has been very cleverly done in times past by the employers. This would also make things easier for that section of the employers who are anxious to act honestly with the workmen and honor their agreements, and it would at the same time make it very hard for the dishonest employer and in all probability it would wipe him out of existence or at least make him honest."

No sooner has the dock strike come to an end than fresh trouble is threatened in the Port of London. Another shipping strike, it is stated, will begin next week. This time it is the ships' officers who will be concerned or the officers belonging to the National Union of Masters and Mates. The union came into existence on May 7 this year, and has formulated a demand for the following scale of wages: Gross registered tonnage, 2,000 to 3,000—Masters $115, mate $70, second mate $60, third mate $50 per month; 3,000 and over: master $150, mate $75, second mate $65, third mate $55 per month. A demand is also to be made for overtime pay at the rate of 50 cents an hour.

London has been selected for the first experiment. According to the arrangements made by the union officials and committee the owners of a certain ship sailing from London next week will be informed that the ship's scale of pay must be agreed to before the officers will be allowed to sign on again. The name of the ship and the firm concerned are being kept secret, but G. T. Macfarlane one of the founders and joint-secretary of the union, stated to an interviewer on August 5, that representatives of the union had had interviews with six shipping companies and had warned them that unless the demands were complied with their steamers might be held up. The companies mainly affected by the first line, Ballard and King, Scruttons, Furness Withy, Buckalls and the Nelson Line.

A letter had just been sent to the Board of Trade, Macfarlane added, calling attention to the fact that in the near future the National Union of Masters and Mates intended to see that all vessels are equipped with efficient and sufficient life-saving apparatus, even to the extent of fully drawing crews from vessels which do not come up to the standard. He further stated that if this reasonable boat would be accepted that did not permit of handling of each boat by that boat's own crew from either side of the vessel with equal facility.

The nineteenth annual conference of the Scottish Miners' Federation opened on August 7 in Edinburgh, Robert Smillie, president, in the chair. reviewed the events of the past year. Onward to the end of 1915," he said, it was decided that unless the employers recognized their responsibility in paying every person employed undergoing a reasonable minimum wage, the miners would strike. They got through that strike the Government endeavored to settle the dispute, but failed and the Minimum Wage Act was passed. It was quite impossible to give a fair opinion as to the real value of the measure for already they found that the coalowners in some parts of the country are doing their best to make it impossible, to carry it out in the spirit intended. The most serious complaint they had to make was that some of the organized coalowners of Scotland were endeavoring to get the men to contract themselves out of the Miners' Welfare Act, and, to their astonishment reports were coming from all parts of the

ANOTHER BLOW AT THE MIDDLEMEN.

NEW YORK'S State Food Commission in its investigation of food costs, the result of which is now at hand, reaches conclusions which are of widespread interest, being as applicable to other large population centers as to the metropolis. The commission investigated the subject with a special view to ascertaining the defects in local distribution. The report shows that leading food products costing $24,000,000 annually on arrival at terminals in New York city are made to cost consumers above $500,000,000. Ten per cent of the cost of terminals, or $50,000,000, goes to wholesalers, and 30 per cent of these two costs, or over $115,000,000, goes to the retailers. Such a charge of over 40 per cent on the cost at terminals for distribution is needless and indefensible. It is evident that the abandonment of farms and the crowding of population into the cities is far from explaining the high cost of food products. Farm production has not increased as fast as it should have done to keep pace with increasing consumption, but it is not the cost at the farm that is causing the trouble. It is cumbrous and expensive handling of food after it has been produced. It passes through too many hands before reaching the consumer. The figures cited above, applying to New York, can be proportionately paralleled in every big city.

In discussing remedies the New York State Commission points out that there already exist retail unit of food department stores which buy and receive directly and sell directly to consumers, and with them the cost of distribution is only one-half that of the old system. And toward the development of such stores through individual and co-operative enterprise, and even through loans of the public credit, the commission believes efforts should be directed. The result should be lower prices and a higher average of food quality to consumers, and greater advantage to nearby producers, whose dissatisfaction with existing methods of marketing is held responsible for failure to supply a larger share of the food of our cities.

In Pittsburgh a great deal of benefit is sure to come from the enlargement and modernization of the public markets. The city administration is planning to give the people a new market house, with ample facilities for fair direct by producer—but faulty distribution is a big factor in the cost-of-living problem.

TRIUMPH OF BUSINESS OVER POLITICS.

THE business situation in Pittsburgh is so enviable a one that it is the subject of comment in Wall street, where it is agreed that the remarkably satisfactory condition of the iron and steel industry augurs favorably for business of all kinds throughout the country. The Wall Street Journal quotes a prominent financier as saying that the general outlook for business today is brighter than it has been for many years. This interview is by no means an exceptional one. Optimism has become widely prevalent. It is accompanied by no wild bull speculation in the securities markets, very fortunately, for it is a commercial boom and not a speculative one. Its striking characteristic is an unusually active distribution of commodities unmarred by any of the speculative excesses which have been the warrant for much uneasiness in some former eras of commercial prosperity.

One of the most gratifying surprises in recent developments in the iron and steel trade (which is the best barometer), is the particular bright spot of the situation), is the exhibit of unfilled tonnage showed by the latest statement of the United States Steel Corporation. It had been feared in some quarters that the activity of recent months in the mills would be followed by a large decrease in the comparative statements of unfilled orders on hand. Instead of a decrease the statement shows a large increase, and it is now confidently predicted that the shipments of steel for the year by the corporation will exceed by twenty-five per cent those of the best previous year on record.

HOWLAND PRESIDENTIAL PRIMARY BILL.

A BILL has been introduced in the House of Representatives at Washington whose consideration ought to be one of the chief duties of the next Congress. Its author is Mr. Howland of Ohio, and its purpose is the regulation of presidential primaries. It undertakes to create a national board of five members, and in each state a board of three, to have charge of the primaries. Representation of a state in any national convention is to be one delegate for each 10,000 votes which that party polled at the preceding presidential election. The four delegates-at-large, in addition, from each state will be named by the candidate carrying the state. The results will be canvassed by the national board. This system retains the time-honored national convention, but surrounds it with safeguards that it does not now have against control by political machines and corruption-tat forces generally.

The bill would have to be considered carefully in detail before one could say that it is the precise thing that is needed to defeat the habitual efforts of predatory financial and political interests to control the national conventions of both the great parties. The general idea and purpose of the bill are, however, sound and wholesome to a marked degree. One of its best features is the proposal to make the convention representation of a state depend on its actual party vote at the last preceding election. This would reduce the representation of the Southern States in Republican conventions to almost a cipher. In other words, it would make representative conventions truly representative. The bill would also require—or ought to require—the presidential primaries for all parties and all the States of the Union to be held on the same day. A measure of that sort deserves enactment.

MOTHER'S PENSION PLAN.

IT IS surprising to learn that there are no less than forty-one states which have laws empowering the public authorities to farm out to strangers a child whose parents cannot support it. There will be general concurrence with the opinion of a contemporary which says that this breaking up of home ties is cruel and morally destructive. In answer to the question whether it is justified by any necessity the National Probation League says it is not and is trying to have established everywhere the mother's pension plan, which keeps the child in its own home. It is also much less of a burden on the taxpayers than the farming-out system. In New York it costs $12 a month for each child taken from its parents and placed in an institution. In Illinois, under the mothers' pension law, the per capita expense is only $5.75 monthly. The worst effect of the farming-out system is seen among boys, who lose in childhood all home instincts and when they grow up turn out to be vagabonds and wife-deserters, or at all events it is asserted that this is what the researches of the National Probation League discover. The mother's pension plan makes a very strong appeal to sympathy. The efforts of the National Probation League to substitute it for the inhumane "farming-out" plan deserve support and encouragement.

WARREN S. STONE, HEAD OF THE LOCOMOTIVE ENGINEERS.

WARREN SANFORD STONE is one of the most widely known labor leaders in the United States. As grand chief of the International Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers he commands a prominence that is equaled by few. If any of the leaders of other branches of organized labor, Mr. Stone's name has been on thousands of tongues since his threat last spring to call a strike of the engineers on fifty-two railroads east of the Mississippi and north of Washington and the Ohio river if the demand of the men for more pay was not granted. This question was ultimately submitted to a board of arbitration appointed by the supreme court, and Mr. Stone appeared in behalf of the engineers before that body. Born in Iowa in 1860, Mr. Stone was educated at Washington academy and Western college. His entire railroad service was spent with the Rock Island system.

LABOR'S INTERESTS AT NATIONAL CAPITAL.

Report of the Committee to Investigate Violations of the Anti-Trust Act the United States Steel Corporation Gets Rapped Severely for Running Company Stores Contrary to Law--Violations of Contract Labor Laws.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—In the report of the committee to investigate violations of the anti-trust act, particularly directed toward the activities of the United States Steel Corporation, there is much interesting information relative to the conduct of that gigantic commercial enterprise. A chapter in the report is devoted to the "company supply store." Not unlike other monopolistic business concerns the Steel Corporation invades every avenue where profit can be procured. The following is an excerpt upon this phase of the corporation's activity:

"As bearing on the question of employes, the policy of the Steel Corporation in regard to the establishment of the company supply stores is important. The evidence before the committee shows that it is the custom of the company where steel and iron plants are established and towns and villages grow up around the company's plants, through a subsidiary company known as the Union Supply Company, to open stores to supply its employes with groceries, provisions, and almost every article of household necessity, together with powder, fuse and other supplies—in fact, everything the employes need, either to live or to conduct their operations as employes of the company.

"The local grocer, baker, meat and fish dealer, apothecary, blacksmith, carpenters, coal, wood and other dealers are thus brought into direct competition with the Steel Corporation stores. It may be said that this is only the application of fair and free competition. But this is not wholly so. The company stores have great advantages. They deal with their own employes, who constitute 90 per cent of their customers. To be sure the employes are not obliged by any law or rule of the company to buy at the company store, but it is undoubtedly true that they do understand they will be the better considered for doing so.

"The company supply store knows just what is coming in wages every day and week to each employe who deals at the company store. No other local competitor has the benefit of this information. This enables the company supply store to extend credit only to the extent of wages actually due or earned. The result is practically an actual cash business, with no losses in bad debts. The fact that the Steel Corporation does not attempt to maintain these supply stores except where it deals with its own employes, shows pretty conclusively that it has no desire to engage in such trade under ordinary conditions in ordinary competition. It limits its stores to places where it deals almost wholly with its own employes.

"The profits made and dividends declared by the Steel Corporation by this system of supply stores, we think, are pertinent and sufficient to show a prosperity entirely out of the ordinary. This supply company was organized in March, 1903, about a year after the Steel Corporation itself. Its capital stock is $500,000. Its corporate name is Union Supply Company, and it is one of the subsidiary companies of the United States Steel Corporation.

"In 1903, this $500,000 subsidiary corporation declared a dividend of $250,000, and in subsequent years as follows: 1904, $250,000; 1905, $400,000; 1906, $00,000; 1907, $600,000; 1908, $250,000, 1909, $440,000 and 1910, $250,000. It will thus be seen that this corporation has paid its parent company, the United States Steel Corporation, in dividends a total of $1,490,000 in eight years on retail supplies sold almost wholly to its own employes.

"On August 13 President Gompers appeared before a sub-committee of the Senate Judiciary Committee in advocacy of the Clayton injunction limitation bill, which passed the House some time ago. The subcommittee, through its chairman, Senator Root of New York, proffered the information that the Senate would not consider this measure before adjournment, which will undoubtedly occur within a week or two. However, President Gompers stated that he desired to reply to some of the statements made before the committee at one of its previous hearings by opponents of the bill, who had made assertions against members of organized labor that were entirely devoid of truth. President Valentine, of the Iron Molders, addressed the committee, and denied in toto the charges that had been made against him. John P. Frey, editor of the Iron Molders' Journal, also appeared before the committee, and substantiated the statements of President Valentine. Mr. Frey read into the record the crimination conspiracy entered into between the National Founders' Association and the Allis-Chalmers Company during the year 1906 to destroy the Molders' Union. This conspiracy was uncovered by hearings before a court of inquiry, city of Milwaukee, county, Wisconsin. Members of the Iron Molders' Union on strike, or active in union affairs, were not only pursued by hired gun men and sluggers, and arrested, but even Iron molders were killed in cold blood. As the result of the death of Peter J. Conner, a union iron molder, the evidence was so conclusive against the Allis-Chalmers company as being responsible for the murder that the company offered to settle the case out of court before the conclusion of the trial, which was accepted.

CLARENCE DARROW'S ACQUITTAL.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 17.—Clarence Darrow, on trial here for bribery in connection with the McNamara cases, was declared not guilty by the jury at 9:55 a. m. today.

As soon as the court convened today Judge Hutton began reading his charge to the jury. The judge completed his charges early in the morning and the jury immediately retired.

The closing argument for the state —a terrific arraignment of Darrow by District Attorney John D. Fredericks—was concluded late yesterday. Frederick's argument was frequently interrupted by jurors or attorneys for the defense, who wished to ask questions.

In his final summing up Fredericks alleged that Darrow had been guilty of 25 separate crimes in preparing the defense of the McNamara brothers.

With the formal thanking and discharging of the jury the crowd rushed forward to congratulate the Chicago lawyer and his wife, who had sat at his side since the trial began, but with only a passing acknowledgment to them, Darrow and his wife rushed to the jury box.

Judge Hutton was one of the first officials to congratulate Darrow.

"Hundreds of thousands of Italian-Jahs will go up from all the country when they hear of this," said the Judge as he grasped the hand of the vindicated lawyer.

A reception in which the Darrows and members of the jury were the central figures followed lasted until almost noon.

Although the members of the jury declared they were always of one mind, three ballots were taken in order, as one of them said, that "no undue haste" be shown.

The first ballot was 9 to 4 for acquittal and the second 10 to 2. The third ballot showed a unanimous vote for "Not guilty."

The jury that acquitted Darrow was composed chiefly of ranchers, a third of its members being orange-growers

CHIEF RODERICK ON COAL CONDITIONS.

HARRISBURG, Aug. 18.—Although the production of bituminous coal in Pennsylvania last year was extremely heavy, amounting to 148,190,389 net tons, the year was one of the most unsatisfactory in the history of the coal mining industry so far as profits were concerned, says Chief James H. Roderick of the State Department of Mines, in his annual report on the bituminous coal industry.

According to Chief Roderick the bituminous coal business is established by lastly merchandising—production is unrestricted and the great amount of coal on the market naturally keeps prices at a low level. Owing to the restrictions placed by the present laws on such things as price agreements, the Chief reports "a general expressed opinion among those interested in bituminous coal mining that legislation must be secured that will enable the producers to exercise a better control of the industry, under federal supervision if need be. Such control seems essential, too, if real conservation, that is, maximum recovery with minimum waste, is to be accomplished."

During the period 1903-6 for every 1,000 persons employed, 2.93 lost their lives, during the period 1907-10 the ratio was 3.57 per 1,000, a decrease of only .06 per cent. The total of fatal accidents in bituminous mines during the nine years was 4,432.

Among the counties producing, Fayette leads the list of counties with a total of 26,900,265 tons last year; Allegheny is second, with 21,734,630 tons, and Allegheny is third, with 17,816,759 tons. Among other counties, showing large productions are: Cambria, 10,371,650; Washington, 15,378,646; Somerset, 8,976,655; Indiana, 5,656,810; Clearfield, 7,576,934; Jefferson, 5,356,326; Armstrong, 3,760,463; Elk, 1,342,257; Center 1,095,852.

Pastor Russell's Sermon

ONE REDEEMER FOR WORLD'S SIN.

Universal Opportunity for Salvation. Pastor Russell at Berlin—According to God's Plan Opportunity For Eternal Life is To Be Extended to All Mankind—Faith, Obedience and Loyalty the Qualifications—Slightly Dividing the Word of Truth.

BERLIN, Germany, Aug. 18.—Pastor Russell of London and Brooklyn had a splendid hearing here. This is his third visit. He spoke through an interpreter. His text was, "He is the propitiation for our sins (the Church's sins), and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the world."—1 John 2: 2.

As the Jews applied all of God's promises to themselves and left none for the Gentiles, until the end of the Jewish Age, so we Christians have been inclined to appropriate to ourselves all of the grandest features of the Bible, leaving nothing for the Jews and the world in general—until now, in the ending time of this age and the dawning of the Millennium, we are coming to see God's Word in a clearer and more beautiful and harmonious light. Now we see special promises for the Jews in the past, special promises for the Gospel Church, promises for the Jews in the near future, and still other promises and blessings for every creature. And the more the light increases on the pathway the more reasonable the Divine Plan appears to us. Why should God select one nation or people or one religious cult for glory and make promises from the very beginning of creation for the eternal torture of all others? Surely we have been most inconsistent in our interpretations of the Divine Message, yet just as surely the all-wise One knew of our plight and permitted us to remain in darkness until now, and He is able to overrule our measure of blindness so that it will be of no injury to us.

Perhaps, indeed, the beauty of the Divine Word and Plan is much more conspicuous now because of the darkness in which we all were so recently involved, and perhaps the same principle later on will apply to the whole world. When all shall emerge out of the darkness and ignorance and superstition into the glorious sunlight of Divine truth and grace, undoubtedly the contrast will make the blessings of the future all the more precious, and the more incline every knee to bow.

After Divine favor had first granted opportunity to the Jews to accept the Redeemer, shedding valuable light first the special light of the Gospel, then the Message was sent forth without restriction gradually through Asia Minor, into Greece and into Rome, and then favored chiefly the Germanic nations—and amongst these I include the British people and the larger proportion of our American population. In these peoples the Reformation Movement found its chief adherents. The Message of Christ has made great in civilization all the nations it has touched, in proportion as they received the Message in simplicity and purity, and in proportion as they have lived out their Christian profession as footstep followers of Jesus.

LESS FAVOR, NOT LESS WORTHY.

So far as human judgment can discern, the Divine records show that these favored peoples were not superior to others less favored. The Bible shows us some noble characters amongst the Gentile nations before the Message's day and plainly indicates that God intentionally bestowed His favor upon a stiff necked race, less tractable than others at that time. We see the same thing in respect to the opportunities of God's grace during this Gospel Age. Apparently the peoples of India and China were more docile and so much more likely soil for the Gospel Message than any fierce Goths and Huns and Franks to whom the Gospel was more particularly directed. How unlikely it would be that the Israelitered nations should have no provision in the Divine Plan!

On the contrary we perceive that a special election or selection, of a saintly class was made during the Jewish Age—Abraham, Isaac and Jacob and all the Prophets and saintly Jews (Hebrews xi, 38-40.) And since the selection of the saintly Jews for the calling of the Bride class, chiefly from the nations of Europe, implies that when this spiritbegotten, Spiritanil Israel, spiritual children of Abraham, shall be completed, then all nations will be alike favored in the distribution of the coming blessings declared to be for all other peoples, kindreds and tongues.

NO PREDESTINATION TO MISERY.

While speaking last Sunday in the great Victoria Hall of Geneva, my mind naturally went back to the days when that great and good man John Calvin cut such a swath in religious sentiment that it still influenced much of the hair of all Protestants. I saw the monument to Calvin, and I saw the monument unveiled this very year by Calvin's followers to the honor of their great champion, Servetus, whom Calvin so horribly burned to death at the stake. Indeed, I am sure that the monument, as it declares, was not so much of a tribute to Servetus as a protest against Brother Calvin's atrocity committed in the name of Jesus, the Bible, and the God of Love.

We must give John Calvin credit for emphasizing the doctrine of Election, although we cannot give him credit for making that doctrine, for of course it was a Bible doctrine 1500 years before his birth. Had he been contented with emphasizing the election for the Church and had he said, "I know not what will be the fate of the non-elect," he would have deserved to this day our unstinted praise. But alas! to err is human. Calvin was not content to leave the matter thus. He reasoned out his theory, and, his head being imperfect, his conclusions were defective when he surmised that all of the non-elect, whether infants or adult, headed, were predestinated to eternal torture. This feature, purely Calvinistic, and chiefly unscriptural, has been the cause of unutterable difficulty in the theology of Christendom from Calvin's day until now.

THE KEY TO THE PROBLEM.

The key which solves the problem is so simple that we wonder that we have all so long overlooked it. The key is found in the promise made to Abraham that his Seed were the elect, Elect—Jesus the Head and the Church His members—Jesus the Bridegroom, typified by Isaac, and the Church His Bride, typified by Rebecca, Abraham's wife. And this Seed of Abraham when completed according to Divine promise, is to be the channel for blessing all the families of the earth —the living and the dead. The blessing that is to come to all is clearly stipulated by St. Paul, saying, "God our Savior will have all men to be saved (from the condemnation that came on them through Adam) and to come into the knowledge of the Truth."—1 Timothy ii, 3-6.

The basis of the Apostle's argument is set forth in Romans v, 18. He there shows that Adam, and not his race, was put on trial in Eden—that Adam and not his race was directly condemned—but that Adam's race were involved through heredity, by inheriting the weakness and dying conditions of their parent. St. Paul then shows forth in the same argument that the condemnation and death thus passed from Adam to all of his race, so Christ Jesus, having become Adam's Redeemer, Divine mercy through Him extends from Adam to all the members of his race who were involved with him in the death sentence by laws of heredity. The argument is plain. To see it is to be convinced, because it is so logical. And it could not be supposable for a moment that God would provide for the redeeming of the race and not for its making it operative, because the great mass of mankind went down to death without a knowledge of it—many of them during the four thousand years before Christ came into the world to give His life a Ransom.

The explanation is that all went down into the death state—down to the tomb, the death state, in harmony with the sentence, "Dying thou shalt die." Provision is made for the redemption of all from sheol. (Hosea xiii, 14.) Christ died for all and, as a result, there is to be a resurrection of the dead, both the just and the unjust. (Acts xxiv, 15.) The just are the justified, and are the compartively few who have heard of God's grace and have responded and come into fellowship with the Father and been approved of Him are to have share in the better or First Resurrection. The remainder of the world, equally redeemed with the precious blood from the power of the tomb are all to come forth into a resurrection of the dead, "For as all in Adam die, even so all in Christ shall be made alives, each in his own order."—1 Corinthians xv, 22.

THE CHURCH'S SIN—THE WORLD'S SIN.

How clearly our text defines the fact that the Church is a separate and distinct class from the world—a class calling out from the world. As Jesus said, "Ye are not of the world, even as I am not of the world," for I have chosen you out of the world." The ordination of the Church is to association with the Redeemer in His sufferings for the world's sins for the Truth, showing faithfulness even unto death and sacrificing all the earthly interests, to the intent that they might be counted worthy to be associated in the work of blessing the world as the anti-typical, the spiritual, Seed of the Abrahamic promise. Hence we find in our Bibles that we read in our Bibles that Jesus Christ, by the grace of God, tasted death for every man." (Hebrews ii, 9.) But other scriptures bloodhound, reclosed our judgment and led us to think that this text meant every man in Christ. We all know that the Bible declares that "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whoever believeth on Him might not perish but have eternal life." (John iii, 16.) We found it difficult to think that this text to Church when it specifically declares the world. We see now that it applies to the Church first and to the remainder of the world afterward.

Those who in the present life, during this Gospel Age, hear of Christ and have their eyes and understanding open to recognize Him as the Savior, whether infants or adult, unbleaded, were predestinated to eternal torture. This feature, purely Calvinistic, and chiefly unscriptural, has been the cause of unutterable difficulty in the theology of Christendom from Calvin's day until now.

THE KEY TO THE PROBLEM.

The key which solves the problem is so simple that we wonder that we have all so long overlooked it. The explanation is that all went down into the death state—down to the propitiation (satisfaction) for our sins (the Church's sins), and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world."

WILL TRUTH INJURE?

Many ministers all over the world, following the suggestions of the I. B. S. A. Convention, have informed their congregations and the world in general through the newspapers that they do not believe in a hell of eternal torture, and that they do not believe that the Bible, rightly interpreted, teaches this. But there are others who, by some influence, take an opposite course. They denounce the Bible Students, and myself in particular, for telling the people the Truth. These ministers, generally without much influence even in their own congregations, have, I am told, threatened the newspapers all over the world that are publishing our sermons that they will boycott them and influence their congregations.

But the editors are finding out that narrow minded people never have much influence, and so the issues of the sermons still appear in nearly fifteen hundred newspapers in the English language and are spreading, I am told, into the German and Swedish. These brethren claim that the world is likely to be injured and to be turned away from God and the Bible by its proper interpretation. We say, Not so. After the preaching of eternal torment for sixteen centuries the sad result is that everybody is losing faith in the Bible, which has been misinterpreted, and in God, and even losing faith in a personal Creator. In it not time, even for policy's sake, to discontinue this misrepresentation of God and His character to see if the Truth will not accomplish more than the error has done? And aside from the policy question, if we have been slandering our Creator and misrepresenting the Bible for centuries, is it not all the more incumbent upon us now to set the matter right?

Who will deny the fact that life and property are less secure in so called Christian lands, where the eternal torment has been preached for centuries, than in any other part of the world? We assure the dear brethren who are fearful that we have many evidences to prove the very contrary of their fears—to prove that a better knowledge of God and His love, as expressed in the Divine Plan of the Ages, is helping many, not only out of insurance and darkness, but also out of indifference and wickedness, into fellowship with God. But anyway, how dare we, as Christian ministers, misrepresent our Heavenly Father, the character of our God in a way and to a degree that we would resent if charged against our worst enemy?

We fear that some of these misguided brethren are more solicitous for their own supposed welfare and the supposed interest of their own churches than for the glory of God or the welfare of the people. They are afraid to have the people see the light of Present Truth and gain a clear comprehension of the Bible, possibly because they fear that this would reflect upon them as not having properly instructed the people. They seem to know that if the people will read they will be convinced—and if convinced, they will no longer be sectarian, nor pay good money to help to misrepresent God's character and keep the people in ignorance of the true meaning of His Word. This accounts for the wild and fanatical and untruthful misrepresentations of my teachings! They give the people horrible misrepresentations of my teachings to hinder them coming to a knowledge of the Truth. In three different cities ministers in this enlightened Twentieth century have united, one pastor, or many, denouncing my books and burned them after the style of the autodafe of centuries ago. In every case, however, good has resulted. Many more honest minds have been led to investigate—just as when centuries ago, the Bishop of London bought up and burned publicly by the Bible as which Tyndale had translated and published.

MARRIAGE IS HONORABLE.

(Written for Tribune.)

B—Brother A.—It is rumored that you contemplate marriage.

A—Yes. I have thought some along that line.

B—Well, don't you think the tendancy would be to hamper your work, as a Bible colporteur?

A—Why, no—just the opposite. I would find it a splendid help. Two heads gifts which she could use in the work with a fearless male companion, and when she can be as well alone or with a female partner.

B—But Brother A.—Would she not demand some of your time and attention and in this way detract from the Lord's work?

A—Not necessarily—the mutual help to each other would more than offset that. Further, by no means an argument is like this—in my make up I have difficulties which I, as the experiences have failed to overcome, these difficulties might be called natural weaknesses. Now, if I have a helpmeet that is strong just where I am weak, and I should be sensitive where she is weak, how beautifully the two natures will blend, helping each one to victory. I can see how many both be overcomers, when in the ways that we each naturally are struggling against these natural weaknesses, we both may fail.

B—Yes, Brother A., that does look beautiful and reasonable and must be specially pleasing to our Lord if it is the true spirit heavenly children of God that have united for mutual help till to the event that the old fleshy flesh has not been sufficiently crucified to be subdued and it finds a perfect helper in the same unconsecrated condition an offer of marriage would be a stumbling block and would not be accepted, but where the flesh in both parties have been crucified (Gal. 5: 24), it would be the two creatures to be united for mutual help in the Lord's work and for success in overcoming the world—the flesh and the adversary, but the question is: "Would they find it easier to overcome the flesh by placing themselves in a position where it would be difficult to overcome by the fleshly passions?"

A—Brother B—You seem to intimate that it would be wrong for a young brother and sister to marry and be co-workers for the Lord, as they presented flesh from the altar and feed its burning lusts to the glory of God for one instant, or some of the creatures? Can it

TRIBUNE APPRECIATIONS.

Washington, Aug. 18.

As I have before expressed my appreciation of your welcome paper, and its part in proclaiming the Gospel of the Kingdom, I will now say a word in regard to the Letters of Appreciation. I have watched them and read them, and it seems like sitting in a praise, prayer and testimony meeting realizing a measure of the spirit of the Lord in all those expressions of appreciation. Again I find them useful as a means of getting acquainted with those of the brethren whom we could not have known yet, by any other means. And besides, as an advertising medium, they have served it procuring me some 30 copies of back Watch Towers which were out of print, and could not otherwise have been secured. I have noticed too, how that Mrs. G. T. Brooks of Maine, succeeded in finding an extra copy of the 1911 Convention Report, through your columns. All this is very good. Now if any of your readers have extra copies of the Watch Tower of the numbers following, I would be pleased to hear from them.

For 1897, Nos. 7, 19 and 11.
For 1898, Nos. 6, 7, 9 and 18.
For 1899, Nos. 1, 2, 4, 14 and 22.
For 1900, Nos. 1 and 5.
For 1901, No. 7.

These all are out of print and I would be much pleased if I could find them, so as to fill my file. I also lack some from further back, but will leave that out now. If you would print my address in full please, Indeed, I would like to see all the addresses of those of appreciative hearts and not only so but also their testimony and years put under their names in this manner.

Respectfully yours,
HANS HELGESON

"MORITURI TE SALUTANT."

(Written for Labor Tribune.)

"Great Caesar we—who are about to die—
Salute thee was the gladiator's cry,
In the arena standing face to face,
With death and with the Roman populace."

This fierce bravado down the age has by painters limned by poet voices sung,
To show the daring of a warrior race
Meeting grim death unawed with tongue.

Jehovah we who are about to die
Salute thee with a deep, adoring cry
For unto us is known thy mystery
Changed in a moments time we shall not sleep.

But on exalting wings with rapture they
We'll speed to meet the Bridegroom in the air,
Them Satan bound and into prison hurled—
Will bring the promised blessings to the world.

Jehovah we—when comes our time to die—
Will praise thee with our last departing sigh
For thy dear Son who led us in the way
That we of faithful, might behold Thy face.

Oklahoma, Aug. 7.

I feel that I must add my appreciation of your good paper, print, news and knowledge. I subscribed in February through the Watch Tower, and it reaches me every Saturday.

I became enthused with the subject matter, Brother Russell's Sermons, in the early eighties, when I read the "Millennial Dawn" (as printed, I have the Watch Tower complete to date. All the different books I have by me, and have thoroughly weighed, and compared everything with Brother Russell's writing and I find it the reasonable, logical, harmonious and in accord with the Bible from Gen. to Rev. Blind, deep seated sectarian prejudice is all that keeps all the world from accepting this truth, and ushering in the Millennium at once.

You people living in cities don't know how the county preachers teach; you can show them positive from the Bible (asked, or don't teach, and yet they will rage, foam and snort at the congregation, and tell them they have an immortal soul, that will live parallel with God, either in heaven or hell. That this immortal soul at the moment of death goes to heaven or hell and remains there until the judgment day and then returns to the earth, to be reunited with the same body, (if perhaps has dissolved in a million particles, for the judgment remember they were already in heaven or hell. If is worked into a horrible conglomerated mass, and why otherwise could the people will sit—as it were with flames in their mouths—and swallow such God dishonoring stuff as a great mystery to me.

I read the Tribune and then retain or hand it to others. Plies the Glad Tidings along.

New York, Aug. 18.

On the enclosed slip you will find two renewals of the subscription for your Labor Tribune. We value your paper very much, especially that portion of your paper devoted to Biblical sermons and Scriptural Lessons and Questions. We appreciate Pastor Russell's sermons on "The Dead Await Resurrection." What a great relief and comfort one can derive from the scriptural proposition that the wages of sin is death, not eternal torment and that the dead await the time for the resurrection of the dead!

Very truly yours,
D. J. COHEN.

Pennsylvania, Aug. 18.

I am very happy to know you are very faithful in publishing the Sermons, Sunday School Lessons and Question Box. What a beautiful gift.

I tell you what I was about to do. I heard the sermons are very hard on some prejudiced minds, and these minds are working trying to do away with God's word, but I feel sad because these minds will wait till the due time, before our Heavenly Father will permit the sermons to be stopped. I had not intended subscribing again. When I thought, well the Labor Tribune has not given the services yet, but I will send a renewal. If we just look around a little we can see someone else is still fighting a good fight of faith. (1 Tim. 6: 12.) This is the second time I subscribed for the Labor Tribune and I heard what happiness twice, happens thrice. The first I very seen of the Labor Tribune was at Coney Island Park. The Labor Tribune was the paper I wanted and I might say it was love at first sight to get the Tribune.

Yours in the Master's service,

My subscription will be out until next month, but for fear I lose a copy I will send my subscription for six months in advance. I feel like I could go through a tornado without our Tear Sermons from our Pastor Russell, which is doing so much good preaching the Glad Tidings of Great Joy and we can see the clouds growing darker and darker each day. Am also much interested in the Question Box and Sunday School Lessons which does a great help to Bible students. May the Lord's richest blessings rest on you and your paper to help spread the true gospel. Am sending a question:

POPULAR MECHANICS

HINTS FOR CARPENTERS.

Little Things For the Woodworker to Note and Remember.

Every woodworker discovers little short cuts in his work which materially help him to attain rapidity and perfection, says the Blacksmith and Wheelwright.

In measuring with a rule tip it on edge so that the dimension marks are adjacent to the piece being laid out, and in taking a series of dimensions start from one point only. Do not move the rule from one mark to the next.

In setting a gauge do not rely upon the scale on the beam, but file your head with the rule, the end of which can be placed against the head of the gauge and the dimensions run in by the spur.

Always tip a plane on its side when laying it on the bench so as not to dull the iron. For the same reason always raise the plane from the work on the return stroke.

In planing end grain never run the plane entirely across the end, but work from both sides toward the center of the place. This prevents the splitting of corners.

In using an oil stone there are three things to observe: (a) The quality of good oil; (b) clean the stone well before putting it away; (c) use the entire face of the stone, not merely the center. If these precautions are taken a stone should cut perfectly for years.

In sharpening plane irons and chisels always rub on the bevel and never on the back, as this must be perfectly straight at all times to insure perfection in cutting.

In boring never bore entirely through a piece, but reverse the piece and finish the hole from the other side after the worm penetrates.

Do not drive a screw into a board with a hammer, as its holding qualities will be greatly lessened.

Always drive nails and brads at an angle, as they will then hold more securely.

In sandpapering always use a block if possible, as this will prevent rounding edges where they are not wanted.

Sandpaper should be used for cleaning and smoothing purposes only. Do not depend upon it for doing the tool work.

Sandpapering should not be done across grain.

FOR FINISHING WHEELS.

Machine Trues Up the Rims and Bores Out the Hubs.

An English manufacturing concern has recently placed upon the market an interesting machine, especially designed for truing up and finishing the rims and for boring or boring the hubs of wooden wheels. It will handle wheels up to six feet in diameter. Two compound slide rests are provided, one for turning up the rim and faces of the wheels and the other for boring and finishing the hubs. The columns which carry these slide rests can be clamped in various positions on the bedplate, which is attached to the main standard of the machine. They can be easily adjusted and locked in positions suited for wheels of different diameters.

Microthermometers For Liners.

The trouble with the ice pilot question has led to a suggestion for the employment of microthermometers on board ship for the detection of ice in the neighborhood. The proposed arrangement consists in the use of two resistance thermometers, one at the bow about two feet below the water line and the other at the stern as deep as the draft of the ship will allow. In this way the bow thermometer would indicate the presence of a cold surface current, due to fresh water from ice, while the stern thermometer would remain more nearly at the normal sea temperature. A differential recording instrument would therefore immediately indicate the presence of ice.

The Divining Rod.

The phenomenon supposed to be exhibited by the divining rod has now been scrutinized twice in German South west Africa, where something like 800 experiments were made with it in search of water, about 80 per cent of these being successful. It has also been used with success in Egypt in order to indicate the presence or otherwise of veins of salts of potash in the soil. The minister of agriculture in Prussia has appointed a departmental committee to make similar experiments.

Black Metal Polish.

A deep black polish for iron or steel can be made by mixing one part of sulphur in ten parts of oil of turpentine. The mixture should be applied as lightly as possible and heated over a spirit lamp until the required polish is obvious.

GASOLINE BARRELS.

Precautions to Be Observed In Handling Empty Receptacles.

The gasoline is dangerous is pretty generally understood, though the death toll from careless handling is heavy. Usually familiarity with any dangerous thing breeds contempt, and even down in the "oil country" gasoline is treated with a respect that is greater than that given to highly explosive.

Many persons have always had the wrong idea regarding the danger from gasoline. They have taken the great precautions with the full barrels and have given scant attention to the partially filled and empty ones. In fact, very few dealers in the spirit ever given any thought to the care of empty gasoline barrels. That this is wrong is shown by the accompanying picture of an exploded "empty" gasoline barrel. The barrel "went up" while standing in the box car on the platform of the freight station. It is a fifty gallon barrel made of heavy iron. The heads are of a single sheet, slightly crowned and set on a projection rolled on the inside of the cylindrical barrel sheet. A solid welded ring is placed against and around the head, and the end of the sheet is rolled over the ring and tightly clamped. In the exploded barrel the head was bulged like a grocer's scoop, the ring was spent and the crimp of the barrel sheet pulled out straight.

The explosion made a very loud report, and the pieces were blown to a great distance. Fortunately no one was injured, though some damage was done to other equipment about the barrel. By "empty" gasoline barrels is meant those that have been unloaded by dealers or garages, both public and private. They are the barrels rolled out to be returned to the refineries for refilling. These barrels are a source of danger and should receive greater care.

The cause of the explosions of these barrels is the excessive pressure of the gasoline vapor generated when standing in the hot sun. A little oil is liable to be left in them, and if the vent plugs are screwed in tightly there is danger of an explosion. Drain the barrels thoroughly and have the vents opened; also store the barrels in a cool or shady place.—Scientific American.

A Rubber Substitute From Fish.

Consul Frank W. Mahin of Amsterdam states of a factory established in Ymuiden, at the mouth of the North Sea canal, in Holland, to produce a substitute for rubber, and it is reported that the company operating the factory has succeeded in producing a substance having the qualities of rubber and some special advantages over the genuine. While the process is a secret, the principal ingredient is said to be fresh sea fish, which are brought to Ymuiden in vast quantities by the Dutch fishing fleets. According to report, 15 to 16 per cent of natural rubber is added to the fish, and the result is a substance as flexible and elastic as rubber, but much cheaper—about as 12½ to 8½ in price compared with real rubber. The low price of this product will be caused partly by the byproducts which are possible, for it is said that certain substances will be made from the fish and that half of the factory is arranged for the manufacture of fertilizer.

Waterproof Cement.

Soap waterproofer of cosmetic seems to have proved effective in a grain elevator on the Danube, in Germany. The inert matter to be waterproofed was built up to a thickness of about three and a half inches with concrete containing about 275 pounds of cement and 25 gallons of water per cubic yard, and this was lined with a half inch layer of cement mortar composed of one part cement and mixed with water supplying about nine pounds of common potash soap for each cubic yard of concrete. When a sudden inundation came, the wall resisted leakage, while the water penetrated readily into a neighboring structure not protected by the waterproofed cement.

Sheep Shearing by Electricity.

A novel application of electric power is that of shearing sheep and clipping horses. The apparatus consists of a suitable electric motor connected by a flexible shaft to the ordinary shearing head. The motor is of the two speed type and can be employed also to drive a rotating brush for grooming horses or a small emery wheel for grinding the clipper combs.

CHARCOAL IRON.

New Process of Manufacture Eliminates All Impurities.

It is announced at Philadelphia that a new process of manufacturing charcoal iron, invented by J. Jones Hudson of Philadelphia, is being successfully operated by the Vulcan Charcoal Iron and Steel company at Crum Lynne, Pa., under the supervision of the inventor, who is general manager of the company. It consists of melting the charge between layers of charcoal in a specially designed furnace of the open hearth type. By the introduction of blasts of cold air through tuyeres the metal is oxidized and boiled, filtered through the charcoal, which consumes the impurities, eliminating them from the molten mass.

Charcoal may be sifted at any time during the heat and is generally added near the end to flush any injurious gases that may arise, thereby insuring complete purification of the metal. The method has the effect of purifying and refining the iron by decarburization and palleting. It is stated that it may be applied to the manufacture of "charcoal steel" with equally valuable results. The furnace at present employed at Crum Lynne is of fifteen tons capacity. It has a basic lining and is fired at the ends by all burners. In the front and back walls there are six tuyeres each, through which a blast of cold air is conducted into and on the charge.

Canals and Vessel Size.

C. E. Grunsky in his report to the international congress of navigation concludes that a limit should be set on the draft of seagoing vessels, that government aid should not be extended to the building or operation of seagoing vessels with a draft exceeding 23.3 feet and that the maximum dimensions of seagoing vessels built or operated under government subvention should be fixed by international agreement along the following suggested dimensions: Length over all, 900 feet; breadth, 105 feet; draft, 32.3 feet.

HANDY TIRE REMOVER.

Device Slides Around Wheel Between the Rim and Shoe.

For the speedy removal of automobile tires the device patented by a New York man should appeal to motorists. Instead of a motorist standing in the middle of a road on a hot day and laboriously pulling the tire off a wheel, insert the tool shown here and loosen the shoe in a twinkling.

This tool consists of a long bar with a circular hook on one end to encircle hub of the wheel. At about the middle of this bar is a plate that fits over the rim of the wheel and has a downward projection that reaches in between the wheel and tire and pries the latter loose as the whole implement is revolved around the hub. With this to simplify the removal of a tire, punctures will lose some of their terrors to motorists.

Burnishing With Steel Balls.

By introducing steel balls into a rumbling barrel, says the Engineer, it is possible to polish castings and, in fact, actually to burnish them to a very high degree. Since the process is completely mechanical it can undoubtedly be introduced in many brass foundries with the result of saving labor costs. It appears to be customary to use enough steel balls to make up approximately twice the volume of the pieces which are rumbled. The size of the balls ranging from one-quarter inch down to one-sixteenth inch in diameter.

THE FAVORS TEACHINGS OF BROOKLYN TABERNACLE BIBLE STUDIES

DELIVERANCE TO THE CAPTIVES.

Luke iv, 16-30—Aug. 25.

"He came unto His own, and they that were His own received Him not."—John i, 11.

THE people of Nazareth would of course feel certain sense of pride in their fellow-citizen whose fame was spreading throughout all Galilee and Judea. They could scarcely believe what they had heard about Jesus. He never did such miracles in all the years that we knew Him, said they. They did not, of course, understand that He had received His power as a special benediction when He was thirty years of age, as a result of His consecration of His life to the Divine service, symbolized by His immersion in Jordan.

At length He came to Nazareth. It was on a Sabbath day. For long years He had done the congregational reading. This was the custom in the synagogues of Nazareth. It is probable that they selected Him to do it because of His reputation. He went into the synagogue and read the lesson for the day.

There are all sorts of ways of reading, but when Jesus began to comment there were whisperings of disapproval, and finally an outburst of wrath against Him. All over Nazareth that young man has lost His head.

They drove Him out of the synagogue with angry demonstrations. They led the way toward the brow of a hill, that they might push Him over. For a little way some went with them. He turned and passed through their midst, overawing them by the dignity of His presence.

The Truth That Angered.

At first we read, "All bare Him witness, and wondered at the gracious words that proceeded out of His mouth." What made the change? It was the plain declaration that they did not believe in Him fully, therefore it would not be God's will that He should perform any miracles for them. He backed up His statement with illustrations from the past which angered them still more.

Instead of the people of Nazareth getting angry and resenting these things, they should have said, Tell us, then, of our sins, that we may go up to and come them. If God has blessings, surely we, as Israelites, may have our share if we will but come into the right attitude of heart.

The Lesson From Isaiah.

The lesson for that Sabbath was from Isaiah lxi, 1-3. It was an excellent text, and the sermon on it was from the ablest of teachers. How His hearers should have rejoiced to know that they were living in the day of the fulfilment of these words! Jesus had been anointed by the Father with the Holy Spirit, that He might declare good tidings to the poor. Surely many of them were poor and needy!

We read further that Jehovah sent Jesus to heal the broken-hearted. How those words would have appealed to any that were broken-hearted!

The declaration further was that the blind would receive their sight, that liberty would be granted to the captives, that the

"They led him to the brow of the hill, that they might cast him down headlong."

acceptable year of the Lord" would be proclaimed.

"Deliverance to the Captives."

This part of the message might have been applied in part to Nazareth. Were they not captives, bound by the fetters of sin, the fetters and chains of heredity, sickness, poverty, and death? Were not they actually blind also, as respected the eyes of their understanding? Were they not all bruised by this all-mentally, morally and physically?

But the fact that Jesus was doing was merely the proclamation of these things, with a few examples of healing, etc. The real time for Him to accomplish the deliverance of the captives, the liberating of the sin-bruised, and the giving of sight to the blind, belonged to the Messianic Kingdom time. What Jesus was doing was merely a foreshadowing of the things to be accomplished in future—in the Times of Restitution of all things which God hath spoken by all His Holy Prophets."—Acts iii, 19-21.

Proclaiming "the Acceptable Year."

This brief expression, so little understood, contained the whole work of Jesus, far more important than the miracles. The term, "acceptable year," or acceptable time, refers to the Gospel Age of more than 1800 years.

No opportunity had been granted in the past to become dead with Jesus, to walk in His steps. The proclamation of this opportunity waited until Jesus had made His own sacrifice, and until all who accepted His Message and became His followers did so under His invitation or proclamation. It was the privilege of becoming the sons of God by a begetting of the Spirit.—John i, 12.

Then She Got Mad.

She having nothing else to say—it's funny how we ever came to think so much of each other. Ha—Funny! It's positively ridiculous!

EVERYBODY'S BIBLE QUESTION BOX

YOUR BIBLE DIFFICULTIES WILL BE ANSWERED FREE IF MAILED OR BROUGHT TO THE OFFICE OF THE NATIONAL LABOR TRIBUNE, COLUMBUS, OR BY HOME, IF SENT TO THE EDITOR OF THIS DEPARTMENT.

Q.—What became of Adam when he died; did he go to heaven or hell?

Answer.—We may be sure Adam did not go to heaven at death, because three thousand years later Jesus said: "No man hath ascended up to heaven." (John iii, 13). The judgment, or sentence, of death was passed upon Adam by the Lord, who said, "For dust thou art and unto dust shalt thou return." (Genesis iii, 19). This judgment of death was profoundly enforced during a period of 930 years, by Adam gradually access to the life giving food in Eden (see Genesis ii, 7; 3:1, 22) the end of which time Adam was completely dead. He therefore went into the death condition. He went to hell—not the hell of the Dark Ages, which has been represented as a lake of fire and brimstone, but to the hell of the Bible, which word is translated from the Hebrew word sheol and the Greek word hades, and properly translated into the English word grave, tomb, or state of death. Likewise all of Adam's children, inheriting the death sentence, have followed him, at death, to the tomb. The entire race would have been exterminated had it not been that God provided for the redemption and resurrection of the race through Jesus, "Who gave His life that we might have life."

Q.—If all people are to be converted to Christ before he comes to set up his Kingdom, why is it written in Revelation xi, 18, that "the nations were angry" at his coming?

Answer.—It is a mistake to suppose that the earth will be converted at the time of the second coming of Christ. His coming and the establishment of His Kingdom are for the very purpose of converting the world and uplifting mankind in general out of sin and death conditions which now prevail. In describing the work of Christ, the Apostle mentions the Kingdom, saying, "He must reign till He hath put all enemies under His feet, [all incorrigibles, etc.] The last enemy to be destroyed is death." (1 Corinthians xv, 26). The anger of the nations at the time of the Second Advent will be exclusively set against the Lord; but rather the spirit of self-ishness, which is already prevalent in the world, will break forth as a consuming fire, destroying the social, political and bringing utter ruin. At that time Messiah's Kingdom will intervene for the preservation of mankind and for the establishment of a new order of things. His new order of things will result in converting the world to righteousness (Isaiah xi. 2-5), and the peoples of earth "shall beat their swords into plow shares, and their spears into pruning hooks and nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more" (Isaiah ii, 4).

Q.—The Scriptures declare, "They shall be all taught of God" (John vi, 45). Does God teach each one of His children directly through His Word?

Answer.—God uses various instrumentalities for communicating His instructions. Thus the Lord Jesus Himself is called the Father's "Word"—the Message, the Logos (John i, 1; Revelation xix. 13). St. Paul speaks of Him, saying, "God, who at sundry times and in divers manners spake in times past unto the fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son" (Hebrews i, 1, 2). This message has been repeated by the Apostles. We read that when the Lord "ascended up on high He . . . gave gifts unto men;" and these gifts are still with us. He explains them either to be apostles, prophets, evangelists, pastors and teachers, "For the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the Body of Christ, until we come unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ" (Ephesians iv, 8; 11-13). So we see that the instructions of God may come through His faithful teachers, evangelists, etc., but they must all be recognized as from the Father through the Son.

Q.—Was Job a real personage, or only an allegorical character?

Answer.—We believe Job to have been a real person—a man. He is referred to in the following Scriptures: Job i, 1; Ezekiel xiv. 14-20; James v, 11. This does not alter the fact, however, that a great allegorical lesson is taught by Job's experiences. As a whole, his life represented the experiences of the human family in the loss of everything. Job lost his children, friends, home, health, the affections of his wife—all—and he was nigh unto destruction in the tomb. Then came the turning point. He was restored to Divine favor and to all the blessings which he had formerly enjoyed, and with abundance more than he ever had before. This pictures the experiences of the human race. Adam, in Eden, was perfect, joyful and rich in life and a perfect home. He lost all of these, being driven from Eden and compelled to battle with the sterile soil of the earth. By and by, when the "Restitution of all things, spoken by Jehovah through His holy prophets," shall have come to the world, the human race will likewise be restored to Divine favor and receive greater blessings than ever before experienced.

Q.—Why did God give us a Bible so difficult to understand? Why wasn't the Bible written in such a way that it could be as easily understood as the daily paper? (Scribe.)

Answer.—The Bible is generally conceded to be one of the most difficult books in all the earth to understand. The brightest minds of the world for centuries have differed as to its teachings. Whole denominations have been written or authored where views have conflicted woefully with one another. The entire Christian world today is divided into many sects, and one hundred factions whose ideas as to the teachings of the Bible are at variance with each other. Yet the Bible is hard to understand, and few there are who do understand it. It is probably evident that the Great Author did not wish it to be understood by all, and the Bible itself testifies in harmony with the thought. The disciples came to the Master on one occasion and asked Him, practically the same question that we are now considering. They said "Why speakest thou unto them (the people) in parables (dark sayings)?" (See Matthew xiii, 10-13.) Do you not teach the people in clear, plain, and simple language, so that all can understand? He answered and said unto them, Because it is given unto you (my followers) to know the mysteries of the Kingdom of Heaven, [not to these it is not given"—Matthew xiii, 10, 11). The "mysteries of the Kingdom," the divine plan of the Ages revealed in the Scriptures, the knowledge of which, is only for those who come into harmony with the Divine will of the Almighty God, the Sovereign Lord of all creation. The Bible is a sealed book to all others, no matter how intelligent they may be. See 1 Corinthians ii, 7-14.

Q.—If Christ was God the Father, and God the Son, and God the Holy Spirit; how could a voice from heaven say—"This is My beloved Son," when He was a man on earth? (Diogenes).

Answer.—This is an age of general enlightenment. Knowledge is increasing along all lines, and specially so in regard to the teachings of the Scriptures. The superstitions and prejudices of the darker past are fading away in the light that is gradually widening out into the perfect day. The shadows of ignorance and prejudice are still lingering here and there, but those minds of bolder array that have broken the beads and shackles of the creeds and traditions of former times, are rejoicing in the glorious liberty that comes to those who know the truth. God's Word has been woefully misrepresented both by friends and foes, and because many have been taught to believe that the absurd theories found in the creeds are contained in the Bible; these, in the light of our day, are rejecting the Bible as the inspired Word of God in place of studying the Scriptures to ascertain what they really teach. The expression of the creeds, contained in the quotation, is nowhere found in the Bible. Our Lord Jesus never claimed to be "God the Father;" but always said that He was the Son of God. "My Father is greater than I." "God sent His Son into the world." The Holy Spirit was not His own Father; but as the Scriptures declare He "was the beginning of the creation of God." The voice from heaven was the Son on earth proves absolutely, unless we deny our reasoning faculties and common sense reliable, that the Heavenly Father and our Lord Jesus are two distinct personalities.

Q.—What is meant by the expression "unknown tongues" as mentioned by the Apostle in 1 Corinthians xiv, chapter? Is it possible for any one to speak in unknown tongues at the present time? (J. J. L.)

Answer.—On the day of Pentecost, as the Apostles were gathered together in Jerusalem, the holy spirit, the power of God, rested upon them and by its influence they were enabled to speak in unknown languages, so that the peoples of different countries and nationalities were able to understand the message which the Apostles were delivering. (Acts ii, 1-12.) This gift of the spirit was conferred upon others of the Lord's followers later and was for the purpose of qualifying them to bear witness to the truth to people of foreign lands. In the chapter referred to in the question, the Apostle discourses at some length on this subject of "tongues" and explains that they were merely for a sign which was not to be used unless an interpreter were present. Although he could speak in more tongues or languages than all of the brethren, yet he would rather speak five words and be understood than to utter ten thousand words and not be understood. When the Church was universally established and the Gospel message in its completeness had gone abroad, there was no longer any need for the "signs" of the miraculous gifts of the spirit, and, therefore, they ceased. (1 Corinthians xiii, 8.) It is true that some today have the faculty of speaking in unknown tongues, but this is not accomplished through the power of the Lord; it is of the evil one. A single glance at the frenzied rendition, and the paroxysms of those speaking in unknown tongues, should be conclusive evidence that they are obsessed by demons or evil spirits.

PRETTY SUMMER FURNITURE THAT IS NEVER UNSEASONABLE

For the interior use as well as for the summer porch housewives are beginning to recognize the usefulness and artistic possibilities of wicker furniture. Each season brings out prettier designs and newer uses for it. Illustrated here is a charming wicker chair and lamp to match, which will make an ideal addition to the room of the daughter of the house just home from college, or it will make an admirable afternoon tea table. A smart cushion may be added to the old fashioned rocker. They used to call these splint bottomed chairs. The rustic finish adapts it for the porch, but its easy lines and comfortable headrest make it one of those chairs that are dear to us at all seasons.

THE NEW FIRELESS COOKER A CULINARY MIRACLE WORKER.

MANUFACTURERS have got the art of making fireless cookers down to such a fine point that most of the drudgery connected with cooking is eliminated. For instance, if you own a fireless cooker like the one shown here you may prepare corned beef and cabbage or any other odorous viand without offending the most fastidious member of the family. Moreover, on hot days you can put the food in the cooker and let the apparatus do the rest. Biscuit, cake, even bread, may be baked in it.

THE UP TO DATE FIRELESS COOKER.

These marvels are achieved by the use of somatonic plates, which are first heated on the gas or oil stove or the range. The multiplication of somatones increases the heat in the cooker and is necessary for baking, but if the food is started on the fire it may then be transferred to the cooker with the assurance that it will come out of it several hours later perfectly cooked and not scorched or burned, no matter how much it may be overtimed.

ARTISTIC LIGHTS FOR THE HOME

Attractive Lamps In Many Rare and Lovely Forms Are Available In the Shops at Very Moderate Prices.

THE lighting of the home is a problem that requires as serious consideration as the decorating of walls or ceiling and the choice of furniture. There is a philosophy of lighting as well as a philosophy of living.

The choice of the kind of light is largely a matter of convenience. There is no doubt that the old fashioned candle, so far as softness and artistic effect are concerned, was ideal, but modern ingenuity has solved the problem of giving us candle-like illumination with electric light.

Candelabra, with each branch equipped with electric bulbs, are made in many artistic designs. When shades are slipped over the bulbs the result is a softly shaded light that closely approximates the beauty of candlelight.

In a country house candlelight is charming. For illuminating the dinner table or for lighting the sitting room on some idle rainy evening, when nothing particular is to be done indoors, it is delightful. Cheap candlesticks in pretty shapes are to be bought very reasonably in the shops.

Sometimes in attics in the country are to be found old brass candlesticks furnished with cordigrin. Their appearance may discourage the uninitiated, but patience and a little rubbing will restore the candles to their pristine brightness. In cleaning candlesticks of this sort household ammonia will be found very useful. Dip the flannel rag with which you scour the candlestick into the ammonia before rubbing on the fine sand soap, then scour vigorously. Sometimes a little of the ammonia brushed over the verdigris before it is cleaned will help to loosen the crust. If it is very thick the outer layer may sometimes be scraped off. Boiling in salt and vinegar will help to brighten the candlesticks.

Glass or china candlesticks are inexpensive and cheap. The delft models are particularly pretty, especially if finished with shades of delft blue.

The care of candlesticks is important. They should be inspected every day, cleaned and filled when necessary. The candles should be changed about, so that those in a pair of sticks are both kept the same length. Brass candlesticks require polishing twice a week, and glass ones must be washed almost every day. If the candles are removed and the sticks set on a paper before or after the store all the superfluous wax may be easily taken off by rubbing with a soft cloth.

The housewife can save the ends of the wax candles. They are useful on ironing day. New candles may be made from them by melting the candles, taking out the bits of wick and then running the wax into paper candels, in which a wick is suspended.

Lamps either for oil or for electric light are receiving the attention of the most gifted designers, and some wonderfully pretty shapes are being turned out. Some of these are in bronze, silver, glass or fine china.

Wickerwork lamps are quite a new notion and have no sense to polish, no china body to wash nor even a china shade. Even the shade is wicker covered. These lamps come in all sizes and are painted and stained in tints matching the furniture.

Even where the house is lighted by electricity the pleasure of soft lamplight is not quite to be dispensed with, and these lamps, therefore, so appropriate for summer use, will probably become more than popular.

In shades for lamps there are some Japanese grass cloth in red, green and gold color. These have a silhouette design over them and a binding of black paper picturing a moose in the woodlands. The shade is wholly appropriate for the lover of outdoors.

The lamps shown here are fancy ones suitable for ornamenting the dinner table. One is in the form of a small cherry tree and is supplied with several bulbs. The other is in the shape of a single branch, from the end of which springs an American Beauty rose in whose petals nestles the bulb.

Progressive Women.

The legislative assembly of Manitoba has recently adopted an amendment permitting women to study and practice law in that province.

"Woman's Who's Who of America" is, its publishers claim, to be a "biographical dictionary of notable women of the United States and Canada."

Dr. Yamins Rae of China is said to be the first woman admitted to the fellowship of the Royal Faculty of Physicians and Surgeons at Glasgow.

Princess Hedwig Maritza of Bontsock is credited with having sent in the only essay worthy of a prize in a competition held at Gottingen university.

Miss Frances Perkins of New York, executive secretary of the Consumers' league, has resigned to accept the position of secretary to the state committee of safety, succeeding Dr. Charles H. S. Reyes. The committee was formed directly after the Triangle fire, its chief aim being the protection of life and property against fire.

THE WAY WITH WOMEN.

A woman's sense of humor is a treacherous thing. It deserts her when she has most need of it—when she is in love.

The chief trouble with life is that we are apt to profit from learning its lessons till it is too late for them to be of any use to us.

It was a cynic who said that the wedding march was a splendid battle hymn. In the matter of fact, he was right—musically speaking.

A man's manner before marriage is as much like his manner after as the bicycle in the shop is like the one you have used for a few months.

Fancy Work Stitches.

A conventional figure that is easily adapted is an oval composed of four rows of dots, the largest on the outside. This design may have the dots worked in slightly padded satin stitch or for coarse effect eyelets can be used. A bold border could have three rows of the ovals, the outer walls measuring an inch and a half by an inch and a quarter, the next an inch by three-quarters and the inner ones half an inch by three-eighths. The size of the dots is proportioned to the size of the oval.

Suffrage in North Dakota.

An active state-wide campaign is being planned in North Dakota, and legislative work will receive the first attention of the leaders of the movement, who have outlined a progressive program for the coming year.

Simple Disinfectant.

For disinfecting the sickroom take half a cupful of common salt and two or three ounces of sulphuric acid. Upon the salt pour one-half ounce of the acid and stir briskly. Every fifteen minutes repeat this until all the acid is used.

Tainted meats, fish or other stuffs can be purified by being covered in a tight box with salt and sulphuric acid. All effluvia of unwholesome nature can be removed from a room by burning powdered coffee upon a fire shovel.

Woman's World

Mrs. Thomas Marshall Sure of Democratic Success This Fall.

MRS. THOMAS R. MARSHALL, WIFE OF THE DEMOCRATIC NOMINEE FOR VICE PRESIDENT.

Mrs. Thomas R. Marshall, wife of the Democratic nominee for vice president, is sure that the Democratic ticket will win this fall because, as she explains, "You never lose in a losing fight." So much for feminine logic. But should this charming woman ever become the "second lady in the land" the role will be in mighty capable hands.

Along in the early nineties Mr. Marshall while acting as special judge in the circuit court of Angola, Ind., met Miss Lois Kinsey, who was serving as a deputy for her father, who was clerk of the court. It was not long before the special judge began to turn his attentions to that branch of the law under the gentler head of "domestic relations," and in 1896 he submitted his brief to Miss Kinsey. His presentation of the case was so able that she was induced to become Mrs. Marshall of Columbia City.

Governor Marshall recently referred to his matrimonial life "as one long honeymoon." He and his wife are chums in the very best sense of the word, and to use Mrs. Marshall's own words: "My profession is being the wife of Thomas R. Marshall. This is my business, my pleasure and my work in life, my vocation and my avocation."

The wife of Indiana's governor has a charming personality and is rather above the medium height, slender and graceful, with a frank manner that must have been of inestimable value to her husband during his fledgling days in Indiana politics. She presides over the gubernatorial mansion in Indianapolis with tact and serene composure. She is fond of reading, and her library is the one room which she disarranged in her Columbia City home when her husband became governor. Neither she nor Mr. Marshall could endure the thought of having their books out of order. So the favorite nook fill a big corner in the library of the Hoosier white house.

As for fads, Mrs. Marshall disclaims any unless it is her devotion to her home. She makes a study of artistic surroundings and is to be counted among the women who have ever loved their friends and needlework, but the higher education and the distinctive talent for politics have not lured her from this early attachment. Although Mrs. Marshall is of decided literary tastes, her friends say that few housewives can mix a better cake or turn out more wholesome pie and bread. And should the goddess of the frying pan call to appear or get otherwise, the governor's lady can don an apron and dish up a banquet fit for a king.

The Marshalls, although comfortably endowed as to income, are not rich people and are entirely unobtrusive and modest in their entertainments. They have never posed as social leaders, and they rather dread such a distinction. But Mrs. Marshall is sure that she will like official life in Washington."

The following very characteristic story was told by Mrs. Marshall to Mrs. Wilson before it was known that her husband had been nominated for vice president.

There are three daughters in the Wilson family, and Mrs. Marshall had that fact in mind when she wrote:

"I am not unmindful of the fact that there are four women rejoicing where there would have been only one had your good fortune been mine." As every one knows, Governor Marshall was one of the Democratic possibilities of the recent campaign.

TRIBUNE APPRECIATIONS.

PASTOR RUSSELL AND BILLY SUNDAY DISAGREE ON HELL-FIRE.

The "Anti-Hell-Fire and Brimstone" Resolution Accepted in Washington, D. C., Draws the Fire of Clergymen Elsewhere.

Almost Unanimous Ministerial Repudiation of the "Hell-Fire and Brimstone" Theory.

(By the Religious Perambulator, Official Reporter for the I. B. S. A.)

The hot Mid-Summer Convention of the International Bible Students at Glen Echo Park, Washington, D. C., in passing their now famous resolution, made no big a noise about "Hell-Fire and Brimstone" that the old ecclesiastical dinosaur was thoroughly roasted and put to flight, and an excitedly new formation of fervor is now in the making. It surely was a big gun that was fired from Glen Echo into the camp of the stand-patters, and the noise will echo and re-echo throughout the ecclesiastical heavens for some time to come.

General Wm. P. Hall, U. S. A., a brave Indian fighter of the past, in calling for the public repudiation of the hell-fire theory, claimed that to do so would create a situation in America that would enable thousands of ministers to publicly declare what they freely admit privately. The desired repudiation was made and the general spontaneous response from ministers of all denominations vindicates the General as an accredited Israelitian.

The present general repudiation of the hell-fire theory by the clergy of the Evangelical Alliance will no doubt be considered by the public as a startling admission, and is in striking contrast with the opinion still held by ninety per cent of the people who were reared under and taught by those same clergy. The impressions gained in childhood from the mind that the Bible was the authority for the fire-and-brimstone hell will be hard to erase. It is acknowledged that seventy-five per cent of the people reared under sectarian instruction, when arriving at the age of discretion, discard as unchristian and unreasonable the hell-fire mythology of the Middle Ages, and as they believe the Bible responsible for the doctrine, they lose respect for the Bible and for the Church, and discard both and join the ever growing population composed of detached Christians and skeptics.

The mid-summer resolution repudiating and voiding to the sea heap the red-hot hell fire deception, so wonderfully described by Milton and Dante and pictured by Gustave Dore, will probably be likened unto Shakespeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream," by Billy Sunday, Gipsy Smith and their kind. It's tough on these gentlemen, too, at this stage of their meteoric career, to be deprived of their hell-fire-and-brimstone stock-in-trade, only armament. Their undoing, however, will be a sweet morsel for the wise and Religion Congress people, who have declared against "Itinerant Evangelists."

From among the hundreds of recently published expressions from leading clergymen of all denominations on the Washington "anti-hell-fire" resolution we quote:

Canon Hensen of Westminster Abbey, in confirming repudiation of the eternal torment doctrine of the "dear ages," said: "I think the American religious public is generations behind us, although I don't say that individual American divines aren't the equals of ours."

The famous R. J. Campbell of London, representing the Non-Conformist clergy, said: "The scene is not to be a very belated pronouncement. I don't know any clergyman here who believes in the eternal punishment, nor do I think any educated clergyman has done so for many years."

Rev. Arthur L. Odell, a St. Louis pastor, said: "I do not know of any Presbyterian minister who believes or preaches this idea. Of course, this literal hell was an idea widely held in earlier years, but the church is breaking away from many of the conceptions of past ages."

Archbishop Glennon, although avoiding the direct question, leaves the impression that the Catholic clergy no longer believe in literal hell. He said: "It is too hot to talk about such a subject today. As to whether Catholic clergymen preach hell fire, I will say that we preach the faith and our faith is the faith of the church."

Rev. David R. Phelan, Editor Western Watchman, stated: "Catholic priests do not preach a hell of fire. The church has not taken a definite position on the subject."

Rev. Dr. James W. Lee of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, stated: "I do not believe in a fire-and-brimstone hell, and I think I have never heard but one sermon in which that belief was expressed, and that was down in Georgia years ago."

Rabbi Adolph Rosenritter is quoted as saying with emphasis: "The resolution passed by the Bible Students at Washington ought to have been passed 1,500 years ago. I do not believe in a literal hell of fire, of course. Orthodox Jews do not hold that idea."

"The Christian Leader and Way" prints the following: "The American Association for Bible Study has solemnly stated that there is no hell. A unanimous vote of English ministers has adopted the same view. A few days ago the Ministerial Association of Marietta solemnly pronounced or indorsed a like doctrine. In other words, the authorities at the Christian churches seem to agree that the old Biblical conception of a hell of unending torment, of fire and brimstone, is illogical and unfaithful."

Pastor Russell of London and Brooklyn Tabernacles says: "If the Bible does teach that Eternal Torture is the fate of all except the saints, it should be preached, yea, thundered, weekly, daily, hourly. If it does not so teach, the fact should be made known and the foul stain dishonoring God's holy name removed."

Until the passing of the Washington resolution few ministers could safely publicly repudiate the hell-fire error, lest they be charged by other ministers with seeking personal notoriety as a sort of unorthodox circus of antics in Ministerial Associations of fiendish, individual action on this and kindred matters. Now that the theological atmosphere has been cleared of a discreditable and deserving fallacy the clergy feel relieved, and it is hoped by many that stranded Christians and even some skeptics may be regained to denominational activities.

Many I. B. S. A. delegates were most positive in their statements that the vast majority of clergymen were in hearty agreement with the President of the I. B. S. A. on the hell-fire myth, and that they would gladly go on record, if opportunity afforded, and the world-wide spontaneous response more than justifies their claims. However, there is no hope expressed that Billy Sunday and Pastor Russell will agree.

Pastor Russell, President of the International Bible Students Association, in the past has practically stood alone in the lime-light on the anti-hell-fire platform and withstood severe and unjust criticism. Now that leading clergymen of many denominations have mounted the same platform he will henceforth be only one of a gallaxy of strong preachers to share the brunt of battle against literal fire-and-brimstone adherents.

Progressive ministers do not expect to find the battlefield entirely vacated by the stand-patters. It would be expecting too much to hope that all ministers would get into the band wagon immediately, and a few ministers of wealth and prominent congregations will not willingly admit past errors, fearing that such an admission would cause laymen to threaten them. These stand-pat ministers would like to bring about a countrywide onslaught against Pastor Russell and all other anti-hell-fire preachers.

Progressives, however, are not to be deterred by this minority element, which is evidently not in sympathy with the common need, and as a result the people inside and outside of all churches will, through the statements of ministers published in the press, learn that the Bible does not teach the unreasonable doctrine of a literal lake of fire and brimstone.

The resolution adopted in Washington follows:

Resolved, That it is the sense of the International Bible Students Associates here assembled, that we do not find the Bible to teach the doctrine of a literal "hell-fire" or place of "fire and brimstone" for the punishment of the wicked; that that secular history of the formation of the creeds of the Christian people proves the fact that for various reasons, either wisely or unwisely, the doctrine of torment by "hell fire" was added to the Gospel as taught by Jesus and the Twelve Apostles, persuading many ultraliteral interpretations of the Lord's parables. We, therefore, now unreservedly repudiate as unbecomingly unscriptural the teaching of a place, state or condition of a literal "lake of fire and brimstone" for the torment of the wicked; and, further, we believe in the mercy personal immortality, that the vast majority of ministers of all protestant denominations have privately repudiated the "hell-fire" theory, but have for supposedly good reasons hesitated to fully inform their congregations; and, further, we believe, on this account thousands and perhaps tens of thousands are being

Building Trades Moving Towards One General Union---Railway Workers Benefiting by All Ropnd Increase of Wages--Boilermakers to Ballot on Important Question--Derbyshire Miners Will Not Run Parliamentary Labor Candidate.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

LONDON, Aug. 22.—A conference of building trade delegates has been convened to take place in London on October 21. The subject to be considered is the proposed amalgamation of all the unions in the building trade. Voting is now in progress and is to be completed and sent to the Parliamentary Committee by Monday, September 30. It is proposed to call the new organization the Amalgamated Building Workers' Union. The object is to unite the building trade unions, to maintain a fighting organization, to take action nationally and internationally on the ground that the interests of all wage workers are identical, and to organize by industries as workers, instead by sections as craftsmen, for trade purposes. There will be a uniform wa's of contributions and benefits.

Very substantial progress has been made with the consideration under the amended railway conciliation scheme of the grievances of railway workers which were responsible for the strike of a year ago. Complete settlements have been effected on the London and North-Western, the Great Western, the Lancashire and Yorkshire, the Caledonian and South-Western, while partial settlements affecting particular grades of workers have been reached on Midland, Great Northern, Great Central, Caledonian, Highland, South-Eastern and Chatham, Glasgow and South-Western, Maryport Carlisle, Somerset and Dorset, Furness, Brecon and Merthyr, Cheshire Lines, Barry Cambrian.

By these settlements it is estimated by the men's officials that the railway workers will benefit to the extent of at least $7,500,000 per year in higher wages, besides a reduction of working hours in many cases. The total cost to the companies of these concessions cannot fall far short of $10,000,000 per year.

All the negotiations involved in these settlements have been carried out on the men's side by officials of the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants, of other unions, in accordance with the scheme of modified recognition granted by the Railway Inquiry Commission, giving the men the option of electing union officials or other outsiders as secretaries of Conciliation Boards. In nearly every case union organizers were elected by the men, but in those cases where the choice fell on union men who were not paid officials of the union since been made officials by the unions.

Owing to the refusal of the Federation of Shipbuilding Employers to grant an advance of 4 per cent in wages to the riveting squads the Executive Council of the Boilermakers' Society has decided to take a ballot of its members on the following questions: (1) Are you in favor of giving one month's notice to cease working on piecework? (2) Are you in favor of giving one month's notice to cease work altogether, to enforce the special advance of 4 per cent on riveting rates, so that the holders-up may have 21 cents to the riveters's 25 cents? The votes will be taken at the men's October meetings.

The terms of agreement relating to the general advance of wages between the Shipbuilding Employers' Federation and the Shipbuilding Trade Agreement Standing Committee states that all federated firms should grant to members of unions signatory to the Shipyard Agreement an advance of 9 per cent on piecework rates and 23 cents per week or 4½ cent per hour on time rates, to take effect on Monday, August 19. The shipbuilding departments on the Tyne and at Blyth are included, but the advance does not apply to repair work in the Birkenhead district or to the ship painting in Clyde yards.

The Executive Council of the South Derbyshire Miners' Association have by small majority rejected a proposal to form a Labor party in the division with a view to running a Labor candidate. At the last election the labor vote was withheld from Sir Herbert Raphael whose plurality was a very narrow one.

The dispute in the engineering trade at Bouton continues. Conferences were held on August 12, but they broke up without a settlement being found. Originally a thousand men struck because the firm desired to keep to one additional days' wages in hand, but it appears that this point was adjusted. The men still demanded other concessions, including a minimum of $5 a week for laborers, which they received, at present. The men maintain a strong attitude and unanimously refused a alternative offer by the firm. The trouble may spread to other works.

The majority of large unions are becoming alarmed at the possibility of losing members through the operations of the Compensation Act. The fact has come before the Parliamentary Committee of the Trade Union Congress and they deem it to be so extremely important" that they have issued a circular to all affiliated societies. In this they notify that no complaints were received as to the manner in which undue pressure has been brought to bear upon workpeople by certain collecting and friendly assurance societies to make those organizations their approved societies" and that any particulars of any such cases in order that they may be brought to the attention of the Insurance Commissioners.

It is very clear that "undue pressure" could be exercised by a collecting or friendly society. It seems that societies in which men are allowed to participate in the administration of the Compensation Act which will be presented this session. It is interesting to note that the dissatisfaction with the New Jersey law, recently adopted, is rapidly disappearing. In New Jersey (as will happen in Pennsylvania) the opposition to the act was based principally on the cost to the employer. The casualty companies demanded premiums from three to five times the amount of those collected for insurance under the old system. A report of the New Jersey State commissioner of labor now indicates a great improvement of conditions in the course of the past year. An act permitting the incorporation of associations of employers for mutual insurance against liability has had the effect of inducing the old line companies to reduce their rates, although few mutual associations have been formed. The mere possibility of competition seems to have been enough. The company rates are one-half or one-third of what they were a year ago, and, although it is said they are still higher than in England and much higher than in Germany, the dissatisfaction of employers with the law is reported to be decidedly less marked than it was a year ago.

The new Jersey state commission reports, in fact, that of the larger industrial establishments of the state all but two have accepted the principles of compensation without lawsuit and in accordance with the schedule of awards provided by statute. This development in our sister state cannot help be gratifying to all Pennsylvanians interested in the work of our workmen's compensation commission. That body will hold public hearings in Pittsburg next month. In framing the proposed law for Pennsylvania it will derive no little guidance from New Jersey's experience.

LABOR DAY IN PITTSBURGH.

The labor unions of Pittsburgh in their celebration of Labor Day, will pay tribute to the memory of Thomas A. Armstrong, who for years was the most conspicuous exponent of labor's cause in Pennsylvania, having been at one time its candidate for governor and also the founder of the National Labor Tribune."

In the lines of the parade will be found practically all workers in the building trades, all those in the so-called metal trades, practically all the label trades craftsmen and craftswomen and a great host of card holders in the American Federation of Labor from the miscellaneous trades.

The parade will start at Labor Temple, traverse downtown streets in Pittsburgh and on the North Side, pause at the Armstrong monument in West park and disband at Labor Temple.

Chief Marshal R. J. McGrath has held several meetings with aides, including Col. Estelle, Charles Hornbogh, of the bricklayers, will be chief of staff and P. J. McKee, of the plumbers, will be adjutant general.

An extensive athletic program will be carried out at Kennywood park. The entries in these events will be restricted to the holders of union cards. One of the features of the afternoon program is a bill-posting contest. The bill posters unions, members of which are barred from competition, has donated a handsome silver cup to the craft making the greatest number of points.

There is an effort on foot to raise a $50,000 endowment. A stock selling campaign is being conducted among the various unions. At the Labor Day celebration tags, which will be sold for the benefit of the project, have been made the official Labor Day badge so every marcher instead of paying for a badge, will buy and wear a Labor Temple tag. Men and women, many of the latter wives and sisters of union men, have volunteered to dispose of these tags on the streets and elsewhere on Labor Day.

PRINTERS' CONVENTION

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26.—During the convention of the International Typographical Union at Cleveland a resolution was defeated seeking to change the elective period of officers from two years to four. The present five officers were authorized to establish an employment bureau, to be under the supervision of the secretary-treasurer. Reports of officers showed that in arbitration awards the International Typographical Union has obtained substantial results in 95 per cent of the decisions rendered. The officers of the international union and Chicago local union were unanimously sustained in the position taken by them in the present pressmen's strike. The next convention will be held in Nashville, Tenn.

INCREASE AND AGREEMENT

PORT WORTH, Tex., Aug. 27.—After negotiations covering a considerable period the electricians (inside) and the employers have reached an agreement which increases the wage scale 50 cents per day on January 1, 1913. One distinctive feature of the new agreement is the creation of a conference board, composed of three employers and three members of the union, to which will be referred all differences arising under the agreement. If the conference board fails in the settlement of any question provision has been made to submit same to arbitration. The agreement is for the union shop.

The average wage received by bricklayers in England is $6.72 per week for forty-two and a half hours. The bricklayers in Germany receive $7.50 per week and are required to work 59 hours.

THE news columns of the Tribune this week indicate that Labor Day will be observed next Monday with unusual interest. There has probably never been a larger number of demonstrations in prospect. In nearly every large city of the country there will be a parade of organized labor, followed by mass meetings and picnics, at which there will be not only games and athletic contests but exercises of a more serious character, including addresses by labor leaders on the subject of unionism. This latter form of celebration is one which can be commended with exceptional fervor. The parades are eminently all right; they serve to show the strength of the unions, and the intelligent character of the men who belong to them. And the outdoor sports are all right, too, for the day is intended to be a holiday, which can be celebrated in no better way than by indulgence in the outdoor pastimes that mean so much for the pleasure and the health of humanity.

But the speeches are particularly opportune at this time for the reason that labor unionism is just now passing through a severe ordeal. Never before has it been so powerfully attacked. Its critics are picking out every weak point and laying it bare to the gaze of the world. The majority of American workingmen are yet to be unionized. If they are to get their impressions of trade unions from the assailants of the unions, who have facile tongues and pens and innumerable channels for getting their views before the public, the work of organization will go forward slowly. What we need, therefore, is to have the silent expounder of the benefits of unionism take the public platform at every possible opportunity, and on Labor Day, above all other days, and show how false is the view which represents unions as mere fomenters of disturbance, which hurts the workingmen more than they help. We are glad to see numerous addresses scheduled to promulgate the principles of organization on Labor Day, and we hope that the day will be as pleasant and profitable observed as the forecasts lead one to anticipate. Not the least impressive demonstration of the day will be the great parade for which arrangements have been completed in Pittsburgh, which will march from the mill on the North Side to the memory of Thos. A. Armstrong, founder of the National Labor Tribune, will be the chief feature.

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION PROGRESSING.

As the Pennsylvania legislature is in session it has created a workmen's compensation act which will be presented this session. It is interesting to note that the dissatisfaction with the New Jersey law, recently adopted, is rapidly disappearing. In New Jersey (as will happen in Pennsylvania) the opposition to the act was based principally on the cost to the employer. The casualty companies demanded premiums from three to five times the amount of those collected for insurance under the old system. A report of the New Jersey State commissioner of labor now indicates a great improvement of conditions in the course of the past year. An act permitting the incorporation of associations of employers for mutual insurance against liability has had the effect of inducing the old line companies to reduce their rates, although few mutual associations have been formed. The mere possibility of competition seems to have been enough. The company rates are one-half or one-third of what they were a year ago, and, although it is said they are still higher than in England and much higher than in Germany, the dissatisfaction of employers with the law is reported to be decidedly less marked than it was a year ago.

The new Jersey state commission reports, in fact, that of the larger industrial establishments of the state all but two have accepted the principles of compensation without lawsuit and in accordance with the schedule of awards provided by statute. This development in our sister state cannot help be gratifying to all Pennsylvanians interested in the work of our workmen's compensation commission. That body will hold public hearings in Pittsburg next month. In framing the proposed law for Pennsylvania it will derive no little guidance from New Jersey's experience.

To Whom Special Labor Day Honors Are to Be Paid Next Monday in Pittsburgh.

Thomas A. Armstrong was born in Steubenville, O., August 13, 1810, and was, therefore, just entering upon his forty-sixth year. He came of good old Pennsylvania stock for three generations. His grandfather, Thomas Armstrong, was married to Mary Thomas at Hunter's Falls, on the Susquehanna river, and there was born John Armstrong, the father of Thomas A., who was born in 1882.

After a common school education at Steubenville, he commenced learning the printing trade in the office of the Herald at the age of 15. In the early part of 1837 he came to Pittsburgh, where he worked as compositor and afterward as assistant foreman on the old Caronicle. Here he remained until August 11, 1862, when he enlisted in the One Hundred and Thirty-ninth Pennsylvania Volunteers, serving throughout the war with that regiment. At the battle of Cedar Creek, where he was acting as first sergeant, every commissioned officer was killed or wounded and he became company commander. In this engagement he was so seriously wounded that consciousness was not recovered until after his arrival at a Philadelphia hospital. As soon as he had sufficiently recovered he was assigned to duty in the office of the Provost Marshal, where he stayed for six months, when he rejoined his regiment. The wound, however, remained with him as a constant reminder of the war, and he was never able to work at "the case" for more than a half hour at a time.

Upon "the surrender" and the discharge of the volunteer army, Mr. Armstrong resumed work at his trade, and was assistant foreman of the Chronicle for some years. It was in 1872 that a general rating of offices occurred in Pittsburgh, and he gave up his situation, though he was highly esteemed by his employers that he was offered "a case." This he declined, and it was this episode that turned his best abilities to labor journalism.

For twenty-six years he had been a member of Typographical Union No. 7, twice representing that body in the International Union, having been a delegate to both the International convention held at St. Louis and that at Richmond. He became a Knight of Labor in, 1878, being a member of Local Assembly 1030, District Assembly 3, of which body he was an active delegate. For more than a score of years he was a member of Pittsburgh Lodge, 46, F. & A. M., intimate with labor leaders of the best class, such as Sisey, Sylvis, Powderly, Jarrett, Wells, Martin and many others, he commended their respect and confidence. In labor politics his inclinations were toward activity, but while willing to bear "the heat and burden of the day," he preferred to lay toward the private post. Nevertheless, and after much solicitation, he consented to be the candidate, in 1882 of the Greenback-Labor party for Governor of Pennsylvania. He received a handsome vote, when it is remembered the party was yet in swaddling clothes—some 21,000—but no nearly what he had reason to expect. This was the only prominent essay as a candidate, though subsequently he was importuned to carry the banner of the party at the head of the procession of candidates.

LABOR'S INTERESTS AT NATIONAL CAPITAL.

The Bill Creating a Commission to Investigate the Relations Between Labor and Capital Becomes Law in Closing Days of Session--An Industrial Harmony Plan--Winslow Report On Industrial Relations to Be Published.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—The Senate last week passed, with eight amendments, the Industrial Commission bill, passed by the House on July 17. The Senate amendments increase the scope of the commission and strike out a prohibition relative to reorganization to persons employed by the commission. The measure provides for a commission of nine members, to be appointed by the President, with the consent of the Senate, three of whom shall be employers and three shall be representatives of organized labor. The Department of Commerce and Labor is also authorized to co-operate with the commission in any way the Secretary of Commerce and Labor may approve. The life of the commission is to be three years, providing its duties are not performed in less time, and a report to Congress is required at least once a year. The commission is directed to inquire into existing relations between employers and employee, and into the various phases of industrial conditions and their effects, comprehending a study of industrial, commercial, agricultural and other phases of national activity as related to labor, together with gathering information as to industrial agencies. The bureaus of labor are to be inquired into with a view to recommending measures to increase their efficiency. Numerous other important matters are to receive attention also. There has been no opposition to the measure in Congress, and the President will sign the bill when presented to him.

In a long article recently in the Washington Herald a "new" plan is announced whereby the differences between labor and capital are to be entirely harmonized. The originator of this idea, it is stated, was formerly a newspaper man, but now interested in real estate and other properties in Washington. The preparatory step is the establishment of a weekly journal, which "will make great revenues for the publication here, but will be remembered by thousands." And, further: "We are going to exploit the workingman for his own benefit." It is further claimed that the prospective publication will not confine its influence to "change the present attitude of employer and employee." One statement by the author of the scheme is submitted without comment: "The harmonizer those interests in our task, that is the work my plan is to do, that is the problem I will solve. When we look at the tremendous growth of the labor party in Great Britain we are moved to a realization that we must now, before it is too late, prevent a growth of the labor interests in similar circumstances in the United States. We must all, capital and labor alike, curb and guide that tremendous force or that it will hurt neither the one nor capital."

Oscar F. Nelson, president of the National Federation of Post-office Clerks, immediately upon the passage of the postoffice appropriation bill, carrying with it an amendment according the right of petition and the right of organization to postal employes, forwarded to the members of the Executive Council a letter, giving the American Federation of Labor credit for securing the relief.

"I want to express to you individually," he says, "and through you to the rank and file of our movement the hearty and sincere appreciation and thanks of the postal employes for the accomplishment of pushing this issue through to victory, thereby causing do be restored to us our inherent rights as citizens. Had not the A. F. of L. taken up this issue and pushed it so vigorously, the 'gag' would have remained. It is by the wise direction of the stars of the A. F. of L. that such accomplishments as this has been possible."

Senator Page of Vermont, author of the vocational educational bill in the Senate, requested and received unanimous consent to have published as a Senate document an article upon the subject of industrial education by Charles W. Winslow, as authority upon this subject. Senator Page, in his request, stated: "It is a very instructive paper and I should like to have it printed as a Senate document. It is but fair to say that Mr. Winslow is acting under the auspices of the American Federation of Labor, that federation has taken great interest in the matter of industrial education. It is doing all it can to forward it in the United States, and it is engaged in a work which I very much approve."

In a bulletin just issued by the Interstate Commerce Commission on train accidents during January, February and March of this year it is revealed that 267 persons were killed and 4,780 injured. This is an increase of 121 killed and 643 in the number injured, compared with the same months in 1911. Accidents of other kinds in which the movements of locomotives or cars were not involved in the train service killed 402 casualties up to 22 882, or 2,383 killed and 20,499 injured. On electric lines three persons were killed and 403 injured. During the three months there were 1,066 derailments, due to defects in equipment, resulting in the death of 19 persons and injuries to 537. For the quarter referred to, the commission says, it is shown that train accidents are the largest in number of casualties and in amount of financial loss since the quarter ended September 30, 1907, which was the high water mark in railroad casualties.

RESOLUTION FOR INQUIRY

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26.—W. B. Wilson, chairman of the House Labor Committee, introduced a resolution in the House last week authorizing the appointment of a committee of five to investigate the Paint Creek coal strike in West Virginia. The resolution directs that it be ascertained whether peonage exists, and whether treaty obligations with foreign countries are being violated by the treatment of foreign workmen. An appropriation is provided for to defray the expenses of the investigation.

Passing of Roller Towel

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 26.—The board of supervisors recently passed an ordinance making it a misdemeanor to expose roller towels for public use. This passes to limbo another filth collector and disease spreader.

FARMERS ARE WITH US

PORT WORTH, Tex., Aug. 27.—The Farmers' Educational and Co-operative Union, of Texas, at their convention recently held here, passed a resolution indorsing House bill, No. 5601, the rural parcel post bill, and urging the Texas Congressional delegation in Congress to give this measure support. Other resolutions adopted recommend the securing of a closer affiliation with the organized labor.

Switchmen Growing.

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 26.—The Switchmen's Union in this city has made a splendid gain here during the past month. Railroad superintendents greatly handicap the organization efforts of the officials of the Switchmen's International Union, but even under adverse conditions the union is making good headway.

Pastor Russell's Sermon

THE WORLD'S NEED OF A MEDIATOR.

Why a Savior and a Redemptive Work Are Necessary—Pastor Russell in Sweden—Scripture Teaches That Humanity Would Have No Hope of Everlasting Life Except Through Divine Mercy—Why God Provided a Salvation for Mankind Through Jesus' Sacrifice—The Only Basis of Reconciliation.

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Aug. 26.—Pastor Russell of London Tabernacle arriving from Finland addressed two large Swedish congregations here and left to fill appointments in Copenhagen, Kiel, Brussels and London. We report one of his addresses from I Tim. 2: 5, 6. "There is one God, and one Mediator between God and men, the Man Christ Jesus, who gave Himself a Ransom for all, to be testified in due time." He said:—

Many fail to understand why a Savior and a redemptive work are necessary. They ask, Why was it necessary for Jesus to come into the world? How did His death influence God to the forgiveness of human sin? And why was the better sacrifice of Jesus typified by the sacrifice of bulls and goats under the Jewish Law Covenant? A right understanding of these matters is the very essence of true theology, and most helpful to us all.

The Divine arrangement proposes that everything in accord with God must be absolutely perfect. Both angels and men were created perfect, in God's image. And the Divine Law, in the interest of all, runs from fellowship and blessings all who deliberately go into sin, and fellowship only such as are perfect. Hence the sentence upon Father Adam for his disobedience cut him off from Divine fellowship and favor under the sentence, "Dying, thou shalt die." God's law is, 171—not, "Going to eternal torment, thou shalt roast."

True, Adam's children were never thus condemned, but born in sin and "shapen in iniquity" (Psalm li, 5), under the laws of heredity they never were perfect, never were fully in the image of God, never were, therefore, in harmony with God, but always shared Father Adam's alienation and condemnation. They were "children of wrath" (Ephesians ii, 3)—justly reaping their Father Adam's penalty of death, because imperfect—not worthy of life under the Divine arrangement.

RECONCILIATION A NECESSITY.

Whoever sees clearly these facts of Scripture must perceive that humanity would have no hope of everlasting life except through Divine mercy—forgiveness. But some one will say: Why should there be any necessity for the Logos to have heavenly glory and be made flesh and then to die, "the Just for the unjust," to make possible our return to Divine favor? Why should not God forgive the sins of Adam and his race even as we are directed to forgive those who trespass against us?

God's attitude towards sin very properly is different. "His work is perfect" (Deuteronomy xxxii, 4). He created Adam in His own image. We sinners are not God's creation direct, but have merely come into existence under laws of heredity. Justice is under no obligation to us. All rights and privileges granted to Father Adam were forfeited and have been abrogated. From the Divine standpoint of justice, our race is a dead one. More than this—the great Supreme Ruler and Judge of the Universe, having condemned us as unfit for eternal life and merit of His with Himself, could not justly set aside His own decree. God could not, therefore, justly, righteously, change His verdict, for that would imply that our sentence was an unjust one.

The Divine Government refuses to be thus compromised, but instead has provided a salvation for humanity through Jesus' death. The method adopted maintains the dignity of the Divine Law to the full, and at the same time reveals the fact that our Creator is the very embodiment of sympathy and love—qualities of His which never would have been so fully appreciated by either angels or men unless God had permitted human sin, has provided the penalty He did, and then provided the Redemption through the Logos—Jesus.

"BETWEEN GOD AND MAN."

A mediator is one who stands between two parties who are at variance, for the purpose of bringing about reconciliation. The two parties mentioned in our text are not God and the Church, but God and the world—mankind in general. Man sinned. God justly condemned the sinner. The Mediator's first work in reconciliation must be to offer a substitute to Justice for Adam's sin. Our text tells us that the Man Christ Jesus did this very thing—He gave Himself to be a Ransom-price for all mankind. He did this when He reached perfect manhood, at thirty years of age, when He consecrated His life to God—even unto death. He finished this giving of Himself on Calvary when He cried, "It is finished." (John xix, 30.) The perfect, spotless, uncontaminated life of the Man Christ Jesus, the laid down a voluntary sacrifice, constitutes a Ransom-price for Adam and his race.

The word Ransom in our text has a very strict meaning, namely, a corresponding price. Adam in his perfection was in God's image—"very good." The Man Jesus, who gave Himself a corresponding price, was in God's image—"very good," responded exactly to the perfect man Adam, and His sacrifice of Himself in death corresponded exactly to the penalty against Adam, which Adam's life race has shared. This great transaction, accomplished nearly nineteen centuries ago, is not yet generally proclaimed, but will be testified to all in due time, our text declares. As yet only the few, guided by the Word and enlightened by the Holy Spirit, can appreciate this matter, because its details have not yet been fully worked out.

"When all its mighty work is seen, Praise shall all tongues employ."

St. Paul declares that the calling and election of the Church to become the Bride of Christ and His Joint-heir in His Messianic Kingdom is a "Mystery" appreciated by few. The Mystery is that in the Great Jehovah's Plan this Elect Church, now in process of selection, is to consult with Jesus her Redeemer the great Mediator who, during the Millennium, will mediate the New Covenant between God and mankind in general. The foundation for all that Mediatorial work—the all essential basis of it—was effected by our Lord Jesus alone when He, as the Man Christ Jesus, gave Himself a Ransom-price for all. But the great work of reconciliation belongs to the future and is to be shared in by the Bride class.

Well did John the Baptist point to Jesus and say, "Behold, the Lamb of God! which taketh away the sin of the world." (John i, 29, 36.) In Jesus resided that Ransom-price, and not in His Church, in Jesus' work, and not in our work; in Jesus' sacrifice, and not in our sacrifice, was the potency for the cleansing away of Adam's sin and the setting aside of his death penalty. Whatever share the Church was granted in the great work of the world's reconciliation was by grace and not by our merit, not by our sacrifice.

MEDIATION NOT YET BEGUN.

The Redeemer has not yet begun His work of Mediation between God and men. He merely provided the basis of that reconciliation in His death at Calvary. The merit of His sacrifice is in Jehovah's hands, but is not yet appropriated for the sins of the world. The world's sins are not yet forgiven. Hence God still treats the world as sinners, aliens, foreigners, enemies through evil works.

Everything is in readiness for the forgiveness of the sins of the world; but the Redeemer waits until His shall have accomplished another feature of the Divine Program, namely, the selection of the Church to be His Bride; or under another figure, to be members of the Body of Messiah, under Jesus the Head—members of the Body of the Mediator, selected from the world. "For Moses verily said unto the fathers, A Prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you from amongst your brethren, like unto me (Moses); Him shall ye hear in all things whatsoever. He shall say unto you. And the person that will not obey that Prophet (that Teacher), shall be destroyed from amongst the people."—Acts iii, 22, 23.

This antitypical Moses, Head and members, has been in process of development, or raising up, for now nearly nineteen centuries. God raised up Jesus the very first, and is since raising up us also by Jesus. And through the First Resurrection shortly the entire Body, the Messiah of glory, will be changed, made partakers of the divine nature.—Heidelberg xx, 6; II Peter i, 4.

The antitypical Moses will inaugurate the New Covenant with Israel and the world, even as the typical Moses inaugurated the old Law Covenant with typical Israel at Mt. Sinai. As the old Covenant had sacrifices of bulls and goats and was inaugurated first by a sprinkling of the tables of the Law, representing a satisfaction of Divine Justice, and secondly the sprinkling of all the people, representing their reconciliation through the same sacrifices, so the antitypical Moses, the Mediator of the New or antitypical Covenant, must first produce "better sacrifices," the antitypical, and then with the merit of these make satisfaction to Divine Justice and reconcile the people—all who are willing of the whole world. When Moses slew the animals whose blood made effective typical Covenant which he mediated, that sacrificing was mere'y a preparatory work. The Law Covenant was not ratified to any sense of the word until the animals were all slain and the blood was sprinkled on the tables of the Law.

So in the antitype, Jesus, the Mediator of the New Covenant, must first, after the pattern of Moses, complete all His sacrificing before He be-ches the work of Mediation. First of all, as we have seen, He offered Himself without spot unto God, finishing that work at Calvary. Since then He has been accepting and ordering up as a part of His own sacrifice the members of the Church, as they come unto the Father through Him, presenting their bodies to be living sacrifices, holy and acceptable unto God. (Romans xii, 1). This sacrificing of the flesh of Christ has been in process for nearly nineteen centuries. Not until these "better sacrifices" of the Church shall have been finished will the real work of Mediation and Atonement for the sin of the world take place.

"ABLE MINISTERS OF NEW COVENANT."

All those who now present their bodies to Jesus desiring to share with Him in suffering for righteousness in this present time, that they may have share with Him in His coming glory and Kingdom—all these are in Bible language "able ministers (service) of the New Covenant." They are serving the New Covenant, although it has not yet been sealed with the precious blood of Jesus, and are merely calling those who have an ear to hear, in showing them the privilege of suffering with Christ, that they may also reign with Him. They serve the New Covenant in helping to build one another up in the most holy faith and in assisting one another in the narrow way of faithfulness and self-sacrifice even unto death.

But specially these, each for himself, serves the New Covenant arrangement by fulfilling the terms of his "Covenant of sacrifice." (Psalm l, 5). Jesus was the first Minister, or Servant, of this Covenant. All of His members are associated in this ministry. When this ministry service of sacrifice shall have been completed, the grander ministry of this New Covenant in glory will begin. The Christ, the Messiah, the Mediator of Calvary, the typical Melchisedek, will combine the office of King with His other Office of Priest, or Instructor and Helper.

The first work will be the application of the blood of Atonement, the Ransom-price for the sins of the whole world. As soon as that presented on man's behalf, Divine Justice will accept it. Forthwith the world will no longer be enemies of God, children of wrath, without God and without hope, but on the contrary, the Ransom-price for their sins having been accepted, the sentence of death against all will be cancelled, and the whole world will be turned over to the control of the Mediator. He having mediated towards God, and having made satisfaction for human sin through the merit of His own sacrifice, will then proceed to reconcile the world.

During the six thousand years of the reign of sin and death the world has become so alienated from God that the majority do not earnestly desire reconciliation. This, however, is because of their weakness and ignorance. For a thousand years the great Mediator will instruct them, giving chastenings where necessary and in proportion to their spirit of willfulness, and thus gradually He will uplift them out of their ignorance, blindness and sin deficiency—out of the tomb and out of all the weaknesses of the dying condition—back into the image of God, from which all fell in Father Adam.

The only exception to this rule will be that such as wilfully, intelligently reject the Divine provision for their recovery will be punished with everlasting destruction. They will perish "like brute beasts," as St. Peter declares. (II Peter ii, 12.) The grand finale will be attained when "every creature in heaven and in the earth and under the earth" shall be heard acclaiming praise to Him that sitteth upon the Throne, and unto the Lamb forever.—Revelation v, 13.

JESUS THE CHURCH'S ADVOCATE.

From the foregoing it will be seen that the world's salvation is to be a Restitution to human perfection—an earthly Eden lost through Father Adam's disobedience. It will be recalled also that the Church has no part with the world in that Restitution, nor in that Mediation for a thousand years. The Church with her members of the Mediator who will confer the Restitution blessings and privileges on the non elect.

But the fact that the Church will not be numbered with mankind in the human Mediation, which will take place during the Millennium, does not mean that the Church now has no sins, nor that these sins do not need to be covered and cancelled. It does mean that the Church is not to get back the human life and earthly rights forfeited by Adam and to be restored under the Mediator's Kingdom. Instead, the Church is promised glory, honor and immortality—heavenly nature. As a reward for participation in the sufferings of Christ she shall be made sharer in His eternal glories.

What the Church needs and has is an Advocate with the Father—Jesus Christ the Righteous. Thousands of humanity who are weary and heavy-laden with sin and desire of reconciliation will be helped who hear the Message of the Gospel Age and accept its terms, present their bodies living sacrifices and purpose to be footstep followers of Jesus, but because these are by nature sinners, children of wrath, under Divine sentence, imperfect, their sacrifices could not be accepted of the Father except for the sake of Jesus, hence they need an advocate.

Jesus has merit in the hands of Justice, the result of His sacrifice, which is being kept to be given by Him to the world of mankind, justifying them to full Restitution. As the Advocate of His footstep followers Jesus imputes a share of the merit of His sacrifice to the Church to make good her imperfections, so that her sacrifice may in God's sight be holy and acceptable.

This imputation of the merit of Jesus' sacrifice was made for all of the Church at once—long ago—when He "ascended up on high, there to appear in the presence of God for us (as our Advocate)." The already consecrated disciples in the upper room received the Pentecostal blessing as the evidence that Jesus as their Advocate had appeared for them and imputed of His merit for them, so that their sacrifices were acceptable to the Father. The same principle holds true throughout this Gospel Age for this same class.

Appreciations

Minnesota, Aug. 1.

I wish to add a word of encouragement to you for the way in which you have been publishing Pastor Russell's Sermons. They have surely been a great blessing to me in revealing to me God's great plan of salvation and how that in due time all shall know of the wonderous love when the knowledge of the Lord shall fill the earth as the waters cover the sea. The way that these messages have appeared in your grand paper have been a wonderful blessing and help to me. And I wish to thank you for what you have done and hope that you will continue to print the same.

Yours respectfully,
FRED GREENOUGH.

Canada, Aug. 18.

Please find inclosed money order for renewal for my own and please send the Tribune to the address of Ogle Duggon.

With a thankful heart to God for the hearing ear to hear the joyful sound to know the time is at hand when they who labor shall long enjoy the work of their hands. May the Lord bless the good proceeds that is heralding the Good Tidings and remain in the service of our King until the assurance has heard the glorious message. With much appreciation for the messages received through the Labor Tribune.

Yours faithfully,
J. VANCE.

Washington, Aug. 18.

Let me express to you herewith my deep appreciation of your paper, especially the Pastor Russell Sermons and Question Box. I always find a great number who likewise enjoy it and are pleased that you consider them entitled to so much publicity. I know you doubt it, one week's omission of the sermon would convince you.

Respectfully,
A READER.

Iowa, Aug. 17.

We will continue to read and appreciate your good paper and especially do we enjoy Pastor Russell's Sermons, the Question Box and the Sunday School Lessons.

Wishing you God's blessing and continued prosperity, we are,

Sincerely yours,
A. H. HUYCH.

Texas, Aug. 17.

It is with pleasure I am sending you a subscription for the Tribune to be sent to Mrs. Mary Orr. Many years ago this old lady loaned to me three volumes of Scripture Studies and there it was I got my first light on the Bible for which I would not take all the worlds goods. I am glad to have the opportunity to send her a clean paper which herald the Second Advent and Great Joy which shall be to all people in due time. I very much appreciate your paper. I will take it as long as you continue to publish Pastor Russell's Sermons, Question Box, etc.

Sincerely yours,
GEORGE WEISSERBERR.

Ohio, Aug. 18.

I greatly appreciate the features of your paper. The Sermons, Question Box, Bible Studies and Appreciations are indeed food for weary children. It is meat in due time, a light that is shining in a dark place. It lightens one paths and strengthens one steps. May the Tribune continue the same.

Yours in the love of the Truth,
ARTHUR KINKLE.

Kansas, Aug. 22.

I am sending you a subscription to your good paper through the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society. As we have many papers that are printing the Sermons and Question Box and Sunday School Lessons, but your paper is such nice print, so one can read it so clearly and especially the writing of Pastor Russell.

Yours truly,
MRS. ELLA McSHERRY,

Pennsylvania, Aug. 24.

I wish to again express my appreciation of your paper and the liberal space given the Truth as expressed in the Sermons, Sunday School Lessons and the Bible Question Box and all the other good things you print.

The Lord will certainly bless every effort of yours to spread the Harvest Message.

Yours sincerely,
EDWIN DONEY.

TRIBUNE APPRECIATIONS.

(For Labor Tribune.)

For the day of His wrath is already come
And who is so strong he able to stand
His will coming as on earth is done
For we of heart help his command.

We, the church, are today on trial
We are daily and hourly being tested
His wrath poured out from the seven vial
Separates us from those that are no vated.

However heavy and bitter may seem the cross
Let us meekly and patiently bear it
That we may not at last suffer loss
And lose our share in His merit.

The heavier the cross—the broader the smile
On our face and the light should be beaming
From heart-life and voice all the while
The reward of life should be streaming.

We're oft inclined to murmur and say
My cross is far too heavy for me
But let us remember—God handles the clay
And will from corruption surely set it free.

The branch that bear no fruit He takes away
Throws it aside to be burned
The branch that bears He prunes that it may bear more fruit in return.

Meanness — selfishness — malice and pride
Hatred — envy deceitfulness and strife—
Must all be lacking in members of the bride
No impurities can remain in the Lamb's wife.

There's a diamond in this miserable clay
That God would have cleansed and purified
We must submit to His treatment if we with Jesus would be glorified.

Dear Father didn't thou not give my precious boys
So deeply in me in this lonely—narrow way
Have they robbed me of the unspeakable joys
Or can't I have them again dear Jesus I pray.

Though I loved them dearly, I presented them to thee
An offering upon thine altar I made
Thy will be done—I there did agree
And surrendered to Thee all that I had.

How comforting were their heaven lighted faces
From my memory can they ever be erased
They were made lovely by so many graces
But grieved and sorrowful we stand amazed.

Dear Lord, is this part of my cross and load
Must I submit and give them up,
Without thee, in thy promise must I rest?
And cheerfully drink the bitter cup?

Then gently, dear Lord, take my hand
Lead
Hold me—use me according to Thy will
Chisel me—polish me—crowd out the old man
The new with grace and love to fill.

Oh Father, like Jesus, unto thee I
Saying, if it be possible remove the cup
If not on thy grace I would ever rely
And cheerfully submit to drink it up.

Trusting alone in the promised grace
I renew my vow to follow thee
Dear Lord,
Show me daily thy smiling face
I will surely repeat—Thy will be done.

I am very much interested in your valuable paper and especially in Pastor Russell's Sermons, and the Question Box and the Sunday School Lessons. I have been a subscriber ever since you began printing the Sermons and will be as long you print them.

Yours truly,
Y. C. RICE.

Virginia, Aug. 24.

I wrote you some time back asking the explanation of Matt. ii, 13. I now write to thank you for the answering it and to give you my reasons for asking the question. I was sure our Lord's words had reference to the church of Christ, and your answer has made it plain to me and gave me light on it, for which I thank the Lord and you as His agent in the work. The reason why I asked an explanation was:

I was at one of our creed churches and the Sunday school was in session, I sent in and taking a seat with the Bible class close to the pastor of the church who was over the class. The assistant superintendent was the leader of the class and this scripture (Matt. iii 12), was in the lesson, and his explanation was such that it surprised me that the minister did not correct him. His silence satisfied me that he agreed with the explanation he gave. I will try to give it as near word for word as I can.

He said: There are prayers going up to heaven every minute, yes, thousands of them, and they pray earnestly, evidently thus enter into the kingdom. Take it by evidence.

When learned men teach the scripture thus can it be wondered at that the Bible is classed as so old fiddle that any tune can be played on.

Lord help us and hasten the time when the blind eyes shall be opened and the deaf ears unstoped.

May the Lord's richest blessing be on you for the part you take in heralding the Good Tidings of Great Joy which shall be unto all people.

Yours for Truth and righteousness,
T. C. WEAVER.

PRESIDENT TAFT'S SERVICE TO LABOR.

In discussing the part President Taft has played in the betterment of the conditions of labor throughout the country by his advocacy of and signing the bills relative to labor legislation everyone of us should approach the question with impartiality and a resolve to be fair. If this is done there is not an intelligent wage worker in the country who will not become convinced that President Taft has been one of the best friends labor has ever had in the White House. Even President Gompers credits the President with making one of the national landmarks in the betterment of labor's conditions when he, the President, signed the "Eight-Hour bill" not long ago. This is most certainly an encomium that ought to silence all of President Taft's detractors among the wage workers of the nation.

It is an absolute fact which is proven most conclusively by the records of his life that President Taft has all of his life been a sincere friend of those who work for wages. In every office he has held he has displayed a sincere sympathy for the sufferings of the poor and the liberal regard for the rights of labor.

At every stage President Taft has stood up boldly for the just claims of labor. There never was an abler, nor a more fearless defender of the trade union movement and there certainly never was a President of the country who more willingly or more patiently listened to the pleadings of the representatives of organized labor. The fact of the placing on the Federal statute book the "Eight-Hour" law proves that President Taft is heart and soul in sympathy with the movement that aims at the general, social or material improvement of the toiler. That law extends the eight-hour principle to contracts involving labor on government work and shows the progress being made by the labor organizations towards the establishment of the eight-hour working day in fields which they cannot directly control with their unions. Eight hours have constituted a legal maximum of labor in much of the public service of the United States government for some time, but only recently has there been a marked advance in forcing private contractors doing government jobs to adopt the same limitation. Steps in this direction were taken when the naval appropriation bill the last year was amended so as to provide for the eight-hour day in the construction of certain vessels and hulls. And the postal appropriation act provided that labor carried should not work more than 48 hours in six working days of the week and kept the rural five and the last 15 days of each year. The enactment of the 6th bill passed by the Seventh would seem to mark the final victory of the labor organizations in securing the adoption of the eight-hour principle in all work for the federal government.

So far as the importance of the "Eight-hour" law is concerned President Gompers, of the American Federation of Labor after stating that President Taft has made a brilliant start in "labor legislation," wrote the following regarding the law in question:

"The eight-hour working day, coupled with it a great human as well as social and industrial advantage. It conserves the vital forces as well as the productive energy of the working man thereby benefitting the posterity of their lives and their productive value. Industrial statistics prove that the hours of workers have been prolonged many years by reason of the reduction of hours of labor. Those who are living longer than their predecessors at the same calling, are obviously living better in all of the word implies."

Surely the eloquent words of President Gompers in praise of the law goes emphatically to show that President Taft has done more directly in favor of labor during his term as President of the country than any of his predecessors. If facts of this nature will not prove the sincerity, the public and the success of President Taft on the labor question then nothing else will.

But, on many other questions President Taft has placed himself on record as the real friend of labor. He has in a most determined manner urged a reform in judicial procedure that, if Congress would adopt without pian, will be of the greatest benefit to the masses. President Taft has time and time again pointed out that the "delay" of law, or judicial proceedings in court, are most harmful to the poor, these delays, he has often stated, tend to defeat the poor in their righteous legal battles. They have not the money nor the time to continue the long drawn out fights so often caused by the wealthy in order to embarrass and defeat the poor man. President Taft knows right well better than any other man who has ever been President of the country, or who desires to be President, for that matter, the ills propshed to remedy this great evil and it is now up and has been so for some time, to Congress to adopt the remedy proposed by this great statesman. It is not the fault of President Taft that the just and glaring evils he has sought to have remedied are now; it is the fault of those who are trying to "put him in his place" and injure his reputation as a friends of labor. The plan he proposes would also take the sting out of the injunctions so far as that keenness applies to labor.

So far as the record is concerned President Taft is the only executive of the nation who has done anything material or effective toward eradicating their evils. He has made history on this question. He has succeeded in securing rulings from the highest courts in the land dissolving the worst of these combinations. Others are likely to be dissolved. While there has been volumes and thousands of newspaper talk as to what this or that man would or will do with the trusts President Taft has performed; he has acted, which is far better than merely orating about them and their evils. He has brought them to their knees, and those who have been the heads or leaders of them know exactly what to expect should they make any attempt to defeat the rulings of the courts so long as President Taft is at the head of the nation.

President Taft has, beyond all doubt, shown that he is not the pal and benefactor of capital. He has demonstrated that he is the most fearless opponent of the unjust combinations of capital that has ever held high national office. He has, on this question displayed as independence of mind and action that more than once confused his enemies and surprised his friends. He has not been a bluisterer on the matter; he has not sought the notoriety afforded by newspaper columns, nor the passing hurrahs of excited crowds crowded to the halls, by merely denouncing the man and that big combination; he has properly gone to work and devised means to extract their poisonous teeth that laid hold of the millions of people in the country, making large numbers of this mass helpless. President Taft works for the good of the masses without ostentation. He has one to the stories of those who suffer and then he, without notes or blather, finds out remedies. Where has he failed when he has been master of the situation? Here is the query that everyone must answer before concluding against this good man. Let every wage worker ask himself this question and then go fairly to work and find the true answer; or just as sure as we live the answer will be wherever his remedies have not been put into operation he has been because of the opposition of his enemies. Wage workers should not make a him that kind of support that will enable him to have himself surrounded with true supporters during the next presidential term which he has a right in every respect what-ever to serve his country as its executive head. He has been a success and he has certainly proved himself to be one of the cleanest and most manly men that has ever held the office since the country won its independence.

LIVING MILK CARTS.

The Goats of Athens and Their Tenders Win Their Pay.

The bootblacks and newsboys of Athens are numberless and omnipresent—they are, in fact, the only active boys in the city—but the latest edition or inviting customers is equally strident tones to have a "shine," or to buy a newspaper. Several branches and stock in trade of a hundred big nuts done over their little free or all plaits of nuts, some seed or pumpkin seeds at the street corners. Much of the merchandise is carried by diminutive pay hokers or by old women, who are almost lost under their huge loads of oranges or lemons or cauliflowers or bedwood.

The goats are a familiar sight of modern as doubtless they were of ancient Athens, and one sees them skipping over the rocks of Mars hill or the Pnyx or picking their way gingerly over the ruins of some ancient temple like chamois in their native wilds.

They are all inserted and attended by flocks of ten or a dozen by a guardherd, who goes armed with three little tin cups, one holding about a pint, an other a half pint and another a gill. When he finds a customer he stops a section of his living milk cart, milks it hands over the distinctive amount of the lactent fluid it certainly is fresh milk to the customer and receives his 5 or 10 lepta (1 or 2 cents) in return.—Christian Herald.

FIRST AMERICAN HEROINE.

Gunner Corbin's Widow, Who Fought at Monit Washington.

The first woman who fought for American liberty was Gunner Corbin's widow, at the capture of Mount Washington by the Scotch and Hessians. In the midst of the fight Gunner Corbin, struck by a ball, fell dead at his wife's feet as she was aiding him in his duties.

It was not an uncommon occurrence for Irishwomen ma ed Hessians to share the dangers of the bivouacks, as instance the death of that other heroine, Molly Pitcher. Incurring, without a word, she stepped into his place and worked the gun with redoubled skill and vigor, feeding, loading and discharging with the earth, plevred by three gunpesshot. Though terribly wounded, she finally recovered, but was disabled for life.

A soldier's half pay and the value of a soldier's suit of clothes annually voted her by the Continental congress then soon discontinued were all the reward that the first woman who fought for American liberty ever received for such heroic love, courage and suffering.—E. F. DeLancy in Magazine of American History.

Last Words of the Great.

Half of the store of "last words" treasured by the curious are apocryphal. Thus, when asked on his death bed to date it as to the state of his country, but for a pork pie, and Napoleon III., stopped further lamentation by exclaiming, "Ah, mon ami, I should have confessed all." What the feeling those words no doubt conveyed over a sudden agony.—Dundee Advertiser.

HENRY BELL'S COMET.

The First Steamer That Plied For Hire in Great Britain.

Among the curiosities of advertising may surely be placed the first advertisement of the first steamer that plied for hire in Great Britain—that of Henry Bell's Comet. Thus ran the advertisement in the Glasgow Courier of 1812:

"Steam passage boat, the Comet, between Glasgow, Greenock and Helensburg. For passengers only. The accommodation having at much expense fitted up a handsome vessel by my upon the river Clyde in Great Britain—and Greenock—is and by the power of wind, air and steam—he intends that the vessel shall leave the Broomielaw on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays about midday or at such time thereafter as may answer from the state of the tide and to leave Greenock on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays in the morning to suit the tide. For elegance, comfort, safety and speed of this vessel require only to be proved to meet the approbation of the public, and he respectfully is determined to do everything in his power to merit public encouragement. The terms are for the present 4 shillings for the best cabin and 3 shillings for the second, but beyond these rates nothing is to be allowed to servants or any other person employed about the vessel."

What would poor neglected Henry Bell have said could he have seen his humble little Comet, of whose elegance, comfort and speed he was so proud, alongside a modern ocean racer or one of the latest palatial river steamers of the Clyde or Thames, all so well advertised?—Chambers' Journal.

Cold Weve.

Nellie—They say musicians are coming back. Mamie—Do you care? Nellie—Certainly. I think most men look much more manly when they're with them. Mamie—Well, of course. I suppose you know. I was too young to know any more when they went out of style.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Self Accused.

"Do you remember that $5 you borrowed of me a year ago?"

"I should say I do. I lent $1 of it to Brown, and the skunk hasn't paid me yet."—Boston Transcript.

Do not for one regular forego the purpose that you resolve to affect.—Shakespeare.

Deferred Dividend.

"Oh, mother! I just broke a window with my ball."

"Very well, Tommy; I'm busy just now, but if you'll remind me a little later I'll punish you."—Life.

Decision of character will often give an inferior mind command over a superior.—Wirt.

THE GOLDFINCH.

Changes in Plumage That Are Puzzling to the Novice.

Most every one in America is acquainted with the goldfinch, but many people know the bird by the name of lettuce bird on account of its bright yellow color. Goldfinch is a very appropriate name, as the bright yellow of the male when he is in the breeding plumage is the purest gold. The female goldfinch is long modestly dressed, that her mate. The changes in plumage of the male are very interesting and to the novice somewhat puzzling.

Until the student becomes acquainted with the bird he may wonder why he sees no males during the winter. The truth is at this season the flocks of supposed female goldfinches are really of both sexes, the male bird having assumed in the previous fall, usually by the end of October, a plumage closely resembling that of the female and young bird of the year. The male retains this inconspicuous dress until late in February, when one can notice a gradual change taking place in some of the birds.

This renewal of feathers is actively continued through March and April, and by May 1 our respondent bird is with us again. The song period with the male goldfinch continues as long as he wears his gold and black livery, for it commences as early as the middle of March and ends late in August.

A Successful Interview.

The late Arthur McEwan when he was working on a San Francisco newspaper was directed by the agitation of a politician who was vulgar, illiterate and hideously ungrammatical in his method of expression. McEwan looked up this man and had a talk with him. Then he went back to the office and wrote the interview in the most perfect English, brilliant, polished and crammed the story full of clever situations, quotations and bon mots. It was a most scholarly production, and McEwan considered the matter great. Next day McEwan had a call from the politician. "I wanter thank yes for that interview," he said, "it's bully. Just what I said. You'll be a great shorthand reporter."—Saturday Evening Post.

Martyrdom of the Bride.

A peculiar and barbaric marriage custom of the Kabyle women of Africa consists in the martyrdom of the bride, who clad in her wedding finery, stands through an entire morning against a pillar in the village square, her eyes tightly closed, her arms pressed to her sides and with only the narrow base of the column for a foothold, the while a rough of villagers criticise and comment on her appearance.—Argonaut.

Australian Foot Races on Turf.

With few exceptions all the Australian footraces are decided over turf courses.

THE BROOKLYN TABERNACLE BIBLE CLASS

TODAY'S STUDY includes John the Baptist's death. King Herod had put away his wife, and was living with the wife of his brother. Herodias, Jealous of the Baptist in his preaching, had referred to the fact that King Herod was living in violation of the Divine Law, and was likely to bring upon the people a war, for his wife was the daughter of King Aretas.

Herodias heard of John's teaching, and was both angry and fearful. Had Herod only her way, he would have beenhis duty, she would have been disgraced woman, for the Herods were held largely in honor and esteem.

Herod feared John and feared the people who believed John to be a prophet, but Herodias feared neither God nor man. In reference to Herodias, wish, Herod had John arrested, but never put them to death. Herodias, under the influence of John The Baptist's birthday came, she encouraged him to ask of the king to give her the head of John the Baptist. The girl danced for him to his great delight. After our Lord's resurrection He was the glorious Divine Being, highly exalted and crowned with glory, honor, and immortality.

FAITHFUL UNTO DEATH.

Mark vi. 14-29—Com. v. 1.

"Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life."—Rev. ii. 10.

"The King was grieved exceedingly."

Q.—Are we to understand that the Lord Jesus, while He was on the earth, was a divine, immortal being, or was He only a perfect man, or perhaps a half Divine and half human being? (L. S.)

Answer.—This is a very debatable question, and one that has been the cause of many splits and schisms amongst religious devotees. History records that at one of the early councils, the question arose regarding the third or fourth century, the good bishops grew so excited over the discussion of this question that they used articles of furniture with which to emphasize their points and to impress Jesus upon their opponents. Several were killed during this somewhat animated discussion. In view of these former experiences, we prefer to avoid advancing our own thoughts, and will present briefly the Bible statements on the matter. We are told that Jesus, who was made a little lower than the angels • • • forasmuch then as the children are partakers of flesh and blood, He also Himself likewise partook of the same • • • for verily He took not on Him the nature of angels; but He took on Him the seed of Abraham." (Hebrews ii. 9-16). He was made "like unto His brethren" because their Jesus Christ became Himself a ransom for all." (John i. 14; 1 Timothy ii. 5, 6.) From these references it is evident that our Lord Jesus was of Divine origin; that He came from Heaven and that when He became "the man Christ Jesus," He left the spiritual realm, and nature, and glory behind Him. As the "man" Jesus, He could give Himself a ransom for Adam and his posterity. After our Lord's resurrection He was

Q.—Did our forefathers have a better chance of understanding the Bible than we possess today, or should we expect that greater knowledge is due to us than at any time in the past? This question is prompted by the fact that many today refer back to the "early fathers" as authorities on the teachings of the Scriptures. To my way of thinking, there should be a greater amount of light on the Bible now than ever before, and also a desire to be steadily increasing. (Theologian.)

Answer.—Perhaps, one of the greatest mistakes that could be made by those who have made professions of Christianity, is to entertain the idea that their forefathers had a light than there was to be known regarding the teachings of God's Word. This thought is responsible for the sad condition of affairs now existing in the religious world. Back in the Middle Ages, during the darkness when the people were breaking away from some of the monstrous teachings which crept in after the death of the Apostles, such creeds were formulated and new doctrines sprang into existence. These are all matters of history. We have a single creed that does not contain some gross errors of which the enlightened minister and Bible scholar of today are heartily ashamed. The light is progressive, and those who have made to advance beyond that which is contained in their church system of theology, are measurably in the will and the Scriptures declare that "the pathway of the just is as the shining light, which shineth more and more unto the perfect day." The old doctrines of the Lord and the Apostles are the same, but there is new and increasing light upon them.

Q.—In Revelation xvi, 13, we read as follows: "I saw three unclean spirits like frogs come out of the mouth of the dragon, and out of the mouth of the beast, and out of the mouth of the false prophet." Can you tell me what is symbolized by the three unclean spirits?

Answer.—The River Euphrates, of the preceding verse, represents the people who have been contributors to the wealth and resources of Christendom. These will be turned aside at a certain time, withdraw their influence and support from the great civil-ecclesiastical systems. A dissatisfaction will arise between the laity and the clergy because the churches are arraying themselves on the side of the rich and influential combinations, and in opposition to the increasing desires and efforts of the people for liberty. This dissatisfaction on the part of the present evil systems, which will result in their downfall, is to prepare the way for the "kings of the East, or Orient." These who will be kings and priests unto God, the Sun of Righteousness that shall rise with healing in its beams. (Revelation xx. 4-6; Matthew xxiii. 43; Malachi iv. 2.) In other words, God's intelligence is to be established on the ruins of the present order. About this time we may expect to hear of three unclean doctrines or proclamations, spurious spirits setting forth the divine right of kings and the authority of the clergy, to bolster up the declining influence of the evil systems represented in the dragon, the beast, and the false prophet. These doctrines will have the effect of drawing together the ruling classes (the kings of the earth in opposition to the masses of the people), represented chiefly in Socialism. This will result in the battle of the great day of God Almighty—the battle of Armageddon, which signifies "Mount of Destruction."

"He send one behead-ed John."

Nothing in God's promise bound Him to give John the Baptist a place in the Kingdom. But the Scriptures declare that God foreknew the class predestinated it as a class from before the foundation of the world; and He is now making a selection according to principles, to determine who may be of this class. He has given opportunity to John the Baptist to be of this class, but permitted him to die when he had accomplished the work intended for him. None can be of His Bride class who died prior to Pentecost, for there the Holy Spirit was first given, and without this none can occupy the place of sons; those under Moses and of his House were servants.

Men are so constituted that everybody undertakes what he sees another successful in, whether he has aptitude for it or not.—Goethe.

EVERYBODY'S BIBLE QUESTION BOX

YOUR BIBLE QUESTIONS WILL BE ANSWERED IN THIS COLUMN, IF YOU SEND THEM TO THE EDITOR OF THIS PAPER.

Q.—Were not some of the customs of the Jews in regard to the execution of criminals, those who grossly violated the Mosaic Law, barbarous and savage in their nature? For instance, the custom of stoning culprits to death, it seems to me, was an awful one. What is your idea on this matter? (Grass).

Answer.—As the result of the centuries of training under that Law, the Jews today, as the most law-abiding peoples on the face of the earth. There is less crime committed among them, in proportion to their numbers, than that of any other class. An assimilation of the prison statistics in this and other countries reveals the fact that the largest number of criminals are Catholics, while the smallest number are Jews. It would be well for the civilized nations of the world if the Mosaic Law had to force today, as then, it would be less instances of lynchings, where culprits are horribly tortured to death by the mobs; and there would not be so many running women and girls "disappear" every year (20,000 in this country alone); and there would be a decided drop in the greed and graft in the world. No system of laws ever formulated will favorably compare with the Mosaic Laws.

Q.—What can I tell my child, in answer to the question, "Where did God go when He went away?" If I say to Heaven if I am good, where do I go if I am not good? (A. R.)

Answer.—It would be well to teach the children just what the Bible teaches in reply to this question. It is a simple narrative of the fall of the race into sin and death through Adam's disobedience. As a result of this disobedience, the history of the Heavenly Father's love in sending forth His well beloved Son to redeem the world from its fallen condition, and because the Lord Jesus gave His life for all, in the resurrection morning, all are to have their graves shall come forth, both the just and the unjust. Explain to the child very carefully, how every thought and word and action has its influence in the development of character; that good things have their influence for good, and that wrong things have their influence for ill. Tell him that if he is good he will be a child of perfect mind; that he will live forever on this earth which God is going to make like the Garden of Eden. If he is bad after he comes forth from the grave, he will go into the "second death," and be as "though he had not been."—Rev. xx. 14, 15; Obad. xvi.

Q.—What is the meaning of the Apostle's words—"Behold, I show you a mystery: We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump; for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead will be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed?"—1 Corinthians xv. 51-52? (A Bible Student.)

Answer.—In this wonderful chapter on the resurrection the Apostle explains that if Christ had not died and been raised again for our justification, all who have died in the past would have "perished." They would not have life in any sphere, condition, or form. He shows that death is real and not a supposition, and that in the view of the fact that Christ died for all and that there is to be a resurrection of the dead, the dead are called a "sleep." After reasoning along this line and showing conclusively that the dead are dead, and that there is no hope for life from any other source than through Christ, he proceeds to point out a mystery. At the second coming of Christ, when the last trumpet would sound, the Lord's people then living who would not die, but not "sleep" as had been the case with the others who had died in the past. These, in place of resting in death, would be "changed" in an instant, "caught up with the Lord in the air," to be associated with Him for the immortal and incorruptible state.

Q.—Nay, in all these things we are more than conquerors, through Him that loved us."—Romans viii. 37. How is it possible for one to be "more than a conqueror" in the good fight of faith? (O. A. B.)

Answer.—In the Divine arrangements there are two divisions of the one spiritual class in process of development throughout the Christian era, from the time of the Lord Jesus and the Apostles to the time of the second coming. These two divisions are mentioned in the seventh chapter of Revelation. One of these is represented as being "a great multitude, which no man could number," and they are located in the "throne of God and the Lamb. The other division are the 144,000 that were sealed, and these are in the "throne of God and the Lamb, as was promised by the Lord Jesus. (Revelation iii. 21, 22.) Those who overcome the world most cheerfully endure the hardships of the Christians experiences, as good soldiers of the cross of Christ, and, overcoming the foes of righteousness, are, indeed, "conquerors," and not only so, in the sense of being victorious, but also in the sense of being crowned as such. The great company before the Throne will be conquerors likewise, but they will not receive the crown of life, because they did not overcome in the way the 144,000 did. These, therefore, will be the servants who will minister before the Throne. The Kingly conquerors will be honored more than the mere conquerors.

OUR OLD COUNTRY CORRESPONDENCE.

Annual British Trade Union Convention Will Discuss Many Important Measures--National Insurance Act Condemned--Unions and Political Action. Move for Trade Union Bank--Miners in Convention Denounce Minimum Wage Act.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

LONDON, Aug. 29.—The final agenda for the forty-fifth annual British Trade Union convention which opens at Newport, on the borders of Wales, on September 2, was issued on August 14. The London Society of Compositors has given notice of a motion which "in view of the continued increase in the cost of living and the consequent reduction in real wages" asks the Congress to declare "in favor of the Trade Unions taking early and simultaneous action to obtain an increase of $1.25 per week for all grades of time and piece workers in both public and private employ, and, with a view to decreasing unemployment a reduction of hours to 44 per week and the strict limitation of overtime." The Amalgamated Cobblers submits a resolution in favor of a general minimum wage of 40 per week, coupled with a seven hour week for all male adult workers, while the Labor Protection League calls for a similar minimum and a forty-eight hour week for all workers irrespective of sex.

The Agricultural Laborers will ask Congress to instruct the Parliamentary Committee to take immediate steps for securing the introduction and passage into law of a bill to reduce the working hours of agricultural laborers and secure one half holiday per week for this class of worker. The Typographical Association is responsible for the following proposal: "That rates or wages, the regulation of hours, and other conditions embodied in agreements entered into between Trade Unions as representing the workers and the representatives of employers in a given industry should be legally enforceable on all persons employing labor in that industry, and the Parliamentary Committee is hereby instructed to take action accordingly."

The London Carmen will move: "That in the interests of Trade Unionism, and with a view to securing the full benefits of awards and agreements fought for and secured by Trade Unionists, this Congress is of opinion that the time has arrived when Trade Unionists should refuse to work with non-Unionists." The Operative Bricklayers ask Congress to reaffirm previous resolutions in favor of the amalgamation of the present Trade Unions by industries. The National Union of Dock Laborers, one of the Societies in the Transport Workers Federation, replies with an amendment asking the Congress to repudiate Syndicalism.

A number of notices deal with the Insurance Act. The National Union of Dock Laborers draws attention to the provisions of the act affecting casual laborers whose weekly earnings do not exceed $2.50, and who are compelled to pay full contributions, while other workers whose wages are under $2.50 are granted exemption. The Union asks that some privilege should be extended to casual laborers. A number of Unions protest against the separate treatment of different parts of the United Kingdom, and insist that Unions having branches in the four countries should be treated as one entity for valuation purposes under the Insurance Act. The National Union of Gas Workers and General Laborers considers that some just and simple provision should be made for insuring old persons and those whose work is casual and badly paid, and Congress is asked to press for amendment of the Act, so that such persons shall be relieved from contribution.

In view of the trouble which has arisen in Trade Union ranks over the education question, it is significant that the Miners' Federation invites the Congress to rule out future debates any resolution on the subject of secular education.

A resolution, which notice has been given by the Parliamentary Committee, declares that there is need for continued independent political action. Another proposal by the committee invites the payment of returning officers' expenses by the State; the holding of all elections on one day, with public-houses closed during the hours of polling; the amendment of the Corrupt and Illegal Practices in Elections Act in the direction of greater stringency, and the extension of the franchise of all adults—male and female." The motion also instructs the Parliamentary Committee to draft a bill upon the lines indicated, for introduction into Parliament next year, and declares that no Electoral Reform Bill will be satisfactory if it does not include these points.

Inquiries in trade union circles confirm the statement that a settlement is at present on foot with the object of creating a banking business in connection with the trade union movement. The credit of the idea is given to C. W. Bowerman, M. P., the secretary of the Trade Union Congress, and when the next conference of that body is held the matter will be seriously considered. It has been the subject of discussion for some time by the executive of the Parliamentary Committee, and opinions favorable have gathered round the trade unionists as to the practicability of carrying on a trade union bank on co-operative lines. Several modified forms of the original idea have been under consideration, and generally it is believed that a scheme can be formulated which shall enable an ordinary banking business to be conducted, while reserves could be accumulated so as to afford the unions financial assistance at low rates of interest in periods of strikes or other occasions of industrial unrest where a great strain is placed upon individual union funds. It is proposed that all profits shall be distributed among the unions participating and be applicable to increasing the benefits of their respective members.

MOTHER'S PENSION FOR PENNSYLVANIA.

An editorial in our contemporary, the Pittsburgh Press, calling attention to the mother's pension laws in successful operation in Illinois, Missouri and other states has led to an agitation which promises to secure similar legislation in Pennsylvania. Mr. A. C. Stein, Republican candidate for the legislature in the First Legislative district, announces that he will present a bill for mothers' pensions at the next session if he is elected, and virtually makes this undertaking a part of his platform. There is no question that it is a desirable enactment, and the letters of sympathy and approval the Press has received in such large number commending it for its effort to replace the orphans' asylum with a mothers' pension law should show Mr. Stein and all other legislative candidates that they will be popularizing themselves by pledging it their support.

As the law now stands in Pennsylvania children whom a mother, owing to her poverty, cannot properly care for at home may be taken away from her and placed in a public institution where the cost of their keeping is defrayed from the public treasury. Nobody pretends that a child profits by separation from the mother, who is its natural guardian. For the love with which she cherishes it and seeks its highest welfare no public institution, where the children are cared for in a mass by hired attendants, can offer a substitute. This no reasonable person will dispute.

The best interests of the child, and the best interests of society as well, require that children be reared in the home if possible. The mother's pension makes it possible. The experience of both Illinois and Missouri proves that to pay a poor but worthy mother enough to enable her to keep the child at home costs the state actually less than the child's maintenance in any of the public institutions. The best home for it, in other words—namely, its own home—is also the cheapest. Merely to save money, therefore, Pennsylvania should have a mother's pension law, even if considerations of humanity and the necessity of giving the best possible form of training to future citizens were not to be considered. The present system, with its forcible separation of mother and child, is not merely blindly stupid but barbarously heartless. There is no reason for reason refuse to enact a mother's pension law patterned after the wholesome and successful statutes now in force in other enlightened commonwealths.

LAWYERS ON JUDICIAL RECALL.

NATURALLY, lawyers and judges see many things alike. It is not surprising that the meeting of the American Bar Association at Milwaukee, attended by representative lawyers from all parts of the country, should have made it clear that there is considerable resentment in that body against a number of the current political agitations, particularly against the one for the recall of judges. And there is truth and force in some of the speeches which the association listened to. The country will go far recognize the fact as probably to wait a good while before adopting some of the new-fangled remedies for judicial delay and excess of authority. To be called upon to do the work of the courts and decide the claims and counter-claims of Tom, Dick and Harry against one another would bore the average American citizen to extinction. He does not have the time, even if he had the inclination, for such a job. He has to work hard enough as it is now, and if he has to be ex-officio a judge (without salary) he will begin to wonder whether government isn't more trouble than it's worth.

In short, the country is likely to come to the conclusion, at least for the time being, that the cure for dishonest and unrighteous judges is a liberal dose of impeachment and defeat at the polls for any party which puts men on the bench who do not deserve the public confidence. Meanwhile, however, our friends of the bar associations should not ride too high a horse in their defense of the judiciary from the assaults of its foes. If there had not been good cause for attacking the judiciary, it would not have been molested. It will be well for all concerned if it has been humbled by its recent chastisement, as apparently it has.

E. W. CHAFIN, PROHIBITION CANDIDATE FOR PRESIDENT.

EUGENE WILDER CHAFIN, the national Prohibition party's candidate for president of the United States, is best known as a temperance advocate, though he also is a lawyer and an author.

Mr. Chafin was born in Wisconsin in 1852 and was educated in the public schools. In 1875 the University of Wisconsin gave him the degree of LL. B., and he was admitted to the bar in the same year. He practiced law in Waukesha, Wis., until 1900, when he became superintendent of the Washingtonian home, Chicago, which post he held four years. He has been nationally active as a speaker and organizer in temperance and prohibition movements. He was grand chief templar of the Wisconsin Good Templars from 1880 to 1890 and of the Illinois Good Templars in 1894 and 1895. He has been the Prohibition candidate for many offices.

LABOR'S INTERESTS AT NATIONAL CAPITAL.

Unprecedentedly Large Strike Benefits Paid Out by Federation During First Ten Months of Fiscal Year--Healthy Increase of Membership--Labor in Demand--Miner Appointed On Parcels Post Commission--Congressmen Who Championed Bill to Curb Injunction Judges Win Re-Nomination.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—Secretary Morrison's report to the Executive Council at its last session showed that during the first ten months of this fiscal year $60,877.33 had been paid out of the defense fund for constitutional strike benefits to local trade and federal trade unions. This is the largest sum ever paid out by the American Federation of Labor in benefits in that length of time. There still remains, however, in the defense fund, $87,110.87.

The gain in the average membership of the American Federation of Labor in the first ten months of the fiscal year ended July 31, 1912, over the first ten months of the fiscal year ended July 31, 1911, was 34,161.

The board of arbitration, to which was referred the controversy between the locomotive engineers and the Eastern railroads, has not yet been able to complete an examination of all the testimony adduced before that tribunal. It is expected, however, that the arbitrators will reach a conclusion early in the coming month and immediately thereafter render its award.

When the restricted or experimental provision for a parcels post was incorporated in the postoffice appropriation bill, it was also provided that a commission be created to study the operation of the parcels post feature with a view to making recommendations respecting defects, and also extending the service. In cases of this kind it has always been customary to appoint members of the committee having charge of the subjects to be investigated. In this instance, however, owing to the fact that David J. Lewis, of Maryland, a coal miner, was active in the subject of parcels post and express transportation, he has been appointed by Speaker Clark as one of the three commissioners from the House of Representatives. Congressman Tilley of South Carolina and Congressman Gardner of New Jersey being the other two.

A prominent trade review publication, in discussing the present industrial and commercial situation, states that from the steel industry nothing but the most favorable reports are forthcoming, plants being worked to capacity of present labor supply, stocks of pig iron being reduced, and the demand by the railroads and other consumers large and urgent. The steel corporation needs 2,000 men, and needs them badly, and is not only advertising for them, but sending out canvassers to look for them. In the automobile, furniture and other industries in certain sections of the country the shortage of labor is keenly felt. In fact, all trade review papers report increasing activity in other commercial enterprises, with a corresponding dearth of available labor to supply a most insistent demand.

Senator Bacon and Congressman Bartlett, both of Georgia, have been renominated. It will be remembered that Senator Bacon introduced in the Senate an anti-injunction bill, carrying with it a clause taking the labor organizations out from under the operation of the Sherman anti-trust law, the bill being far-reaching in its scope. Congressman Bartlett introduced its same bill in the House, which was referred to the Labor Committee, and was reported out favorably, and is now on the calendar. The Clayton injunction limitation bill has, however, been passed by the House, and is now before a sub-committee of the Judiciary Committee of the Senate.

By the terms of the postoffice appropriation bill it is stipulated that all first and second class postoffices are to be closed on Sundays. Heretofore, where local sentiment demanded, local postmasters have been permitted to keep general delivery windows open during certain hours, but under the new law this will not be permitted. The only way in which to get letters to their destination therefore on Sunday will be to put a special delivery stamp on them, as it is provided that special delivery letters shall be delivered on Sunday. Mail will be distributed in postoffice boxes up to midnight of each Saturday, however, as has been the rule followed. This will give the greater portion of the postoffice supplies an entire day off, only a sufficient force being kept on to handle mail in transportation points. Rural mail is to be considered in this class, and distributed in boxes in postoffices.

Danbury Hatters' Case Again

HARTFORD, Conn., Sept. 2.—The celebrated Danbury hatters' case, which will be remembered as resulting in the assessment of a $250,000 judgment against the Hatters' Union, is again on trial here. When the above verdict was rendered an appeal was taken to a higher court, the latter court remanding the case for a new trial, and directing the manner in which the case should be conducted on the retrial. The higher court decided that the conspiracy to boycott the Loewe hats must be proven in each individual case, and not against the union as a whole, and upon this order a retrial of the case was made necessary. It is likely the case will be long drawn out.

Members of the Longshoremen's Union Protective Association, whose demand on the fifty transatlantic steamship companies for 5 cents an hour increase in wages has been met by 3 cents an hour increase said yesterday that the settlement is favorable to accepting the increase.

The International Brotherhood of Bookbinders has sent out from the general office in Indianapolis the statement that the conflict which has been on for two years between the local unions in New York and the main organization has been settled.

FOR INTERNATIONAL PEACE.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31.—The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, the organization that is endeavoring to co-operate with labor in many of its efforts, and which this year is making an extra effort to popularize Labor Sunday, is also sponsor for new movement among the churches to actively interest ministers and church workers in a Permanent Arbitration Commission. The purpose of the new commission, as its platform states, is to extend the influence of the church "toward international good will and brotherhood, and that the time has come to patent one judicial procedure for war in the settlement of international disputes." A plan is being considered on calling a meeting of churches or Great Britain, Germany and America at The Hague before the third Hague conference. Information can be secured by addressing Frederick Lynch, 218 Fourth avenue, New York City.

LOOK INTO BUYING TRUST.

Both Houses of Congress at the recent session passed a measure providing for a special Congressional commission to ascertain whether there is a tobacco buying combination existing between the governments of Italy, Austria, France, Spain and Japan to depress the price of tobacco on the American market. Buyers from these countries are heavy purchasers of American tobacco, but it is asserted that competition between them has been a dead letter for years, and that the prices paid have steadily declined until the American grower is said to be forced, to dispose of his crop at a price lower than the growing cost. These Senators and three members of the House of Representatives will compose the commission.

PROSECUTION--PERSECUTION.

Press dispatches from Los Angeles state that the motion to dismiss the indictment of alleged jury bribing against Clarence Darrow in the Bain case has been denied. It is also reported that all the judges of the Superior Court of Los Angeles have refused to sit in the case, making it necessary to call in an outside judge. If the case goes to trial the evidence in the former trial will be made to do service again, which savors of persecution instead of prosecution. Later—The second trial has been set to begin October 21.

HOW LABOR DAY WAS OBSERVED.

Organized labor in Pittsburgh on Monday (Labor Day) broke its banners to the breeze and staged a march time through the city's heart. The city looked on and applauded. The army of the workers wound over the Allegheny river to the North Side before its maneuvers were through, and it seemed greater than all other Labor Day parades.

The marchers each were tasked; the rest of the city was tagged as well, and 150 women and girls toiled through the morning toward a liquidated mortgage on organized labor's home. And when all was counted up last night it was found that $5,000 or more had been realized. But that was only the beginning.

At Kennywood, at West View; wherever labor gathered, there were masses to hear the espousal of labor's cause. The speakers were men who loom large in the civic and social life of the community.

There were the trades and crafts represented in the multitude that gathered at Labor Temple, Washington street and Bedford avenue, yesterday morning. Even the glass bottle blowers, the moving picture operators, the plasterers, the broommakers, the elevator constructors—all were there to begin the annual demonstration at 10 o'clock.

Assistant Superintendent of Police E. J. Kelly, mounted, headed the parade with an escort of 32 mounted police. Next came Chief Marshall H. J. McGrath, of the patternmakers; Adjutant General J. J. McKee, of the plumbers; Charles Roskosh, chief of staff, of the bricklayers. These aides followed: R. A. Maginn, steamfitters; Charles W. Shepard,

Pastor Russell's Sermon

ONE SACRIFICE FOR SINS FOREVER.

Christ's Offering Left Nothing Further to Be Done—A Long Standing Mistake—Pastor Russell Disagrees With the Doctrine of the Mass—Unscriptural and Based on Early Error. Sinners Should Go Directly to the Lord—Mankind Growing in Grace.

LONDON, England, Sep 13.—Pastor Russell's text was "After He had offered one sacrifice for sins forever, He sat down on the right hand of God; * * * for by one offering He hath perfected forever them that are sanctified."—Heb. 10: 12-14.

The Bible is most explicit in its declaration that Jesus, as the Antitypical High Priest, offers but one sacrifice of Himself for the sins of the world. In our context St. Paul points to the fact that the typical priests of the Jewish Era repeated their sacrifices yearly, on each succeeding Atonement Day. He notes for us the fact that those were merely typical sacrifices, which could never take away sins; and then he tells us that the one Sacrifice, on the one Atonement Day, by the Antitypical High Priest, is so complete as to leave nothing further to be done. "Christ * * * doth no more; death hath no more dominion over Him;" "This He did once, when He offered up Himself" (Christ) "unto God." (Romans vi. 9; Hebrews vii, 27; ix, 14.) A matter so well established we should settle in our minds and not allow any theory or supposed necessity to move us therefrom.

However, we behold two great Christian denominations holding a different view—the High Church of England and the Church of Rome. Both hold the doctrine introduced into the Church about the Fourth Century—the doctrine of the Mass. This doctrine holds that the death of Christ cancels original sin for believers and brings them into fellowship with God through faith in the redeeming blood of Christ. But it philosophizes that sins committed after coming into the family of God need cancelation also, and that nothing except the blood of Christ, the death of Christ, can take away sin; and that the merit of His death at Calvary having been used to cancel past sins, a fresh sacrifice of Christ is necessary for the more recent sins.

SACRIFICE OF THE MASS.

Proceeding with the philosophy they ask, How can we get a fresh sacrifice of Christ and apply it and thus be kept cleansed in the sight of God? They answer that the bread and the wine of the communion service, after being blessed, are the actual flesh and blood of Jesus, and may be used afresh in sacrifice for their sins.

Applying this philosophy these Christian brethren perform a common, or Low Mass for general sins, in a congregational way, and High Mass for special sins. Their Church services accordingly are not so much studies or expositions of the Bible, but more particularly a participation in the cleansing supposed to accrue to all who attend Mass.

Those who fail to attend Mass at least once in a year are supposed to be horribly defiled with the sins accumulated in it. The congregation assembled, praise and prayer are chanted, and then the officiating priest approaches what they call the altar of sacrifice. On it are the bread and wine, which, being blessed, are instantly turned into the actual flesh and actual blood of Christ. The officiating priests and associates and the congregation are all on their knees to worship the Host—to give reverence to the freshly created Christ on the altar. The officiating priest then rises and breaks the bread of flesh. Thus the sacrifice of the Mass for the sins of the people present is accomplished. No wonder the people are anxious to be present, to be cleansed afresh of their sins!

Not only is the sacrifice of the Mass thus made for the living, but Christ is similarly sacrificed for the dead supposed to be suffering in Purgatory.

WHERE LIES THE MISTAKE!

With our convenient Bibles (Catholic and Protestant) we have much advantage over our brethren of the Fourth Century who invented the doctrine of the Mass. We now see that it is unscriptural and that the bishops, more supposed to be successors of the Twelve Apostles, and all other words, they were not inspired—they were not successors of The Twelve. Whatever things these bishops bound on earth were not bound in heaven—they made mistakes, as we all have—and doubtless just as honestly as we.

Bible students see clearly that the one sacrifice of Christ is sufficient for the sins of the whole world—past, present and to come—God's provision in Christ for the forgiveness of sins is applicable only to Adam's (or original) sin, and to such weaknesses as have come to his children from that original sin by heredity. God does not propose in any manner to forgive sins wilfully committed. They receive stripes or punishments in proportion to their wilfulness.

Whatever proportion of sin is directly or indirectly the result of Adam's disobedience and human imperfection is covereable through the merit of the one sacrifice of Christ, which covering is to be obtained by the transgressor's approaching the Throne of the heavenly Grace that he may obtain mercy and find grace to help in time of need. When we come to God desiring to be accepted as disciples of Jesus and joint-sacrificers in His cross-bearing, self-denial and death to the world, and joint-heirs also with Him in His Heavenly Kingdom, we found Him prepared and willing to be our Advocate with the Father. Through the imputation of the merit of His sacrifice we were healed and accepted of the Father and begotten of the Holy Spirit.

Now, as children of God, New Creatures in Christ, we still need our Advocate, because we as New Creatures have not yet received our new bodies and will not receive them until the resurrection; and because our earthly bodies are imperfect through the fall we are liable from time to time to be overtaken in a fault. Our need, then, is not to attend Low Mass, or Hizh Mass, to go directly to the Lord in the name and merit of our Advocate. Thus the Apostle enjoins us saying, "If any man (in the Church) sin, we have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the Righteous." (I John ii, 1.) The though that sin in every instance requires Atonement is quite Scriptural, but the thought that the literal shedding of blood there is no remission of sins is Scriptural. (Hebrews ix, 22.) But the thought that Christ needs to die more than once is not supported by the Scriptures, as we have already seen.

The fact is that good and great people have made serious errors in theology along nearly every line. The errors accumulated for nearly fifteen centuries, and we must not wonder at our slowness in getting fully rid of them. For the past four centuries practically the people of God of all denominations have been coming back to the light of God's Word. Both Catholic and Protestant translations of the Bible are assisting us. We are growing in grace as well as in knowledge. Whatever we shall say of the world, we must believe that God's consecrated people in every denomination are more Christlike, more Godlike, than were their forefathers who, surrounded by the errors of the past, fanatically and heartlessly tortured one another in the name of religion—in the name of the Bible which they did not understand.

"THE ABOMINATION OF DESOLATION."

Nearly nineteen centuries ago our Redeemer mentioned the Abomination of Desolation spoken of by the Prophet Daniel. The Master declared that when this Abomination should be seen those dating it should understand and flee with haste. For lost centuries it was supposed that the Great Teacher referred to events which culminated in A. D. 70, in the destruction of Jerusalem. The Abomination was supposed to refer to the carrying of Roman banners within the holy precincts of the Temple. It did seem strange that so comparatively insignificant a matter should have been mentioned by the Lord through Daniel the Prophet, and should also have been referred to by Jesus Himself.

Of late there is another interpretation. It refers our Lord's prophecy specially to the end of the Age and the great "Time of Trouble" soon to come upon the Church and upon Christendom. In this view the Abomination of Desolation signifies a reprehensible doctrine introduced into the Church, the true spiritual Temple—into the "holy place." The doctrine was to be an abomination in the sight of God and would exercise a desolating influence upon everything associated with it. This influence would continue for long centuries before its defiling character would be recognized. Then all so recognizing it should know that the Time of Trouble and the New Dispensation are near, and should make all haste to separate themselves from everything associated with the "Abomination"—they should forsake the error and flee to the mountain heights of Truth, as Lot and his family fled from Sodom.

I share with many other Bible Students the view that the Desolating Abomination mentioned by the Prophet Daniel and by Jesus is the doctrine of the Mass. It was introduced about the middle of the Fourth Century. It has had a corrupting influence since. And now that we see it clearly it is the duty and privilege of all of God's people to get right with God by renouncing that which is so abominable in His sight—the setting aside of the one perfect sacrifice of Christ, and the substituting in part therefor of the sacrifices of the Mass, performed many times every day throughout the world.

The Apostle's language (xi, 31 28) we recognize a brief synoptical history covering the period from the Fourth Century to the days of Napoleon. The Sanctuary of Truth and Christian Liberty suffered desolation. The daily Sacrifice, literally the continual sacrifice, was taken away, and the Abomination of Desolation was introduced and set up. Both Catholic and Protestation of the Church nominal, corrupted by flattery and prosperity, and a description of the true saints of God, who, in the days of their purity and zeal did wonders in support of the Truth. A work of instruction is mentioned, yet the instructors "fell by the sword and by flame and captivity and by spoil" (Protestant Martyrs), except they were not allowed to fall completely. God helped them "with a little help"—just enough to preserve seed, there, not to attend Low Mass, or Hizh Mass, but

TRACK LAYING MACHINE.

Device Places Ties and Rails in Position For the Spikers.

The modern track laying machine should not be confused with track laying tools, as this machine is not a tool, but a real machine that actually does tracks, says the Scientific American. The machine moves steadily forward over the track it lays at a rate of from twelve to forty feet per minute. At the rear of the track laying machine are cars loaded with ties and rails. The cars which carry the ties are in advance of those carrying the rails. The rails are drawn forward on rollers and are connected temporarily one to the other. As the rails pass under the cars which carry the ties the latter are distributed upon the rails and spaced apart uniformly. The chain of rails thus serves to transport the ties toward the track laying machine. As the rails enter the machine the ties are picked up by a conveyor and carried overhead. They are distributed on the roadbed at the end of a truss that reaches far in advance of the main body of the track laying machine. The rails in the meantime are carried forward and deposited upon ties previously laid. The truss may be swung to one side or the other in order to allow for passing around curves.

The track laying machine is self propelling. It hauls a train of twenty-five cars of material, more or less depending upon the grade. A train of twelve cars will carry enough material for a mile of track. The machine, with sufficient fuel, including sufficient lay and bolt and spike a half a mile of track per day. With a larger force of men two miles of track may be laid in a single day.

KEEPS AUTO IN ROAD.

Spring Attachment Prevents Wheels From Turning Aside Easily.

An ingenious device designed to prevent the front wheels of an automobile from being easily turned aside by obstructions or unevenness in the road is being marketed by an eastern automobile accessory concern.

A spiral spring about three feet long, made from specially prepared oil tempered steel wire, with a center clip and end attachments made from steel forgings, is attached between the front spring seats and the steering rod. It is claimed to correct automatically any tendency of the wheels to turn aside from a straight path.—Popular Mechanics.

Poison From Frogs.

The arrow poison used by the Indians of Colombia has been found to be the secretion of the skin of a small frog. The arrows are eight inch palm spines, which are shot from a blowgun about fourteen feet long, and the hunter carries the frog along in a hollow bamboo in order that he may have the poison in a fresh condition. A simple prick of the skin yields the poison drop when needed. When one of the arrows enters the body of even a large animal, such as a jaguar, monkey or deer, paralysis quickly follows, and the victim is then easily killed. The use of the poison, it is said, does not affect the flesh of the animals killed, which is quite harmless when eaten. Two French naturalists have made experiments with the edible frog, Rana esculenta, showing that the skin exudes a similar poison when irritated and that an extract prepared from the skin gives in guinea pigs the same symptoms as inoculation with the arrow poison.

Old Age Diet.

The Metchnikoff theory of old age, as is well known, attributes senility largely to poisons in the great intestine. From the latest report of Professor Metchnikoff and Dr. Eugene Wollman it appears that these poisons are chiefly indol and the phenols and that sugar, which is much more readily absorbed by the great intestine, has a very much effect in opposing their action. They propose feeding substances that certain microbes keep from rotting sugar until the great intestine is reached. They concluded that an ideal diet would include two meals a day, each of 450 grams of meat, 500 or 600 grams of clotted milk acidulated by the both acid inoculus and a sufficiency of vegetables, fruits, and farinaceous substances. Under test this diet is claimed to have kept the intestinal poisons at a minimum.

New Device For the Deaf.

Demonstration of a new electrical instrument to facilitate the teaching of the deaf to talk was given recently at the New York Institution For the Improved Instruction of the Deaf. The instrument, invented by Charles W. Harper of Boston, is an apparatus consisting of an accumulator and several ear pieces which the deaf pupils hold to their ears. The sound produced may be modified or amplified at the will of the operator.

STOPPING THE RUNAWAY.

Electrical Device Used on a New York Bridge to Check Horses.

On one of New York's big bridges where runways are of frequent occurrence has been installed a gate that makes the halting of a runaway horse a mere act of mechanical effort.

Installed about two years ago on the south roadway of the Williamsburg bridge over the East river this "runaway gate" has stopped almost one hundred runaways, in none of which were the animals seriously injured. The record is in striking contrast with that of the gate which was displaced. The old gate was simply a barrier across the roadway, into which the horse smashed at full speed. It was effective in stopping runaways, ending lives and destroying property. Of the forty-two runaways on the Williamsburg bridge during the last year of the operation of the old gates thirty were stopped by this barrier, and of these thirty, seven of the horses were killed instantly, while thirteen were badly injured.

In merciful contrast the gate in use entirely different. Whereas formerly the barrier was immovable, the gate now, which is in two sections, forms a V shaped chute, forty-eight feet in length, whose mouth is as wide as the roadway. An aperture is at the apex. The terrified horse dashes into the chute and makes for the small opening, but long before he reaches it he finds himself frantically pawing the air, while unyielding force holds him in check.

What has happened? Simply this: The narrowing sides of the chute had caught the wagon or the front axle and brought it to a stop long before the horse reached the point where he came in contact with the timbers. All the checking power had been applied from the rear, and the animal found himself suspended with a force he could not move. It was a simple operation, and the horse escaped with barely a scratch.

Reaching far out on the big span is a series of pitch buttons and near each of these a pedlar-topped post is set. When a runaway starts the officer pushes a button which transmits the signal to the policeman at the runaway gate. Warned of the oncoming danger, the lineman makes ready, and as the animal passes a certain point he throws over his electric controller, and slowly the big gates swing into position. A second push on the horsepower electric motor, operating a worm gear and rack and pinion, to which is attached a steel strip, pushes each of the gates into position, where they are held immovable until the officer is ready to open them.—Ellson's Monthly.

Measuring Water Flow.

"Second foot," is defined by the United States geological survey, is an abbreviation for cubic foot per second and is the unit for the rate of flow. It is claimed to correct automatically any tendency of the wheels to turn aside from a straight path.—Popular Mechanics.

FOR MARKING LAUNDRY.

Directions For Making a Suitable Copper Stencil.

A stencil suitable for marking indelibly may be easily made as follows:

First procure a small sheet of "stencil" steel copper plate one inch wide and four inches long, says Popular Mechanics. Use this sheet of copper in a vessel containing some melted beeswax, so that both sides will be evenly covered with a thin coat of the wax when it cools. The design—initial, monogram or name—that is wanted in the stencil should now be drawn upon a piece of thin white paper. Reverse side of the paper thickened with graphite and then laid on the stencil plate with the design in the center of the plate, afterward the design is lightly traced with a blunt point on the thin wax coating. After the paper is removed trace the design on the wax surface with a pointed instrument, but not completely, the lines being broken at more or less regular intervals to form "holders," so that, after etching, the design cannot fall out.

Next lay the stencil in a small shallow dish and pour a small quantity of fresh nitric acid over it. Keep the air bubbles removed from the surface by means of a piece of soft feather. The design will be eaten away in a very short time when the wax has been removed, and this may be readily observed by holding the stencil plate up to the light. The acid should then be rinsed off with water and the wax removed by heating and wiping it off with a cloth. The stencil may be given a final cleaning in a dish of benzine or gasoline, which will remove any remaining wax.

Paper Pneumatic Tires.

According to a foreign periodical, not only is paper a suitable material for the manufacture of tires for railway wagons, but it may be used for the construction of pneumatic tires, possessing the strength of steel and the "elasticity" of rubber. It is absolutely noiseless, resistant to wet and all and cheaper than rubber tires.

Government Orders Precautions Taken

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—Exercised by the fact that a large number of accidents have occurred and are occurring incident to the construction work on government buildings throughout the country, Secretary MacVeagh has directed that all government superintendents take the steps necessary to relieve this condition. The following letter has been sent out:

"You are instructed, without assuming any of the liability on behalf of the government which belongs properly to the contractor, to maintain a constant oversight of the manner of erecting scaffolds, precautions against falling material or installing or authorizing any ropes and the maintenance of all other apparatus furnished by the contractor which might in any way through neglect or carelessness, be the cause of accidents."

$3.50 Recipe Free For Weak Men.

Send Name and Address Today—You Can Have It Free and Be Strong and Vigorous.

I have in my possession a prescription for nervous debility, lack of vigor, weakened manhood, failing memory and loss of power, lame back, kidney and urinary troubles, or the follies of youth, that has cured so many weak and run down men right in their own home—without any additional help or medicine—that I think every man who wishes to regain his manly power will gladly, quickly and speedily, should have a copy of it. I have decided to send a copy of the prescription free of charge. It is a plain, ordinary remedy, and any man who will write me for it will receive it by return mail. The prescription comes from a physician who has made a special study of men, and I am convinced it is the surest, quickest and most reliable thing, if not the most marvelous and vigor failure ever compounded together.

I think I owe it to my fellow men to send them a copy of prescription, so that any man anywhere who is weak and discouraged with nervous fears, who is sup dragging himself with harmful patent medicines, secret nostrums, or the quicksand-ing restorative, upheld by SPOT-TOUCHING remedy ever discovered, and so cure himself at home quickly and quickly. Just drop me a line like this: Dr. A. E. Robinson, 33 Main Building, Detroit, Mich., and will send you a copy of this splendid recipe in a plain envelope entirely free of charge. A great many doctors charge $5.00 to $10.00 for merely writing out a prescription like this—but I want it entirely free.

BROOKLYN TABERNACLE BIBLE

PREACHING THE KINGDOM.

Matthew x. 7: "As ye go, preach, saying, The kingdom of heaven is at hand."

WE HAVE HERE about the kingdom preached. Jesus sent forth His twelve disciples (no mention of two say) saying, "As ye go preach, The Kingdom of Heaven is at hand."

As the Scripture sent out the twelve and healed the sick to allow the people to know the Divine plan and authority for the restoring work which His Kingdom will do. He gave the same power to His disciples.

He told them that the Harvest was plenteous and the laborers few, and it changed that if we were truly praying for all the sinner sickness that in the meantime to pray the Lord of the Harvest to send forth more laborers. So the Master would have us feel a deep interest in the Harvest work now in progress, in the end of this age.

These instructions were not to go to the Gentiles, but to the lost sheep of the House of Israel. Why? God's Covenant promised the restoration to Abraham's Seed.

Jesus was the Seed of Abraham, but God had another feature to unfold in connection with that Abrahamic promise, namely, that He would have associated with Jesus in the Kingdom others who would become joint heirs. The glory, honor and immortality which Abraham could not have received, God purposed to give to Abraham's children as fully as though He had participating eligibility. SPOT-TOUCHING remedy ever discovered, and so cure himself at home quickly and quickly. Just drop me a line like this: Dr. A. E. Robinson, 33 Main Building, Detroit, Mich., and will send you a copy of this splendid recipe in a plain envelope entirely free of charge. A great many doctors charge $5.00 to $10.00 for merely writing out a prescription like this—but I want it entirely free.

Jesus went forth the Sower.

Harvesters and Workers.

Another reason why the blessing should not have been given to the Gentiles was that it was to be a harvesting work, and not primarily a seed-sowing. It was appropriate, therefore, that the Harvest, which pertained to the Jewish Age, should be reaped first. What was done for the Gentiles was the seed-sowing, as represented in the parable of the Wheat and Tares.

In the Harvest of the Gospel Age the reaping is to be done amongst those who have received the seed-sowing. This is an intimation to us that the Lord would now have the harvesting done chiefly amongst those who profess to be His people.

Jesus especially instructed the reapers of that Harvest that they should go forth specially to the lost sheep. They were not commissioned to beg nor to take up collections. They as-sumed therefore that they were now ly to accept what might be voluntarily tendered. If they were not hospitably received, they were to leave it the Lord's will that they go elsewhere. They were sent to search out the worthy ones; they should keep this in mind.—Zion's Watch Tower.

"More Tolerable For Sodom."

Jesus declared that in the Day of Judgment it would be more tolerable for Sodom and Gomorrah than for the city refusing to receive His representatives. The Apostle Peter tells us that Sodom and Gomorrah and other cities were turned into ashes.

It was Jesus' declaration that, aside from a saintly few who received His Message gladly, the nominal people of Christendom are in God's sight they were the people of Sodom and Gomorrah. The sins of Sodom were certainly not worse than the sins of the Jews of Christ's day, or the sins and lack of carelessness in respect to the glorious Message of the Kingdom is in God's sight worse than the sins of Christendom at this time. Hence we see that there is less hope of an eventual salvation for Christendom than for Sodom.

The Sodomites mentioned by Jesus were not all destroyed in the flood, but participated in the wicked-ness which led to the destruction of the cities. Nevertheless, we have the Apostle's statement that God "turned their cities into ashes" (Luke xvii. 29). He declares that their judgment is still future. And, for the Day of Judgment, it will be more tolerable" for them than for the people of Bethsaida and Chorazin.

The Day of Judgment.

But why should the Sodomites have a Day of Judgment? Were they not judged, condemned and destroyed? Yes; but Adam and all of his race were judged and condemned. The only thing that came upon the Sodomites, in addition to the curse coming on all mankind, was that they died violent deaths. The Apostle tells us they were made an example of all who reject God's grace and die the Second Death (II Peter, ii. 6). However, all of Adam's posterity are included in the Redemption work of Jesus. Hence they are merely sleeping with their fathers, awaiting the glorious morning, when the Redeemer of Adam and his race shall take to Himself His great power, and begin His work of blessing.

Great things are just ahead of you, but you must reach out for them—Horace Fletcher.

YOUR BIBLE QUESTIONS ANSWERED IN THIS COLUMN. ADDRESS ALL INQUIRIES TO BIBLE EDITOR, COLUMBUS, OH. ENCLOSE STAMP FOR REPLY BY MAIL.

Q.—What is the meaning of the word "Armageddon?" Also, what is signified by "the battle of Armageddon? Does it mean a conflict that I see are appearing quite frequently in the daily press, these balmy political days, and my curiosity is aroused considerably. (T. R.)

Answer.—The name is found in Revelation xvi. 16, and means literally "The Mountain of Destruction." It is supposed to have reference to the place where the Lord caused the fearful destruction of the enemies of Israel before the days of Gideon and of Jehoshaphat. On both of these occasions the slaughter of the allied armies of the Ten wide Nations and the rout was complete. (Judges viii; II. Chronicles xx). These are believed to be types or illustrations of the battle of Armageddon such as was not since there was a nation" in the end of this Christian Era, when "the whole world" is gathered together for the battle of the great day of God the Almighty (Rev. xvi. 14). Revelation xix. 19; Jeremiah xxv. 31). Indeed, as a matter of fact, the opposing hosts of this last final conflict are gathering at this present time. The spirit of worldliness and anarchism in the world is generating a boiling, seething condition of affairs. The war in Europe, the political factions, the militant suffragettes, the socialists, the militants, the anarchists, the labor organizations, the capitalistic combinations, and the ecclesiastical systems, all in opposition to each and all, are rushing headlong into the battle of Armageddon—Armageddon. The nations of the earth are already gathered together. The great commercial powers, financial interests, commercially, financially, and politically, and associated by the modern methods of communication—the railroads, wireless telegraphs, railways and steamship lines. Armageddon is ready for an all out place of destruction, with all the world engaged in that last final struggle!

Q.—What are we to think of the amazing occurrences, accounts of which appear in the daily press and in the monthly publications, to the effect that Jesus has been seen revealed from the naked English publicist, Wm. T. Stead, who was drowned when the Titanic went down, and that he has appeared and conversed with several well-known people on different occasions? Does this not prove that the dead are not dead but more alive than ever? (Aviator.)

Answer.—It is true that many remarkable manifestations of an unseen, supernatural power have been reported through the daily press of late. There is no doubt as to the authenticity of these demonstrations. They are vouched for by the very best of human testimony. As the Scriptures unmistakably teach that the dead are unconscious in the tomb and will not be awakened until the resurrection morning, we are forced to the conclusion that these supernatural phenomena are not created by those who have gone down into death. The Bible explains the mystery to those who are willing to accept its testimony. It tells about the fallen angels who left their former habitation, their spiritual estate, in the antediluvian times and went contrary to their nature, for which they have been restrained in chains of darkness the darkness of the night until the judgment of the great day. These have wonderful power all down through the ages, obsessing people, impersonating the dead, and otherwise deceiving mankind. Note carefully the following Scriptures:—Exodus xxii. 18; Deuteronomy xviii. 10-12; Leviticus xix. 31; xx. 6, 27; I. Kings xxi. 2 C. 9, 11; I. Chronicles x. 13, 14; Acts xvi. 16-18; Galatians v. 20-21; Isaiah viii. 19, 20; xix. 3.

Q.—The Boston (Mass.) press recently devoted columns of conservative space describing the strange phenomena by the furniture in the parish home of the Methodist preacher residing in one of the suburban districts of that center of the intellectual universe. Tables and chairs vacillated about the room, and a brass costumer threw itself down the stairs with a alarm clock delivered in a most alarming manner, hurling itself across the room and then repeating the stunts after being restored to its original position. The several inmates of the house were duly impressed by these extraordinary proceedings, but were unable to account for them. Perhaps you can explain the mystery. What? (Psyche.)

Answer.—Reports of similar proceedings, to all parts of the globe, indicate that the powers of darkness are becoming very active. These strange manifestations can be attributed to nothing else than to the operation of the demons that infest earth's atmosphere. Let no one for a moment suppose that these phenomena are produced by those who have died, and that these are indications of an effort on their part to communicate with their friends and relatives in the flesh. Our friends are asleep in the tomb, wholly unconscious (Ecclesiastes ix. 10) and have no ability to take part in the affairs of this world. If the spirits would had nothing better to do on the other side, than to engage in such silly antics, as these spiritual phenomena usually are, we would do well to treat them with cold contempt. The tendency of spiritualism is invariably downward; no one has ever been influenced to the higher and nobler things through the power of the demons.

Q.—Do you think that there is any virtue in the relics of Saints and Martyrs who lived some centuries ago? We sometimes hear of marvelous "cures" wrought by the "bones of St. Anna," or Saint this and that, and I know of instances where ignorant and superstitious people have worshipped some of these relics. What is your opinion of these, and is there any Scripture foundation for this custom? (Parley.)

Answer.—The great Milton writes:—

"Then might you see cowls, hoods and habits with long sweep,
And hair, large breeds, indigenous, dispersed,
Pendent by subtle magic."

The spirit of which all these symbolized is dirt.

Fit to the interment of the world, far off, into a limbo, large and broad:
Since called the Paradise of Fools."

There are no Scriptures that warrant the worshipping of relics, images, etc., and these are the relics which have obtained in all enlightened classes of people, and are gradually being discarded as they are being driven away from the darkness and superstitions of the past. The fanaticism of old were severely punished by the Lord because of their worshipping of images, relics, etc. The creation of image worship originated in the old pagan religious system of Ancient Rome, and from the savage tribes of former days.

Q.—Can you explain the Savior's words to Nicodemus, "Except a man be born of water, and of the spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God?" (Inquirer, Toledo.)

Answer.—The Jewish nation was a consecrated nation, a covenant people. God entered into covenant with Moses in the sea and in the cloud when they left Egypt. God accepted them in Moses. He entered into covenant with them at Mt Sinai; but not the time Jesus was speaking, they had forgotten their covenant, had become a nation of formalists and sinners, and many others were self-righteous hypocrites. John's ministry, therefore, was repentance and baptism for the remission of sins—a return to God and to a recognition of the covenant made by the bodies satisfying the repentance and reformation of heart and life. Nicodemus was a Jew, and no doubt would become a follower of the Lord Jesus and enter into the kingdom, until first of all he had experienced the reformation and had been baptized "born of water." In addition to this there must be the begetting of the spirit, and then in the resurrection the birth to the spirit nature—"born of the spirit." Only those who experience this complete transformation of heart and mind, and who are "changed" in the resurrection, will ever enter into the kingdom of God.

Q.—Does Revelation xi. 15, infer, as some seem to believe, that all living nations will be converted and become the kingdoms of God and His Christ? (J. S.)

Answer.—From the many Scriptures describing the conditions which would exist in the last days of this present evil world or dispensation, we are forced to the conclusion that the kingdoms of this world will never yield to gentle persuasion and thus be converted to Christ and His righteous laws of justice and love, but in place of the living nations existing and being glad when the Savior comes to set up His kingdom, we read that they will be "angry" (verse xviii) and the Lord's wrath will be upon them, which would not be the case were they "converted." Again we read "And in the days of these kings (kingdoms shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed; and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever." (Daniel ii. 44, 45.) Another detailed in describing the destruction of all the present kingdoms and governments to make way for the glorious kingdom of the kingdom of our God. See also Daniel ii. 34, 35, where it is pictured forth by the Prophet that the destruction will be complete.

Q.—Shall we deplore the lack of a Homer, Plato, Shakespeare, etc., or we consider that thousands are familiar with their writings, thanks to Gutenberg? Shall we call it devolution when we consider the status of the times compared with that of ancient times? Do not Isaiah, Revelation, and others, with deserts, mountains, rivers, valleys, New Jerusalem, etc., refer to better brain coordination, state of being of the microcosm? Is not the mass mind on the rise in the spirit of Christ, and each has new talent? (M. S. L.)

Answer.—Not by any means do we deplore the lack of great authors and poets such as existed in a former day and age, but rather give thanks that a Gutenberg arose who invented the means for all to enjoy the genius of the ancients. We cannot do so, to be consistent, than to call it devolution when the pendulum of the "mass" with that of an earlier age, and note the downward trend of humanity. Disorder, insanity, and degeneracy are far more prevalent now than at any time in the history of our race. The symbolic expressions of the Old Prophets and the symbolisms of Revelation, refer to the material conditions which will be developed in the earth according to the Divine program, and do not refer to "brain coordinations." The "mass mind" is on the decline as is evidenced by the rapid and steadily increasing lack of spirituality and morality. See II. Timothy iii. 1-5, 12, 13.

British Trade Union Convention Figures. Marvelous Growth in Membership of Trade Unions Last Year--Ship-workers' Amalgamation Pending --- The Trade Union Bank--Fight Over Welsh Mining Custom--International Pottery Convention Meets.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

LONDON, Sept. 5. — The British Trade Union Congress will open its forty-fifth annual meeting on September 2 and it will be a record meeting. The membership of the unions affiliated this year totals 3,967,600, against 3,662,132 last year, an increase of over 300,000. The record membership was in 1903, but then the calculation was made in round numbers, and hundreds being counted as 1,000. In every single section of the unions affiliated increases are reported, but the largest is in the general laborers' section, which has nearly doubled its numbers, being now 142,424, against 73,000 a year ago. The weavers have increased their numbers by 10,000, the dock laborers and sailors by 20,000, the railway servants by 47,000, the miscellaneous trades by 45,000 and the metal workers by 15,000. The smallest increases are among the miners, whose numbers are only 100 larger than last year, and the cotton operatives, who only show an increase of 600. The number of delegates to the forthcoming congress is smaller than those who met a year ago, being 430 against 522.

The marvelous growth of the trade unions of Great Britain as shown by the returns to the British Trade Union Congress is emphasized by some figures obtained from the Board of Trade. The most remarkable point in the figures is that the increase of membership of trade unions is so largely among unskilled laborers. In the last twelve months the average increase of membership has been 23.3 per cent, the previous highest increase being in 1907, when however, it was but 13.9 per cent, and in 1906, when the advance was at the rate of 10 per cent. The figures of the Board of Trade are for 1911 and those for the present year are likely to show a still further advance, as those for the first month of 1912 unemployment returns are based show a large increase on those of the previous month. The most striking increase in the Board of trade figures is the seamen's organization, which is three and a half times as large as it was a year ago. Canal, dock, and riverside workers show an increase of 181 per cent, while general laborers' organizations have nearly nearly doubled their numbers. Builders' laborers return an increase of 55 per cent, railwaymen an increase of 33.5 per cent, and tramwaymen 77 per cent.

The only trade unions showing a decrease are the miners of the Midlands, and that is only a fraction of 1 per cent, and those of South Wales, where the decrease is 2.1 per cent. The mining group generall have increased their numbers by 1.2 per cent, the Lancashire and Cheshire the increase of 21.7 per cent being unaccountable for the improvement. Cotton Weavers have improved their positions by 27.2 per cent, and workers in textile printing, dyeing trades, etc., by 32.6 per cent.

Despite the opposition of a powerful minority, mainly in the Clyde yards, success is attending the movement in favor of the amalgamation of the three chief unions in the shipbuilding industry, the Amalgamated society of engineers, the Shipwrights and the Boilermakers. Ballots are now proceeding amongst the members of the two latter unions, and all the returns so far point to a substantial majority in favor of the proposal. As soon as this ballot is completed the engineers will be balloted, but in the meantime the feeling of the craftsmen has been tested in various districts by means of joint meetings with the boilermakers, and the feeling at these gatherings has been strongly in favor of amalgamation. It is now regarded as certain that the scheme for an amalgamated union will be carried through. The membership will be well over 200,000, and each of the unions reports steadily growing membership. It is claimed that the union of unions will place the men in a better position to fight the employers in the struggle regarded as inevitable in the shipyards before many months.

In connection with the proposal for a trade union bank on co-operative lines, it is reported that a scheme has now been prepared and all the necessary formalities have been gone through previous to the registration of the concern under the Companies and Banking Acts. A managing director and secretary have been appointed. It is proposed that the bank shall be run entirely on co-operative lines, and its chief business will be to accumulate the reserve funds of the trade unions, which are amounting to between $30,000,000 and $35,000,000, with an annual turnover of about $25,000,000. It is said it will be conducted on the same lines as an ordinary bank save that its profits will be distributed amongst the trade unions which hold the stock and are customers of the concern. Its chief aim will be to provide at very short notice the necessary funds to enable trade unions to carry on strikes, as it has been found that the ordinary banks are on the habit of placing obstacles in the way of the trade unions desiring to realize their assets speedily when involved in disputes.

Four thousand men struck work on August 21 at the Glenboig Fireclay Co., Rhodda Valley, owned by the Cambrian Coal Trust. It is the custom of Welsh miners to cease work when over a fatal accident occurs in a mine, and a week ago the men left the pit in accordance with this practice. When they drew their wages they found that they had only been allowed pay for one-third of a turn in respect of this particular day. An appeal to arbitration decided that the government may enter into contracts.

KIER HARDIE ON SOCIALISM IN U. S.

This is the prediction of J. Kier Haidie, the noted English Socialist and labor leader, with regard to Socialism in the United States:

"Capitalism has developed more rapidly, more aggressively and more brutally in the United States than in any other white man's country in the world; and the corollary of that is bound to be that Socialism will also make more rapid progress here than it has done in any of the old European countries. You Americans, with your love for freedom, are not likely to allow King Capital to boss you any more than your forefathers permitted themselves to be bossed by King George."

Mr. Hardie who is a member of the British Parliament, chairman of the Labor group and Socialist, came to New York last Thursday by way of Canada to begin a lecture tour in the interests of the Socialist and trades union propaganda.

From the depths of an English coal mine, where he worked with a pick, he rose to a seat in Parliament and leadership of a parliamentary group which practically controls the fate of the present British Government. He is a tireless figure of a man, lean and bulky, suggesting in appearance the cultured James Bryce, and again the rough dynamic James J. Hill. One can picture him as a coal miner and also as a statesman and a philosopher, as, indeed, he is.

He is a wise man, also, for he refused to discuss American politics.

For the rest, he talked entertainingly on the conditions of the working classes of England and the United States.

"The American workingman," he said, "is getting larger wages, but when you take into account the purchasing power of money in the two countries, he is not much better off than his colleague in England.

"Take the case of the railroad conductor. In America he gets three times as much as the English conductor is paid; but here the conductor

JUSTICE DEMANDED FOR U. S. STEEL EMPLOYES.

IT has been fairly well proved that J. Pierpont Morgan's United States Steel corporation, the largest corporation in the world and with the exception of Standard Oil the richest, overworks its employes at its great mills not only in Pittsburgh, but elsewhere. The corporation denied the charges prior to the recent investigation by Congress, but that investigation seems to have made further denial useless. The fact of overwork having been established, the question now to be considered is what excuse the corporation can offer for it. It would appear from an article in the current Survey that the claim of the company will be that if the eight-hour day is adopted in the United States our steel industry will be unable to compete in the foreign markets with the steel mills of Germany, where the 12-hour day and seven-day week also prevails.

John A. Fitch suggests in the Survey that it is just this condition that gives importance to the London meeting of the commission on the continuous industries of the International Association for Labor Legislation. At this meeting it developed that in Germany 131,000 steel workers have a 12-hour day, but that during the 12 hours a two-hour rest period is required by law and is rigidly enforced. In 1905 these conditions were considered in the Reichstag and a resolution was adopted urging the federal council to establish a maximum of 10 hours in the steel industry in general. So far the federal council has taken no action. The chief objection brought by the manufacturers against such restrictions is their fear of competition from the cheap labor of the Russian Empire, which finds its only strong opponent against an eight-hour day in Germany to be the United States, and the only strong argument in the United States is Germany."

Mr. Fitch does not draw an extravagant conclusion when he says that the establishment of an eight-hour day in the United States, whether by voluntary action on the part of the corporations or by law, would probably sweep away the whole difficulty. The Germans would then have no excuse for not following suit and the Reichstag would adopt an eight-hour law presently. So much for the United States steel corporation is concerned. There is this to be remarked—that it is in position to make steel so economically as not to warrant a 12-hour day. If British manufacturers of high and low degree can afford to give their employes an eight-hour day, so 10 or 12-hour day is needed by the United States steel corporation, whose natural advantages equip it for the most economic steel production in the world.

CAPITALIST A PLANTER OF DYNAMITE.

CAPITALIST arrested during a labor war and charged with murder should not be forejudged any more than labor leaders arrested under similar circumstances. It is rather remarkable, nevertheless, that a Massachusetts grand jury should have considered itself justified in finding a true bill against William M. Wood, president of the $74,000,000 American Woolen Company, one of the biggest and most powerful concerns whose employes took part in the sensational strikes at Lawrence, Mass., last winter. As the public will recall, the strikes were attended by an unusual amount of trouble between strike sympathizers on one hand and the police and militia on the other. The conduct of the police was severely criticised in all parts of the country. They plainly exceeded all constitutional authority in their efforts to aid the mill owners and defeat the strikers and appeared to be the instigators of most of the rioting and both morally and legally responsible for most of the bloodshed that occurred.

DR. F. W. GUNSAULUS, CHICAGO PREACHER AND TEACHER.

TO discharge the duties of president of a great educational institution and of pastor of a metropolitan church, while finding time to write and lecture extensively, a man requires a fund of energy and physical strength possessed by few, but the Rev. Dr. Frank W. Gunsaulus of Chicago measures up to the requirements. He is the minister of the great Central Congregational church, with its splendid charitable and institutional subsidiaries, is head of Armour Institute, which was founded under the inspiration of one of her sermons, and is a professional lecturer at the University of Chicago as well as on other platforms throughout the country. Many stories are told of his friendship for the "down and out," and some of his most devoted parishioners are those whom he has helped when their cases were apparently most desperate. Among his writings are "Monk and Knight," "Loose Leaves of Song" and "The Man of Galilee."

To the sensational events of the strike the arrest of Millionaire Wood, head of the woolen trust, is a dramatic sequel. The indictment on which he was arrested charges him with having caused dynamite to be "planted" at various places during the strike in order to discredit the strikers and excite public opinion against them. The dynamite outrages were disavowed emphatically by the strikers, who vehemently insisted that it was a case of "planting" by their enemies for the purpose of lending the color of warrant to the brutal measures the police took against them. In spite of the denials of the workers that anybody on their side had anything to do with the use of dynamite the strike was really discredited in many quarters by the suspicion. If the trial of Wood should now sustain the true bill the grand jury has returned against him, the public will have a new and a serious duty to perform. It will have to place laws on the statute books by which labor wars that tempt men like Wood to such diabolical excesses shall be prevented. It is a new and powerful argument for statutory industrial arbitration, and also for suspension of judgment at the bar of public opinion when strikers are accused of dynamite outrages.

AMAZING DECISION ON VALUE OF A CHILD.

THE Supreme Court of New Jersey has decided that in that state no jury verdict shall stand for more than $1,000 in favor of parents whose child's life has been lost by the negligence or fault of a corporation. It is explained that "as a rule children are not objects of income but objects of expense." And New Jersey is supposed to be a civilized community. Let's be guilty of contempt of court. The logic of the decision is atrocious, and its implied doctrine—to wit, that children are to be valued only for what financial profit we can get from them—is infinitely worse. Even more precious possessions of all of us are not the things that bring us money, but that take it away. Our friendships, our loves, our very lives themselves decay and flourish and sweeten, not from what we get out of them, but from what we put into them.

The home is a matter not of income, but of expense, yet it is the most cherished institution on earth. The best things may not be estimated in money, but it does not follow that they are not worth money and more. The child possesses possibilities that cannot be calculated. The tiny hands that clasp and cling to everything tender within their reach have the beginnings of immeasurable power for good or ill. The babe's heart and mind and soul, like the soft, strong tendrils of the vine, cling only to the staunch passions and emotions and impulses that endure, and in clinging cultivate in us those passions and emotions that are better than all the money in the world. And when, in the world's mad rush after money, a child is run down and mangled, and its life's tide ebbs, and the little breath becomes feeble, and the tiny pulse slips away, and at last the precious one is still and dead, and the tense silence of the home is broken with agonizing cries, then a sorrow is burned into the heart that no lapse of time can soften or efface.

Primarily, of course, the object in awarding a heavy money payment to the stricken parents in such a case is not compensatory so much as punitive and exemplary. No amount of money would have induced the parents to give up their child. No amount of money compensates them for its loss. But if those whose negligence killed it are forced to pay they will be more careful in the future and the lives of other children will be better protected. And a penalty of $1,000 will not adequately secure that result. As for the New Jersey Supreme Court, it should be ashamed of itself. If children are merely objects of expense to be got rid of, those who help parents get rid of them do not indict an injury but confer a benefit. And if they prosecute a bill for their services or claimed a reward, the New Jersey Supreme Court almost guarantees by this decision that it would successfully conceal the claim. If that court is not ashamed of itself, the country is ashamed of it. It is worth while noting, by the way, that it is precisely such "law" as this that is responsible for much of the political unrest and for the suspicion under which the judiciary has fallen.

LABOR'S INTERESTS AT NATIONAL CAPITAL.

The International Association for Labor Legislation Point Out Why it is Right and Necessary that Eight-Hour Day Should Be Established in the Steel Industry--Miss Lathrop Inaugurates Work of the New Children's Bureau. What the Latest Dynamite Disclosures at Lawrence Teach.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—The report of the special commission appointed by the International Association for Labor Legislation to inquire into the subject of "hours of labor in continuous industries" has been made public only recently. In 1910, at a delegate meeting in Lugano, it was declared that the twelve-hour day customary in continuous industries was injurious to health, and the appointment of the commission resulted. The commission has held meetings with nine European countries, and the United States represented. The general conference of the association will be held this month in Zurich, and the commission's report will be undoubtedly acted upon favorably. The commissioners express the opinion that the eight-hour shift in continuous industries (industries working night and day), is the best shift system for such work, and they strongly recommend it, both from the point of view of the physical and moral welfare of the workers, and in the social and economic interests of society generally. They consider that in iron and steel industries the eight-hour day is very necessary and is practicable, and they urge that the various governments should be asked to arrange a conference of the interested States, with a view to arriving at an international agreement as to the introduction of the eight-hour shift in these industries. The commissioners also report that in the United Kingdom there has been of late years a marked tendency toward the eight-hour system in the iron and steel trade, in some important sections of which it has been successfully introduced. It is also asserted that experience of the working of the different processes, where the eight-hour day has been introduced, all goes to show that there are, as a rule, no serious technical difficulties, to be encountered when changing from the two to the eight hour shift. In such special cases, where it is necessary or very desirable for the same man to work continuously for a longer spell (as in some work in glass factories), the commission is of the opinion that a maximum week should be established.

Miss Julia Lathrop, appointed by President Taft as chief of the Children's Bureau, provision for which bureau was authorized by the present Congress, has opened a temporary office in the Department of Commerce and Labor annex. With the passage of the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill in the closing hours of the second session of the Sixty-second Congress, the salaries for officers of the new bureau became available, and allows the work of organizing the Children's Bureau to proceed. This bureau is authorized to investigate and report upon all matters pertaining to the welfare of children and child life, and will especially investigate the question of infant mortality, the birth rate, orphanage, juvenile courts, desertion, dangerous occupations, accidents, and diseases of children, employment, legislation affecting children in the several States and Territories, and such other facts as have a bearing on the welfare of children. Three appointments have already been made by Miss Lathrop, a private secretary, an assistant and a statistician.

Now that the president of the American Woolen Company, together with other alleged confederates, has been indicted for conspiring to distribute dynamite in Lawrence during the notable strike of the textile workers, together with the conviction of Undertaker Breen for having bought in dynamite with malicious intent, there seems destined to be told another story. In case of suicide in connection with this case throws another shadow on the proceedings. If any of those indicted are found guilty severe punishment should be inflicted. But they should be permitted to present their defense, if they have any, and judgment not pronounced until both sides are heard. If present developments are sustained no doubt the government will get into the case in reference to interstate shipments of high explosives.

Secretary Nagel of the Department of Commerce and Labor has designated Commissioner Neill of the Bureau of Labor to investigate and report how much the cost of coal has been increased to the general consumer since the settlement with the miners in the anthracite fields, to which the investigation recently was specifically directed. It was stated before the House Committee that had the reconsumer only been considered a combination that the anthracite operators advance the price of coal 35 cents per ton at retail. It is expected that Commissioner Neill will ascertain for what reason and by what means the cost was raised. Another line of inquiry will be to determine how much and in what particulars the coal miners were benefited by the settlement. In support of the inquiry it was argued that the miners did not get nearly all the increase being paid by the general consumer. Commissioner Neill has already made a preliminary survey of the field, and it is apprehended that a corps of trained investigators of the Bureau will begin work immediately to gather the desired details.

It is also interpretation of the new eight-hour law Attorney General

RETRIAL OF HATTERS' CASE.

HARTFORD, Conn., Sept. 11.—President Gompers and Secretary Morrison, of the American Federation of Labor, testified in the retrial of the hatters' case. Attorney Davenport, for the Anti-Boycott Association, who is conducting the prosecution, gleaned his information from President Gompers that he was "responsible" for the articles published in the American Federationist. Much questioning was included in by the prosecution relative to the phrase that appeared in the Federationist. "There is no law to compel a man to wear a derby hat." Secretary Morrison was interrogated along the same line as was President Gompers, and in addition financial matters in connection with the hatters was inquired into. The trial will undoubtedly be of considerable length.

While the representatives of "Big Business" are planning to attack the women's eight-hour law at the coming session of the California legislature, representatives of organized labor are preparing to so amend the law that it will protect all women wage earners.

DIVINE REWARDS ARE ETERNAL.

Parable of the Sheep and Goats Clearly Explained—God's Message to Mankind—Pastor Russell Corrects Some Misinterpretations of Holy Writ—Eternal Life is a Gift of God and the Blessing Will Not Be Conferred on the Willfully Wicked. The Church Will Sit With the Messiah When the World Is Judged.

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 5.—Pastor Russell's text here was, "These shall go away into everlasting punishment: but the righteous into life eternal."—Matt. 25: 46. He said:

We have been in all sorts of confusion respecting the future, because we have not studied the Bible's testimony critically. For thirteen centuries the Bible was almost unknown. The bishops of the Church were erroneously supposed to be successors of the Apostles and to speak with the same Divine inspiration and authority. Printing was not yet invented and education was confined to a very few. No wonder the important Message was lost in a mass of human tradition, much of which was devilish nonsense. We have been gradually progressing from darkness to light, though fettered by hobgoblin figures and each other's threats and perversions of the Divine Message. It is safe to say that the Bible is being more critically studied today by earnest Christians of all denominations than it ever was before. The result of this study, and the advantages of our time, are manifesting themselves. Divine harmonies are filling heads and hearts once distracted by clashing creeds. Take our

TEXT AS AN ILLUSTRATION.

Once blindly we read this Parable of the Sheep and Goats and applied it to rewards and punishments as a result of things done in the present Age. Now we see that its proper application belongs altogether to the next Age of Messiah's Kingdom. It distinctly states this. It is introduced thus: "When the Son of Man shall come in His glory, and all the holy angels with Him, then shall He sit upon the Throne of His glory; and before Him shall be gathered all nations, and He shall separate them one from another as the shepherd divideth the sheep from the goats."

The Church is not included in this parable at all. It relates, as we see, to the world—"all nations." Other Scriptures show us that when the nations shall thus undergo their trial for life or death everlasting the Church will be glorified. As the Bride of Christ she shall sit with Him in His Throne and be associated in His work of judging the world. Note how clearly St. Paul expresses this, saying, "Know ye not that the saints shall judge the world?" (I Corinthians vi, 2.) Thus it is the world's Judgment Day that he elsewhere mentions, saying, "God hath appointed a Day (future—a thousand-year Day—the Day of Christ), in the which He will judge the world in righteousness by that Man whom He hath ordained."—Acts xvii, 31.

A right understanding of the doctrine of Election helps us gradually to a proper view of the Divine Program. The Church is being selected out of the world according to faithfulness and character-development, in preparation for great service for the non-elect. The Messianic Kingdom with Christ and the Church in control as the Royal Priesthood, is appointed for the very purpose of blessing the non-elect world—"all nations." For a thousand years the work of bringing all to a knowledge of the Truth will progress. To this end Satan will be bound at the very beginning of the thousand years and the light of the knowledge of the glory of God will fill the whole earth as the waters cover the great deep.

With all thus brought to a clear comprehension of righteousness each will be on trial, and will either come into harmony with the Kingdom or remain an alien and lover of sin. All the latter are in the parable classed as goats—wayward ones—and will thus place themselves at the left hand of the King—in His disfavor. On the contrary, all who learn the ways of the Lord and come into accord therewith, are symbolically styled "sheep" in the parable, and by their conduct will gradually take their places at the King's right hand, or place of favor.

SHEEP—GOATS—FIRE.

The Parable shows the conclusion of the world's Judgment. All will then have taken their places, either as sheep or as goats—either in the King's favor or in His disfavor. The sheep class will then hear His "Well done," "Come, ye blessed of My Father, inherit the Kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world"—from the time the world was established.—Matthew xxv, 21, 23, 34. The world was made for mankind. Adam being its representative was the King of earth. He lost his dominion when he lost his relationship to the Creator and lost the right to eternal life by his disobedience. The sheep class will represent all of Adam's race brought back to perfection by the processes of Messiah's Kingdom during Messiah's reign. (Acts iii, 19-21.) To them will come the dominion which Adam lost and which Jesus redeemed at Calvary and which He will give to the world only at the conclusion of His thousand-year reign. Next, the fate of the goat class is stated—not in literal language, but symbolically. Indeed, the Prophet and the Apostle declared of Jesus that "He opened His mouth in parables," and that "without a parable spake He not unto the people." In other words, everything that Jesus said to the people in general was figurative, in order that only those of right condition of heart might be able to understand Him.

The message of the great King to the goat class will be, "Depart from Me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire prepared for the Devil and his angels."—(Matthew xxv, 41.) We might as well insist that the parable applies to literal goats as to claim that this penalty is literal as to those who have studied the subject will freely admit that fire throughout the Bible is used figuratively to represent destruction. Fire is not used as a symbol for Adamic death, the sentence upon all the race, because God from the beginning purposed the setting aside from that sentence through the redemptive work of Jesus; hence Adamic death is not destruction, but in the Bible is styled, symbolically, "falling asleep," and resurrection is styled "awakening from sleep."

But when picturing the Second Death, the Bible uses strong terms, representing destruction in the full sense and most absolute sense. Note the words used: "Perish," "Second Death," "Everlasting Destruction." We even overlooked the plain explanation which Jesus gave us when He said, "the lake of fire," which is the Second Death." (Revelation xx, 14.) St. Peter, summing up the fate of the knowingly wicked, says that they shall be destroyed like natural brute beasts. (II Peter ii, 12.) Only a bugaboo of eternal torment, hundreds of years old, could have so alarmed us that we failed to note these matters long ago.

Meanwhile, alas, while many of the learned have abandoned the doctrine of eternal torment, they have practically abandoned everything else in the Bible, because they supposed the Bible to teach this inconsistency. Let us not follow them into "Higher Criticism" infidelity and total rejection of the inspiration of God's Word, but let us compare Scripture with Scripture and use our God-given reason within the boundaries of God's Message. So doing we are seeing more and more the glorious perfection of our Father's character and of His inspired Word.

REASONING BY CONTRAST.

Some shallow thinkers have been thrown off the track of religious investigation, reasoning that if there is a heaven, there must of necessity be a hell of torment. But the contrast which the Bible establishes is respect to the sinner and the saint is life and death—and not heaven and hell. As a matter of fact the Bible nowhere promises heaven to any except the Church of the Firstborn, who are now being called out of the world for association with Messiah in His Kingdom. The world of sinners is not to go to heaven.

But we ask for a Scriptural answer. What does the Bible say is the punishment for sin? Nothing like Dante's answer is to be found in the Bible, however much we might imagine that it was printed in every page and that we have read it scores of times. The Bible is most explicit. It declares, "The wages of sin is death;" "All the wicked will God destroy;" "The soul that sinneth, it shall die;" "punished with everlasting destruction." These abundant and redundant Scriptural testimonies on the subject should settle the matter of future punishment to every reasonable mind—especially when there is not a Scripture to the contrary, either in the Old or in the New Testament.

I do indeed remember certain of our Lord's parables which, taken literally, might mean the cutting off of a hand or foot, the literal plucking out of the eye, the biting worms possessed of immortality, and literal flames unquenchable. These we have already discussed and may yet again refer to, but not now. We content ourselves with the generally accepted and reasonable proposition that parables are never to be construed as teaching doctrines, but at very most as illustrating them.

The Bible contains not a single suggestion of eternal torture as a penalty for sin. It tells of no place beyond the bounds of time and space where Dante's poem will find its fulfilment. It does tell of God of infinite Justice, Wisdom, Love and Power, whose decree is that eventually all the wicked shall be destroyed; that eventually there will not be one inharmonious note throughout the Universe to mar the glorious harmony and perfection; that every knee shall bow and every tongue confess to the glory of God; that there shall be no more dying, crying, sighing; that God's will shall be done on earth even as it is done in heaven; that eventually, "every creature which is in heaven and in earth and under the earth shall be heard saying, Praise, glory, dominion and might be unto Him that sitteth upon the Throne and unto the Lamb forever."

ANALYZING IT CAREFULLY.

Let us look still more deeply into our text: Let us note this word punishment, in the Greek. It is kolasis. Its usage in the Greek classics signifies, to prune, to restrain. A secondary meaning of the word is, to restrain. Death is a most effectual restraint. The punishment which God has provided for sinners is that they shall be cut off from life, cut off from all the blessed privileges which God provided, not for them, not for rebels, but for sons in fellowship with Himself.

The punishment against Father Adam was cutting off from Eden and its blessings, from being the king of earth, from fellowship with His Creator, from being the son of God, from enjoying everlasting life. All this cutting off was included in his death sentence. Jesus came that Adam and his race might not everlastingly perish—that they might be rescued from the power of the grave by a resurrection of the dead, that all might thus through Him receive a full opportunity for life everlasting. Nevertheless the Divine Law still stands. The wages of sin is death. Therefore, whoever shall receive the grace of God in vain, whoever shall sin willfully, intentionally, after full enlightenment, shall again be cut off—this time to perish, because "Christ dieth no more"—because shall death have dominion over Him. The opportunity which His Kingdom shall grant for every creature, for every member of Adam's race, to return to Divine fellowship and everlasting life, will be so complete as to need no repetition. Those who die the Second Death will be without a remedy, will perish in everlasting destruction.

Pennsylvania, Sept. 3.

I have this day renewed my subscription to your valuable paper through the Welch Tower office of Brooklyn, N. Y. We esteem your paper to be beyond value as a herald of glad tidings to the broken-hearted and to those who are endeavoring to humble themselves under the mighty hand of our God. Oh, how inspiring and encouraging the glorious messages are of our beloved pastor, Brother Russell, and then the Question Box and Sunday School Lesson. Surely it is a weekly feast which none of the Lord's dear people can afford to lose. May God abundantly bless you in the noble work you are thus doing in our sincere prayer.

Yours in His dear name,
BROTHER AND SISTER R. B. TUTTLE.

Appreciations

California, Sept. 2.

I am sending you a money order for one years' subscription to your good weekly paper. I have read the paper in the home of friends and now I want it for myself. I have Pastor Russell's Sermons in another paper, but I like the way you print them better and I find much help and enjoyment in the Question Box and the Letters. You are doing a grand work and I am sure you are being blessed.

Yours in the service of the King,
MRS. N. C. WILSON.

Ohio, Sept. 3.

It is with great pleasure that I again renew my subscription to your paper. I appreciate it especially because of Pastor C. T. Russell's Sermons. They are so enlightening and helpful to me.

I am also glad to note that the increase of news and advertising does not eliminate any of the valuable features of your most excellent paper.

Yours very respectfully,
BAIN MATTHEWS.

Illinois, Sept. 2.

Being one of the regular subscribers of your paper, I want to add my appreciation to the many you have received and are to receive in the future. If you can realize the good work of publishing the good tidings of great joy, I look forward weekly to its visits and eagerly scan its pages to hear from dear friends and to receive discourses of our dear Pastor Russell. I therefore want to renew my subscription for another year.

If any of the Tribune friends have copies of the following dates of Watch Tower to spare, they will confer a favor by sending me a postal and I will remit all charges, to the address below:

Ohio, Aug. 31.

We greatly appreciate your valuable paper, and love to hear the glad news. Every workingman ought to subscribe for it. We appeal to every workingman to read it and get acquainted with the true situation of the labor question as set forth in the Bible. We especially value the Sermons of Pastor Russell and the Questions, so well answered in the Bible.

Hoping you may be permitted to continue in the good work as long as need remains.

JAMES MINDERHOUT.

Florida, Sept. 1.

Through the kindness of a dear friend I have received a years' subscription to your valuable paper. It is a clean, clearly printed sheet and I wish to express to you my appreciation of Pastor Russell's Sermons and also the other religious features. You can fill receipt for Subscription.

Wishing you all success in your work of helping to spread the Truth.

Very truly,
MRS. ELIZABETH RYALL.

Canada, Sept. 2.

Enc'osed find subscription for Tribune. Thanks for sending it to me so promptly. I like your paper, especially for the Sermons that are so full of Truth and sound doctrine, showing that our Heavenly Father is a God of love and mercy.

Yours cordially,
J. E. WEST.

Louisiana, Sept. 6.

I certainly appreciate your paper and enjoy Pastor Russell's Sermons and especially the Question Box. I read them all each week and it is a wonder to me how beautifully the Bible harmonizes from the viewpoint presented by Mr. Russell.

Very truly,
J. WYNDELETS.

Pennsylvania, Sept. 27.

Allow me to add my sincere appreciation of your valuable paper, valuable to me for the weekly printing of Pastor Russell's Sermons and other religious features.

THE SCHOOL GIRL'S DREAM.

(By Mary Elizabeth Woodworth, Maplewood, N. J.)

I had intended to make the lines, "My Country 'Tis of Thee, Sweet Land of Liberty, Of Thee I sing," the basis of the prize essay which was to mean so much, not only to myself, but to admiring friends, doting relatives, and patient, faithful teachers, but, somehow, the thoughts would not come.

The dingy little ark lamp down the stairs flickered once or twice, went out, and lighted again. A sleepy, yellow moon lent a strange dreariness to the waning day. It was dreary and lonely, yet I had plenty of company; there was Byron, Browning and Emerson; there were histories and ethical works, and over on the shelf, all by themselves, Grandma's Bible and hymnal. Half-heartedly I reached for the latter; one fell to the floor and the other opened on my desk. Then it was now too dark to read, so I wandered dreamily towards the limitless haze without.

Far down, it seemed, in the streets, I could hear the muffled tread of the throng, hurrying—Where? Where, this happiness that left the human brain was wandering freely in paths which, in prouder moments, I would have scouted as mythical. Gradually the slimy atmosphere began to form itself into strange shapes and sounds, and the broad outlines of the drama of human history began to spread themselves before my weary eyes. I did not feel my head bend drop slowly to the desk, for my eyes were riveted in the clouds and I lent my whole being to the perusal of the pictures that were spread.

First there was a mellow, joyous light, as at evening. The breath of flowers mingled with the song of birds. A beautiful maiden and her lover were there delighted, though a beautiful grove, beside a brook of rippling water. Suddenly there was a flash of lightning, a thunder clap, and all was dark. Then I heard the weeping of men and women, for death was come. Then, it seemed, the sons of God came down to help, but failed, and darkness veiled the more until the rushing sound as of a mighty avalanche of waters and all was still.

Yet it was not long quiet. Soon I heard again the voices of men, "We will help ourselves." There was a confused tumult and men ran from each other in fear. A light began to dawn in the sky; it was the moon. A noise followed, but the radiance was silver, not gold, and it chilled me. A noise as of many men, hoarse with passion, and struggling together in mortal combat, was borne in upon my ears. The noise grew louder until, at length, a mighty horseman rode steadily to the front over the prostrate bodies of his fellows and shouted with a loud voice, "Hear ye me; I am King, there was never yet a King but had power as ye see me have. Acknowledge me or perish." And all the people answered, "Long live the king."

My heart felt a shade easier, though I could not repress a sigh that one man, with sword and frown, could make a world his slaves. Then this mighty one gave himself over to feasting, forgot to watch his throne, and while he was drunken in the night, another came and slew him and wore the crown instead.

The usurper held a scroll in his hand, and on it was written, "Lean not on mine own." Then he held his scroll proudly, and in defiance of the false writing high his sword, but one long his sceptre broke.

A youth, fair to look upon, and of kingly bearing, ascended the throne. He had a harp in his hand, garlands upon his brow, and made his name in song immortal. I knew the fervor, delighted me I was about to hail the youth as a god, when a dull echo sounded. A herald's trumpet was borne upon the quivering backs of slaves. No warlike, but a dull echo sounded. At length a stalwart soldier rode from out the West, burned the young man's beautiful palace, tore his harp asunder and trode upon the fervent strains. As I watched, this newest king spread himself to the ends of the earth, peace and prosperity seemed to reign, but the moon, with all this time had been shining, passed behind the shades of a cross on the brow of a desolate hill and slowly sobbing the world entirely of her light, as though she were too faint a thing to look upon the scenes which followed.

After this the stalwart soldier donned the habiliments and manner of a crafty priest, and it became pitch dark. I could distinguish a few occasional mutterings, groans, low, hollow chants, weird laughs and the clanking of chains. After what seemed a thousand years of misery, a fitful blaze lighted up the blackness, and with the gleam of martyr faces lighting the path, in the far distance a new light appeared.

Beyond the rivers of Rhipidia the Goddess of Liberty was holding aloft her torch, and to that beacon-light flocked the down-trodden of every land and every clime. A feeling of ecstatic satisfaction came over me. Surely more of peace, light and love had been there than I had yet seen. But No! Somewhere I had seen a grander earth, at the very beginning, where the beautiful maiden and her noble companion had wandered care-free through the heaven-blessed garden of God. Throughout all this time, a dull, regular motion, as the pendulum of a ship, had lent its dreary accompaniment to the changing scenes. I perceived the sound to be the steady knell of death, from which none escaped. A vague hope thrilled my heart that the sun would yet arise, yet I feared for what that light might disclose.

When I looked again at the sky, a strange, new light appeared. Something told me that this was the Morning Star. Its gleam was different from anything I had previously seen. Something in its soft, clear rays sent a thrill of joy to the tightness, and a shudder over others. It was like the calm cadence of a Voice I had heard, but not understood, in the early days of the Fourth King.

While I mused, the star passed behind a cloud of inky blackness. Now, in the four-fold darness a time of great trouble ensued, the greatest ever known. It seemed that in throbbing heart must break for very agony. As in a death-struggle, writhing, groaning, top-distressed to weep, I cried, "My God! is it not enough? Have not the sinful creatures learned it all ere now? How long, I God, How long?" Even while I was yet speaking, far in the East the day began to break. A sudden rush fell over the seething waves of humanity. Above the horizon the golden Sun appeared, rising with steady ease until in silent majesty it stood enthroned upon Mt. Olivet.

With the first rays of dawn a sorry sight appeared; the wreck of every earthly thing; but as the morn waxed strong, freshened faces lifted and awed, drawn as by a mighty magnet, men moved towards that great light. First they came by twos and threes, and then the numbers grew till nations came, and every creature knelt in silent prayer before that Throne. Gradually the dead returned and took their places in the mighty throng.

When all were strong and fair again (for the mighty sunlight had that power), high up in the windows of heaven the symphony began:

"The glory of the Lord is risen upon thee.
The glory, the glory of the Lord is revealed,
And all flesh shall see it together."

A moment the music ceased, and Earth took up the strain:

"What is man that thou art mindful of him.
Or the son of man that thou visitest him."

Then every creature in heaven and in earth joined the anthem:

"Blessing and honor, and glory and power,
Be unto him that sitteth upon the throne,
And unto the Lamb forever and ever."

The chorus ceased as abruptly as it had begun, but the smiling scene passed not. I saw that this was the Kingdom, at last, for which my soul had daily sought the long night through.

"Let music swell the breeze,
And ring from all the trees
Sweet freedom's song."

A little urchin was singing it below me in the window and I awoke. For a moment the old song blended with the new. Then I arose and sighed reluctantly. "It was only a dream," I said, "it will never come true." But as I looked out of the pane I was smiling good-humorously at my skepticism, and happy birds were singing their songs of hope aweree.

I had been sleeping on the Bible, and my head was cramped as it and read, "In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a Kingdom, and of His Kingdom and Dominion there shall be no end." Far down the street could hear the voice of the lad that had aroused me:

"—God to Then,
Author of Liberty,
To Thee we sing."

On the table lay my essay, unfinished with what seemed then to me to have been a real inspiration, I threw down the pen and said I had learned of the dawning of the better day. A fortnight later I awoke to the fact that my essay had been rejected, but I hardly realized the loss, so great was my new-found joy. Now, the golden sun rises in the East, music fills my soul at the thought of the Kingdom, and I am a dreamer no more. And soon, ah soon, I hope, with happy heart, to hear the chorus of eternity sing:

"Alleluia! For the Lord God omnipotent reigneth.
The kingdoms of this world are become
The Kingdoms of our Lord and of His Christ,
And he shall reign forever and ever."

POPULAR MECHANICS.

HANDY BORING GAUGE.

Simple Arrangement For Keeping Dowel Pin Holes Straight.

It is often a difficult matter to bore straight dowel pin holes in two pieces of wood which are to fit together squarely and tightly. The following description of a gauge for the purpose should be readily understood:

It is made from a piece of oak board, with two side pieces screwed so as to form a socket in which to work fits and is held squarely. A number of different size holes are bored into the oak piece, so that a bit of different sizes can be used, for large or small dowel pins. Mark the work with a pencil where the holes are to be bored, put the gauge over the work and put the bit in the holes of the desired size. Be sure to get the bit on the pencil mark, then bore the hole. If the gauge happens to fit a little loosely it can easily be made tight by wedging it with small wooden wedges.

Largest Sidewheel Steamer.

Very interesting is the continual increase in the size of both freight and passenger steamers which is noticeable on the great lakes. The new steamship, City of Detroit III., which is now in commission, is the largest sidewheel passenger steamship in the world to-day. In the history of steamship construction she has been preceded only once, and that was by the Great Eastern, which was 692 feet in length. The Great Eastern, however, was both paddle and screw propelled, and the new Detroit III. is 500 feet over all, 55 feet broad moulded, 100 feet over the guards, and she has a molded depth of 22 feet. —Scientific American.

Moon's influence on Rainfall.

A new instance of supposed connection of the moon with rainfall claims the support of highly scientific authority. Heavy rains are said to occur in South Africa at intervals of nineteen years, and this period coincides with the inner circle of maximum north and south declinations. E. E. Kevill, late director of the Natal observatory, finds as explanation in the moon's attraction. The theory is that a permanent cloud belt is drawn along by the moon and that as the moon nears its farthest point north the mass of clouds is made to impinge on the mountains in Natal, giving excessive rainfall.

Most Accidents on Monday.

The time and season of accidents has been a subject of investigation in Germany. The months show little difference in the frequency of accidents, and the month of greatest number, October, rises only to 9.20 per cent of the year's total. The days of the week have much greater difference. The accidents are most numerous on Monday, supposed to be due to the abuse of alcohol on Sunday, and the only number then diminishes to a minimum on Wednesday. Sunday being exempt, afterward rising steadily to Saturday, which has a record between those of Monday and Tuesday.

Electric Butchering.

Reporting the electrocution experiments of the abattoir in Nantes, France, Dr. S Leduc states that a large number of oxen, bulls, cows, horses, calves, sheep and dogs have been slaughtered by this new method, which seems to have proved very satisfactory. The current was of 110 volts with 100 alternations per second.

Best Butter Preservative.

Many preservatives of butter and margarine have been tested in Germany in a series of experiments by K. Fleischer and O. Grossfeld. Common salt alone practically prevented decomposition of the fat and casein, though it did not absolutely stop all change, and specimens containing 3 per cent of salt were in good condition for use after three months. Preparations of mens treated with benzoic acid, salicylic acid and boracic acid, all of which are objectionable, up to 1 per cent. had rapidly become rancid.

Porous Lead For Batteries.

The porous lead of Professor H. J. Hanover of the Danish Polytechnic high school of Copenhagen is said to be the result of many years of study of the problem of accumulator efficiency. The lead is filled with cavities so small as to be visible only through a powerful microscope, but they diminish weight, and they add so much to the service that it is said that storage batteries have their capacity increased five times without addition to their size or weight.

Repairing a Ball.

Many a ball with a deadened tone due to a cracked rim can be given its original clear, ringing sound by sawing out the crack with a common hacksaw. Make the saw cut along the line of the crack. The opening caused by the saw will allow the free vibration of the metal.

PISTON LUBRICATION.

Oil May Be Introduced in Gas Engines by Means of Carburetor.

Piston lubrication is a question that is troublesome to many gas engine operators. Oilers, lubricators and lubricating devices of divers description and design are to be found in almost as great varieties as there are designs of engines to offer to power users of today. These variously designed oiling devices attest to the fact that the gasoline engine piston has not yet found an ideal or satisfactory plan of lubrication.

However, lubrication of the gasoline engine piston is now more successfully accomplished than was the case in the earlier history of the gas engine. This is no doubt largely due to better cylinders, piston and ring construction and also to better lubricating oil for this purpose.

We are now using oils for gasoline engine lubrication that earlier in the history of the gas engine would have been regarded as of little service. And now very few gasoline engine builders attempt to finish their rings, pistons and cylinders without surface grinding appliances that will true them to a minute mechanical part of an inch.

With increased facilities both in the construction of cylinders and in the manufacture of suitable oils, piston lubrication has improved. But it has as yet reached no standard that can be called a universal success. Engineers are yet driven to the various methods and advocating this, that and the other as the only great and true one.

The method we have to refer to is one that accurately surprised us in its efficiency and simplicity, but we are not the only ones reaping a benefit, as subscribers a very great pleasure to pass it on to their friends and neighbors. The lear'ess way in which you print and send the Truth broadcast will surely reap for you a rich reward, indeed, from Him who has promised a reward even the giving of a cup of cold water in the name of Jesus Christ.

Very sincerely,
MRS. C. W. HATT.

center between the hoops of such a size as to allow the body of the occupant room for being sitting in it. The timbers are attached to the barrel with iron straps. Pieces of old hoops will do. Three or five pieces are put across the timbers at the ends of the barrel and spiked in place.

The boat is to be propelled with a single double end paddle. There is no danger of the boat capsizing or the water splashing into the barrel.

Waterproofing Blueprints.

Immerse in melted paraffin until saturated a number of pieces of an absorbent cloth one foot or more square. When withdrawn and cooled they are ready for use at any time, says the Railway and Locomotive Engineering. To apply to a blueprint, spread one of the saturated cloths on a smooth surface, place the dry print on it with a second waxed cloth on top and iron with a moderately hot flatiron. The paper immediately absorbs paraffin until saturated, and becomes translucent and completely waterproof.

Copper Mines in Nova Zembla.

Prospecting for minerals in the arctic and antarctic regions is one of the interesting developments of recent enterprise. The latest news under this head is that valuable deposits of copper have been found in Nova Zembla. Funds for working these deposits have been advanced by a banking house, and a party of engineers and workmen, mostly from the Ural, will proceed in a special steamer to this far northern field.

Electric Street Cleaners.

The storage battery street washing machine of Berlin and other German cities is of three and a half tons, carrying forty cells, to yield 200 ampere hours at the five hour discharge rate. It also has a tank of water, brushes and rotating scrapers. It travels four, six or nine miles an hour, and each of Berlin's twenty-four machines covers eighteen to twenty-five miles a day—at a material saving over horsepower cleaning.

APPRECIATIONS.

New York, Sept. 7.

I am again renewing my subscription to your much appreciated paper, for the benefit of the Pastor Russell's Sermons, the Question Box anything which you publish from the Brooklyn Tabernacle. I also want to say that I much appreciate the liberal space you furnish for a poem, here and there.

However, I have never noticed much comments on the poems written by others than those which the Tabernacle have made use of. I find that many love the pieces used by the Brooklyn Tabernacle, and find a depth of meaning in every one that is not found in any others, neither does their helpfulness ever wear out. I doubt not but these could be obtained from the same source as the Sermons and add a still more interesting feature to your already interesting columns.

With the best of wishes,
I am, yours truly,

A LITTLE WHILE.

(Written for Labor Tribune.)

A little while the war I see no more shall see me;
At the first advent said the inspired Word.
A little while the servants, like the Master,
Shall have to be forever with the Lord.

A little while the journey will be over,
The narrow path the tired feet have trod
Has blossomed with the flowers of hope eternal,
The hope that has its anchorage with God.

A little while the labor shall be ended,
But the sweet work will never have an end.
A little while the song we sing wearily,
Glorious, full-throated, perfect shall ascend.

A little while no more upon the mountains
The feet of Him shall sing the song of Peace.
A little while these light afflictions vanish,
A little while the tribulations cease.

A little while, oh, Father, give us patience
And faith and love to serve another day.
We only ask to see one step before us,
We only ask thy favor on the way.

A little while to waken in His likeness
To see Him and no more be seen of men.
A little while thy loving arms, oh, Father
Oh rest, oh peace, oh satisfaction then.

—R. D. Work.

THE SWEET-BRIER ROSE.

Beside my cottage door it grows
The loveliest, daintiest flower that blows,
A sweet-brier rose.

At dewy morn or twilight close,
The very perfume from it flows—
This strange, wild rose.

But when the rain-drops on it beat,
Ah, then its odors grow more sweet
About my feet.

Oft times with loving tenderness,
Its soft green leaves I gently press
In sweet caress.

A still more wondrous fragrance flows
The more my fingers firmly close,
And crush the rose.

Dear Lord, oh, let my life be sweet perfume when the tempests blow,
The sweeter flow.

And should it be Thy blessed will
With crushing grief my soul to fill,
Press harder still.

And while its dying fragrance flows
I'll whisper low, "He loves and knows
His crushed brier-rose."

—Gertrude W. Seibert.

UNCLE SAM'S PRINT SHOP

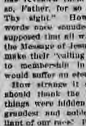
WASHINGTON, Sept. 2.—The Government Printing Office is one of the largest institutions operated by the government. Sam Donnelly, Government Printer, as-resident of the International Typographical Union, has just issued his report for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1910. The total expense of maintenance and operation was $2,254,897.27, and the charges exceeded the cost of operation by $321,418.34. Every piece of printing has its estimated price fixed for the reason that Congressmen and others are compelled to purchase printed matter when it exceeds beyond a stipulated amount, save only when it is ordered by Congress. For example, members of Congress paid $84,812.65 during the last fiscal year for extra speeches and documents. There was paid out in salaries and wages $3,376,143.25, which does not include holidays, leave of absence, or injury claims. For two years the big shop has been run without a deficiency appropriation. The superintendent of documents sold $189,581.21 worth of government publications, an increase of $3,726.43 over last year.

Fee Know the Father or the Son.

All men are to be brought to a knowledge of God. The Scriptures declare, "The knowledge of the glory of



"Come unto Me, all ye that labor."

God shall fill the whole earth," and are declared that no one can know God in Christ as he knows the Son, or as the Son reveals the Father to him. Hence those who have come to know Jesus as the Son of God have not only come to the full appreciation of their privileges. Blessed are our eyes, for they see, and our ears, for they hear. But we may know Messiah, and through Him know the Father.

We are glad that all mankind in due time will be brought to a clear knowledge and full appreciation of the only begotten Son of God, and of the glorious Kingdom. The special call of God through Jesus, therefore, is to the poor, the broken-hearted, the heavy laden, the unsatisfied: "Come unto Me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

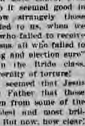
BIBLE STUDIES

wherein had been done, because they repented not, because they did not honor the power of God in their midst and gladly receive the Message. Such Jesus declared, will be less prepared to appreciate the Kingdom in the future than will some who have never known Him. Tyre and Sidon, heathen cities, would have repented with far less preaching. It is but in harmony with Divine Justice; therefore, that when the Great Day of God's favor and of the Messianic Kingdom shall dawn the people of Tyre and Sidon, and their cities will more favorable than the people of Chorazin and Bethsaida and Capernaum. It is declared that Capernaum had been exalted up to heaven—but by it lifted up in point of privilege and Divine favor and knowledge. The being true, it means that in justice Capernaum's fall would be proportionate the world fell from the heights of heavenly privilege and favor down to hell—to the grave.

Upon these we find the reason for this denouncement "If the mighty works which have been done in thee had been done in Sodom, it would have remained unto this day." But I say, it shall be more tolerable for Sodom in the Day of Judgment than for thee."

Let us not mistake the lesson: While only those who fully accept Christ and consecrate their lives to His service will receive the glorious-begotting, or any share in the Heavenly Kingdom, yet the remainder of mankind who come to any knowledge of the Lord and His mercy and blessing, and who do not refrain from rendering homage and from striving to live up to what they know to be our way, will progressively and ultimately ameliorate themselves in respect to the future life and to the blessings and privileges and opportunities to be brought to all mankind through Messiah's Kingdom and its reign of a thousand years.



"Our way prayer is to be our way."

"I Thank Thee, O Father."

It was in Jesus' day as it has ever since been, that not many wise, not many rich or wise or learned find ears to hear the Gospel Message. The divinely wise Father knew it was in the days of the present life so ill and satisfy that they have no hungering for the better things. Thus it has been that the majority of the followers of Jesus in every Age have been chiefly the poor of this world, rich in faith.

But because again in the words of Jesus—now peculiarly they feel: "I thank Thee, Father, Lord of heaven and earth, because Thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent and hast revealed them unto babes; even so, Father, for so it seemed good in Thy sight." How strangely those words of Jesus apply to us. We have supposed that all who failed to receive the Message of Jesus all who failed to make their calling and election sure would suffer an eternity of torture!

Stop strange it seemed that Jesus should thank the Father that these things were hidden from some of the grandest and noblest and most intelligent of the human house; that

Biennial Conference of the International Association of Labor Legislation--Annual British Trade Union Convention Meets--Fighting Speech by President Thorne--Legal Eight Hours' Working Day Wanted--Compulsory Arbitration Denounced.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

LONDON, Sept. 12.--The program of the biennial conference of the International Association of Labor Legislation, which meets at Zurich on September 19, has now been issued. The sittings will occupy three days. Only two general meetings are to be held, the bulk of the delegates' work being done round the tables of the five Commissions constituted to deal with special groups of subjects. The agenda is longer than usual and includes proposals for a maximum working day in continuous processes and dangerous trades, for better protection of railway servants, and for dealing with the problems of home work and truck, minimum wage boards, child labor, industrial poisoning and occupational diseases, the administration of labor laws, and the insurance of workmen in foreign countries. The British section of the association is sending six delegates, and it is hoped that, as in 1910, both the Home Office and the Board of Trade will be officially represented. The importance of the conclusions of the association, which have in the past successfully prepared the way for two valuable international Labor Conventions--the treaty dealing with the night work of women, and the white phosphorous treaty--may be gauged by the fact that the proposals of earlier conferences for international legislation about the night work of young persons and of a 10-hours day for young persons and women are now, after much political spade work by the International Labor Office and the different national sections, held to be ripe for consideration by the powers whose representatives the Swiss Federal Council is about to invite to a meeting at Berne.

The fourth annual trade union convention has been in session during the present week. The total number of trade union members represented was nearly two million an increase on the year of over 200,000. This big advance in membership was owing to the so-called "labor unrest" of last year. Besides the 49 British trade union delegates there were also present two representatives of the British Board of Trade, two American Federation of Labor delegates, Berry, (Pressman's Union) and Walker (Molders') and further Ramsay Macdonald attended as representing the Labor Party in Parliament and David Shackleton as representing the National Insurance Commission. Will Thorne a labor member of Parliament, and a leader of the gas workers and general laborers, was president of the convention. He reviewed the strikes and other labor events of the past twelve months and denounced the government for its coercive practices in industrial disputes. Other statistics he said that when the first Trade Union Congress was held in Manchester in 1868, the annual wealth production was about $4,000,000,000, and the amount received by the workers was about $2,000,000,000. Last year the total wealth production was about $10,000,000,000, and the amount received by the wage earners was not more than about $4,000,000,000 which was much less than one-half. The gross assessment for income tax in 1894-5 was $2,845,000,000, in 1910-11 it was $5,250,000,000. There they had a vast increase of wealth. To whom was it due? Not to the aristocracy or the capitalist classes, but to the workers.

Discussing the agitation for an eight hours working day Mr. Thorne said there were people today who contended that the time was not ripe for a universal eight hours. In his judgment the time was ripe and overripe. The Government recognized in all departments an eight hours working day. At the commencement of the year, when the General Post Office took over the undertaking of the National Telephone Company, 19,000 employes of that company immediately enjoyed the same conditions as the Post Office workers or the same grades which brought them under the eight hours system. This meant that in wages they were receiving £75,000 more annually than they would have received under the company; and further, owing to the curtailment of the hours of labor and the privilege of an increased holiday, a larger staff had to be employed. They also knew that a clause be inserted in all Government contracts that the workpeople engaged in Government work should not be allowed to work more than eight hours a day.

Speaking on the question of compulsory arbitration, Mr. Thorne said that owing to the London Transport Workers' and other strikes, a bill would be introduced next year to deal with industrial disputes. He would remind the Government that in 1906 the Trade Union Convention of that year rejected a resolution proposing compulsory arbitration by a majority of 287,000. In 1907, it was rejected by a majority of 1,000,000, again in 1908 by a majority of 1,514,000 and yet again in 1909 by a majority of one million. If the trouble in the coal industry and the Government brought in such a bill he hoped that organized labor would meet it with all the opposition possible. "Trade Unions do not want strikes," added the President, "but we will not give up the right to choose the weapon we desire to adopt to win for our members better economic and industrial conditions."

Referring to state insurance, the President said personally he was in favor of a universal non-contributory scheme of State insurance. Many complaints had been made by trade unionists to their committee of the operation for unemployment and a number of employes in getting their clerks will emigrate. What the result of such an emigration would be is an interesting problem. If the supply of clerks became excessive--an excessive that if it were not for the law employers could get clerks at $7 and $8 a week--would not the minimum wage become the maximum wage? Governor Wilson claims that this is the minimum wage's great danger. It sets the standard, and while wages borderstore below that standard are brought up to it, it would seem as if there is also a tendency for wages heretofore above it to be brought down to it, too.

The decrease in the pay of clerks is a tendency noticeable in this country as well as in others. In fact, it is a tendency that is practically universal. As the scale of living advances and men cover what they foolishly suppose to be "genteel" employments (the ones in which work is not done with the hands but the head, forsooth) the clerical occupations get more and more crowded. A good clerk can be had for one-third of what a first-class mechanic can make. This is the price that many of us are willing to pay for the privilege of not wearing those badges of honor, overalls.

The clerks have a rather poor prospect in all countries. Gentility is becoming so popular that ordinary clerks are far too numerous to keep the wage standard high. A recent writer truthfully observed: "The wages for this sort of work have always been a sore spot in civilization. It is useful work, necessary work, but it requires no special genius, and the qualifications happen to be such as are not very rare. If only one person in a million could learn to write a neat hand, keep accounts to the penny, and file papers where they could be found when wanted, clerks would be paid like ambassadors or generals." Not all ambassadors or generals have these virtues, and General Grant used frankly to confess that the only place where he could put a paper with any confidence of finding it again was in his hat, but fortunately there are a great many careful, patient, accurate people in the world, with modest aspirations and a taste and capacity for work which the restless would find humdrum. It is not so fortunate that with the growth of cities multitudes of young people who might better be more actively employed are drawn into an over-crowded profession because it seems easy or genial or to offer a living wage with the minimum of study and apprenticeship. The effect of such competition in countries where there is a large educated proletariat has been to force down wages to a point barely above the starvation point for many of the less fortunate; in such a case the working of the minimum wage principle will be of special interest. The ideal solution, unfortunately impracticable, would be to leave the clerical work to those who are better fitted for it than for anything else."

A GRATIFYING PROSPERITY CANVASS.

THE New York Evening Post is a paper of such deep rooted conservatism and is furthermore so universally acknowledged as authority on the financial and industrial markets that the series of dispatches it has published this week from numerous business centers throughout the country possess more than ordinary significance and interest.

In these dispatches representative bankers and businessmen express their personal views as to a genuine trade revival. They embody (to quote the Evening Post's own summary) a "virtual unanimity of opinion as to the prospect for such recovery, on a substantial scale, and although some of the writers are cautious about committing themselves to prediction of a prolonged and continuous movement of trade expansion, all agree that the fundamental influences behind the change to better times in business are sound and genuine. Those influences as every one is aware, are the facts that conservatism and retrenchment have been practiced continuously by our business interests during at least two years; that we have reached a time far enough away from the break-down of 1907 for the effects of that panic to have worn off, and that Nature has favored the United States this season with exceptionally brilliant harvests."

A not entirely unexpected feature of the replies of these businessmen to the Evening Post, is the strong consensus of opinion that the traditional adverse influence of a presidential campaign on business activities will not be exerted this year. Readers of the National Labor Tribune have for some time been aware of our impression that business is going to disregard politics this year insofar as letting it interfere with the trade revival is concerned. The Evening Post's canvass is corroborative evidence that our impression is more interested in the progress of the prosperity show than in party feuds notwithstanding the loud drum-beating and bugling with which the political sideshows are being advertised by their owners.

COMPENSATION LAW HEARINGS.

The Pennsylvania Manufacturers' association sprung a surprise at the first meeting in Pittsburgh of the Pennsylvania Industrial Accidents commission in the Chamber of Commerce last Friday afternoon. Miles M. Dawson, representing the manufacturers, proposed a substitute for the tentative workman's compensation act, whereby compensation for injury would be paid by the industry in which the workman was employed, instead of from a general fund provided by the industries as a whole.

The manufacturers plan of compensation provides that 60 per cent of the wages be paid in case of disability, whereas only 50 per cent of wages is provided for in the tentative act. But the manufacturers maintain that the industries of the State should be grouped separately, mining in one class, textile weaving in another, metal trades in another, etc., and that each group should meet the expenses of accidents in its own industry.

An arrangement of Pennsylvania's alleged neglect of women and children wage earners was made by Miss Mary Blakely, "the wrecked woman-hood," she declared, was one of the things "made in Pittsburgh."

James C. Gray, representing the coal operators, argued that the compensation law should be a National law, for as a State law it would handicap Pennsylvania operators in competing with the operators of other States. Francis Feehan, a member of the commission and formerly president of District No. 5, United Mine Workers, pointed out that Ohio, Indiana and Illinois already had such laws, and West Virginia was contemplating one.

Six members of the commission were present: Attorney David A. Reed, of Pittsburgh, chairman; Attorney J. B. Colahen, Jr., of Philadelphia; Francis Feehan, of Castle Shan-

THE "MADE-IN-PITTSBURGH" TOUR.

GOOD wishes from the entire community go with the "made-in-Pittsburgh" special train which left Union station last Thursday on a three weeks' tour of the northwest, middle west, and southwest. Nearly every city of importance in the great states embraced in those sections of the country will be invaded by the special" and by the ardent Pittsburgh boomers who are making the journey upon it. These boomers are representative businessmen and newspaper correspondents, and even if they were not traveling on a train which is itself unique they would make a good deal of noise in the cities along their itinerary by the force of enthusiasm. They go prepared to show that Pittsburgh is the best city in the country to buy a great many things in and as good a city as there is in the country to buy all other things in. Furthermore, they are abundantly supplied with convincing arguments to prove that there are a vast number of diversified industries in other parts of the country which would materially increase their profits by transplanting themselves in Pittsburgh, which is the source of their raw materials and which is ideally convenient to all the great markets.

Aside from the representative character of the passengers on the "Made-in-Pittsburgh" special, it is a notable enterprise for the reason that not only everything included in the exhibits aboard was made in Pittsburgh but the train itself--a splendid example of the resources of the modern transportation industry--was made in Pittsburgh. It is safe to say that no other city in the United States could duplicate the expedition. It will excite a lively interest everywhere on that account if on no other. That Pittsburgh's exceptional advantages as a manufacturing and trading center will have full positive done to them by the loyal Pittsburghers, who are carrying the Smoky City's banner into "the enemy's country" hardly need be said. The trip ought to be, and doubtless will be, richly productive in beneficial results.

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION HEARINGS.

LEADERS of the National Labor Party will be interested in the report to be found in our news columns of the hearings held in this city last week by the State Industrial Accidents Commission on the proposed new workmen's compensation law for Pennsylvania. Organized labor and the employers of labor are agreed that the present system of compulsory insurance law, and both sides are appearing before the Industrial Accidents Commission, appointed by Governor Tener. To combat this proposed feature, steps have been taken to have the members of organized labor appear before the commission at its meetings to be held in this city, Pittsburgh, and other sections of the State during this month and enter its protest against this proposed insurance law. The manufacturers of the State are opposed to any workmen's compensation act along the lines that have been suggested and tentatively drafted by the Accidents Commission. The manufacturers propose to have adjusters appointed to be named by manufacturers, and they propose to pay 60 per cent of the wages a man has been receiving when he becomes totally disabled, and to pay it for the balance of the employe's life. The fact that the manufacturers propose to appoint an adjuster is in itself a condemnation of the plan, for selfinterest would make it impossible for equitable decisions to be rendered in that event.

MINIMUM WAGE ILLUSTRATION.

NASMUCH as one of the parties taking part in the present national campaign has placed a plank in its platform endorsing the minimum wage, voters will probably be interested to know that in Victoria, Australia, where they have a lot of what we in this land call innovations, the minimum wage board has just fixed the minimum wage for clerks, making it $12 a week. This wage is to apply to male and female clerks alike, and while it does not look high to Americans it is so high compared with the standard in Great Britain that it is predicted many English

ANDREW H. GREEN, JR. WHO EXPOSED DETROIT GRAFT.

SEVERAL men of large wealth are making liberal contributions having for their object the wiping out of some particular form of civic corruption. Thus John D. Rockefeller, Jr., has financed the "white slave" investigations in New York and Chicago; Dr. William Jay Schieffelin is defraying the extraordinary expenses of the district attorney's investigation of New York's police "system," and Andrew H. Green, Jr., one of the wealthiest manufacturers of Detroit, is the man chiefly responsible for unearthing the graft existing in the municipal government of the Straits City. He furnished the funds for the investigation which led to the arrest of a score of aldermen and two other city officials for accepting bribes from a railroad corporation. Two of those arrested have confessed. In the recent carnival in celebration of the two hundred and eleventh anniversary of the founding of Detroit Mr. Green impersonated Cadillac, the French founder of the city.

LABOR'S INTERESTS AT NATIONAL CAPITAL.

The Fight of the American Federation of Labor Against the U. S. Steel Corporation Has Been Formally Opened. Arrest of Organizers at McKeesport a New Insight Into the Mine Disorders in West Virginia--Call for Annual A. F. of L. Convention.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.--The arrest of two American Federation of Labor organizers by the McKeesport police for distributing union labor literature at the homes of the unorganized employes of the United States Steel Corporation is the manner in which the Steel Corporation gives notice that it will refuse to permit its employes to join a labor organization. For some weeks organizers of the American Federation of Labor have been distributing literature printed in the various languages to the employes of the Steel Trust. Interest among these employes has been aroused to the point where evidently the Steel Trust fears that organizations will be perfected. The organizers were arrested upon the pretext of violating a city ordinance, but the ordinance itself in terms does not prohibit the distribution of literature in the manner which was adopted by the organizers. They were arrested, gave bail and when effort was made to secure their release on bail, the Chief of Police at first refused, stating that no bail would be accepted, and that a fine of $50 in cash had to be paid before the organizers would be released. However, upon the appearance of an attorney the Chief of Police changed his mind and bail was accepted in the sum of $100 each, and the organizers were released after having been detained in jail about eight hours. At the hearing which followed shortly after, the police magistrate assessed a fine of $5, the cost being $2.50 each. The fines were paid and transcript of the case demanded. The Steel Trust is evidently determined to continue its policy of using its tremendous power to thwart the efforts of its employes to organize. The American Federation of Labor proposes, however, to continue the campaign no matter what obstacles are encountered it is proposed to organize these men so that they may take a part in determining wages and conditions under which they are employed. There is no protection today for the men employed in the vast steel plants of the country, and while from time to time works being charmed houses, long hours and low wages are the rule.

The Postoffice Department officials are taking exceptions to statements which have been made to the effect that the new parcels post system which becomes effective the first of next year will increase the general Postoffice deficit, and that the burden of taxation now borne by the American people would be increased. It has been stated by these officials that this phase of the question has been thoroughly considered by the department, and that it was found, even by carrying parcels at a rate much lower than the express companies, the system can be made self-supporting. A further statement is made by the officials that receipts from the parcel post will be sufficient to aid in decreasing the annual postal deficit. Arrangements have already been made whereby parcels post packages may now be exchanged without limit of value of the contents of the parcels with Australia, Austria, Belgium, Denmark, France, Germany, Great Britain and Ireland, Italy, The Netherlands, Norway and Hongkong. Packages from these countries valued at more than $100 must conform to consular certification or bond. Notification to this effect has been sent by Acting Secretary of the Treasury Curtis to all customs officers.

Recently an article appeared in the Baltimore Sun from a staff correspondent, dealt with the grievances of the miners in the Kanawha and Cabin Creek districts. The writer states that the question of wages is not the only one involved in the contest. The operators claim that the Pittsburgh district has 2100 of a cent per ton differential over the Kanawha field. This fact, however, is computed upon erroneous premises. The Pittsburgh figures are based upon the short ton of 2,000 pounds, while the Kanawha figures are based on the long ton of 2240 pounds which, when figured out according to correct mathematics, gives the Kanawha field a favorable differential of 6.5 cents per ton. The company store and the company houses are other features which have agitated the miners. While the company claims it is not obligatory for the men to purchase their supplies at the companies' stores, yet it goes without saying that men are not given continuous employment who do not patronize the company store. Further it is impossible to procure living quarters adjacent to the mines without consenting to live in the company store in summing up the difficulties the miners labor is more than a mere grievance. The increase demanded by the miners is only 2½ cents a ton for mining and other proportionate increases for men whose work is not the actual digging of coal. Aside from the demands for an increase, the miners ask no insist on reform in the system of docking, the employment of the check weighman, removal of postoffices from company stores, permission for the men to trade where they please, the payment of wages in cash

WILL DISMANTLE REPUBLIC PLANT

The Republic Iron & Steel Company has decided to dismantle the Tudor plant of the company, which is located in East St. Louis. The mill, which is about the size of the Mahoning valley works of the company, was closed down permanently on July 1, and it is understood the plant was on the market. The company, however, not finding a purchaser for the property to advantageously, has decided to reduce it to scrap and the works will be torn down.

The plant consisted of two puddle mills, 8, 10, 12 and 16 inch mills, a bolt factory and railroad spike factory. With the reduction of the Tudor works, the Republic Company will have but one pure iron mill, that of the Inland works in East Chicago, and the company approaches closer to an allsteel basis, which is the ultimate object.

The International Bakers' Union has increased its sick benefit to $7 a week.

Pastor Russell's Sermon

ONLY ONE TRUE GOSPEL OF CHRIST.

True Message Almost Buried Under Human Tradition—Perversions of God's Word—Pastor Russell Says the Gospel of Politics, of Social Uplifts, of Wealth, of Society, of Good Works, of Formalism, of Purgatory and Eternal Torment Are All Accursed or Condemned—Man's Duty to the Lord.

PROV. DENCK. R. I.—We report one of Pastor Russell's discourses from the text, "I marvel that ye are so soon removed from Him that called you into the Grace of Christ unto another Gospel; which is not another; but there be some that trouble you and that would pervert the Gospel of Christ: * * * let him be accursed."—Gal. 1: 6-8.

When we remember that there is but the one Lord, one Faith, one Baptism, presented in the Bible, we are astounded to find so many faiths so many "Gospels," presented by so many denominations, all bearing the name of Christ and all bearing marks of some relationship to the Truth—to the Divine Revelation.

St. Paul noted the fact that even in his day the brethren in Galatia had "so soon" turned away, in part at least, from the true Message to another, a perversion. No wonder, then, if during fifteen centuries that Gospel was almost buried under human tradition. And need we wonder that we make such slow progress alone in getting back to "the faith once delivered to the saints," the Truth that Jesus declared to be the sanctifying power of God working in His people?

It will not do to say that we have many denominations, but only one Gospel. Denominations were not organized for amusement, but because the founders of each believed that they saw a sufficient reason, a sufficient difference of Gospel, to justify them in forming a new sect. We are bound to assume their zeal for the Truth, which led them often through severe persecutions and through martyrdom towards the Light.

All the same each of us owes the duty to himself, to his brethren, and above all, to the Lord, to search carefully for the original Gospel of the Word of God—no matter what it may cost him to reject the more or less of the Gospels handed down by well meaning brethren of the past.

THE GALATIANS' NEW GOSPEL.

The new Gospel which the Galatians were disposed to accept was one that is very prevalent today, and is as much to be reprehended now as when St. Paul wrote. Their new Gospel consisted of a mixing of the Jewish Law with the Grace of God in Christ, as the Apostle shows. They said, in effect, as do the Lord Jesus Christ surely; He is the Savior, He is the Redeemer; we must believe on Him, but that is not enough. We must become Jews under their Law arrangement, and between the Law and Christ we still obtain salvation. Many Christians today are making the same mistake of adding something to the Gospel of Christ. They hunger for some command, and desire to be under a Law, as a dog used to wearing a collar and chain feels not blissful unless thus restrained.

Such dear Christian people, like the Galatians, do not fully appreciate the Master's statement, "If the Son shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed." Such feel lost without some commands—Thou shalt, Thou shalt not, etc.—and rejoice specially in holy days and Sabbaths, Church going and formal prayers, because they do not understand that God is better pleased to have us pray than to have us slaves. The Apostle got the thought correctly when he wrote,

"We ran no longer lie
Like slaves beneath the Throne.
Our souls now 'Abba, Father,' cry,
And He the kindred owns."

A measure of bondage to forms, ceremonies and commands is probably reasonable to expect in immature Christians, whom St. Paul styles "babes in Christ." (I Corinthians iii, 1.) But growth in grace and knowledge must bring such more nearly to the stature of manhood in Christ and to an appreciation of their relationship to God as sons, else they will not make their calling and election sure to the best things that God has provided.

THE SOCIAL-UPLIFT FALSE GOSPEL.

From the most prominent pulpits of Christendom the Gospel of Christ respecting the forgiveness of individual sin, the reconciliation of the individual heart, the individual begetting of the Holy Spirit, and the personal walk in nearness of life has been discarded. Long ago this Message was considered too personal. Many of the preachers having had no such experience themselves, properly enough were chary of talking about what they did not understand. But as arics must go on. Sermons, therefore, must be preached, and something must be said. The Social Gospel has been brought forward to fill the gap. The message of the hour, according to this pseudo-Gospel, is not saintliness, not following in the footsteps of Jesus, not Bible study, but athletics, position in society, attention to politics, duties, attainment of honorable positions in the world, and great schemes which will make the Church register shine—and money withal.

Far be it from me to teach inattention to the duties and responsibilities of life. Nothing in the words of Jesus or the Apostles admonishes or exemplifies carelessness in respect to health, manhood, womanhood, education, good name and a proper provision of the things needful to the present life. The Gospel of Jesus and the Apostles however, tells us—most distinctly impresses upon all the followers of Jesus—that their consecration as disciples of Jesus means their death to worldly ambitions for wealth, praise of men, political office and the giving of chief concern to the present welfare of their earthly lives. It exhorts that these are all to be considered quite secondary to the new ambitions, the new ideals, set before us in the Gospel.

The followers of Jesus are enjoined to do good unto all men as they have opportunity. This would include, of course, everything akin to social uplift. Indeed, we understand that any one could be a Christian—a follower of the Lamb of God—without having a deep sympathy with everything appertaining to the welfare of humanity and a social uplift. But the Apostle's expression, "as we have opportunity," is a limitation. The secular affairs of the present life are not the Christ. That is not the work to which the Lord Jesus and His followers dedicated their lives—at least not the kind of social uplift generally understood.

A SOCIAL-UPLIFT THAT WILL SUCCEED.

The whole work of God in connection with human Redemption is to be an uplifting work for Adam and his entire race. The uplift which God has planned and which He has revealed in the Bible is to be a most thorough one, such as humanity has never conceived. It is to be an uplift mentally, morally, and physically, such as to bring Adam and his race back to God—lost in Eden, redeemed at Calvary. This social uplift of mankind which God is interested in, and of which God is the Leader and Overcomer, is the line in which all the followers of Jesus, rightly instructed, are more interested than any other people in the whole world.

However the followers of Jesus are soldiers of the cross under His Captaincy, and they are not at liberty to follow theories either of their own or of other men respecting the way in which the great work of uplifting the world is to be accomplished. They are deeply interested in everything which men and women can do for the betterment of humanity in any and every sense of the word. And, as they have opportunity, they are glad to give a word of encouragement and appreciation, or occasionally a helping hand. But theirs is a far more important work. They are co-laborers with God—not with men.

God's Plan is first to select the Church, the Body of Christ, to be His joint-heirs in the glorious Messianic Kingdom. Then He will use that Kingdom for the thorough and complete social uplift, which all agree is so necessary. The world sees not the Divine Plan, and even the Message of the Grace of God in Jesus has so distorted, that the few it may probably think of Jesus and His followers as chimerical. Their theory, God's testimony, is foolishness to the world—and those who follow the divine arrangement, as St. Paul says, are counted fools all the day long—because they are spending their lives for, the accomplishment of things which the world cannot see, understand, appreciate—"the deep things of God." (I Corinthians ii, 10.)

FORMS OF GOODLINESS.

The Gospel of form and ceremony is not always hypocrisy. If forms and ritual forms and chants and printed prayers always came from the heart and were never merely forms, there would be much in them to approve and admire. Still ceremonies are no part of the Gospel of Christ, and to put them instead of it is to make of them false Gospel. Who will say that either Christ or any of the Apostles presented a Gospel of forms and ceremonies?

The human heart is deceitful above all things say the Scriptures. It is full of hypocrisy, selfishness and frivolity and sometimes into all, and then to deceive itself into believing that it is th. Elect of God and a special subject of His care and sure of a heavenly glory. Many such appear to know nothing whatever respecting the Gospel or Christ. Theirs is a Gospel of good works, donations to charitable, to assist up the Church, work and forms and ceremonies. They feel a burden roll away when they repeat weekly the phrase, "We have done things which we ought not to have done, and have left undone the things which we ought to have done, and there is no health in us. Be merciful to us miserable sinners."

But any suggestion that these are miserable sinners and need to know the way of the Lord more perfectly, and to become justified saints if they would be heirs of God, they would resent. The Gospel of formalism seldom does great injury to such people, many of whom, richly informed respectly the Gospel of Christ, might be Christ's blessed. If not, they are made meet for the inheritance of the saints in light.

As an illustration of the religious temper produced by the Gospel of formality and ceremony, the writer was one of a gentleman of prominence in London whom I met recently. He said, "I was out to hear you last Sunday, but when I saw that audience of thousands, and I want to tell you that you disturbed me greatly. I did not come away from your meeting happy and contented, but the reverse. I was disappointed to the core of my

CHEAP PIPE WRENCH.

Combination of Strap and Lever Effective and Safe.

Quite frequently it becomes necessary to have a pipe wrench, especially for brass tubing, that will not mar the work and yet at the same time will permit of using sufficient force to produce the beneficial results without crushing the tubing.

Fig. 1 shows one of the cheapest, simplest and yet most efficient of pipe wrenches. It consists of two parts of a piece of hard wood about 1½×1½×18 and a piece of strong tin inch leather bolting about three feet long. The strap should be riveted to the wood with rivet heads well sunk below the surface of the wood on the side opposite the strap side of the lever. The loose end of the strap should have holes punched at intervals of three inches or so to make it adjustable to the work with the stud on the opposite side of the bar. The strap should be turned down over the end of the lever, then up and around the work and then along the top of the lever and around the opposite wall, where it is fastened to the stud on the underside. The object of throwing the strap around the end of the lever rather than to fasten it at the end is to insure a maximum amount of pull on the strap with a minimum strain where it is fastened to the stud. Use this device like any other pipe wrench. To release the wrench for making but slight pull on the strap from the pipe far enough to allow it to loosen its grip and begin for the new pull above mainly repeating the operation. The end of the strap must not be taken from the stud after it is adjusted until the operation of turning the pipe is completed.

With the use of this wrench no rosin strain is placed upon the tubing as in the entire surface without any possible danger of marring or crushing it.

While a few trials the work can be done as quickly as with an open pipe wrench.—Scientific American.

STREET DUST DANGERS.

Flying Particles Cause Many Diseases of the Respiratory Organs.

In a recent article published in Hygiene Dr. Rasser draws attention to the considerable danger connected with street dust, the action of which on the human organs of respiration is responsible for its terrible effects on the organs of tuberculosis and similar diseases of the lungs and windpipe. But apart from this kind of trouble dangerous chronic inflammations of the eye should be put down to the action of street dust. In fact, an increase in the frequency of catarrhs has been observed with continued dry weather and a reduction on the occurrence of the first rain.

Under these conditions road engineering, apart from its technical task, has primarily to fulfill a sanitary duty. As the production of dust depends on the filling of roads, a pavement complying with all hygienical requirements should be looked for. Asphalted streets would seem to comply with most of these conditions, provided there be an extensive and thorough removal of waste matter, followed by an abundant sprinkling of the road surface. Cmoutchouc pavement, as used with especial satisfactory results in London, would seem to be most desirable. Dr. Rasser does not seem to think very highly of the sprinkling of roads with chemicals, such as salts and tar. An ideal means of laying street dust which has been suggested of late years is sprinkling with a solution of sulphite pitch in water, which would seem to avoid any dust for at least six weeks. Sulphite pitch is obtained as a byproduct in manufacturing cellulose.

Machine Makes Light Audible.

A remarkable instrument, known as the cryophone, which makes light audible, has been invented by Mr Tournac d'Albe, lecturer on physics at Birmingham university. A ray of light, on to a selenium cell, to which an electric battery is attached, moves a sensitized indicator, and this movement is made audible by a telephone apparatus. Thus a blind person can hear his light by sound. Sunlight is said to roar, while moonlight makes a gentler sound. The box containing part of the mechanism of the cryophone is very like a photographic camera. A blind person using an etophone could learn to write windows and other lights and thus be much assisted in worthy about. The cryophone is a first step in overcoming the difficulties that beset those afflicted the blind and will probably lead to further developments in this direction.

A Cleaner For Canvas Shoes.

One of the most economical cleansers for canvas shoes is made of shoe. Mix a small quantity of the powder with water to the consistency of thin paste and apply it to the canvas with an old toothbrush, rubbing it in thoroughly. Then set the shoes aside to dry before wearing them.

GUM FOR CANOE CALKING.

An Efficient Article Can Be Made From Rosin and Vaseline.

Considerable need is often experienced by canoeists and boatmen generally in the lack of a good canoe gum to stop leaks or breaks which may occur in the calking of the keels and the Scientific American. When canoeing in the northern waters of Canada or in the lakes in the Adirondacks and the Rockies it is often inconvenient or impossible to obtain a ready made gum which will answer in this purpose.

A good canoe gum must answer several demands—first, it must be sufficiently pliable at all of the levels of powder when in the cold water and under strain; second, it must not melt and run in the sun when the canoe is beached for a short time; third, it must not dissolve or soften when in the water, and, last, it must set hard in a few moments if it is to meet the requirements of an emergency it goes without saying that the gum material must be easily accessible and the price as low as possible.

All these demands are adequately met by a gum compounded of rosin and vaseline, and the gum can be made in any water tight dish which may be heated over an open flame. One part of vaseline and four parts of rosin, by weight, heated until dissolved in each other will give a gum which, at summer temperature, is soft and easily dusted. This is the consistency required for a gum for use in pumping in cold waters, such as Lake Superior.

A material compounded of 10 per cent vaseline and 90 per cent rosin is quite brittle when cold. However, in warmweather waters this gum is sufficiently pliable and does not soften or melt readily in the sun.

Addition of resin makes the gum harder and more brittle; adding more vaseline makes it softer and tougher, so that any consistency can be had from the hardness of rosin to the softness of vaseline.

The above mentioned compounded in the proportions of 10 to 20 per cent of vaseline and 90 to 80 per cent of rosin will answer all the requirements for a first class canoe gum. It may be carried in a tin or strapped in paper, and it melts easily over the flame and a match will make the glue to warm-set surfaces. Any coloring matter may be stirred into the hot liquid gum. For example, chinese blue gives a bluish green color, red lead gives a brilliant red, and chrome green yields a brilliant green. The best proportions for one part of mineral pigment to one part of gum. The addition of pigments makes the gum very hard.

New Type of Steel.

New steels are being produced even now, and that of E. Kothinas of Dusseldorf is claimed to have quite remarkable properties. Its tungsten is combined with hardness. Though it can be bent double while cold, it can be hot only with great difficulty. Only a low heat, it is stated, is necessary for forging and rolling. The tensile strength is very high, resting seventy tons per square inch, the elongation varying with slight changes of composition up to 45 per cent. This steel when annealed contains from 0.8 to 10.3 per cent of manganese, 12 to 14.4 of titanium, 40 to 45 of carbon, 0.4 to 0.7 of silicon, 0.04 or less of sulphur and 0.015 of phosphorus. In manufacture ferrotitanium and ferrosilicon are added to the iron while the mass is at a very high temperature in the final treatment the ingots are heated to 1,000 degrees and quenched in water or cooled in air.

Cause of Writer's Cramp.

Medical authorities now claim that "writer's cramp" and other similar states of apparent muscular paralysis are neither due, nor to the tiring of the muscles, but to brain fag. It appears that the particular part of the brain which controls special combinations of muscle action, such as the movements of writing or the working of telegraphic instruments, become more quickly exhausted in some individuals than in others. Such exhaustion leads to a state in which fatigue is felt actually unable to send out the necessary messages to the hands and fingers to write, tap a key, hold a knife, bow, etc. Furthermore, once the nerve cells the "batteries" of the brain get thoroughly run down it is not easy to restore their energy. Heretofore it has been supposed that all troubles of this kind were due simply to exercising of the muscles concerned.

Titanium and Alloys of Steel.

Much experimenting with various alloys of steel has been carried on by railroads and rolling mill operators to produce a rail that will give more satisfactory service than the ordinary rail now in use. One of the principal metals used in these experiments, according to the United States geological survey, is titanium. More than 250,000 long tons of rails were rolled in 1910 from steel to which ferrotitanium had been added. More than 150,000 tons of steel rails in which nickel or nickel and chromium were used as alloys were also made during 1910, and experiments were made with about 30,000 tons of steel rails in which chromium, manganese, vanadium and other metals were used. Certain steelmakers, according to the Survey, are now advertising titanium steel, claiming that, although no titanium is left in the steel, the removal of gases and impurities affected by it greatly increases the good quality of the steel.

GOSPEL TEACHING

BROOKLYN TABERNACLE BIBLE LESSONS

Conducted by REV. T. DE WITT TALMAGE

FIVE LOAVES AND TWO FISHES

Mark vi, 30-44—Sept. 22.
"Jesus said unto them, I am the Bread of Life"—John vi, 35.

WHEN the twelve Apostles returned to Jesus they enjoyed the business of their tour and what they had taught; and He told them always to be ready to rest awhile, because of the crowd and because they had not even time to take nourishment. So they went away in a boat, but the news went also and the crowd went on foot from various cities.

Jesus would have no time to Himself. His entire life was devoted and being rendered up in loving sacrifice to the Divine purpose. In feeling the chord of Jehovah's touch, and His own obligations on the earth. These were His reason to believe, with all the enthusiasm of the "throne of restitution of all things," when the original conditions of perfection will be restored to the human race, and all will have the same ruddy color of perfect health. The Prophet Jeremiah asks "Can the Ethiopian change his skin" (Jeremiah xiii, 23.) Not until it is impossible for the tribes to change its own color, yet it is not impossible for the Lord to change for His Revised Testament, as has been known within recent times of certain people whose skins turned white from the effects of poison. He answered to prayer, and the man continued to good health without being diseased in his way.

Q.—Upon what foundation did the Puritans build their faith in the resurrection? Some modern Bible critics assert that the Old Testament does not teach the doctrine of the resurrection; hence my question. (C. L. D.)

Answer—Evidently these "modern Bible critics" have never seriously established the writings of the Old Testament, as to the Second Resurrection is taught directly and indirectly by every one of the ancient writers. If any one of the Old Testament does not occur, but the awakening of the dead, and the life beyond the grave is frequently referred to. Herein the words of Job—"If a man die shall he live again? All the days of my appointed time will I wait until my change come." Thus saint refers and will answer me: thou will have a desire to the work of thine hands." For we know that my Redeemer liveth, and that He shall stand at the latter day upon the earth. And though, after my skin, worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God." (Job xiv, 14; xix, 25, 26.) See also the following: Psalms xvi, 10; xvii, 15, and Daniel xii, 2. Note the Apostle's words in Hebrews xi, and observe that throughout this entire chapter it was faith in the resurrection of the dead that prompted those righteous ones of old to obedience to the Divine will.

Q.—Is the doctrine of reincarnation taught as to the resurrection of the resurrection? (Swedenborg.)

Answer—The theory of reincarnation is as old as the hills, and as a fallacy. When death occurs, it is only the body which dies, while the soul or spirit, regardless in existence in some other sphere, until such time, as it may please the Creator, to permit His redeemed children to enjoy the awakening and restitution, and to once again re-inhabitate itself with the most up in the human body, the body for which it may be the most spiritually adapted. This blighty fanciful theory that it is the soul, the living spirit being that is to be resurrected. It is the soul, the being, that dies. There is nothing in the Bible to lead into some other sphere of consciousness, but the dream, or theory of life, returns to all who lamented it so much, and who is the source or fountain of all life. The reincarnation theory as taught is diametrically opposed to the doctrine of the resurrection as presented in the Bible.

Q.—Would we understand Revelation xiv, 13, to teach that when the Lord's people die they will take up the work of assisting those who yet remain this side of the "veil," to walk in the narrow way? (Jacob.)

Answer—"Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord from henceforth: Yea saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them." This Scripture would indicate that, from a certain time, those who die and pass into the heavenly kingdom, would continue in the same kind of work in which they had been engaged while on the earth. This, of course, would have reference to the spiritual line of work and not to the material ones. For instance if one had been an undertaker, he would not be expected to continue that calling in the heavenly state! The saintly followers of the Lord have been devoting themselves to the service of Life as the brethren and of the truth, the "glad tidings" of the coming Kingdom of Messiah, throughout their earthly lives; and therefore, from the above cited Scriptures, it would be reasonable to suppose that "their works do follow them" into the heavenly conditions on high. In the perfect and Divine state, the "works" would no longer be the toilsome weary "labors" of this life.

Q.—Is there anything in the Bible to indicate whether Adam was a black or white man? Some of my white colored brethren maintain that the first man was black, but I have not found anything in the Bible that would prove that he was or was not. What color do you think he was? (J. H. B.)

Answer—The first man was neither white nor black, but as the name Adam implies, he was of a ruddy color. After all, it is the color of health, the ruddy rank and red hue that is the most admirable of all. Adam as a perfect man must necessarily have been "the picture of health." The varying colors of the different races have been produced largely by the climatic conditions on the earth. These, we have reason to believe, will all be eliminated in the "times of restitution of all things," when the original conditions of perfection will be restored to the human race, and all will have the same ruddy color of perfect health. The Prophet Jeremiah asks "Can the Ethiopian change his skin" (Jeremiah xiii, 23.) Not until it is impossible for the tribes to change its own color, yet it is not impossible for the Lord to change for His Revised Testament, as has been known within recent times of certain people whose skins turned white from the effects of poison. He answered to prayer, and the man continued to good health without being diseased in his way.

In the perfect and Divine state, the "works" would no longer be the toilsome weary "labors" of this life.

Q.—Should we understand Revelation xiv, 1-5, to teach that only those who live celibate lives will have the privilege of being seated with Christ in His throne? (E. E. D.)

Answer—In the symbolisms of the Scriptures, a woman represents a church, as for instance, the Church of Christ is called the Bride, the Lamb's wife. (Revelation xxi, 9.) This is after the marriage, when the union of Christ and the Church in the glorified heavenly state has taken place. But in the meantime the true Church is represented as "a chaste virgin espoused to one husband," which is Christ. (2 Corinthians xi, 2.) The false churches are represented under the figure of a harlot and other corrupt characterizations. (Revelation xvii, 5.) The true Church is never called the "Mother Church." The false church and her numerous offspring, church systems developed from the old system, are being exposed more and more to the public gaze in this day when the hidden things are being revealed, and these "foolish virgins" will become incapable of withstanding the worldly powers and civil systems, are fully recognized. The message of the Lord at this time is "Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues." The second was the message then, who hear the Lord's message, and recognize these corrupt "women," but in the month in those false churches systems, for their conscience "defiled," they are no longer pure virginal in the Lord's sight. The Bible nowhere enjoins celibacy, but the Scriptures: The Apostle writes discouragingly of some who would come in the latter days, "forbidding to marry, and commanding to abstain from meats."—1 Timothy iv, 3.

Q.—If the six creative days of Genesis, first chapter, were each seven thousand years in length, as the Seventh-day Adventists intimate, may we not reasonably conclude that the seventh sabbath day of the Lord was likewise a day of seven thousand years? (S. D.)

Answer—We believe to a reasonable one, that the Lord's rest day was not merely a twenty-four hour day, but as long as any of the seven thousand years. This is formed from several Scripture statements, one of which is by the writer that although the Lord had finished the creative work of the six "days," He rested on the seventh, which the Apostle directing attention to this fact, implies that God is still resting, and that the Christian believers are privileged to enter into this rest. (Hebrews iv, 3-11.) The clear intimation of the testimony of the Scriptures is that the Lord arranged to rest from the reign of evil for six thousand years, after which there would follow the thousand years reign of Christ, the sabbath, when evil, sin, and death would be removed from the earth. These seven thousand years form the Lord's rest, or sabbath day of the Creator. The Divine arrangements are run in a series of seven days, each day period of seven thousand years each for the creative work, and then the seventh period is arranged to rest from it. This is the Lord's great week. The tongues have not given a great week of seven days in length, nor a "day with the Lord is as a thousand years and a thousand years as a day," in connection with the race. II Peter iii, 8. The race in Adam was condemned to labor and toil six days (periods in, 1,000 and then would enjoy rest and peace on the seventh day—the thousand years reign of Christ's reign. Then, in uniting with His chosen people, the Jews, the Lord arranged that the individual members of that nation should labor for six literal days, to be followed by the Sabbath Day, the seventh day of rest.

Q.—Kindly explain Matthew xxvii, 52, wherein it says the saints arose and came forth from their graves and went into the Holy City and appeared unto many? (B. P. F.)

Answer—The "saints" were, doubtless, those faithful servants referred to by the Apostle in the eleventh chapter of Hebrews. It is stated that after the Lord's resurrection, many bodies of the "saints" arose and came forth, and coming forth from the tombs, appeared to many. If these events are considered in a symbolic sense, they are of assistance in understanding the entire matter. The Scriptures teach that after the resurrection of the Christ Head and Body, the Lord Jesus the Head and the Church which is His Body, the Christ, will rule the "sleeping saints," the Ancient Worthies, will come forth from the tomb and enter into the Holy City, Jerusalem, where as "Princes in all the earth," (Psalm xlv, 16) they will "appear," or be manifested to "many," the world of mankind. These will be the earthly representatives of the glorified Christ, the spiritual kingdom class. Hence, in view of these, the antitypical conditions, how well the typical events portray them. It is evident that the saints recorded in verses 52 and 53, were arranged of the Lord in order to complete the type. The "sleeping saints" were not actually awakened at that time, but merely their "bodies" were caused to appear to many in the Holy City, and the graves were opened to further represent their coming forth. These "saints" are still asleep in their graves. John v, 28, 29.

The British Labor Party Speaks Before Annual Convention of Prize Scientists --- Closing Sessions of British Trade Union Congress--Congress Will Not Fuse With Labor Party but Political Action Endorsed--Female Spinners of Lacashire Get Big Raise.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

LONDON, Sept. 13. — England's chief scientific convention is the annual meeting of the British Association. It is the annual reunion of the best brains in the country in practically every branch of research. It discusses the origin of life, folklore, electric railways and fifty other things during the week's meetings of its numerous sections. Even the labor question is not overlooked and we find Ramsay Macdonald, the leader of the Labor Party in the British House of Commons, being asked to speak before the assembled scientists at Dundee this year. He dealt with the minimum wage question and many other things including that much debated topic, compulsory arbitration.

How, he asked, was compulsory arbitration to be imposed? They would not imprison a body or employers or workmen for breaking an award, and if they were to fine they could not fine individually, but collectively; only that would mean that they would have to ask for substantial deposits. Employers knew that to withdraw $250,000 or $500,000 from their business was a serious matter, and workmen equally knew that if they withdrew $100,000 from trade union funds it was a serious matter. They had thus to insist on deposits which were not substantial, or substantial deposits which would cripple the energy both of the employers and the employed and, after all, they could get nothing from the unorganized employers and workmen. The strong unions would never agree to such an arrangement. "I would advise them," said Macdonald, "to keep out of compulsory arbitration and, if necessary to adopt a policy of passive resistance. We must have a minimum wage, but yet not regard it as something fixed all round by every trade and district."

At the closing sitting of the British Trade Unions Congress, which met at Newport on September 7, it was decided to make Manchester the meeting place for next year's congress, which will be presided over by W. J. Davis of Birmingham, the secretary to the National Society of Amalgamated Brassworkers and Metal Mechanics. The final sitting of the congress was brief, and, as usual, so many resolutions had in to dispose of in order to complete the program that little or no discussion was possible. Among the decisions thus hastily taken were three of considerable importance. The first expressed "the opinion that trade unionists should refuse to work with non unionists. It was pointed out as against this by one or two speakers that if trade unionists were strong enough to compel non-unionists to join they were already enough to do better things, and that conscript unionists would be dubious comrades in battle, but the objectors were outnumbered by three to two. Nothing was said about carrying the resolution into effect, and the subject will probably be left for the separate unions to consider.

The second important decision had to do with the National Insurance Act. On September 6 it was decided to hold a special conference of trade unions in London on September 18 to consider a circular from the Insurance Commissioners to approve societies with regard to the reserve values of transferred members. On September 7 a further circular was received by approved societies asking for their answer for September 18. The Parliamentary Committee of the Congress therefore proposed that the date of the conference should be advanced to September 12, but this was rejected by 999,000 votes to 327,000 after a speech from Mr. Smillie, the president, of the Miners' Federation, declaring that trade unions were being bamboozled by the National Insurance Commissioners, and that if such treatment continued they should "have up this thing altogether."

The third important decision was taken when the Congress threw out by an overwhelming majority a resolution put forward by the Boilermakers' Society in favor of the fusion of the Trade Unions Congress and the Labor party. The Boilermakers' Society attached to the resolution a draft scheme for amalgamation, and so far as could be gathered from a very inadequate discussion it was to the delegates rather than to the principle of union that the congress objected.

The fusion scheme was one purely of organization. It implied no view one way or the other on the part of the congress delegates with regard to the Labor party in the House of Commons. At the present time the labor movement has three centers—the annual Trade Union Congress, the Labor party and the General Federation of Trade Unions. Each of these has its particular duties to perform and each holds an annual convention. Although each centralization has its own special functions it has been thought that they should all be concentrated under one roof with a view to the way of financial economy and of business dispatch.

The British Trade Unions Congress is supposed to have denounced by an overwhelming vote what is loosely termed syndicalism. The only ground for presuming this is the passing of the following resolution by 1,753,000 votes to 48,000:—

That this congress reaffirms its continued support of independent working class political action in helping the industrial fight for a more equitable share of the wealth produced, and also declares for a larger share of representation in national affairs, in view of the continued centralization of social and industrial questions in

SHENANGO VALLEY MILL CONDITIONS.

SHARON, Sept. 22.—Optimism is the keynote of the encouraging reports received in this city of the industrial conditions existing in the section of the state. Rarely has Western Pennsylvania, and particularly the Shenango Valley, enjoyed an era of such widespread prosperity as that which at present has imbued the employer and the employe, no matter in what line of industry either may be engaged, with the greatest confidence respecting the future. The manufacturers, merchants and business men are jubilant over the fact that, as one of their number recently expressed it, their "business is considerably ahead of what it was this time last year, with every promise of its continuing for some time to come."

Orders for future delivery were never as great, and practically every mill and other plants, with the exception of a few blast furnaces, which will resume within a few weeks, is working at capacity. Indeed, the business outlook from every angle is far more satisfactory than it has been for a long time. One of the largest steel companies in the Valley states that at present his concern has sufficient orders on its books to keep the plant running steadily over a period of six months and that indications are there will be no let down for at least a year or two. The greatest difficulty experienced now is in getting laborers. This class of labor is at a premium and on emergency jobs some have paid as high as 75 cents an hour. Sharon and Farrell should prosper the coming winter.

President Samuel Gompers, Vice President Mitchell and Secretary Morrison, of the American Federation of Labor, have been granted until November 1 to complete their appeal to the District Appellate Court from their conviction for alleged contempt of court by Judge Wright.

NATIONAL MINE-SAFETY CONFERENCE.

THERE is widespread humane interest in the proceedings of the National Mine Safety and First Aid conference, now in session in this city. There are no less than 750,000 men earning their livelihood by mining in the United States, and anything and everything that tends to diminish the hazards of their occupation is worthy of the country's most serious attention.

That the loss of life in the mines has already been materially reduced by the improved safety measures put into effect during the last few years is the best evidence of the very practical character of mine safety and first-aid projects. The mine experts in attendance at the present conference point to the fact that there were 700 fewer deaths by accident in the mines last year than in the year preceding.

That this saving of life is directly due to the systematization of mine-safety precautions and to the organized effort that began with the establishment of the federal government's bureau of mines is nowhere disputed. The results of the elaborate experiments the government experts have for two or three years carried on at the experiment station in this city have themselves been of vast benefit.

Consider merely the dollar value of the miner's life. Their human value, or in the case of all good citizens is the chief thing. But subordinate to the economic value is, it gets into big figures.

If, as some of the compensation laws propose, the state shall pay a penalty of $1,200 every time a miner is killed at his work the family receiving the payment now in the sum of $510,000 in penalties saved last year.

This is of course, only the most sordid viewpoint. Nevertheless it is a view point which will enlighten those on whom the humanitarian argument would be lost. They might remain unmoved by appeals to their sympathy for the brave men who risk their day after day in the treacherous blackness of the mines. But when they see that failure to install the most approved safety appliances and follow the most approved methods of mining is liable to be costly to the taxpayers (as it should) they will suddenly waken to their interests as taxpayers and will insist that in order to protect the miner from needless danger there shall be rigorous state and government mine inspection and regulation. The labor movement has three centers—the annual Trade Union Congress, the Labor party and the General Federation of Trade Unions. Each of these has its particular duties to perform and each holds an annual convention. Although each centralization has its own special functions it has been thought that they should all be concentrated under one roof with a view to the way of financial economy and of business dispatch.

DR. G. E. VINCENT, HEAD OF UNIVERSITY OF MINNESOTA.

THE president of the most richly endowed state university, that of Minnesota, is Dr. George E. Vincent, who had attained eminence as a sociologist before he was elected by the regents two years ago. The son of Bishop Vincent, founder of the Chautauqua Literary and Scientific Circle, he has for many years been identified with the work of the circle and the assembly. Before his election to the presidency of Minnesota he was at the same time president of the Chautauqua institution and dean of the faculties of arts, literature and science in the University of Chicago. In the development of which he has had an important part. The legislators of an early day set aside as the federal government's offer appliances and follow the most approved methods of mining is liable to be costly to the taxpayers (as it should) they will suddenly waken to their interests as taxpayers and will insist that in order to protect the miner from needless danger there shall be rigorous state and government mine inspection and regulation. The labor movement has three centers—the annual Trade Union Congress, the Labor party and the General Federation of Trade Unions. WASHINGTON, Sept. 24 — The Postmaster General has issued the necessary orders and instructions for putting into effect the newspaper and periodical publicity law, the first returns of which must be made October 1. Appropriate return blanks are being mailed to all publishers. The law requires that publishers shall file on the first day of October and April of each year, both with the Postmaster General and with the local postmasters, under penalty of the denial of the use of the mails, sworn returns of the names and addresses of the owner, publisher, editor, managing editor and business manager of all newspapers and periodicals, with the exception of religious, fraternal, temperance and scientific publications, and also, when a corporation, the names of the holders of the stocks, bonds or other securities, and in the case of daily newspapers, a statement of the average paid circulation for the preceding six months. All editorial or other reading matter appearing in a newspaper or magazine for the publication of which pay is accepted or promised must be marked "Advertisement," under a fine of not less than $100 nor more than $500. According to the terms of the law trade union publications are not in the excepted class, and will be compelled to make report the same as other newspapers and periodicals.

Information is coming in to headquarters with reference to a number of union men who have either been nominated for Congress or are aspiring for the nomination. Timothy F. Healey, President of the International Brotherhood of Stationary Firemen, who was nominated for Congress in the Sixteenth New York Congressional district by the Progressive party, Harry J. Skerlington, a member of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union, who for many years active in the labor movement, is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Congress in one of the districts adjacent to Boston. David J. Harvey, of Englewood, N. J., a stone cutter, is a candidate for the nomination to Congress. Cornelius J. Ford, a union printer of Hoboken, N. J., is a candidate for nomination on the Democratic ticket for Congress. Charles A. Sumner, of Kansas City, a union stereotyper, is a candidate for Congress on the Progressive ticket. T. P. Paley, of Cheyenne, Wyo., a union coal miner, has been nominated for Congress on the Democratic ticket. Ed. Keating, of Colorado, member of typographical union, has been nominated for Congress on the Democratic ticket.

In the primaries recently held in Colorado to nominate candidates for United States Senate, Congressmen, and State officials, two union men were nominated for prominent offices. Ready Kenehan, for many years the secretary-treasurer of the International Union of Journeymen Horse Shoers, was nominated on the Democratic ticket for State auditor. Ready has held a State office for six years. Edward Keating formerly a proof-reader on the Rocky Mountain News, and a member of the Typographical Union, has been nominated for Congress on the Democratic ticket.

Secretary Nagel, of the Department of Commerce and Labor, has extended to October 1 the time for equipping passenger carrying steamers with life saving apparatus under the new law which provides for stricter regulations. The extension was granted when it was found that a scarcity of life-saving apparatus made it impossible for all the steamers to get their equipment within the time limit granted by the first ruling. The extension applies to all steamship lines alike throughout the country. A 10 per cent life-saving equipment during the summer months is required under the new steamboat extension rules, with a full equipment after October 1.

According to a report just sent out by the commissioner of labor in charge of the Workmen's Compensation Bureau, the Washington State Insurance system has succeeded beyond the best hopes of its friends and sponsors. In this act one of the youngest States is giving the older Commonwealths another example of the wise progressive law. The State's control over public utility corporations, giving the power to fix minimum wages for men for underground mines and women wage earners, full crew law for railroad men, and other laws enacted during the past four years in the interest of labor, deserve full credit, and should not be forgotten in the triumph of our compensation act. The compensation law is for two years active in the compulsory classes or groups. All other States having laws of this character are elective or optional. From the forty-seven groups mentioned there has been paid into the accident fund $791,483.57, from which in ten months $502,144.68 has been taken for cash accident awards and reserves to guarantee pensions of widows and orphans. The compensation law has thus inaugured in an era of publicity regarding the appalling maiming, dismembering, and killing of workmen in the mines, mills and workshops of the State. The general feeling among the people of this State is that the compensation act is an unqualified success.

STANDARD OIL'S CONTEMPT OF COURT.

THE articles in the news columns of the daily papers showing how Pittsburgh, in common with every other big city in the country, has suffered from the advance in the prices of oil, gasoline, and petroleum products generally since the "dissolution" of the Standard Oil Company have attracted much attention. The same question arises in all minds—viz. since the "dissolution" of the trust was evidently the merest make-believe, what is the government going to do about it? The Standard multi-millionaires will of course solemnly pretend that the dissolution was in good faith, but it is inconceivable that if competitive conditions and actually been restored in the petroleum industry the country would have had to pay higher prices for petroleum and its products than ever. The advance in prices is estimated to have increased the receipts of the monopoly no less than $2,000,000 in the month of August alone and no less than $25,000,000 during the twelve months since the Federal Supreme Court's dissolution decree went into effect. If Mr. Rockefeller and his partners are not laughing up their sleeves it must be because they have been indulging in that amusement so long that it has lost its zest.

No matter how plausibly the Standard's lawyers may argue that the company has obeyed the Supreme Court's order, the country is soberly convinced that the monopoly has deliberately set the order of the court at defiance. Under such circumstances, there would appear to be but one thing for the government to do if it is in earnest in its determination that the anti-trust law shall be enforced. Men like George W. Perkins, head of the Harvester trust (and director of the steel trust), Elbert H. Gary, head of the steel trust, and other representatives of what has well been called the "plunderbund" are telling the country that the law cannot be enforced and that what is wanted is a law which will allow the trusts as now organized to continue to exist and to monopolize their respective industries, the only restriction being that they shall not make the public pay prices in excess of certain limits to be fixed by the Government (which would naturally make it their business to control.) There is not a monopolist in the country who would not be delighted to see this plan adopted. It legalizes his past plunder and leaves him in full possession of the fruits of his crime. That public opinion will ever fall into such a trap we do not believe. That all pretend. In persisting in its unlawful organization the Standard Oil Company is guilty of contempt of court. That contempt is punishable by imprisonment. If Mr. Taft pre-

Now, private ownership of this enlightened sort is really not half bad. But when, until very recently, were the advocates of owners of public-service corporations willing to admit the public as partners? The practice of the great majority of such corporations throughout the country was to deny that the public had any share or interest whatever other than to pay such rates for service as the private owners in their pleasure demanded. Even where the franchises—the chief asset of the corporations—were unpaid for, and came to their owners as a "gift" from the public (usually a "gift" obtained by corrupt political influence and a counter "gift" from the corporation to the bosses in power) the public was generally treated as an impertinent intruder if it ventured to protest that it had rights in the premises. Even the courts of justice only too often took this view of the matter and treated the people's representatives as trespassers if they insisted on asserting the public's rights now so graciously conceded by our Wall street contemporary.

The world does move after all. In order to avert municipal ownership and save at least part of the goose that laid the golden egg, the public utility capitalists of the country are evidently willing to adopt a new policy and acknowledge everything as to the public's right and interests in their business that they have hitherto both by precept and practice been denying. It is an encouraging sign, and there are not a few earnest students of the public-service problem who will meet the enlightened monopolists half way and admit that with the public actually a partner in the public service monopoly municipal operation will seem far less a thing to be dreaded.

A free labor bureau for the purpose of bringing the unemployed into direct touch with possible employment or for those desiring to better their employment is the latest innovation introduced by the Baltimore & Ohio railroad.

MOLDERS WIN THEIR STRIKE

UTICA, N. Y. — After nine months' struggle the Iron Molders' Union and Foundry Employes have secured a settlement with the International Heater Company, manufacturers of hot-air and water furnaces. The terms of the settlement include the recognition of shop committees, readjustment of prices and the reinstatement of the members, approximating 100 in number. This is considered a splendid victory.

The total benefits paid by the Clgarmakers' International Union during 1911 amounted to $576,330.61.

Pastor Russell's Sermon

CHRIST DIED TO SAVE SINNERS.

St. Paul's Gospel, Which He Was Not Ashamed to Preach—An Inspired Statement—Pastor Russell, in Montreal, Says That the Penalty of Sin Was Justly Imposed—The Redeemer is Yet to Become the Great Deliverer of the World—Importance of Resurrection.

MONTREAL, Canada, Sept. 22.—Pastor Russell gave two addresses here, one on Beyond the Grave," the other on "St. Paul's Gospel."

America's Ubiquitous Preacher comes very frequently to the Provinces, and the immense audiences that everywhere greet him are proof that the Truss Gospel Which he preaches has to some extent found a responsive chord in thousands of Canadian hearts.

We report the Pastor's second address, which was from the text, "Moreover, Brethren, I declare unto you the Gospel which I preached unto you: * * * how that Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures; and that He was buried, and that He rose again the third day." (I Corinthians xv. 1-4.) So complete a statement of the Gospel in so few words is wonderful. Without inspiration St. Paul, like the rest of us, would have said more—would have said too much. Let us analyze the text and see what it contains.

First of all it teaches that we are sinners and that our sins are beyond our own power to wash away or eradicate. This is a fundamental, fundamental matter. Failure to realize that we are imperfect, born in sin, "shapen in iniquity," has hindered many from seeing the necessity for a Redeemer, and therefore from accepting Jesus as their Savior. To us that we are sinners implies a time when righteousness prevailed to our generosity. We do not speak of brutes as sinners, because the Scriptures say that "sin is transgression of the Law," and God would not give a law to a brute, which could not comprehend that law. Similarly the perfection of our first parents was implied in the term, because God would not give a law to a being not sufficiently intelligent and capable of keeping that law. Thus this very simple statement, We are sinners, implies the thought of a fall, just as the Bible declares.

"CHRIST DIED FOR OUR SINS."

For Christ to die for our sins implies that our sins had a death-penalty attached to them. This again implies that at the time that death penalty was imposed it was a just one, because a just God would not punish unjustly. The justice of a death penalty implies a high degree of intelligence on the part of the sinner and that he was in a condition in which he would not have needed to die if he had not sinned.

This statement, "that Christ died for our sins," further implies that Christ was not of the fallen race, for had He been a sinner, how could He have died for sinners—how could His death have been of any profit or advantage to them? Thus our text teaches that Jesus was indeed "the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world," that God sent His only begotten Son into the world that we might not perish but have everlasting life. The whole force and import of this text is that human salvation is secured by the death of Christ and His resurrection. Were we not sinners and dying we would have needed no one to die for us. Were it not to escape from sin and from condemnation to death, the deep things of God would not have sent His Son.

THE DEATH-PENALTY STATED.

Here let us notice the force of the word death in our text. It did not mean life in torment to our Redeemer, for the Scriptures say that His torment was not only that He died, but that He arose from the dead on the third day. And the Scriptures declare that He was "not alive anywhere during those three days." This contradicts the thought of some who claim that he was the Heavenly Father Himself and could not die—that He merely got out of the body on the cross, and let the body die and afterwards pretended that He had died, when He said, "I am He that liveth, and was dead, and behold, I am alive forevermore."—Rev. i. 18.

We have a genuine Redemption, a real Sacrifice, and the Redeemer is yet to become the Great Deliverer of the world, whose deliverance from death by resurrection cost the Redeemer His life. As by a man came death, by the Man Christ Jesus comes the resurrection of the dead; "for as in Adam all die, even so all in Christ shall be made alive—every man in his own order."—I Corinthians xv. 21-23.

HE AROSE THE THIRD DAY.

Great importance attaches to the fact that the One who died for our sins did not remain dead. He descended into Hell—Sheol, Hades, the tomb—but His sould was not left there, as the Scriptures declare. God the Father raised Him from the dead on the third day. The importance of Christ's resurrection is manifold. It shows that He did not die a sinner, but, on the contrary, maintained His relationship with the Father—"holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners." It shows that He kept the Law; otherwise He would have remained dead like the remainder of the Jews.

More than this, the fact that He was raised from the dead to a higher nature, a spirit being, "partaker of the Divine nature," proves that His sacrificial death was very pleasing and acceptable in the Father's sight, hence His high reward. And all this proves that the Heavenly Father's great promise to Abraham is in process of fulfilment. Our Lord's resurrection to the plane of glory demonstrates to us the greatness of this Seed of Abraham, and His preparation for the great work foretold—the blessing of all the families of the earth.

From this viewpoint we see the importance of His death and of His resurrection, each of which in death was necessary as man's Redemption price. His exaltation to power and great glory was necessary for man's deliverance from sin and death. Here we have, then, the Gospel which St. Paul received and which he, in turn, dispensed—the true Gospel of which he was not ashamed, as he wrote to the Christians at Rome. "I am not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth—to the Jew first and also to the Gentile."

GOSPEL IN A NUT-SHELL.

As a great oak may be said to be in an acorn, so the great Gospel Message may be said to be in our text, as St. Paul declares. Every time we look at it it seems a little larger and a little more beautiful than before. We can almost see it grow—not that the Gospel is growing, for it is the same that God purposed in Himself before the foundation of the world. It is the appreciation of the Gospel that grows, in proportion as we grow in grace and in the knowledge of the Divine Plan and in the spirit of our Lord; for without His Spirit, the Holy Spirit, to enlighten our understanding and to enable us to appreciate the testimonies of the Word, we could not be able to comprehend "the deep things of God."

How plainly the Apostle states this, saying, "The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, * * * neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned; * * * but God hath revealed them unto us by His Spirit, for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God."—I Cor. ii. 14, 10.

Pastor Russell's reputation for faithfulness to the Divine Word, his courage to speak the Truth in Love, and his power to hold vast audiences with rapt attention for hours has spread everywhere. Newspapers to the number of 1,300—in the States, in Great Britain and in the Dominion—which are publishing his sermons along his comments on the International Sunday School Lessons are zealous in their support of his excellent services and are praying still more power to his voice and pen.

We have merely seen the root of the Gospel, continued Pastor Russell, as it centers in the promise made to Abraham and to the redemptive work accomplished by our Savior. In Romans xi. 16-24 St. Paul uses the illustration of an olive tree, and declares the branches of the tree to be the members of the Body of Christ, which is the Church. From these branches will come abundant fruitage by and by, of "olive oil," for the light of the World.

St. Paul points out that the natural Israelites were the natural branches and that the Jews therefore had the first right, privilege and opportunity of becoming the members of the Body or Christ, the Church. As a matter of fact, all privilege and opportunity was excluded from the Gentiles until Israel's time of favor was complete—three and a half years after the cross.

During those years the Lord's providence so blessed the Jews that they were all brought in contact with the Truth under most favorable conditions. We certainly believe that thousands were converted and blessed at Pentecost and other thousands a little later on.

We may be sure that every worthy branch in that tree was accepted of the Lord—every "Israelite indeed in whom was no guile," St. Paul tells us that then the unbelieving Jews were broken off, separated from the Divine favor in which they had previously been. Then began the work of calling, preparing and sanctifying from the Gentiles, a people for His name, whom the Apostle represents as of a wild olive tree.

This work of ingrafting the Gentiles into the Jewish stock and making a fellow-heirs with the Jews of the original Divine promise made to Abraham has progressed for now nearly nineteen centuries. This is the true Gospel, because it applies us from the same gracious promises. It was "good tidings" when as a message it was given to Abraham. Its value was intended when God made oath to its certainty or fulfilment. The fulfilment began in Jesus, continued through the Jewish disciples, and now has accomplished a considerable number of the Gentiles—probably the foreordained number is completed. When the elect number shall have been selected and proven and shall have been granted the resurrection change, and raised beyond the veil—then this most wonderful feature of the Gospel will have been accomplished.

JEWISH SHARES OF GOSPEL.

The completion of Spiritual Israel will be followed by the establishment of the heavenly kingdom and the beginning of the blessing of all the families of the earth. We are to distinguish here between the Church and the families of the earth. The Church in their consecration and acceptance of the Lord and begetting of the Holy Spirit become members of the new nation. They are no longer Jews, nor Greek, nor Gentile, nor Scythian, nor bond, nor free. They are not in the flesh, but in the spirit, if so be that the Spirit of God dwell in you" (Romans viii. 9.) The Church not only receive a mortal birth, but that life is on higher plane—as spirit beings. Theirs will be glory, honor and immortality, in joint-heirship with their Lord.

Amongst the families of the earth to be blessed by Messiah's Kingdom the first place will be given to Natural Israel. In all things the Jews was to have pre-eminence, for this is the Divine arrangement. As the Jew got the opportunity of becoming members of the Body of Christ before it was offered to the Gentiles, so Fleshly Israel will be the first nation to be granted the opportunities and testings of Restitution to human perfection under Messiah's Kingdom. Provision has already been made for this. Abraham, Isaac and Jacob and all the Prophets of old have the testimony that they pleased God and that they are to have a better resurrection than the ordinary. They cannot be members of the Bride of Christ, nor sharers in the spiritual privileges and the Heavenly Kingdom. They lived before the High Calling, before the Heavenly Calling was opened. Jesus was the Captain, Leader and Forerunner in this, and His joint-heirs all follow Him. None of them preceded Him.

"PRINCES IN ALL THE EARTH."

But the Messianic Kingdom, itself spiritual, will need earthly Representatives, and they are provided for in the ancient worthies. These, having having been completed, they will be raised perfect human beings, as Adam was in his perfection, and Jesus in His, while on earth. Their superior powers of mind and body will soon grasp all the wonderful things which Divine providence has arranged for their visit thereto, and they will be quite masters of the situation. Naturally, perfect men will be Princes amongst imperfect ones. But these will hold the title from the Great Messiah. This is prophetically stated: "Instead of Thy fathers shall be Thy children, whom Thou (Messiah) shalt make Princes in all the earth"—Psalm xlv. 16.

Assuredly the new order of things will appeal to the Jew first. His lessons under the Law will make him specially amendable to the new condition of things, for during that thousand years all mankind will be judged, not according to their faith entirely, but specially according to their works. Faith will be easy when knowledge will be so complete and so general. Good works will be gradually more and more possible as they shall be blessed and restored to perfection under the Kingdom arrangements.

The Scriptures intimate that the word at that time will be in a dejected condition. The great "Time of Trouble" with which Messiah's Kingdom will be inaugurated will cut a deep swath in earth hopes and ambitions, and all nations will be in condition to desire the Messianic Government, and then, "The desire of all nations shall come."—Hag. ii. 7.

"COME, LET US GO UP."

The Scriptures prophetically foretell that as the Divine blessings of Messiah's Kingdom go more and more into operation, other nations will take note of this and be inclined to entreat a share of the Divine favors, saying, "Come, let us go up to the mountain (Kingdom) of the Lord's house. He will teach us of His ways and we will walk in His paths." The whole world every nation, people, kindred, tongue, needs just the blessings of healing and life eternal which the Messianic Kingdom is to offer them. And the terms will not be impossible, but quite the reverse. Messiah is to be not only a Great King to rule, but also a Great Priest—and the Church with Him is promised to be a Royal Priesthood.

However, God will not accept any other nation than Israel. All of His blessings are to go to the Seed of Abraham. And as Abraham's Seed spiritual in the resurrection becomes as the stars of heaven, so his seed natural will increase to fill the whole earth, and are compared to "the sand of the seashore." Nor will this be an arbitrary matter. It means the greatest good to all. Note that the first members of Spiritual Israel came from Natural Israel, and that the Apostles were all Jews. Similarly the last fruits of the world will be Natural Israel, but all nations will have the privilege and opportunity of being reinstated into favor and into membership of Israel—much after the same manner that people of all nationalities coming to American Canada may enjoy citizenship here under certain Covenant conditions. Here we have Covenant conditions inaugurated with Israel (Jer. xxxi. 31-34) will thus be open to all mankind, because all will be permitted to become members of Israel. Thus, as the Apostle's prophesy, Abraham eventually will be "a father of many nations"—Romans iv. 17.

Eventually, all the willing and obedient will be glad to enter into this New Covenant relationship with God through Christ and to be continued members of "Abraham's Seed." Eventually, all others will be destroyed in the Second Death, so that then all the earth will be blessed in Abraham's Seed. Then we have the Gospel in its fulness, expanded from the original promise made to Abraham, and taking in all the features of Divine grace and mercy and eventuating in the most wonderful blessings possible for the human mind to imagine! And all this centers in the work of Jesus, in His death for our sins and in His resurrection for our deliverance and the execution of the Gospel Program. Thanks be unto God for His unspeakable gift! Hallelujah, what a Gospel! Hallelujah, what a Savior! Hallelujah, what a God!

Illinois, Sept. 21.

I am pleased to renew my subscription to the Tribune for another year through the Bible and Tract Society of Brooklyn, N. Y. With me, the Tribune has become an absolute necessity, in that its religious features appeal to me. I am truly thankful to you for the wide space you give in your paper to Pastor Russell's Sermons and all kindred subjects. I am grateful for the blessings that have come to me through the columns of your paper. Furthermore, I wish to thank you for sending the Tribune so promptly the past year not one copy has failed.

Wishing you much success in your noble work of helping to spread the Gospel.

Gratefully yours,
MRS. THOS. J. VIMONT.

Appreciations

Georgia, Sept. 20.

I write to express my appreciation of your good paper, particularly on account of its Pastor Russell Sermon feature and other good religious features. The Sermon in the September 12 issue is the best, richest, fullest, clearest I ever read or heard.

Yours in the service of the Truth,
C. W. LYENS.

Ohio, Sept. 20.

I notice by the label on my paper that my time has expired, so I am sending herewith money order for one year's subscription. I do not wish to do without the paper as I consider it the best I have yet seen. I especially enjoy reading Pastor Russell's Sermons, the Question Box and the Sunday School Lessons, although it has many other good features. You may count on me as a subscriber as long as you continue the present high standard of your paper.

Respectfully yours,
THOMAS ADAMS.

North Carolina, Sept. 20.

I have not written to you for a long time, but I appreciate your paper more and more with each week's issue. God's word says "Every deed shall receive a just recompence of reward." I am sure of that from your good work of publishing Pastor Russell's sermons. Will be glad to send in due time, and we trust that your reward is not all left to be received in the life to come, but in our world that you may now enjoy some of the reward in the way of receiving many new subscribers to the Tribune. It has been my privilege to send you quite a number of new subscribers through the Watch Tower this year, and we will continue the good work as fast as we get them.

Wishing you continued success, I remain,

Yours truly,
FRANK M. MITCHELL.

Indiana, Sept. 17.

We have only been a subscriber a short time to your paper, but it has become indispensible to us as one of the religious features, the equal of your paper sure does not exist.

We pray the Lord's blessings upon you for the part you are taking in the discrimination of the Harvest Message.

Your brother in Christ,
J. M. ZIMMERMAN.

Ohio, Sept. 12.

I want to say I enclose my subscription for another year through the Watch Tower some ten days ago. Am sending it direct to you as that is my way of pleasing as many readers. Say, old boy, a good thing I was almost carried away with the "School Ma'am Dream." I consider it poetic, sad and, grandly grand. Surely such stories are edifying and more than a cup of cold water to the thirsty. Keep it coming. It's food in due season. Let the Truth now go on until the whole world has become a mighty river of salvation.

Yours truly,
WM. BROKAW.

Illinois, Sept. 19.

It gives me great pleasure to send you a new subscription to your paper. I recommend it to all who wish to get a good, solid paper and to all who are interested in the Sermons by Pastor Russell, which are a leading feature of the Tribune.

Yours truly,
MRS. HENRY BRIGGS.

LETTER FROM PASTOR RUSSELL

New York, Sept. 17.

Editors National Labor Tribune:

I have received the letter you sent me, written by a Roman Catholic, which insinuates that I do not understand the teachings of his church; and the basis of his charge seems to be the reply to some question appearing in your columns are disturbances in a priest's home by spirits.

Allow me to inform your readers that I am in no sense of the word responsible for the answers of your Question Box. They are not from my pen. Furthermore, I would not think of blaming a priest for a matter which he could not control. To my understanding the spirits which operate through spiritualistic mediums, sometimes boisterously, as in the case of this priest's home, are evil spirits, wicked spirits—demons. So then, the fact that these were troubling the priest would not to my mind mean that he was in league with them, but rather that they were angry with him.

I would like your reader to know that I am quite familiar with the doctrines of the Church of Rome, and with all the doctrines of the various religious systems — Christian and heathen. I trust that your readers have noticed that I invariably avoid in my sermons anything that would be unkind or discourteous. Indeed, I deal not with personalities, but with doctrines. Surely doctrines are open for discussion in fairness in the interests of Truth. I cannot approve all the doctrines of the church of Rome. Among them I find some true, and some are so jumbled up that only to the infallible standard—the Word of God, the Bible. Yet, even in so doing attention to errors it is my endeavor to speak and write sympathetically and kindly, and surely truthfully. The great difficulty lies in the fact that many Catholics, like many Protestants, are ignorant of their own church teachings.

To illustrate what I say, let me tell your Catholic readers who think they are members of the Catholic Church that they are in error—because the Roman Catholic Church is composed exclusively of clerics. It has no lay members whatever. The latter are styled children of the church. They are, therefore, no more members of the church itself than a child is its own mother. Let them see that he was in league with the devil and a hell of fire and brimstone for the wicked, comes from Dante and Milton and not from the Bible.

Here we have a professed teacher of God's Word declaring in one sentence that the efforts of the Bible Students are good, something that does not exist, and in the same breath (so to speak) admitting that just what the resolution does aim at, i. e. "the wisely diffused ideas" above mentioned—clear to the minds and views in existance at least as far back as the days of Dante, Dore and Milton (who with pen and pencil pictured a mythology of a still earlier period).

Now as between this scholarly bride, who sides Dante, Milton and all sisterhood the Bible Students and those Bible Students, who hold fast to the testimony of God's Word. We see, do we not, that the aforesaid resolution is aimed, not at a supposable Dantean hell of Greek mythology, but at the false doctrines fostered upon a too confiding laity by those who ought to have known better.

The moral of all this is simple. Be a "Bible Student." "Search the Scriptures." Learn to "rightly divide the Word of Truth," and let this Word of Truth be a "lamp to your feet and a light to your path," and thus prepared, you may be "always ready to give an answer to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you," to confidingly follow those who ought to have known better.

With much love to the Tribune and all its friends.

Yours sincerely,
C. T. RUSSELL.

CONFORT IN SORROW.

Let not the Christian's trust depart,
Though life in common gifts deny;
Though with a shining fainting heart,
He sometimes almost longs to die.

For God has marked each sorrowing day,
And numbered over secret tear;
And blessful ages yet shall pay
For all his children suffer here.

So now lift up your heads, your deliverance draw nigh. For God is love. Still appreciate your publication of Pastor Russell's Sermon and other helpful features.

Respectfully,
ROBERT J. CRAIG.

Ohio, Sept. 18.

When the "I. B. S. A." appealed to the Christian ministry of the United States to declare for or against the monstrous doctrine of eternal torment as the wages of sin, it was an appeal to their moral conscience as it applies to their knowledge and estimate of a just and loving Creator, in the hope that each might feel privileged to give vent to a relief moment, all sectarian obligations, and view the matter in the clear light of "Present Truth."

It is to the credit of these ministers as a whole, that many who are coming into this fast increasing light, have promptly given their testimony against such doctrines. Some, however, give their testimony in a slighting way as though the matter was of little consequence, as witness the following: "These wonderful resolutions are aimed at something that not only does not exist, but which practically nobody believes, or will but few exceptions ever did believe." (Note the conclusion.) "The widely diffused idea in modern times about the devil and a hell of fire and brimstone for the wicked, comes from Dante and Milton and not from the Bible."

Here we have a professed teacher of God's Word declaring in one sentence that the efforts of the Bible Students are good, something that does not exist, and in the same breath (so to speak) admitting that just what the resolution does aim at, i. e. "the wisely diffused ideas" above mentioned—clear to the minds and views in existance at least as far back as the days of Dante, Dore and Milton (who with pen and pencil pictured a mythology of a still earlier period).

Now as between this scholarly bride, who sides Dante, Milton and all sisterhood the Bible Students and those Bible Students, who hold fast to the testimony of God's Word. We see, do we not, that the aforesaid resolution is aimed, not at a supposable Dantean hell of Greek mythology, but at the false doctrines fostered upon a too confiding laity by those who ought to have known better.

The moral of all this is simple. Be a "Bible Student." "Search the Scriptures." Learn to "rightly divide the Word of Truth," and let this Word of Truth be a "lamp to your feet and a light to your path," and thus prepared, you may be "always ready to give an answer to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you," to confidingly follow those who ought to have known better.

With much love to the Tribune and all its friends.

Yours sincerely,
C. T. RUSSELL.

POPULAR MECHANICS

BAGGAGE PROTECTOR.

Simple and Effective Cushion Made of Scrap Rubber Hose.

Baggage smashing will soon become one of the lost arts if the simple and effective device shown in the accompanying illustration is put into general use, says Popular Mechanics. The cushion or mat upon which the trunk descends in unloading was recently adopted by the Cumberland Valley railroad, and that company reports that it has proved very effective. The picture shows it in use at one of their stations.

CUSHION BAGGAGE PROTECTOR.

The cushion is composed of four strips of hard wood to which are nailed twenty-four pieces of scrap air brake hose. The hose inserts are held in place by one and one-half inch cleat nails, driven through the strips of wood and clinched to the hose by means of an iron rod inserted while the nails are being driven. The cushions are twenty-two and a quarter inches wide and four feet four inches long.

NICKEL PLATING IRON.

Method of Depositing a Coating of Silver or Nickel by Friction.

The following methods of plating iron with nickel and silver appeared in a recent issue of a German paper: In nickel plating iron a thin coating of copper is first produced on it by rubbing on a solution of twenty parts sulphate of copper, five parts sulphuric acid and 100 parts of water. After the copperplate has been formed rub over it with a rag, a solution of three parts tin, six parts nickel and one part iron in 100 parts of hydrochloric acid and three parts of ammoniac acid. If finally the object is rubbed with a rag that has been dipped in finely powdered zinc a nickel deposit will be formed on the copper. The thickness of the deposit of nickel to be increased by repeating the two last operations.

According to a recent patent, a silver coating can be produced by dissolving freshly precipitated chloride of silver in a solution of hyposulphite of soda, 1:2 parts to ten parts of water, and adding to this solution 180 parts spirits of ani ammoniac and then stirring for 800 parts of powdered chalk. This mixture is applied and rubbed until it dries on the object being plated, and the result is a brilliant deposit of pure silver.

Various Uses of Quartz.

Quartz occurs in many different forms, such as sand, tripoli sandstone and quartzite. In some forms, such as rose and smoky quartz and amethyste quartz, it has a gem value. The figures on quartz production issued by the United States geological survey deal only with massive crystalline quartz, with flint and with quartzite that is used for other than building or paving purposes. These grades of quartz are used in the manufacture of pottery, paints and scouring soap and as wood filler. Considerable quantities of ground quartz are used in the manufacture of paint, in some cases as much as one-third of the total pigment consisting of this material. Quartz crushed and graded to various sizes is used in the manufacture of sandpaper and belts, as a scouring agent with sand blast apparatus, etc. Blocks of massive quartz are used for fire use and in the chemical industry and as a flux in copper smelting. Ground quartz is also used in filters and in tooth powders and by dentists as a detergent.

Moth Larvae Poisonous.

The human skin is pierced by hairs of larvae of the precautionary moth, experiments that sometimes years over Europe in great numbers, and painful swelling, itching, and great irritation result. A Belgian investigator, C. Pittles, has found that the effects are not merely mechanical, but are due to chemical poisoning. On making the hairs in ether they lost their irritant properties, but the unpleasant symptoms were caused by the substance dissolved out. This substance, of which 0.38 per cent was extracted, has the chemical and physiological properties of cantharidin, the poisonous principle of cantharides.

Where asbestos and some other materials are utilized for gaskets they are apt to stick to the metal and upon overhauling must be scraped off. This means making new members and time lost if time and a source of expense to the owner. A light St say be made by rubbing the packing and metal parts with dry graphite. This is not affected by heat and will allow the gaskets to be removed as a whole.

SAFETY ON THE RAIL.

New Electric Train Stopping Device Operates Automatically.

An electrical device for preventing railroad accidents, which comprises a system of railroad call signals and an automatic train stop, is being considered by several eastern railroads. It has been tested successfully on a number of railroads over New York and has the indorsement of the interstate commerce commission. The inventor, Frederick Lacroix of Brooklyn, has spent nearly ten years in completing the device, and it is said by persons who have watched the experiments made with it that if the Lackawanna railroad had been equipped with the system the recent accident would have been avoided.

The section of the road to be protected by the system is divided into blocks, each of which has the usual form of electric track circuit. Near the entrance to each block are short contact rails, placed in such a way that each train in passing will have its engine circuit mechanically broken by the engagement of the locomotive contact shoe with the contact shoe of the roadway.

Mounted in the engine is an incandescent lamp, which is lighted while the current from the rails is normal. The same current which lights the lamp energizes a magnet which holds a lever capable of keeping the valve connection to the air brake closed.

When an engine so equipped runs into a block in which there is a train or open switch or signal set to danger the field circuit the current in the armature coil which supports the magnet something below is broken and the light is extinguished and the valve opened. This operation permits the air in the brake cylinder to escape into the atmosphere, blows a whistle and applies the train brakes. The train is thereby stopped short.

Artificial Diamonds.

The minute artificial diamonds of Moissan were produced by causing the carbon of molten iron to crystallize out under great pressure. A Scotch scientist, Dr. W. von Bolton, now uses coal gas or other gaseous carbon compound and on decomposing it by the action of mercury vapor obtains carbon both in the amorphous form and as diamond dust. By introducing a diamond chip as a nucleus or mother crystal it is expected a diamond growth of appreciable size can be brought about. In the experiment made the mercury was supplied by an electric magnet, which was placed in a long testing tube under a coating of water glass solution and amorphous diamond dust and the tube was heated at 100 degrees C., while a slow current of coal gas was passed through for one month.

The brilliant crystals formed, too small for analysis, burned in oxygen like diamonds.

Early Foundry Practice.

In the earliest foundry practice, either the Asiatic or Mediterranean, were made from mixtures containing no artificial beads. A sand was chosen which would be equivalent to the grains together when dry, and if this showed a tendency to stick to the casting under scrubbing, or to refractory cocous material was added to the mixture, causing it to fall to pieces next to the casting more easily and knock out better. It is probable that the first artificial core binders used were rye flour and wheat flour and peas, and there are also records of the use of sour beer.

Re-enforced Bull Horns.

Because the ordinary bulls used on steamboats horns have invariably been a source of trouble and annoyance to the motorist and because the various mechanical horns are making such a remarkable progress a French boatmaker has brought out a re-enforced bull horn the ordinary road horn, which has several unusual features. Instead of being smooth and slippery, the new horn is ribbed horizontally and vertically, affording a good grip to the fingers and strengthening it to such an extent that it will outlast three ordinary bulbs.

Motor Railway Engine.

Mr. Hallock, on whom Colonel designs the majority of high power modern oil engines have been built, has been working for some years on a high speed locomotive for railway use and has now built in Berlin an engine of 1,200 horsepower which has been designed for passenger traffic. The engine weighs eighty-five tons and has two sets of Diesel engines working at right angles to each other. A small auxiliary oil engine is used for compressing the air which, after being cooled, is mixed with the oil and exploded in the cylinders.

Nature's Protective Colors.

The caterpillar of the clothes moth has been pointed out as the most remarkable example of mimicry in nature by Professor Marx Wheeler. They are dull in appearance when first hatched; then it looks like a bird, and on being alarmed it shows the head and tail close resemblance to a spider. Black and white or black and yellow are nature's favorite simulants. Black and yellow are warning colors of snakes and wasps and of caterpillars and butterflies that likely do not eat. Other creatures simulate the colors for protection, the black and white of the young cuckoo frightening away rats.

APPRECIATIONS.

THE BATTLE OF ARMAGEDDON.

Ogilvie, Sept. 12.

The opposition who swarmed about the new Harliman theater at Columbus D. on the 9th, with slips informing the entering public of the perniciousness of Pastor Russell's teachings, were piling soil on their own grave in the eyes of all sensible people, while their loud-mouthed harangue savored more of insanity than the wholesome speech of the true adviser. In fact so struck the public upon receipt of said slips in the words of a bystander: "I got a mind of my own to hear and judge what I think." At this has ever been the sorry stuff given who oppose the true light, and "they shall appear to your glory," saith the Scriptures. After the lecture the comments of the large audience as they filed out was self-evident of the high appreciation of the speaker and "the wonderful words of life" they had heard. Many progressive party we are marching on to Zion with a banner blazoned with the golden letters of Present Truth and Present Duty, the hills of selfishness and mighty wrong. Indeed, the battle of Armageddon is near at hand, and the flanks of civilization tremble before the approaching King of kings, whose "eyes are as a flame of fire" and "out of his mouth goeth a sharp sword." Arise let us go forth.

THE PILGRIM.

The way is dark my Father; cloud on cloud is gathering
O'er my head, and loud the thunders roll above me.
See! I shall like one bewildered;
Father take my hand,
And through the gloom lead safely home.

Thy child.

The Father.

The way is dark my child, but leads to light;
I would not have thee always walk by sight;
My dealings now thou canst not understand:
I mould it as but I will take thy hand,
And through the cloud, lead safely home

My child.

The Pilgrim.

The day goes fast, My Father! and the night is coming;
Darkly down; My Faithless sight sees shadows;
Fears, a special hand encompass me;
Oh Father; take my hand, and from the night lead me to light.

Thy child.

The Father.

The day goes fast my child; but is the night
Darker to thee than day? In me is light
Keep close to me, and every spectral hand of fear
Shall vanish; I will take thy hand,
And through the night, lead up to light.

My child.

The Father.

The way is long my Father; and my soul longs
For the rest and quiet of the soul;
While yet I journey through this land of strife,
Keep me from wandering; Father take me by the hand
Quickly and straight lead up to Heaven's gate.

Thy child.

The Pilgrim.

The way is long my child, but it shall be not too long;
Longer than is best for thee and thou should faint.
At last when thou shall stand close to the gate,

How I did take thy hand and quick and straight,
Did lead to heaven's gate.

My child

Pilgrim.

The path is rough, My Father! Many a thorn
Has pierced me, and my weary feet all torn and Bleeding mark the way; yet thy command bids me press
Forward! Father take my hand, lead safe and Lead me, lead up to rest,

Thy child.

Father.

The path is rough, my child! but oh how
Sweet will be the rest to weary pilgrims rest,
When thou shalt reach the borders of that land,
To which I lead thee as I take thy hand,
And safe and blest, with me shalt rest

My child

The Pilgrim.

The throne is great, my Father!
Many a doubt,
And fear, and danger, compass me about, and Foes oppress me sore; I cannot go or stand alone
Oh Father! take my hand, and through the throng,
Lead safe along.

My child.

The Father.

The throng is great my child, but at thy side thy Father walks; then be not terrified.
For I am with
Thee; I will thy foes command to let thee freely pass
I will take thy hand, and through the throng,
Lead safe along.

My child.

The Pilgrim.

The cross is heavy Father; I have borne so Long and still do bear it; let my worn and Fainting spirit rise to that blest land,
Where crowns are given, Father take my hand,
And reaching down lead safely home,

Thy child.

The Father.

The cross is heavy child; yet there is One who Bore a heavier for thee. "My Lord"
"My well beloved"
With Him, bear thine and stand with Him
At last, and from my hand, the cross laid Down, receive thy crown.

My child.

LAODICEA.

(Justice for the People.)

Laodicea we hail thy unfolding;
Faith is increased and we sing and rejoice;
Signs of the times are increased, and upholding
Prophecy told by the Patmian voice.

Witness the nominal church as prefdicted,
Nothing it needs and with golds "its increased"
Out of His mouth has been spewed and evicted;
Rich, is the spirit its message has ceased.

Mark in the last days the wealth heaped and lauded,
Mark there's no peace in the Earth but a sword,
Mark that the cries of the reapers defrauded
Reaches the hearing of sabaoth's Lord.

Loud swells, for justice, the cries of the daily,
Hear how the masses the Crowns close dune,
Mark how the travailing groaning creation
Waiteth in pain for Jehovah, its sone.

Laodicea we hail thee with gladness
Thank we our God for the Prophet's sure word
That from the north shall tears dying and sadness
Vanish o'er God shall eascabard his sword.

We have also a more sure word of prophecy—2nd Peter 1: 19.

The prophecies I have heard in thoughts on are in Revelations 3: 14 17 and James 5: 1-4. John shows that during the period in which the Nominal Church is cast off there shall be a great movement for justice for the people. Laodicea means that

James shows the heaping of riches in the days.

Surely these prophecies are being fulfilled today before our very eyes.

TEACHING BY PARABLES ONLY.

Matthew xiii. 34, 35—Acts. 29.

"The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit and they are life"—John vi. 63.

BIBLE students and Bible scholars, the Pastor's sermons are proposed to surprise that the Great Teacher spoke always to the people in symbolic language. Mark me, the meaning of which they rarely understood. Another Scripture informs us that the reason why they did not the invitation was not intended for the multitudes, but merely for the consecrated.

Those who accepted the Lord as the Savior, and took upon themselves the required vow of faithfulness in walking in His foot steps unto death, were granted special enlightenment. "To you it is given to know the mysteries of the Kingdom of Heaven, but to others they are spoken in parables, that they seeing, might not see and understand."

"The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit and life." (John vi. 63)

The entire matter is clarified when we recognize the difference between the salvation of the world to be by man alone, giving Messiah's reign of a thousand years, and the salvation provided for the Elect during the Age.

The Apostles Jesus' Mouthpieces.

It has been claimed that the disciples of Jesus, only, are to be glorified from the writings of the Apostles than from the sayings of Jesus. This is considerable truth in this claim, and the reason is manifest. Jesus' words were addressed mainly to the multitudes, to whom He addressed the disciples He could not dilate, even with them deep, spiritual truths, because they had not been begotten of the Holy Spirit, and therefore could not understand spiritual things (John 14: 17). "I have many things to tell you, but ye cannot bear them now."

"After Ye Were Illuminated."

St. Paul and other writers of the Epistles, saying, "After ye were illuminated, ye endured a great fight of afflictions" (Hebrews 10: 32). This illumination received was the beginning of the Holy Spirit.—1 Cor. ii. 12.

Jesus was the anointed One of the masters of the Body of Christ throughout this Age. Each one presenting his spirit being sanctified, was accepted by the great Advocate, and presented as a part of His own Offering; then by the Holy Spirit begotten of the Holy Spirit to be a New Creature in Christ.

It is to these New Creatures that the statement is made "All things are yours, for ye are Christ's, and Christ is God's." To these the Bible has explained, "He will show you things to come." These are to be guided into all Truth as it becomes due. For these the Word of God is a Storehouse, from which "things both new and old" are produced under the Spirit's guidance as they become due in due season."

Even these must make progress in their appreciation of spiritual things. The Apostle urges such: "As new born babes desire the sincere milk of the Word, that ye might grow thereby."

Now our text: "The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit and they are life." Here our Lord endeavored to impress His dear disciples with the thought that the spiritual import of His words too literally, but look for the deeper meaning. And, they were to remember that the Spirit was to get that deep meaning until after the Master's ascension; as He said: "It is expedient for you that I go away for if I go not away the Holy Spirit will not come unto you; but if I go away I will send Him unto you."

The Master's words were "words of life" to that they relieved the great blessings of the Kingdom which He was to may have everlasting life and become His joint-heirs.

Although the Apostles explain the pathway of life, the vine Plan in great detail, more than the Jews, yet in His sayings we find the very essence of the Gospel. Nowhere are the terms of discipleship more fully laid down than in Jesus words, because the disciples could understand the meaning of self denial, cross bearing, and walking in His steps, even if they could not understand the philosophy of ransom, sacrification, election and Divine foreknowledge.

"This is a hard saying"

From Jesus' words more clearly than from any others we learn the conditions of the "water of life," and how it is now in His followers a "spring" of truth, grace and everlasting life. Nowhere else do we more clearly get the statement that the Father hath life in Himself, and hath granted unto the Son life in Himself, and that He might share this life with His disciples. Thus, as St. Paul says, the words of this salvation began to be spoken by our Lord. He brought life and immortality to light, both the general reward of everlasting life to be given to the world, and the special reward to be granted to the Church.

EVERYBODY'S BIBLE QUESTION BOX

YOUR BIBLE QUESTIONS ANSWERED BY MAIL. ADDRESS COLUMN, OR BY MAIL, AT HEART TO THE EDITOR OF THIS JOURNAL.

Q.—Kindly publish the "Golden Rule," and state where it is found in the Bible, and, also, tellat was its origin. Do you not think that if we had "Golden Rule" courts, the millennium would be established in the earth? (Judge H. A. S.)

Answer.—The "Golden Rule" is found in the seventh chapter of the Gospel of Matthew, the twelfth verse—"Therefore, all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them: for this is the Law and the Prophets." This is a part of the wonderful sermon on the mount, and is an outlinened statement of the "Law and the Prophets." It, therefore, is of Divine origin, as the Law had been given to Moses by God the Creator. God and all the holy Prophets "spake as they were moved by the holy spirit—the power of God." (Exodus xxi. 6; Num. i. 21.) It is not true that Confucius, the great Chinese philosopher, was the author of the Golden Rule. He stated the matter in its negative form—"Do not do to others what you would not wish them to do to you." The world needs positive rule to do good, while the other is a negative rule to abstain from doing evil. By comparison one may be called the "Golden Rule" while the other may be considered as the "Brazen Rule." The Golden Rule is to be enforced during the Millennium, when all of the conditions in the earth will make for righteousness.

Q.—What is meant by the Scriptural expression, "Lay up for yourselves treasure in heaven"? Is there a place for the promulgation of the Gospel "treasure in Heaven"? (G. F. M.)

Answer.—There are different kinds of "treasures" upon the earth. The expression would, therefore, represent that upon which the supreme desires or affections were centered. The thought conveyed in the Master's saying (Matthew vi. 19) is that the Christian should center all of his affections upon the heavenly things and not upon the things of the earth. "For where your treasure is, there will your heart inflictions be also" (verse 21). "It is like unto a merchantman seeking goodly pearls: who, when he had found one pearl of great price, went and sold all that he had, and bought it." (Matthew xiii, 45, 46). This implies that the consecrated follower of Christ would be willing to sacrifice all earthly things in order to gain the heavenly prize. Whatever he may have considered valuable alone seems before he became a Christian, he now esteems as loss and dross in comparison with the glory, honor and immortality of the heavenly Kingdom. He that esteems houses or lands, family or friends, wealth or fame, "yea, and his own life also," more than the heavenly treasures, is not worthy of them and will never receive them.

Q.—How can there be a physical life on this earth literally as stated in the Bible and distinctly states that the length of a man's days shall be a hundred and twenty years? (Truthseeker).

Answer.—There is no Scripture to the effect that the length of a man's life should be limited to a hundred and twenty years. It has been commonly supposed that the expression found in Genesis vi. 3, signified this, but a careful consideration of the context, together with the fact that quite a few individuals lived to be over a hundred attained to a much more advanced age, should convince one that the passage had some other significance. Shem lived 600 years, Arphaxad 438, Salah 433, Eber 464, etc., etc., stronmin chapter xi which this statement was made. The Lord's words "My spirit shall not always strive with man, for that he also is flesh: yet his days shall be an hundred and twenty years," has application to the time before the flood and not since then. It is true to say that the Lord had appointed or set aside a hundred and twenty years in which His power or spirit would contend with the conditions of wickedness then prevailing in the earth, and then He would no longer "strive" with the evil that was within man but would destroy the race, with the exception of Noah and his household.

Q.—For several months I have been praying for a certain thing, and I long for with all my heart. If I know positively that my request was not to be granted, I would direct my thoughts elsewhere. How long ought one to continue praying for a particular object? (M. W.)

Answer.—The Apostle Paul prayed three times that he might be delivered from a "thorn in the flesh" (II Corinthians xii. 8) and the Lord answered his prayer—he did not grant it. He afterwards relized that his prayer had been answered in a way contrary to his desires and all other considerations that the Divine will should be accomplished and not your own. Maintaining this attitude you should continue to pray for the thing desired until your petition is granted, or if it is revealed to you that you have asked amiss. If you find that you have been asking for something contrary to the Lord's will, you will, like the Apostle, rejoice that your petition was not granted. Keep in mind the Lord's promise of the importunate widow (Luke xviii. 1-8) and have the lesson before you "that men ought always to pray and not to faint."

OUR OLD COUNTRY CORRESPONDENCE.

British Miners Prepare Schedule of Complaints -- Trade Unions Generally Warned Against Proposed Anti-union Bill Backed by Conservatives--Big Building Trades Amalgamation Scheme--More Wage Increases--International Labor Law Convention Gets Busy.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

LONDON, Sept. 27.—At the conference of the British Miners' Federation which commences at Swansea on October 1 resolutions affecting practically all recent legislation are down for discussion. The Executive Committee proposes a resolution urging the Federation to bring surface workers under the direct operation of the Minimum Wage and Eight Hour Acts, and the Northumberland delegates will move that the Federation take steps to secure for all surface workers a minimum wage of not less than $1.25 per day.

The following resolution will be moved by Bristol delegates: "We submit that the Minimum Wage Act is meaningless and ineffective for the betterment of the miners in so far as it fails in a number of districts to give an equality of wage for similar class of employment, and utterly fails to establish the right of a large number of miners to obtain for themselves and families a subsistence wage, and we recommend that the Executive Committee be instructed to ask the Labor party to bring in a bill with a view of establishing uniformity of wages consistent with the trade of employment."

The Midlands district has forwarded a resolution urging the National Federation to press at once for an all round wage increase of 20 per cent on present rates. Bristol also proposes to alter the rule relating to Parliamentary candidates which at present restricts miners' candidates to constituencies in their own districts so that any district shall have the right to nominate any member of the Federation as a candidate for any constituency in the country.

Amendments of the Insurance Act and the Workmen's Compensation Act are to be suggested. The Northumberland Federation ask that miners whose age or infirmity may debar them from working under the Minimum Wage Act be insured by means of a special fund formed by a special tax on profits derived from the coal mining industry. The Scottish Federation propose that full workmen's compensation should be paid to parents in cases of fatal accidents, even if the parent is not wholly dependent on the deceased; and the Midland Federation desire the act amended so that the State becomes responsible for workmen's compensation.

Northumberland and Durham, which are dissatisfied with the result of the Eight Hours Act, urge the National Federation to introduce legislation abolishing the system in those counties. Scotland and Durham demand a five days' working week for all miners in the country. Among other matters down for discussion is the question of terminating all agreements at one uniform time throughout the country.

The chairman of the Parliamentary Committee of the Trades Union Congress stated on September 5 that the committee is asking the Parliamentary Trades to be on their guard so that the bill standing in the name of Lord Robert Cecil shall not pass the British House of Commons. The real object of the bill is to restore the legal right of companies and employers generally to seize Trade Union funds for damage done by individuals acting without the authority or in opposition to the instructions of the Trade Unions executive. We, therefore, strongly condemn the bill as it deprives Trade Unions of the rights and immunities they now have under the 1906 Act, and call upon the Trade Unionists in all constituencies to request their members in Parliament to vote against the bill when it comes before Parliament."

One of the busiest men in the movement for linking up kindred industries into one consolidated union is J. V. Wilks, of the Operative Bricklayers' Society. During the recent annual British Trades Union Congress he addressed mass meetings of workers. Everywhere I have found that the building trades rank and file in all sections are voting practically solid in favor of amalgamation.

"We have been fully alive to the importance of the educational side," he continued. "We have drawn up a syllabus of lectures in which the whole case of consolidation is outlined and comparisons made with the advantages that have accrued to the capitalist class through cooperation. One special point is emphasized, namely, that all the workers in one industry should be in one union and that all the industrial unions should be united in one organization. The immediate objects of the scheme would be to secure a reduction of hours."

The minimum wage of $6.25 a week for all able-bodied men will be put forth rule in the municipal service in Glasgow. It is now many years since the municipality of Glasgow acknowledged the principle of a minimum wage, the rate then introduced being $5.35. Since that time improvements have brought the wage up to an average minimum of about $6.15 so that the proposal for a minimum of $6.25 now carried means an advance of about 50 cents weekly to many of the lowest paid workmen. To give effect to the proposal an additional expenditure of $42,500 will be involved.

The position in Manchester is better, from the workers' point of view, than it will be in Glasgow even when the minimum weekly wage is raised to $6.25. Seven years ago the Manchester City Council raised the minimum wage to $6.25. Early in the present year there was an agitation for an increase of 50 cents a week in

DYNAMITE CASES NOW ON TRIAL.

INDIANAPOLIS Oct. 1.—When a small, squat man with well rounded body and little pig-like eyes today was led by two deputy marshals before Judge Anderson in the United States District Court, the half a hundred defendants in the dynamite cases, ranged in two long rows across the court room, eyed him with curious interest more than with suspicion.

It was Ortie McManigal, the "informer," the man who brought about the downfall of the McNamaras and the indictment of structural iron workers in every part of the country, and it was the first time that many of his victims had seen the man.

Gray-haired, elderly women, apprehensive young women and laughing, chattering children made up the bulk of the limited audience that the small court room would allow, when the trial opened. They were the mothers, wives and little ones of some of the defendants.

R. H. Houlihan of Chicago and many others of the 51 accused men were accompanied to Indianapolis by their entire families.

When Marshal Schmidt opened court at 9:30, 50 defendants were present. The only man missing was Daniel J. Brophy, confined in a Brooklyn hospital with a broken leg. It was said that his absence would not interfere with the trial as his appearance could be entered by counsel.

It was planned by Judge Anderson in first arraign McManigal and Eugene A. Clancy and Orla A. Tvietmoe, of San Francisco, who had not before had opportunity to plead.

The selection of the jury was then to begin, unless some delay tactics were interposed and up to the opening of the court both the defense and the government refused to admit that any delay moves were contemplated.

BUSINESS ON THE BOOM.

PERHAPS the most striking sign of the prosperity that has taken hold of the country is at present the earnings of the railroads. That the influence of better times is extending everywhere is attested very strongly by the most recent reports. And although a few months ago one would have hesitated to predict that business would soon surpass the volume of even the biggest of past "booms," there are not a few who are pointing out this probability now. Or, as one of the most conservative authorities in the country says, "if the few railroad reports for August which have been published are of all a criterion of what transportation results throughout the United States last month were, then the reports which are to be published will show the establishment of many high records for both gross and net earnings. Lehigh Valley's gross transportation receipts in August were $476,000 ahead of the corresponding month last year, that gain equaling 17 per cent. Net earnings rose $235,000, or 22 per cent. The Kansas City Southern traffic of gain was even greater—18 per cent for gross and 45 per cent for net. Both these roads earned more than in any previous August in their entire history. The Atchison, a very important coal reports an increase of $761,800 in gross earnings for August, compared with the gain of $958,000 reported a month ago for July. August net shows an increase of $407,000, compared with July's gain of only $449,000."

A few months ago the railroads answered to their employes that wage raises were out of the question because expenses were increasing as fast as receipts. If the answer was true then, it is at least true no longer. Net earnings are shown by the latest reports to be increasing in so marked a manner that the roads will have great trouble resisting the wage demands of their employees much longer.

Aside from railroad earnings, an unmistakable index of the prevailing business activity is found in the weekly reports of bank exchanges throughout the country. The exchanges for the past week show uniform increases in all sections. And the unanimous testimony is that there is a healthy improvement which is guaranteed to all persons accused of crime under our laws.

GEN. GEORGE ANDREWS, THE NEW ADJUTANT GENERAL.

ON the retirement of General W. P. Hall from active service President Taft named as adjutant general of the army Colonel George Andrews, who has been assistant adjutant general for sixteen years. The appointment carries with it the rank of brigadier general. The last regular appointee was General Ainsworth, who resigned after a controversy with the secretary of war. The adjutant general's office conducts the recruiting service and is the repository for the records of the war department which relate to the personnel of the military establishment and to the military history of every commissioned officer and soldier of the regular and volunteer service of the United States. General Andrews served in Cuba during two yellow fever epidemics. He is a member of the class of 1876 at West Point.

SENTENCE SUSPENDED.

Kttor and Giovannitti have been kept in prison an unreasonably long time, denied the trial which the constitution guarantees them. And the injustice of such treatment is aggravated by the circumstances of the case, all of which combine to form a very strong doubt in unprejudiced minds whether these two men could possibly have committed the crime with which they are charged. Every circumstance indicates that it was committed by somebody else. Trial may overcome this presumption of their innocence. But it is none the less a reason why the constitutional requirement of speedy trial for the accused should have been complied with more literally and strictly than ordinarily in this particular case.

Only the iniquitous and corrupt control that the rich millowners have over the machinery of justice can explain the long delay in bringing the two men to trial. A symphony strike, under all the circumstances, was to have been expected. Telegrams from Lawrence (at this writing) make it seem that the strike is condemned by the officials of the Industrial Workers of the World. It is likely to prove troublesome nevertheless; and it is worth repeating the statement that it is directly traceable to the wrongful acts of the mill-owners and their tools and sympathizers.

UNIONS PAY DIVIDENDS.

BY reducing the report of Secretary Frank Duffy to the convention of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters, now in session in Washington, D. C., to definite accomplishments, one obtains a revelation. While it is impossible to reach an absolutely accurate result, yet the report is not difficult of approximation. Nearly all of the local unions have reported an increase in wages and shortening of hours wherever this result has been attained. Trade movements of the carpenters have been general, and in amplifying the report it is found that in a large number of cities there has been an average increase in the daily wage, taking into consideration the shortening of hours without reduction in pay, of 38.4 cents. On an approximated membership of 200,000 this yields an advance in wages of $76,800 per day. Computed on 305 working days in the year, this increase yields $23,631,200 as a record for one year. When it is taken into consideration that the total sum expended by the Brotherhood in the year under consideration was only $701,166.87, it is revealed that the United Brotherhood of Carpenters is paying a dividend to its members unparalleled by any corporate body engaged in the mercantile or any other business in the entire world. It is an argument in favor of the organization of workmen that cannot be controverted.

THE INCREASE OF SUICIDE

ACCORDING to the Journal of the American Medical Association suicide in this country is increasing alarmingly. Our suicide rate is now above 16 in 100,000 of population, and last year there were some 15,000 suicides in the United States. In our cities during the last twenty years the suicide rate has risen from somewhat more than 12 in 100,000 of population to more than 20 in 100,000. The larger cities of the country, those above 250,000 in population, used to hold the unenviable distinction of a much higher suicide rate than the smaller cities, but in seventy-nine cities having less than 250,000 population each the suicide rate was last year equal to or above that of the twenty-one larger cities.

Students seeking to account for the growing tendency toward self destruction lay stress on the constantly increasing intensity of the struggle for existence. As the scale of living rises and things once considered luxuries come to be looked upon by the multitude as necessaries, the tax on the average man's strength and endurance gets burdensome. One writer well says: "The overstrained life, the haste to make money at any cost, so manifestly full of sore disappointment, has now spread beyond the more crowded centers of population and is sapping contentment with modest means and conditions of life that used to characterize the smaller towns. Feverish solicitude about everything has in many instances replaced calmer striving and its satisfactions. The remedy lies so deep that it is not likely to be found without much sad experience. What is needed by the Twentieth century is a revaluation of the things of life—greater emphasis on the lasting satisfaction and a less emphasis on the things that are purely material."

LABOR'S INTERESTS AT NATIONAL CAPITAL.

Order of Court Indicates that Hearings On the Latest Appeal in the Contempt Case Will Not Begin Until After January 1 --- Retirement of President Huber of the Carpenters' Brotherhood -- Labor Bureau Shows Prices Almost Unprecedentedly High.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—Owing to the volume of the record in their contempt proceedings against President Gompers, Vice President Mitchell and Frank Morrison, Chief Justice Claborn, of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, has granted an extension of time in which to present to the Court of Appeals the record on appeal from the late contempt decision of Justice Wright. It will be remembered that at the conclusion of the recent contempt case the federation officials were subjected to a resposition of the former sentences assessed by Justice Wright. The bill of exceptions taken by the federation officials to the rulings of Justice Wright during the hearing of the case comprise a voluminous document. It is expected that the corrected bill will be presented to Justice Wright for signature some time in October. The extension of time granted does not expire until November 1. The case, therefore, will not be docketed, in all probability, in the Appellate Court until near the expiration of the extension. In the ordinary course, hearing will not likely take place on the appeal until the early part of next year.

William D. Huber, for thirteen years president of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters, declined to enter the race again for the presidency. During the incumbency of Mr. Huber the organization has grown from a struggling to a giant in the labor world. In appreciation of the service which Mr. Huber has rendered as president of the organization, the convention presented to him in recognition of his long and faithful service the sum of $2,500.

A bulletin just issued by the United States Bureau of Labor presents for each of thirty-nine of the most important industrial cities in the various sections of the United States the retail prices of the principal articles of food, the weight of principal loaves of baker's bread, the retail prices of anthracite and bituminous coal for household use, and the net price of gas for household use. The reports summarizes data previously published, and furnishes a comparison of the retail prices of food from 1890 to June, 1912, and prices of coal and gas from 1907 to June, 1912. The cities included in this report are important industrial cities, representing thirteen States. The grade of articles of food quoted in that sold in each city to stores patronized largely by families of American, English, Irish, German and Scandinavian wage-earners. It is impossible to give in detail the increased cost of food in the News Letter, owing to the lack of space, which is obvious. However, it is noted that sirloin steak increased in price from 1890 to 1911 23.9 per cent; round steak, 26.4; rib roast, 26.4; pork chops, 76.5; smoked bacon, 30.4; smoked ham, 26.6; pure lard, 47.5; hens, 47.5; white flour, 16.1; cornmeal, 45.3; strictly fresh eggs, 49.8; creamery butter, 33.4; Irish potatoes, 44; fresh milk, 21.2 per cent. The comparison between the food prices of 1911 and those of 1912 show a still further increase.

President John Martin A. Knapp, of the Commerce Court, and Dr. Charles P. Neill, Commissioner of Labor, mediators under the Erdman act, in an effort to adjust the controversy over the wages between the Southern Railway and other roads operating in the South and their trainmen and conductors, are in conference with both sides to the controversy. No decision has been arrived at, and it is quite probable that none will be for some little time to come.

A party of 125 men of Philadelphia went to Johnstown, Pa., during August to accept employment in a steel mill. Of the number who went all but 29 have returned, the majority having refused to work under conditions as they found them in Johnstown. A member of the party says that were promised rations free and board, but when they were ready to leave Philadelphia a guard was placed on the train to see that none of them left. After working about three weeks they demanded their money and were told that none was coming to them, which resulted in the majority refusing to work any longer. The campaign being conducted by the American Federation of Labor in the effort to organize the steel mills is having the effect of injecting considerable more independence into the workmen employed by these mills than previously. Men are exceedingly scarce, and the Steel Trust is having much difficulty in securing employes to remain any considerable length of time.

CANADA'S LABOR CONGRESS.

GUELPH, Canada, Oct. 1.—The report of the secretary-treasurer at the recent meeting of the Dominion Trades and Labor Congress showed receipts during the last year of $15,659.79, and expenditures of $10,219.92, the membership paying per capita tax being 66,128, in addition to which there are two provincial federations of labor and forty-four trades and labor councils. During the last year four of the latter were chartered, as well as seven federal unions, and the membership increased 8,859. A resolution was passed by the Congress condemning the Canadian court, providing it turns out in the future that judicial decisions under the act are not to be rendered by a judge in the Province of Nova Scotia, determining that the members of such bench are not subject to the act. President Watters has had no opposition for re-election. F. M. Draper was re-elected secretary-treasurer. John Bruce, of Toronto, was elected fraternal delegate to the next convention of the American Federation of Labor, and P. M. Draper was elected fraternal delegate to the British Trade Union Congress. Montreal secured the meeting of the congress for next year. During the meeting of the congress "the manifestation of the socialist party of Canada," says the Toronto Lance, "was distinctly in the hall, but as the pamphlets did not bear the union label the convention unanimously voted to throw it out." The congress voted to give the president of the congress a salary of $1,500 a year, exclusive of traveling expenses. The convention, as a whole, was successful, with a good delegate attendance.

The boot and shoe workers chartered five new unions during the month of June, one of them at Amperes, Nova Scotia and another at St. Johns, Newfoundland.

The organizations of labor are steadily increasing their membership in Spain, and increases in wages in all departments of industry are steadily being obtained as a result.

Pastor Russell's Sermon

SAVED BY FAITH, NOT BY WORKS.

God's Arrangement for the Church's Redemption—Pastor Russell at Halifax—Necessity for Faith—How It Is of God and How We Co-operate in Our Own Faith Development—How It May Be Developed or Retarded by God's People—During the Coming Reign of the Messiah Works Will Be the Basis of God's Judgment.

HALIFAX, N. S., Sept. 29.—Pastor Russell is here to address a Convention of Bible Students assembled from New England and the Provinces. We report one of his discourses from the text, "By grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God."—Eph. 2: 8. He said in part:—

The relationship between faith and works in the matter of the Church's salvation has been a question of controversy for centuries. However, this, like other subjects once misunderstood, yields to the clearer light of our day. Now we perceive the importance of both faith and works and the relationship they bear to each other. Faith is the all-important factor in God's sight, because in our fallen condition we cannot do perfect works and because God cannot consistently accept and reward any but perfect works.

God's arrangements for us, therefore, in Christ, is that He will judge us, not according to our works, but according to our faith. "Nevertheless, good works are recognized as a demonstration of our faith. So sure is an we have the proper faith in God and His promises it will manifest itself in works, even though we cannot do perfectly.

So St. James points out that Abraham was not justified without works, but was required to demonstrate his faith by his works, even though they were not perfect works and could not have justified him.

AGE OF FAITH—AGE OF WORKS.

If we call this Gospel Age the Age of faith, none should misunderstand us to mean that works are now wholly ignored, but rather that works take the secondary place. Likewise, when we say that the coming Age of the Messianic Kingdom will be an Age of works none should understand us as meaning that faith will then be ignored. Works with them as with those of the Lord's judgment in dealing with the world. Thus we read that they shall be "judged every man according to his works." (Revelation 20: 12.) Judgment according to works, yet not without faith, may perhaps appear to some of our minds as being the more reasonable, the more just form of judgment. However, when we come to note the difference between the conditions of the trial of the Church of this Age and the future trial of the world during the Messianic reign, we can see readily the reason for the different basis of judgment.

THE PRESENT GRACE AGE.

In the present time the Lord is selecting from the world a special class to be the Bride of Christ, and He properly makes faith the basis of the decree in the Divine estimation faith in God is one of the grandest elements of character, the one most essential to such as will be entrusted with high positions and authority in the Kingdom. (2) Because the judgment according to faith meets the varying conditions of the present time as a judgment according to works would not do.

The Lord sat a law for such as will walk in the "narrow way," demonstrating that if they had perfect bodies as Jesus' body was perfect they would be perfect in works as well as in faith.

In the next Age the Divine plan will not be the selection of self-sacrificing ones for the Kingdom, but the blessing of humanity with an opportunity in return to the full perfection of human nature. They will be required merely to demonstrate their loya ty to God in the use of their lives faithfully in obedience to His Law. This reward for the sacrifices of this Age is to be glory, honor and immortality, the Divine nature and joint heirship with the Lord Jesus in His Kingdom. The reward for obedience to be given in the next Age will be human perfection in the image and likeness of God, with all the worldly inheritance originally given to Adam—lost through sin and redeemed by the merit of Christ's sacrifice. And since the objective points of the two Ages are different, so will be their methods and conditions.

We have already considered the conditions of the Church's trial; let us next notice how different will be the conditions of the world's trial, according to works, in the coming Age. The reign of Satan and sin now prevalent is to give way; Satan is to be bound for a thousands years that he may deceive the nations no more for that period. The darkness, ignorance, superstition and misunderstanding of God and His plan, etc., which have prevailed for the last six thousand years will pass away. Instead, "the Sun of Righteousness shall arise with healing in His beams." The darkness, yields to the clearer light of our day. Now we perceive the importance of both faith and works and the relationship they bear to each other. Faith is the all-important factor in God's sight, because in our fallen condition we cannot do perfect works and because God cannot consistently accept and reward any but perfect works.

God's arrangements for us, therefore, in Christ, is that He will judge us, not according to our works, but according to our faith. ### COME NOW TO OUR TEXT.

A glance at our text shows that it relates to the present Age and not to the period of Messiah's Kingdom. The Apostle is addressing those called to joint-heirship in the Kingdom, of whom he says in the context that "God in mercy hath quickened us with Christ and raised us up together to a heavenly station in Christ Jesus, that in the Ages to come we might show the exceeding riches of His grace in His kindness toward us through Christ Jesus." Without question these words apply to the Elect Church, and to no others; for only such are properly be applied to the nine-first world where opportunity for coming belongs to the next Age and will come to them from the Father, through the on, by the Church in glory.

Our text contains another statement which has been the cause of much dispute, namely, the one which declares that "we are saved by grace through faith, and that not of ourselves; it is the gift of God." It is easy to understand the forepart of this statement, that we are saved by grace, and easy also to understand the last part, namely, that we are not saved by works and that, therefore, none of us has any ground for boasting in our salvation. "By nature we were children of wrath, even as others." We were under the sentence of death and could not recover ourselves from that condition. Whatever, therefore, should be done for us to help us out of our condemnation and fallen condition would necessarily

"THAT NOT OF YOURSELVES."

How shall we understand the suggestion that the faith is not of ourselves but is the gift of God? Surely God does not exercise faith for us, and surely also He does not develop the faith in us by some miraculous power, for in either of these cases the saints would be merely machines, reacting as acted upon. This would neither develop our grace character, nor in any wise fit and prepare us for the glorious work to which we have been called. How is it God's gift?

There is one view of this statement which we believe clears it of all mystery and makes it entirely harmonious with Divine Justice and our responsibility. It is this:

Faith is possible only where there is a basis of knowledge; in proportion, therefore, as Divine providence grants a knowledge of Himself and of His great Plan, in that proportion is it possible for us to exercise faith in that Plan, and by our endeavors to demonstrate the strength and sincerity of our faith. While it is true that our knowledge depends in large measure upon our application in the study of the Plan, etc., which have prevailed for the last six thousand years will pass away. Instead, "the Sun of Righteousness shall arise with healing in His beams." The darkness of ignorance, superstition, etc., which at the present time covers the earth, and gross darkness the heathen, makes faith by the present time a very precious thing indeed which only comparatively few can or will exercise.

But, when the shadows and darkness shall flee away, when the True Light shall shine, when "the knowledge of the glory of the Lord shall fill the whole earth as the waters cover the great deep"—then faith will not be at its present premium; because it will then be very easy to exercise faith. Moreover, while perfect works are impossible now, because of our imperfections of the flesh, perfect works will gradually become possible to the world in the next Age, because as they progress in the Way and in obedience to the laws of that Kingdom they will gradually be recovering the perfection of the flesh, mental, moral and physical. And as they recover those powers correspondingly more and better works will be required each year, each century, of their experience.

Finally, before the glorious Epoch shall conclude—before Messiah shall turn over the Kingdom to Justice—all the willing and obedient will have come to full perfection and hence to full capacity for perfect works and God will demand them; they will therefore be the standard or test in the world's trial then. They shall be judged every man, according to his works." In both these Judgments we see Jealire and Mercy harmoniously working together for the interblessing of the race, the differences between the two operations being such merely as adapt them to the conditions of the individuals on trial.

"THAT NOT OF YOURSELVES."

St. Paul declares that the Gospel is hidden from some during this Age, namely, from the perishing ones whom Satan hath blinded and those sure y are the vast majority of the race. As Jesus declared to His Disciples, "Blessed are your eyes for they see and your ears for they hear." And thus it has been all down the Age for more than eighteen centuries. Only a few have been so highly favored by birth and environment, etc., as to be able to see and able to hear and appreciate the glorious invitation of the present time.

Furthermore, God's providence has been exercising apparently a discrimination in the sending of the Gospel message. It was not asked to all parts of the earth. Beginning with Israel in Palestine it moved northward and westward to Greece and so to Rome, Spain, Britain, Europe, and amongst the savage tribes of Europe, namely, to such as had "ears to hear" the Divine call to joint-heirship with Christ in the glorious Kingdom soon to be established. From Europe the Message, this knowledge, came to America; and now, within the last century in particular, it is reaching some of the many millions of India, China, Japan, Africa, etc., but still with the same limitations. It appears only to a comparatively few in any nation—"Be that hath an ear to hear, let him hear."

"NOT OF YOURSELVES."

Ah, yes, we can see a force in the Apostle's words, "not of yourselves." It is indeed for ourselves to exercise faith when the knowledge comes to us; yet faith being impossible without knowledge, we were dependent upon God for it. How thankful we should be, how appreciative! How sympathetic we should be toward those who have not been so highly favored with knowledge or whose condition has been less favorable to the cultivation of the hearing ear and of the understanding heart! Truly, wisdom is sleeping and selecting, testing and proving the members of the Church of Christ.

Another phase of the subject well worthy of our notice is that our faith is largely a matter of development; first the seed, then the blade, then the ear, then the ripe corn. When God gave us the first impulse toward a knowledge of Himself and of His purposes, that was the seed from which faith might germinate if it fell into a heart or mind that was good soil for it. And even those whose hearts are good soil for the Message of God's grace and the Kingdom invitation find that they greatly need a certain Divine supervision, watch care, in order to bring forth fruitage such as the Lord will be pleased to accept.

What would any of us be today without the grace of God assisting us in faith and in obedience? Surely the original faith would long since have withered and died. We need still say, By the grace of God we are saved, through faith, not of ourselves. It is the result of the knowledge granted and the Divine blessing poured upon us.

GROWING IN GRACE, ETC.

In full line with what we have considered in the Apostolic injunction that we must continue to grow in grace and in knowledge and in faith and in love, and in the exercise of our ability in obedience and good works. And this growth in grace, this growth in faith, signifies a continued and consequent growth in knowledge. For instance, the promises of the Bible contain the spiritual food upon which we as New Creatures must feed in order to grow up to the required likeness of Christ—in order to be fitted and prepared in character-and-faith development for a place in the Kingdom.

It should not surprise us, therefore, to find the Scriptures clearly teaching that the Bible contains nourishment exactly adapted to our requirements. St. Paul illustrates this matter by saying that in the beginning of our experiences we, as new born babes, should "desire the sincere milk of the Word that we might grow thereby"—grow in grace and in knowledge and faith and obedience. But he admonishes us also that we should not always continue to be babes, feeding upon the milk of the Word, but that by the use of it and the strength that is derived we should become strong in the Lord, become manly, attaining unto the full stature of manhood as members of the Body of Christ. And for the additional strength the Apostle tells us that we need more than the milk of the Word—we need the "strong meat" of God's word, of God's promises, that we may grow thereby. And again, in all this finding and using of the "meat in due season" we are indebted to God.

Not only has He provided meat in due season in the Holy Scriptures, "that the man of God may be thoroughly furnished" and able to "rightly divide the Word of Truth," but additionally He has granted help amongst the brethren, that we may build one another up in the faith, as we all come to the fu l stature in Christ.

How evident then it is that our salvation through faith is not a matter of an instantaneous injection into us, into us in some miraculous manner, but a gradual development, as we have seen; and how evident it is that in the development of faith we are to be co-workers together with God!

Let us, therefore, be very appreciative of the great privileges granted to us and use them well, that we should receive the grace of God in vain and miss the great Prize which has been offered to us and which we have accepted and which God will be faithful in give to those who faithfully use the blessings of His provision.

Wisconsin, Sept. 27.

Every one that takes your paper appreciates it on account of the able, clear type and Pappreciate it chiefly on account of Pastor Russell's excellent Sermons and the Bible Question Box and Sunday School Lessons which are so helpful and good. May the Lord bless you and keep you and make His Truth to shine into your heart always is my prayer for you.

MRS. E. M. CABLE.

California, Sept. 26.

We enjoy the Labor Items and the clean moral tone of your paper and especially the Sermon by Pastor Russell and the Question Box. Hoping you will continue them, I remain.

MRS. E. E. GORDON.

especially the Sermons by Pastor Russell, which are very instructive and of much assistance to me in understanding the Bible.

Sincerely yours,

MY FATHER KNOWS.

My Father knows how much I need
His presence,
How oft I faint and weep along the way;
How much I mourn that I am not more like Him.
He knows I'm longing for that perfect day.

My Father loves me touch the world
Has for me,
My Father loves me with a love
divine.
Oh, how I love Him! Oh, how I adore
Him!
For His great love to me and all mankind.

My Father hears me sighing in my weakness,
Hears all my prayers for strength to walk aright;
Hears all my vows of consecration to
Him,
Hears my thanksgiving for His wondrous light.

My Father seems me fighting in the strife,
Sees that my foes are pressing hard
and fast,
Counsels: He cries, "My grace is all sufficient";
Lean on my strength and thou shalt win at last.

My Father careth for His precious jewels—
Polishes, shapes, and makes them
clew and shine,
Then with His image in each one reflected
They shall be changed and made like Him, Divine.

Again I am renewing my subscription to your good paper. My appreciation has increased as my love for the truth has grown, and I look for it to come to recognize the Tribune as one of the chief agencies of the grand harvest time message, and the pure unadulterated Truth of God's Word as testimony to feed the hungering, even as in time of famine. I trust it may continue to lift up the standard for the people who are perishing for lack of knowledge.

Thank you for carrying my subscription over for me when I was weak and could arrange for renewal.

Am glad indeed to add my little tribute of appreciation to the many you receive daily.

Very sincerely, in love of Truth,

MRS. M. E. KINGSFORD.

North Carolina, Sept. 26.

I want to write you again telling you how much I appreciate your giving so much space to Bible instruction that is in the Sermons by C. T. Russell, the Bible Study and Question Box the best part of your fine paper. But it is a good paper all through of fine clear type, so easy to read. I enjoy the Letters of Appreciation too; some I approve, I see in my views of all through Watch Tower Bible House. I read the paper and send it on to others to try and induce them to subscribe also. May God richly bless you in your service to Him and to us and the wonderful truths now due in the end of the harvest age. Truth sent and fed from the Lord's house of God's Word for the household of faith everywhere. Yours with best wishes of the feast of good things.

Yours kindly,

MRS. MOLLIE E. WALLACE.

Missouri, Sept. 28.

I want to again express to you my appreciation of the National Labor Tribune on account of the many good features in same. I will only mention a few items as most which are as follows: Pastor C. T. Russell's Sermons, which are throwing such a flood of light on the Scriptures so that it fairly is increasing more and more unto the perfect day which we are to enjoy as I am very much interested in the religious features of your excellent paper. May the Lord add to your labors of love and give you strength to hold fast till the end. With best wishes,

MRS. JENNIE YATES.

THAT HELL RESOLUTION.

Macon, Ga., Sept. 26.

The resolution recently adopted by unanimous vote of the Bible students assembled in convention at Washington, with regard to the Scriptural doctrine of the word "hell" and of the state or condition properly signified by this word, has occasioned widespread comment in the newspapers and from the pulpit as well, and it is amusing to note the wide divergence of view expressed from various sources. Yet it is indeed saddening that Christian people in all the various denominations can be at such variance amongst themselves with respect to what really is the Scriptures teaching on this admittedly important subject.

It is a serious matter when we come to consider the momentous issues involved in the matter of one's belief on this vital question of religious faith. Has anything been withheld by the God of all grace, wisdom, justice, love and power; and we should approach the subject only with prayerful heart and unprejudiced mind so far as we can, seeking instruction only, and read to hearken to the Divine voice which alone is able to lead us out of the awful labyrinth of error and confusion which for long has prevailed on this and other religious subjects into the marvelous light of His Truth.

First in the investigation of this subject let us bear well in mind the fact that which is the nature of the penalty for sin as resting against sinners, whether it be death, or whether it be eternal torment, as declared, "That Penalty Must Be Paid" by either the sinner himself or one by him who would become man's redeemer from that penalty. If the penalty prescribed for sin is Eternal Torment, the justice of God cannot release the sinner from suffering that penalty until the same has been actually and fully paid by a willing redeemer, suffering the same in the sinner's stead.

Now, the question arises; did the Lord Jesus Christ, as the sinner's substitute before the law, suffer Eternal Torment for us? If not, then one of two things must clearly follow, that sinners were not condemned to Eternal Torture as the penalty for sin, or else the cure is not redemptive.

Let us remember that if the penalty for sin is Eternal Torment, the sinner race cannot be redeemed from that penalty by the payment to the Justice of an altogether different preference we read that "Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures." (I Cor. 15: 3), thus showing in his payment of the penalty for our sins that Eternal Torment was not Eternal Torment but was death.

To the same effect we read that "he tasted death (not eternal torment) for every man." (Heb. 2: 9.) Clear upon the point of the subject in Romans 6: 22, which declares that "the wages of sin is death (not Eternal Torment), but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." Sin in death is not eternal but immortal in nature.

To sum up, we can all readily see that if the penalty of Eternal Torment is one which can never be paid, that the sinner must forever remain under such penalty. The Eternal Torment theory, therefore, is one which can be no doctrine of anti-Christ in that it denies the Ransom. We read that Christ Jesus gave himself (or died) a ransom (corresponding price) for all, to be testified in due time. (I Tim. 2: 6.)

Seeing that the doctrine of Eternal Torment is antichristian in character, not to say blasphemous, and that it will not square at all with the Ransom-fact, the basis of atonement between God and man, let all true Christians take heed to renounce and repudiate this God-dishonoring doctrine handed down to us from the Dark Ages, and return to a simple belief of the Truth as presented in the Scriptures, viz., that the wages of sin is Death, and not eternal life in any state or condition. (Rom. 6: 23.)

I am renewing my subscription for the sixth year. I desire this paper because of the space given to Pastor Russell's Sermons, the Sunday School Lessons and the Question Box. With best wishes for the Tribune's continued success, I remain,

Yours,

MRS. R. BENNHART.

California, Sept. 23.

Please find enclosed my subscription for the Tribune for the coming year.

I appreciate your paper very much.

TRUTH POEM AND TEXT CARDS.

Eight kinds, including the following poems: "Press Down on the Mark" "My Confession" "My Father Knows" "Have You Taken Him?" "Have You Taken" "Instead." Two Text and two Birthday Cards, but all can be used for birthday greetings. Price, 10c per dozen, assorted as you may desire. Special prices to Colporteurs.

TRUTH POST CARD CO.,

Erie, PA.

Remember the Restitution and Due Time Cards, 10c per dozen; 75c per hundred.

Watch Tower office. Must say that we appreciate your paper very much. We thoroughly enjoy Pastor Russel's Sermons, Bible Quotations and Letters of Appreciations. We read it all, and thank you for the nice clear type used. May the Lord bless you.

Yours sincerely,

MRS. R. W. JOHNSTON.

Georgia, Sept. 27.

I am renewing my subscription through the Watch Tower Bible and Tract society for another year. I want to add my name to the list of appreciations of your clean logical and up-to-date paper. It is one that every working man should take, as it gives the Labor News in a noble form. I like every department of it especially do I like Pastor Russell's Sermons, the Sunday School Lessons, the Questions and answers and the Appreciations of the Friends. You are doing a grand work for the Lord's people in helping them to scatter the seeds of Truth, as those that have an ear to hear and a heart to understand, may be lifted up out of the mire clay of unbelief and be made to know the true Gospel of Christ which is glad tidings of great joy to the church now, and soon will be to all people.

May God bless you in your work.

S. L. JONES.

Kentucky, Sept. 24.

I am mailing you a postoffice money order for which please continue my subscription for some valuable copies, of which I am most interested in the religious part and it is with pleasure that I pass it on to others.

Yours truly,

M. S. CAMPBELL.

Georgia, Sept. 23.

I send order to renew my subscription which was due the twelfth of September. We rejoice more and more in the knowledge of God's all-wise plan for the salvation of man. We praise God that he has so directed that many delight in reading and studying the Bible, and it is a great help that we get through your columns as well as through Watch Tower and Scripture Studies. I wish to tell my experience at a Baptist Ministerial meeting in August. When a sister was asked for her views why should we study the Bible for the Bible says we are to give way to keep down Russellism. She said I study the Bible for myself, she said, and she couldn't understand why it would be something disciplined I asked if they would listen to a few words from me in regard to the Truth people. They are indeed Bible Students that we learn what the Bible teaches by reading Scripture Studies. I had been greatly blessed since the Lord had counted me to see those wonderful Truths and I would be glad that they read also and they would be benefitted, even Dr. Haldeman, I think would find that he would see why he should agree with brother Russell's teaching or at least fail to disagree with him about. The sister had said for them all to read what the Lord had said for his words were the truth, for she was personally acquainted with him. I told them I thought they had omitted an important reason why we should study the Bible for the Bible is the word God created man for, that it was for his own glory and not to torment him. If my letter be too lengthy to print, leave out some sentences.

Praying God's blessing on all his servants.

M. TANNER.

Wisconsin, Sept. 21.

Your paper was handed to me some time ago by a friend and by looking its pages over I find several good points already mentioned. The Sermons by Pastor Russell which I enjoyed very much, also the Questions and Answers department of the Bible were very interesting. Am enclosing my subscription as a trial, but am quite sure I will become a permanent subscriber.

Respectfully,

MRS. M. M. KNUTH.

North Carolina, Sept. 27.

The Tribune is a welcome visitor in my home and I don't like to miss a single copy as I am very much interested in the religious features of your excellent paper. May the Lord add to your labors of love and give you strength to hold fast till the end. With best wishes,

MRS. JENNIE YATES.

POPULAR MECHANICS

STAINS ON BRICK WALLS.

Discolorations Due to Presence of Salts in Mortar Materials.

The brown, white and yellow stains which frequently disfigure brick buildings or walls are the result of a saline efflorescence which may sometimes be removed, according to the Bibliotheque Universelle, by washing with slightly acidulated water when lime water proves ineffective.

Prevention, however, is better than cure. The stains are caused by particles of soluble salts which have been carried to the surface by water and are then crystallized by evaporation. These comprise sulphates of potassium, sodium, aluminium, magnesium and calcium, the last being the one commonly found and the one most resistant to rain. Chlorides and carbonates are also often found. These salts proceed either in the earth or in the waters used in the manufacture or in the mortar or sand, the latter being usually the case near the seashore, where sand from the beach is commonly used without the precaution of washing with fresh water.

The entry of salts into the brick may occur during the baking, also when the coal contains pyrites. Care should be taken to use water of low mineral content, especially as regards sulphates. Where only "sulphury" water is available it should be neutralized with a barium salt (the chloride or carbonate).

Substitute For Cotton Waste.

The use of waste for wiping machinery has become such a serious source of expense that efforts are being made in more than one establishment to cut down this loss, with the result that in one large machine establishment of this country Turkish towels are now made use of as a substitute, and the change has shown a very considerable economy. Fresh towels are supplied at regular intervals, and the soiled ones are collected and cared for until a sufficient number has accumulated to make it worth while to put them through a washing process, by which the oil is recovered and made use of a second time. This recovered oil is available for lubricating railroad switches and similar work, but its field of usefulness is more or less limited. Many efforts to find a substitute for wool waste in the capacity of packing for the journal box of a railroad car have been unsuccessful.

Fires Banked Six Months.

Last year, at the beginning of a strike by employees at the blast furnaces of the Elba Societa Anonima di Miniere e di Alti Forni, at Portoferraio, on the island of Elba, the furnaces were banked. The fires were covered by a mixture two feet in depth of the finest Elba ore (averaging 52 per cent of iron) and white sand taken from the Mediterranean in the proportions of 80 per cent of ore and 40 per cent of sand. The furnaces were closed and kept airtight. At the end of six months the tuyeres were opened, the hard baked crust, formed by a fusion of the ore and sand, was broken with sledges and bars, and the fires burned as though there had been no banking of the furnaces.

The Power of an Air Brake.

Some idea of the power of an air brake may be gained from the following facts: It takes a powerful locomotive drawing a train of ten passenger cars a distance of nearly a mile to reach a speed of sixty miles per hour on a straight and level track. The brakes will stop the train of stone from a speed of sixty miles per hour in 700 feet. Roughly, it may be stated, says the Science Compendium, that a train may be stopped by the brakes in about 3 per cent of the distance that must be covered to give it its speed.

Mysterious Fire Explained.

A German motorist the other day discovered the most extraordinary cause of a fire starting in the carburetor of his automobile that has ever been brought to public notice, says the Scientific American. Noticing a leak in his carburetor connections, he stopped the car in a completely deserted road in full sunlight. There was no spark, fire, match, broken insulation or any other thing that could possibly have caused the gasoline to catch fire, yet in a few moments the carburetor was ablaze. Luckily the motorist was something of a scientist, and he started on an investigation of the "why and wherefore"—after he had managed to extinguish the fire. To his surprise, he discovered that the catch on the convex focal lens of the headlight had become unfastened and the lens had swung around in such a manner that the sun's rays became focused directly on the leaky connection at the carburetor, a highly effective burning glass being thus responsible for the "inexplicable" blaze.

Brick the Best Fireproof Material.

Studies of the ruins of conflagrations, as well as of many other fires, have shown conclusively that hard burned brick forms the most efficient fireproofing material we have at the present time. This seems to be due both to the homogeneous texture of brick and to its small size. The hardest burned brick may spall somewhat on the outer face, but the face next to the steel does not heat dangerously and the numerous joints relieve to a great degree the effects of expansion. Unfortunately, brick is the most expensive kind of fireproofing.—Engineering Magazine.

FELDSPAR INDUSTRY.

Mineral Used Principally in the Manufacture of Pottery.

The year 1911 showed the largest production ever recorded in the feldspar industry. The output being greater by 161 tons in quantity and $20,041 in value than that of 1907, the year of maximum production until 1911, according to the United States geological survey.

The principal use of feldspar is in the manufacture of pottery, enamel ware, enamel brick and electrical ware. Of these the most important is its use in the body and glaze of pottery and the so-called sanitary ware, in which it constitutes from 10 to 35 per cent. Its value in pottery lies in the fact that it melts at a lower point than the other ingredients and serves as a dry, binding the clay and quartz particles together. In glazes the percentage of feldspar used is higher than in the body and runs from 30 to 50 per cent.

Other uses of feldspar, which do not require the high grade demanded by the pottery trade, are in the manufacture of emery and corundum wheels, where it serves as a flux; in the manufacture of opalescent glass; as a pointing grit; as a constituent of roofing material and as ballast. Small quantities of the purest grades of potash feldspar are used in the manufacture of artificial teeth. For this purpose it brings the highest prices, from $6 to $8 a barrel of 220 pounds. It is also used in the manufacture of scouring soaps and window wash. The use of feldspar of the lower grades for pointing grit, roofing, etc., seems to be on the increase, and in 1911 a small quantity was used as railroad ballast.

NEW TYPE OF FIRE ESCAPE.

Cage Mounted on Extensible Tower Carried on a Truck.

The fire department of Birmingham, England, has been trying a new type of fire escape by which the persons rescued reach the ground in a cage or cradle raised and lowered by means of a cable, and guided by side cables.

CAGE OF NEW FIRE ESCAPE.

The apparatus is run to a fire in the ordinary manner on a motor truck. The telescopic tower is then extended up along the building, and the cradle is raised and lowered like an elevator cage.

The cradle is provided with an automatic brake which locks the cradle on the guide cables should the lifting cable break.

Liquid Air as Motive Power.

Scientists declare that as a motive power for operating automobiles and motorboats liquid air is superior to the electric storage battery, since it requires no tedious waiting for the process of recharging and it delivers more than double the power of the former, with half the weight. Gasoline is not in the same class with liquid air, for the latter emits no noxious odors, nor is there any danger of explosions. As a refrigerant there is no source of cold like liquid air. Other than operating automobiles and serving as a refrigerant the chief use to which liquid air is put is as a motive power for operating machinery. From providing a magical source of strength to compete with other sources of motive forces now in use.—Chicago Tribune.

Rotary Wings For Aeroplanes.

A mechanical appliance which will enable aeroplanes to rise and fall vertically is the invention of a Belgian engineer. It consists of rotary wings which, when put in motion, permit the machine to rise like a helicopter. When the ground, turn in all directions and plane with perfect security at any height in the air.

An Automatic Waiter.

An American invention has created an electric waiter for hotels and restaurants, operated by the customer seated at a table. On a shelf in front of him is the menu card is fitted with push buttons opposite each item, and "pressing the button" rings a bell in the kitchen and displays the order and the table number. The kitchen apparatus also prints a check, the original of which comes to the customer, with a duplicate on an endless tape. This device has been in successful use in New Zealand.

WASHING A MOTORCAR.

Precautions to Observe to Avoid Injuring the Varnish.

The factory manager of a large automobile company gives the following advice regarding the washing of a car:

To wash a car properly with soap first dissolve in a pail of water sufficient soap to make a good suds. Then in the washing operation use the suds, applying it on from the sponge instead of rubbing the soap on a wet sponge or, what is worse, rubbing it on the surface of the car. Before applying the suds the car should be rinsed thoroughly with water, using a gentle stream. This is important, as all particles of grit and dirt must be removed from the surface before applying the sponge. Apply the suds liberally where the parts are dirty; then rinse off with clear water and a fresh sponge, flowing the water below the sponge to insure that any grit and dirt that may be left on the surface are washed away before the sponge has a chance to pick them up and scratch the surface. After the final sponging the surface should be dried with a clean wet chamois.

In washing the chassis the same method is in order, except that it may be necessary to use stronger suds. Where cars are in use over oily or muddy roads frequent washing is necessary, and this washing should be done as soon as possible after the car leaves the road, as when this oil or mud dries on the car it is very difficult to remove and will injure the varnish. It being impossible under certain oil and mud conditions to remove all the grime, in this connection it is important that neither the bonnet nor radiator is washed while it is hot, as to do so will dull the luster, ruining it in a very short time.

Another point which should be given attention is that the engine should not be used for washing both the body and the chassis. Both sponges should be off the hood pump, care being taken at all times to keep them clean and in proper condition.

NOVEL BLAST FORGE.

Piston Operating in a Cylinder Produces the Blast.

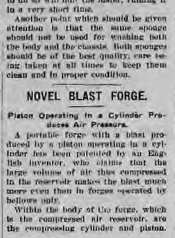
A portable forge with a blast produced by a piston operating in a cylinder has been patented by an English inventor, who claims that the large volume of air thus compressed by the reservoir makes the blast smoother even than in forges operated by bellows only.

Within the body of the forge, which is the compressed air reservoir, are the compressing cylinder and piston.



PORTABLE BLAST FORGE.

When the pedal is pressed downward by the foot of the operator the piston in the cylinder is raised, causing air to be sucked in through flap valves in the bottom. When the pressure on the pedal is released, the spring draws the piston back to the bottom of the cylinder again, and continuation of the operation causes a pressure to be set up within the reservoir.

Catcher Wilson Great Thrower.

Arthur Wilson of the Giants is one of the greatest throwing catchers in the business.

APPRECIATIONS.

Washington, Sept. 25.

I just notice that you appreciate your paper, of course, principally because it has so much of our dear Saviour's teachings in it, that stand out fine as when God's book is so full of want, we are learned and rich indeed. And its newsy part is certainly very helpful also, for we are to watch as well as pray. If we would know where we are at.

Very gratefully yours,
MRS. NEAL TURNER.

Mickman, Sept. 22.

"Love at first sight," and every sight of the Tribune has been my experience, and I have much pleasure in renewing my subscription and in sending you names of several new subscribers on enclosed sheet.

My interest in, and love of, the Sermon Question Box, letters, Poems and other interesting contributions, continues to increase, and I can truthfully say it is the best number of general reading. When through reading the paper I usually hand it to some one else, and so it runs double service. I especially appreciated the issue of August 22, because of the article "Pastor Russell and Miss Ridley, Disagree."

Again thanking you for your liberal service in the publishing of "God's Beautiful Truth," and praying that both present and future blessings may be yours in return, I remain,

Very sincerely yours,
MISS E. M. LAURIE.

So poor this gift,
But for the grace Thou asked
Yours far too small
For me to serve daily to bring
It unto Thee, my Lord and King.

Time.

So teach me to number my days
Redeeming also,
Acknowledging in all my ways
No will but Thine.
That many or few day they be
Each one may be used up for Thee.

Health.

My strength! ah! how little indeed
To use each day,
How great a on my physical need,
Until I may
In death the last remains lay down
In weakness and dishonor sown.

Influence.

What influence have I? no mean

"IT IS I, BE NOT AFRAID."
Mark vi. 45—52. L. T.

"Already the darkness of night had fallen, and the disciples were still out in the midst of the sea, tossed about by the waves, for the wind was contrary."

TODAY'S SETTING shows us Jesus and His disciples having engaged in a storm that will reduce experience to the extreme, which even our ears to be accustomed. It is described as "a grabbing weather." The episode continued in another character during the night. Because of some reason or other, Jesus did not accompany His disciples in the boat, but remained behind to pray. Just when and how long is not stated. Probably after the multitude had been dismissed. Matthew 14: 23. Mark 6: 46. He had sent them away, and they had gone. Now He was alone on the mountain side. He was communing with His Father. He was in the attitude of prayer. Probably He was kneeling. Perhaps He was standing with His face toward heaven. Whatever He wished to make known to His Father, whatever He desired for Himself, for His disciples, for all His followers, for the whole world, He was making known to His Father. He was in communion with God

OUR OLD COUNTRY CORRESPONDENCE.

The National Insurance Act and British Trade Unionists--Trade Union Bank Suggestion Followed by Trade Union Life Assurance Scheme--Philip Snowden on the Living Wage--Big Strike of Manchester Apprentices--Bar Men Organize and Send Delegation to America.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

LONDON, Oct. 4.—There are two distinct separate and very antagonistic views held by British trade unionists with regard to the new National Insurance Act which came into force on July 12 last, especially with regard to its ultimate effect on our trade unions as fighting forces. On one side it is regarded as very insidious "knock-out" drop to the unions and you correspondent confesses that that is the view that appears to him to be the truer. On the other hand there is no doubt that the unions are gaining a very big increase in membership owing to the necessity every insured person is under of joining an approved society through which he can draw benefits and who will ultimately receive the contributions paid by him, his employer and the state. Most of our unions have become approved societies under the act, as also have the leading industrial assurance companies and many other capitalistic concerns. All these are fighting for the great body of working class support and of course the big mine of membership lies amongst the male and female workers not previously members of trade unions. Whilst the bulk of this is being secured by the capitalistic assurance companies which have formed branches as approved societies under the act a good proportion is still going to the trade unions.

Substantially increased membership will therefore be announced in due course. But what will be the value as a fighting force of members dragged in practically compulsorily in this way? These newcomers simply join because they must join something and it is apparently largely a toss up whether they join a trade union, an assurance company or some other thing quite apart from the labor movement. It cannot be said that they are in any way trade unionists in sentiment. After all the trade unions are fighting forces and not assurance companies. When we bear in mind that the National Insurance Act which has been boomed as such a great philanthropic reform was passed without consultation with the trade unions and is declared by publicists like Hilaire Belloc to have been bought and paid for by great British capitalists, it certainly looks as though this "reform" has got to be watched very carefully by organized labor.

A trade union bank was proposed some time ago, and now it seems likely that the trade unions will take up in the near future the life assurance of members and their families. Already several large unions have taken legal opinion on the project. This move is made against the great industrial assurance corporations, who have roused the anger of the unions by taking up health insurance under the act and capturing many trade unionists. Advocates of life insurance by the unions claim that the unions will be able to obtain a large amount of business from these companies to recoup them for the losses of health insurance members. Most of the unions already provide liberal benefits, and it will be comparatively easy to extend the system so that the principal unions will be in a position to enrol for life insurance purposes all of their members and their families. A scheme is in course of preparation, and it will be laid before the unions affected without delay.

Philip Snowden, one of the ablest and most persuasive spokesmen of the Labor party in the House of Commons has written a book called "The Living Wage," in which he shows how the demand for labor for the means to maintain a decent and comfortable standard of life can be met with industrial economic and social advantage. The sum of his Argument is that the enactment of a law establishing the right of every worker to a living wage, which in its practical application shall be settled and enforced by non-political wages boards is a reform which is practical and urgent. He does not claim that the universal payment of adequate wages will concede the full measure of justice to labor; but he insists strongly that the living wage is demanded by physical and social necessity and that it is an indispensable preliminary to the proper discharge of the serious responsibilities which, by the extension of political power, rest upon the shoulders of democracy.

In these days of international excitement the living wage is a phrase which is in everybody's mouth; it is a phrase which usefully crystallizes a general idea but it is not a phrase which is capable of exact definition. This is recognized by Mr. Snowden. "The living wage," he says, "expresses an idea, a belief, a conviction, a demand. It is a principle which will take a thousand different forms in different countries, and in every trade a living wage in money terms will vary from district to district and from locality to locality." He has little difficulty in exposing the absurdity of a universal minimum wage of a definite sum—such as the $7.50 a week which Mr. Will Crooks once proposed to the House of Commons. Even if it could be paid without ruining industry, it would create wide disparities in the relative comfort of workmen; the agricultural laborer would be in affluence compared with the city laborer who had to live on the same sum. Mr. Snowden's idea of the living wage is much more scientific than this, and, although he cannot claim that the principle he advocates will secure more than a rough measure of justice, he is not dissatisfied with it on that account. The view he takes is that "it is more important to see that no man goes with an insufficiency of the necessaries of life than to see that no man has more than a sufficiency of the luxuries of life."

HEALTH EXPERTS DISCUSS INDUSTRIAL ILLS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—During the sessions in this city of the Fifteenth International Congress of Hygiene and Demography, Dr. Seward Erdman, instructor in clinical surgery in Cornell University, presented a paper on "The Acute Effect of Caisson Disease." Dr. Erdman in part said:

"Of all the occupational diseases following the train of advancing civilization none is of greater interest, none more dramatic in its manifestations, than the ofttimes tragic effect of the ills to which men are liable who work in compressed air. A man in all the vigor of health and strength descends to his daily task in the river tunnel, works his regular shift, seconds to the street and fifteen minutes later, without the slightest warning, is attacked with the most intense boring pains in the legs and abdomen, or he staggers and falls helpless to the ground paralyzed from the waist down." This disease is known by the name of "bends."

"Tuberculosis is a social disease in the final analysis. It cannot be eradicated unless and until we have social justice." Dr. S. Adolphus Knopf, of New York, thus summed up the fight against the white plague in a paper entitled "Some Newer Problems in the Anti-Tuberculosis Warfare in the United States" before a recent session of the American Public Health Association. The doctor dealt largely with the tuberculosis problem as associated with the child labor question. He said that to separate the two problems is impossible; that the one is dependent to a very large extent on the other, and that until child labor conditions are rectified the warfare against tuberculosis must go on under a great handicap. "Child labor predisposes to tuberculosis. The does not apply exclusively to child labor in

LIVE TOPICS AT HEALTH CONGRESS.

NE does not need to agree unqualified'y with all the dogmas of all the reformers of all kinds in order to be a true progressive or to appreciate the great work that is being done for social betterment by scores of organizations in this country and Europe. One of these organizations was last week in session at Washington, the International Congress of Hygiene and Demography. The purpose of the congress is to promote public and private health, and as a means to this end it engages in, and encourages research into the laws of health and the means by which sanitary science can be extended.

Notable speakers from Europe addressed the sessions. Dr. Jacques Bertillon, of Paris, brother of the famous statistician, emphasized the necessity of better classification of health and mortuary statistics. Dr. Ira S. Wile, of New York, spoke on sex hygiene, and rightly declared that if women on the day of marriage required the groom to produce a certificate of perfect health there would soon prevail a much stricter sex morality.

Probably the most interesting of the addresses was that made by Prof. Max Rubner, dubbed the "Dr. Wiley of Germany." Germany would probably think it better to call Dr. Wiley the Prof. Max Rubner of the United States; but let that be as it may. Prof. Rubner gave the body something worth pondering when he declared that the cost of high living, and the high cost of living were both having their effect on the population of Germany and of America. In other words, Prof. Rubner appears convinced that race degeneration is being produced by two causes—among the rich by too high living, and among the poor by too low living. That is to say, that the rich overeat, and the poor, owing to high prices, are unable to eat enough. And it is a statement that both observation and reason corroborate, although the starvation of the poorer classes is much more noticeable in Great Britain than in other Germany or the United States. The point Prof. Rubner makes, namely, that every era of high prices is bound to be an era of comparative popular starvation and physical deterioration, is incontestable. And it is a point which governments must consider seriously, although it is not new. Complaints and suggestions for price-raising purposes are repugnant to public policy not only on account of their unfairness but because they involve deterioration of the human species.

No penalty against monopoly can from this point of view be too severe. And in fact it is only in our own country that any attempt to legislate with it has appeared. Only in our day has it been argued that monopoly is inevitable; that it actually and necessarily inheres in modern business and that while the Sherman laws may be enacted their enforcement is a visionary undertaking. Prof. Rushner supplies the answer to the sophistries. Monopoly (at least, private monopoly) has the extortion of high prices as its only end. And high prices, as Prof. Rushner remarks us, mean low living and an enfeebled race. On the whole, there is ground for believing that the German professor, without specifically mentioning the word trust, pointed out quite as important a duty for government as the New York doctor who demands that the parties to a marriage contract exchange health certificates.

SOCIALISTS WIN IN COURT.

AN ENJOINDING measure of public sympathy and approval is assured for the opinion handed down in the Supreme Court sitting in equity, Tuesday, dissolving the injunction which the court had issued restraining the Socialists from holding street meetings. The injunction had been applied for by the city authorities on the ground that the meetings constituted a nuisance.

The court, in dismissing the petition of the city and releasing the defendants from the injunction, admits that if the meetings really constituted the nuisance that the city alleges, the injunction would be in order. But the court denies that the meetings were shown to be such a nuisance. It did not appear that they were frequent or that they blocked the streets to such as to effectually stop public travel. In such a case they might possibly, the court says, have amounted to a nuisance, but no such condition prevailed. If the city is wise, it will not attempt to molest the Socialists or any other peaceable and law-abiding citizens in the reasonable use of public highways for proper assemblages.

CANON HENSLEY HENSON, ENGLISH CHURCH REFORMER.

CANON HENSLEY HENSON of Westminster, who has been lecturing in this country, is a "progressive" member of the English Protestant Episcopal church. It was he who advocated a year ago the substitution in the Prayer Book communion service of the so called "Evangelical Summary" of the Decalogue for the existing form of the Ten Commandments. The plan contemplated the abridgement of the second, third and tenth commandments. "Regarding the tenth commandment," he said, "it is entirely at variance with modern thought and modern morals that the wife should be classed as a chattel with the ox and the ass. The notion is too primitive and archaic." This brilliant preacher and theologian not only has a canon's stall in the abbey, but is rector of St. Margaret's church, which is attended by the house of commons and is the scene of many weddings of British statesmen and politicians who are also "society men."

A FIVE-DAY WEEK.

THE resolution of the British Miners' Federation favoring a five-day week has yet to receive the approval of the men in the mines, but it is interesting as evidence of progress toward the ideal conditions of a minimum of work along with a maximum of leisure and of pay.

"Six days shalt thou labor" was the Mosaic law, but having improved on the other commandments, a cynical contemporary suggests that there is no reason why this one should not be altered to suit modern demands. In effect a five-and-a-half-day week now exists in many industries, and doubtless it is feasible for miners to shorten it by another half-day. Yet if all the world's workers were to devote two days a week to idleness, if engine-drivers, factory operatives, freight-handlers, telegraph and telephone operators, postmen, bookkeepers, clerks and all were to demand another day off, how then would the world's work in times of business booms be done?

A five-day week is of course impossible at sea, as it is impossible on land among employes in transportation and other trades. In many industries where it is possible its introduction would necessarily be at the expense of efficiency, and the benefit of the additional leisure to those enjoying it is problematical. But there is this about it—when the men in some trades secure the five-day week it will make the seven-day week and eleven hour day now engaging the attention of some of our reformers look all the more brutal and outre.

Caring for Injured Workmen and Old Age Pensions

By VAN BITTNER
President District No. 5, U. M. W. of A.

(Written for National Labor Tribune.)

This great industrial country of ours is surely far behind Great Britain, Germany, France and other European countries in the method of taking care of her workmen from a standpoint of compensation for those who are injured and killed and pensioning her workmen who are too old to work.

I am one of those who believe that of the many problems that must ultimately be silved by the government these two questions, or after all, this one big question should be given very serious consideration. Fundamentally the workers are the foundation of our country, and the better you protect those who toil the better the nation is protected. It seems rather strange that in our present day American civilization, in our wonderful industrial developments that we do not have the best compensation law, the best old age pension laws of any country on earth. There is no question about the ability of American workmen to perform labor under the speeding-up process. It is a matter of world-wide astonishment the great amount of labor he performs.

Now, then let us see what is the condition so far as having these all-important laws which mean as much to the protection of labor. There are two distinct systems of compensating injured workmen and the dependents of those who are killed. We have the British system where compensation is paid direct by the employer to the employe and the German system which is known as the insurance method of compensation. There is much room for argument as to which is the better system, but without going into argument let us carefully analyze the situation here in America.

With very few exceptions, possibly

LABOR'S INTERESTS AT NATIONAL CAPITAL.

Cigarmakers in Their National Convention Uphold Labor's Highest Interests by Rejecting Resolution to Condemn National Civic Federation Prospective Senator from New Jersey a Friend of Labor--Effort to Consolidate Tailoring Trades.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—Tuesday, October 1, the delegates to the Cigarmakers' convention set apart for the discussion of a resolution which, if adopted, would have prohibited any of its officers or members from being actively associated with the National Civic Federation under penalty of a forfeiture of membership. The representatives of all the "isms" marshaled their forces for a final bombardment of the trade union idea of permitting men, although officers and members of labor organizations, to exercise the widest and fullest freedom in the association with institutions outside of the trade unions. From far and wide it has been heralded that the Cigarmakers' convention would put an everlasting quietus upon the liberty of the members of that organization to affiliate themselves with organizations which did not join the master of approval of all the devotees of the various "isms" which are recommended as a positive cure for all industrial ills. Delegate Barnes, ex-secretary of the National Socialist party, now the manager of the Debs Presidential campaign, led the "isms" forces in favor of the resolution, while Samuel Gompers, first vice president of the Cigarmakers' international Union, met the opposition in one of the stormiest debates that has ever occurred in any convention of the cigarmakers. When the vote was taken it showed that the representatives of the "isms" had been badly routed by the forces behind the trade union idea represented by Samuel Gompers. Upon the decision being announced, 95 being in favor of the restrictive resolution, while 255 voted against it, the conservatism gave vent to its pent-up feelings by electing overwhelmingly as sentiment in the Cigarmakers' International Union to stand like adamant against the heresies of any admixture of freedom-restricting clauses in its constitution. In order that the friends and advocates of mythical theories may effectively discharge verbal volleys in the direction of some political party over the backs of trade unionists, this decision will have a wholesome influence of "ism" followers to the fact that a trade union organization, while having the right to demand the divorce of its members in the matter of wages, hours of labor, conditions of employment, and trade regulations, it has no right to restrict the activities of its members agreeable to some complex political creed.

In compliance with the resolution which passed the House of Representatives in the early part of August, Commissioner of Labor Neill has ordered an investigation of the causes of the high cost and short supply of anthracite coal in New York and New England. The investigation, it is stated, will practically deal with a report on the relations of the increases of wages to the miners affecting the price of that commodity. It is asserted by the Pennsylvania officials of the United Mine Workers of America that there is no necessity of a scarcity of coal in New York nor New England, and that quantities are now being stored near Landsford, Pa., sufficient to last New York City all winter. The investigation ordered is intended to cover the coal situation thoroughly and dwell on all phases of the industry.

Representative William Hughes, a member of the labor group, has been successful in securing the nomination for United States Senator from New Jersey. Mr. Hughes has been the consistent advocate of labor legislation in the House, and was the author of the House amendment which, in a Republican House, was voted down, and was largely responsible for tearing at home many Republicans who voted against the amendment. During the consideration of the appropriation bill, caring for special legal expenses of the government, it was provided that a certain sum of money be set aside to prosecute the trusts under the Sherman antitrust act. Mr. Hughes offered an amendment that none of the money to be appropriated should be used in proceedings labor unions under the act referred to. Members of the dominant party at that time defeated the amendment. The American Federation of Labor in the following campaign issued, millions of four-page leaflets simply detailing the vote in the House upon the Hughes amendment. As before stated, the members of labor organizations throughout the entire country responded in a magnificent manner and secured the defeat of a large number of labor opponents. Mr. Hughes is one of the able men in Congress, and should the Legislature of the State of New Jersey, to be elected in November, be constituted of a majority of the friends of labor, to which Mr. Hughes is affiliated, he will be elected to the United States Senate, which seems very probably at this time.

Should this occur labor will have for the first time a spokesman from its own ranks in the United States Senate.

A conference was held at the headquarters of the American Federation

WEST VIRGINIA IS AROUSED.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—The following circular, just issued, is self-explanatory, and is signed by prominent citizens of the State of West Virginia, namely: William M. O. Dawson, O. J. Morrison, Rev. Father Thomas Cairns, Samuel B. Montgomery and O. S. Hubbard:

"To the Citizens of West Virginia, Greeting: The highest purpose of all good American citizens should be the conservation of the liberties guaranteed by the organic law of our republic. It is self-evident that a nation can be no greater than the standard of its citizenship, and the greatest patriot of this day is he who labors to keep inviolate the Constitutional guarantees of free speech, free press and lawful assemblage. The best citizen is he who raises his voice in behalf of the downtrodden and oppressed, and who endeavors through economic and political effort to develop a better manhood, a nobler womanhood, and a happier childhood —the greatest assets of a great nation. It is a matter of extreme regret to all thinking and patriotic citizens that a most unhappy state of affairs exists in our beloved State, rising indeed to an actual and alarming state of warfare, growing out of the strike of the coal miners in the counties of Fayette and Kanawha. We believe that there is even need for action by the Legislature in the shape of just and well considered laws respecting the relations of employers and employes. The consideration of such legislative heretofore has been prevented by a powerful non-partisan lobby, which is the invisible government, and which has been able to defeat all such legislation. This non-partisan lobby has exercised its sinister power so effectually and so viciously that practically all community of interest between employer and employe has been destroyed. It is evident that there can never be industrial peace in West Virginia until there is industrial justice. The power to make laws must be shifted from this invisible, sinister government to the visible and rightful government ordained by the people. Therefore, we hereby issue this call for a State convention of the citizens of West Virginia, to meet in the hall of the House of Delegates, in the State Capitol, at Charleston, at 10 o'clock in the morning of Thursday, October 10, 1912, for the purpose of considering the subject of promoting peace and justice between labor and capital, employer and employe, and to discuss the following subjects, namely: (a)

Pastor Russell's Sermon

PASTOR RUSSELL AT ILLINOIS FAIR.

Honor to the Son Means Honor to the Father Also—The New Day Already Dawning—Pastor Russell at the Illinois State Fair Said That the Work of Calvary Is Progressing, but Far From Finished—The Selection of the Elect Church Is the Beginning, Not the Completion, of the Divine Purpose — Messiah's Kingdom Will Accomplish His Triumph Over Sin and Death by the Deliverance of Humanity.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Sept. 6.—Pastor Russell arrived, the guest of the State Board. His address at the fair grounds auditorium drew an immense audience. His topic was "Beyond the Grave." We report his evening address from the text, "At the name of Jesus every knee shall bow and every tongue confess—to the glory of God."—Phil. 2: 10, 11.

The speaker referred to the Six Great Days of a thousand years each, during which the world is experiencing a reign of sin and death, sighing and crying. Physicians physical and moral have been unable to effect a cure. God Himself alone is able to roll away the curse which He imposed and to give mankind instead His blessing.

In the past we have been so intent on following our own sectarian schemes and theories that we have neglected the proper study of the Bible. Indeed not until our day has such a study been possible for the masses. Only now do they have the Word of God in their possession in convenient form in every family, and only now is education so general as to permit all to read, all to study, all to know the good things of the Divine promises.

The creeds of the "Dark Ages" did indeed dip into our ears the measure of the curse. Yea, they distorted it and made it a message of eternal torture, whereas the Scriptures declare that "the wages of sin is death"—not eternal torment. In our darkness we mistranslated and misinterpreted God's Word to our own confusion, swallowing also some interpolations without proper scrutiny. No wonder we were nauseated by those creeds! No wonder the intelligent portion of humanity were in danger of all being driven by them, infidelity, away from God and from His Book, which we misunderstood and misrepresented!

A NEW DAY IS DAWNING.

Bible Students are arousing from their sleep and finding that they have long suffered from nocturnal hallucinations. The true message of God's Word is spreading, and with it goes increase of faith, together with joy, peace and boldness.

We have all noted the fact that ours is the most wonderful day of earth's history. At this great State Fair our eyes open widely as we note the contrast between the blessings which surround us and those enjoyed by our fathers. Although we are viewing here the exhibits of but one State out of many, we are surely all amazed at what we see of progress, invention, labor-saving machinery, of educational arrangements, of improvement in the breeding of cattle, sheep, swine, horses, poultry, etc.

We are equally astonished at the progress made in the culture of fruit and vegetables. We say to ourselves, Surely the fruits and flowers and animal life of Paradise could not have very greatly surpassed the prize winners of this exhibition! We cogitate further that with the progress of invention, the necessity of arduous labor and sweat of face for the daily bread will soon be at an end and the necessary leisure and conveniences and comforts which will permit every man to be a scholarman will soon be available to all. What do these things mean? Why have they come suddenly upon us in one generation? —yea, and give no indication of slacking, but rather of progressing to still greater wonders? What is the explanation of this?

The Bible alone gives the reply to this query. It explains to us the meaning of the reign of sin and death which we and our forefathers have shared. It tells us that our sorrows, aches and pains, weaknesses mental, moral and physical, are all the results of sin—the sin of Father Adam entailed upon us by the laws of heredity for the Six Great Days of a thousand years each, already past.

Then to our astonishment the Bible opens the door of the future and bids us look abroad and see the better Day which God promises. It explains that He has been giving us lessons respecting the exceeding sinfulness of sin, but that at the while He has sympathized with and loved His creatures. It tells us that as a beginning of the Divine intention to roll away the curse and to give instead Divine blessings, Jesus came into the world and died for Adam and his race, "the Just for the unjust," to cancel their judicial obligations—the death penalty upon them—and thus to give them an opportunity in God's due time to return to their former estate, all that Adam lost—to the perfection which was his when he was in the image of God, to all that was his in his glorious estate—Paradise.

WHEN WILL THE CURSE ROLL AWAY?

Chronologically we are already in the Great Seventh Day or Thousand-Year Sabbath—we are already thirteen years into the great Seventh Day. This explains the blessings which are ours and which are coming to us increasingly. This progress will continue throughout the great Thousand-Year Sabbath of Messiah's Kingdom. The Bible promises that it shall bring blessings to every creature—not only the living, but the dead, "for all that are in their graves must hear the voice of the Son of God, and come forth." (John v, 28, 29.) All must be given a full opportunity to come into harmony with the Creator and to come to perfection and everlasting life. Only by personal, willful, intelligent sin can anyone's blessings be turned into the second curse of God, the Second Death, from which there will be no redemption.

Incidentally let us note that the Bible proves that blessings do, in one sense, premature, in that they have come to us before the establishment of the Messianic Kingdom. Consequently, instead of the world's being happier because of these favors, it is more unhappy, more discontented than ever. The Scriptures show that the discontent will culminate in a short, sharp period of terrible anarchy, from which the world will be rescued by the establishment of Messiah's Kingdom.

The permission of the light and blessings of our day, in advance of Messiah's Rule, the Creator intends shall teach humanity a great lesson respecting their own fallen condition and respecting their need of the very help which God is providing in Christ. None shall have the opportunity of erroneously supposing that God's blessings, coming to the unregenerate hearts, will make them thankful and happy. The new heart is necessary to real happiness.

We also incidentally see that if God had sent or permitted the light of the blessings of this day a thousand years sooner, then the discontent of humanity would have culminated in anarchy a thousand years sooner—before the time Divinely arranged for the establishment of Messiah and His Bride, the Church, in heavenly glory for the ruling, blessing and uplifting of humanity.

TRUTH DISCERNED AIDS FAITH.

As we gradually come to realize that we are living in the dawning of the time for the long-promised blessing, this Sabbath Day of earth, when the Curse shall roll away, it gives us a fresh interest in all the affairs of the present life, as well as in those features of the Divine Plan which are yet future. The knowledge makes life worth living. Millions of people live a treadmill existence, unworthy of themselves and joyless, because they have not come into the family of God and not been taught to understand the deep things of His gracious purposes.

The first step is an acknowledgment of the Creator and a consecration of ourselves to Him—an application of our hearts to know His will, that we may do it. One day of such living is worth more than a year of the aimless, meandering common to the masses. All who have entered into this blessing should rejoice therein. All who have not, should seek the Door, Christ, and be glad to walk the narrow way, following His footsteps into grace and peace Divine.

STIFF-NECKED AND STIFF-KNEED.

We may, indeed, rejoice in the lessening of the sweat of face coming to mankind—in the dawning of this Great Day. We may, indeed, rejoice in the greater spread of knowledge to every class. We may, indeed, rejoice in the more comfortable housing, feeding and clothing of our race. We may, indeed, praise the day which is ushering in these blessings and which, through irrigation canals and artesian wells, scientific study and teachers, books and newspapers, is making the wilderness to blossom as the rose and many blades of grass to grow where one alone grew previously, bringing the curse and to give instead Divine blessings, Jesus came into the world and died for Adam and his race, "the Just for the unjust," to cancel their judicial obligations—the death penalty upon them—and thus to give them an opportunity in God's due time to return to their former estate, all that Adam lost—to the perfection which was his when he was in the image of God, to all that was his in his glorious estate—Paradise.

SAFETY FOR MINERS.

Device For Catching Dust Minimizes Dangers of Consumption.

Dust from the operation of hammer drills is a mine so as not to be a serious hindrance to work, that a duct catcher has been devised in Leadville, Colo., to be used when drilling in ore. It is said to provide the best possible condition of getting rid of burnt gases in the problem. In view of the fact that the piston does not sweep the whole space some of the moisture, after it is burned, must depart under the force of pressure, says the Automobile Dealer and Repairer. After the terminal pressure dies out the part of the gas that is usually left behind is that which accounts for bad scavenging.

It has been found in practice that the scavenging condition may be improved by using a small diameter pipe the other end of the drill inserted in the tube and the narrow slot at the tip slipped on to the tube, whereupon the drill is fastened in the chuck of the machine and the work can go on.

It is claimed that the elimination of the dust is practically complete in the drilling that follows.

Until a few years ago hammer drills were scarcely used, so that the reliefhad little or no dust to contend with, but with its introduction trouble began. The miner is injured by "setting dust" which eventually may develop into miner's consumption; the mine owner suffers loss of money, because whenever a miner drills a hole and is ready to change the drill, he must leave his work and get fresh air before he can continue, which means a loss of from fifteen to thirty minutes on each hole drilled.

Antimony a Byproduct.

Information received by the United States geological survey indicates that no antimony ore was produced in the United States in 1911, but considerable quantities of antimonial lead were made as a byproduct in smelting the precious metals.

Antimony is used principally in antimonial lead as type metal and as babbitt and other bearing metals, in cable trimmings, for sheet lead in pipes, for clock cases and other articles for which a fairly hard metal to be gilded or otherwise finished is desired.

Antimony is also used as an adulterant in solder, but is considered a very objectionable element, especially if the solder is to be used for sealing cans holding provisions. Antimony fluoride is used as a flux in the soldering of tinplate, zinc oxide, etc. It is also used for making the glass used to cast iron in enameled ware, as a reducing agent in chemical work and as a detector of silkoids and phenols. Antimony of various forms is used in medicine. The trichloride, also called antimony butter, is used in bronzing iron, especially gun barrels, as a mordant for coloring matter, in coloring zinc black, as a mordant for silver and in the manufacture of lakes, particularly from dyewoods. In some forms antimony is used in dyeing, and the trisulphide is used in fireworks for making "Bengal fire."

Brass Cleaning Paste.

The following makes a good cleaning paste: Rotten stone, six ounces; oxalic acid, one ounce; equal parts of whale oil and spirits of turpentine sufficient to make a paste. A general metal polishing paste may be made as follows: Any quantity of the parts below by weight: Petroleum jelly (white), ninety parts; kieselguhr, three parts; refined paraffin wax, ten parts; refined chalk or whiting, ten parts; sodium hypophosphite, eight parts. The jelly and the wax are first melted and the other ingredients stirred in and the entire mass ground. A little citronella can be added and will cover up disagreeable odors and sweat the paste. A polishing powder may be made as follows, the quantities being by weight: Putty powder, fourteen parts; pipeclay, fourteen parts; flake sulphur, forty-two parts; tartaric acid (powdered), one and one-half parts.—Blacksmith and Wheelwright.

Gathers Road Dust.

A Manchester engineer has patented an apparatus which, it is claimed, will prevent the clouds of dust raised in dry weather by automobiles and other vehicles. The device, which is simple and inexpensive, collects the dust as it rises. The dust is drawn into conduits which are funnel shaped at the mouth and which run from the rear of the front wheels to the rear of the back wheels. These conduits are connected with a box into which the dust is driven by the pressure of air, so that end can also be accomplished by the aid of a centrifugal fan geared to the driving shaft of the automobile. The contents of the dust box can be discharged by pulling a lever at the front of the vehicle.—Consular Report.

REMOVES BURNED GASES.

Device For Cleaning Motor Cylinders of Combustion Products.

The time available for the removal of the products of combustion after the power stroke in the motor is too short to permit of complete scavenging. Here is one of the best possible conditions of getting rid of burnt gases is the problem. In view of the fact that the piston does not sweep the whole space some of the moisture, after it is burned, must depart under the force of pressure, says the Automobile Dealer and Repairer. After the terminal pressure dies out the part of the gas that is usually left behind is that which accounts for bad scavenging.

It has been found in practice that the scavenging condition may be improved by using a small diameter pipe between the transfer port on the exhaust side of each cylinder of the motor and a receiver, as shown in the accompanying illustration. A is the cylinder, B the individual exhaust pipe, C the receiver and D the arm. In this plan, owing to the small diameter of the connecting pipe, the speed of the departing exhaust product is accelerated, and the exhausting "fluid" is compacted. The gas molecules seem to partake in accompanying each other on the journey, and the tail of the gas body follows the head, and in this way the receiver is got by the combustion chamber at the tail end of the exhausting period follows in the train of the departing fluid, thus more or less completely scavenging the space. It has been found under certain well defined conditions that a vacuum will result in the cylinder after the exhaust leaves, which vacuum very readily fills with the incoming mixture.

WEIGHT OF OUR RAINFALL.

Enormous Volume of Water Precipitated in the United States.

George A. Lindsley of the Academy of Science of St. Louis, Mo., gives some interesting statistics of the rainfall of the United States not expressed in the conventional inches of depth, but in the aggregate volume and weight of the moisture that falls annually over a given area. To say one is familiar only with the customary method of stating rainfall it is somewhat startling to learn, for instance, that 45.3 cubic miles of rain fell in Missouri during the year 1890. This is decidedly more impressive than the statement that the rainfall was about forty inches.

Or the same year 1,296.4 cubic miles of water is computed to have fallen over the whole area of the United States, and the average annual rainfall is somewhat greater than this—viz., 1,306 cubic miles, weighing 6,000,000,000,000 tons. As an illustration of the fact that most of the water that falls as rain never reaches the sea through the medium of drainage, but is evaporated from the land, Mr. Lindsley shows that the discharge of the Mississippi river at St. Louis is but little greater than the volume of rainfall over the state of Missouri alone despite the enormous area drained by the river above that point.

Silk Made of Horse Flesh.

German chemists are reported to have succeeded in utilizing fibrous animal tissue, such as the flesh of dead horses, for making artificial silk. Treatment with acids disintegrates the flesh into its ultimate fibers, and these are given a silky appearance, with great durability, by a kind of tanning process. The threads produced really resemble those of the wild silkworm and are about two inches long. They may be mixed with cotton silk and can be made air tight and water tight by immersion for a couple of hours in formaldehyde, but when under pressure for four atmospheres. The material seems to promise something cheaper than the silkworm product, and experiments, etc., though attempts to spin the fibers into thread have failed.

New Copper Alloy.

A new copper alloy which has the hardness of steel and has great tensile strength has been invented by a French metallurgist. Eleven pounds of chromium are melted for one hour with seven pounds of manganese, and then 242 pounds of copper are added. The entire charge is kept at fusing temperature for half an hour, and then fifty-five pounds of nickel are added, and the mixture is heated another hour, more which forty-four pounds of zinc are added. The proportions of copper and chromium can be varied according to the use to which the alloy is to be put, but the order in which the metals are brought to melting temperature, as also the addition of aluminum, must not be changed.

FOR SHEEP PROTECTION.

Automatic Gun and Searchlight For Scaring Wild Animals.

An invention to protect sheep from the inroads of wolves, coyotes and other animals of prey upon the herds has been devised by E. C. Winchester of Thermopolis, Wyo., and has been pronounced by sheepmen of that region to be the most practical device for scaring away wild animals and keeping the sheep together at night that has yet been offered.

The machine consists of an automatic gun which will shoot a blank cartridge every thirty, forty or sixty minutes, as arranged, while a bullseye lantern is so adjusted as to revolve and throw light in every direction. It makes more than one revolution a minute, operating by clockwork of coiled spring and cogwheels—a sort of clockwork, in fact. The mechanism is inclosed in a storm and dust proof metal case and mounted on four adjustable legs. It has a weight of twenty-five pounds, so that it can be carried with the sheepman's outfit with no difficulty.

A VALUELESS METAL.

Tellurium, a Byproduct of Copper, Is Absolutely Worthless.

An immense fortune, according to economic geologists, awaits the man who can invent a use for tellurium, says the Scientific American. This mineral is one of the byproducts of copper refineries and of plants working the gold telluride ores. At present it is all thrown away, as it is absolutely no good to anybody.

Only a few years ago tungsten was in very much the same position as tellurium is now. Then it was found to be highly useful in the manufacture of incandescent lamps and tool steel, till today it would seem probable that with a cheaper supply it will become one of our most potent minor metals.

Selenium is another substance which has just come into its own. Up to a year or two ago no commercially important use for selenium was known. Being in many minerals in four years it was one of the ingredients entering into a secret process in the glass industry. It is also known among certain scientists that selenium is an agent in coloring glass red and decolorizing glass by the use of small amounts to neutralize the green of ferrous iron. A French scientist has also utilized it in an invention by which pictures can be transmitted by wire. Like tellurium, selenium is a byproduct derived from the refining of copper. Apparently about twenty tons a year are now utilized commercially.

Repairing Old Anvils.

Heat the anvil sufficiently to draw the temper and let it cool slowly as when annealing steel. Then grind or mill the surface and polish it smooth. Heat the anvil and case harden. An old anvil can be made as good as new in this manner.

MONSTER WHALES.

A Dozen Men Might Stand Upright In the Blue's Big Mouth.

Specimens of the blue or sulphur bottom whale weighing seventy-five tons and measuring eighty-seven feet have been known. The mouth is sufficiently large to permit ten or twelve men to stand upright in it, but the throat measures only about nine inches in diameter.

The "finback," closely related to the blue whale, has been called the "greyhound of the sea," for its long, slender body is built on the lines of a racing yacht, and the animal can equal the speed of the fastest steamships.

The "humpback" is the most interesting of our large whales, because of the fact that its habits are more easily studied than are those of other members of the family.

But most extraordinary of all is the square nosed sperm whale, instead of having plates of baleen, this whale carries a row of twenty to twenty-five heavy teeth on each side of the lower jaw. These fit into sockets in the roof of the mouth and assist in holding the giant squid and cuttlefish on which the enormous animal feeds. The whale seldom gets away from the warm currents; hence the sperm usually remains in the tropics and in the gulf of Japan streams.—London Family Herald.

VALUE OF A PASSPORT.

The Odd Experience of a Stranded Visitor in Paris.

"Until you go broke in a foreign country you never can realize just what a useful thing a passport is," said the returned traveler. "It not only enables you to get into a country; it also helps you to get out, sometimes in a most unexpected way. Every body abroad thinks well of a passport, but nobody sets more store by it than a pawnbroker.

"Owing to a delayed remittance I had occasion to visit one of those men in Paris. The article I offered for security was worth many times the loan requested, but he refused an advance on account of insufficiency references. My temporary address in Paris and my permanent address in Washington were not sufficient guarantee of my honesty.

"Just as the case assumed a desperate complexion the broker suggested a solution of the difficulty.

"'Have you a passport?' he asked.

"I had, at the hotel.

"'Fetch it,' he said. 'If that looks all right, I'll let you have the money.'

"Six to that time my passport had been a useless piece of luggage; then I blessed the foresight that had bidden me secure it."—Washington Star.

His Conquest.

He was a stout, pale, edition de luxe lady killer. The girl in the seat opposite him was easy to look at. Further, she looked demure and shy and unprovisioned. It really long before he had things going right—he thought. He had raised the window near her and readjusted the blind; he had fished her mag from under the seat, where the porter had shoved it; he had placed her pillow in a better position for her; he had handed her a magazine; he had looked after her comfort in every way he possibly could, and she had been very sweet about it besides. He thought he was getting along splendidly. She started to get off the train before he expected her to leave, but he carried her to the platform and helped her down. She turned and handed him a nickel with a sweet smile and the remark, "I think it is no slice of the railway company to furnish an assistant porter."—Argonaut.

Threats.

I consider it a mark of great prudence in a lady to abstain from threats or any contemptuous expressions, for neither of these awaken the enemy but rather give him time to prepare himself and the other excites his hatred and a desire to revenge himself.—Machiavelli

GOD'S WORD NOT MANY.

Mark vii. 8-13.—Lev. 19.

"For the Scriptures of God is one word and not many, and the Scriptures are not many, but the Holy Spirit."—Bengel on N. T.

THE study today shows that the Christians of nineteen centuries ago, while professing to feel thankfully for the Bible, had a perverted leaning of faithfulness in that respect, but probably gained away from Judaic Word and become infidels of human tradition. And since the same is true of Christians today the Bible is the accredited Authority but such the confusion of Christendom has its own theory, its own creed, its own interpreting. Where the light to read the scriptures, interpretation of the accepted creed is before the mind one yields it. Thus it is that with Bibles in hands, Christians are divided into six hundred different sects, with very little prospect of coming together because each one insists upon going his own creed and tactics in the study of the Bible.

If truth be lost would not all Christians rest inside and destroy their creeds, spectacles and Bibles and have as one separated us, given Bible, volume to various passages of God's Word and continue in our minds to correct? Would it not be following Heavenly counsel and Heavenly wisdom to take a different course and to begin a study of the Word of God afresh in the light which shines from one page upon another?

Eating With Unwashed Hands.

In this lesson the Pharisees inquired why the followers of Jesus were not performed customs of the day. The demons seek to cross the members of the race by causing control of the body. In many instances the mind has been completely wrecked by the operations of these "fallen angels," and the victim made a "demoniac."

Q.—If Jesus actually destroyed the devil through death by crucifixion? how should we understand Peter, years after, say to the Lord's followers, the Christians, "Your adversary the Devil goeth about as a roaring lion, seeking whom he may devour."—I Peter v. 8? (A Subscriber).

Answer.—We know of no Scripture which declares that Satan, the Devil, was slain or destroyed at the time of the Lord's crucifixion. On the contrary there are many passages to be found in the Bible in which it is set forth that Satan will not be destroyed until at the close of the thousand years of Messiah's reign, after having been found during that long period. Note the following citations and observe that they all indicate a future time from the death of the Lord Jesus as Calvary.—(Hebrews ii. 14; Revelation xx. 2, 3, 14, 15).

It is quite evident from the quotation contained in the question, as well as from the general prevalence of evil in the world, that the belief that the great Adversary is very much alive. Then again, we note that there is a difference of opinion as to the nature and that the people are greatly deceived in many particulars.

We believe that Satan shall appear at His second coming, the great enemy of the race will be bound and then, when the resurrection of the Lord shall fill the whole earth as the waters cover the deep, all shall know the truth, from the least to the greatest (Hebrews ii. 14; John i. 9).

Q.—Will you kindly show some light on the subject of the fall of some of those angels that left their former estate, their original habitation and harmony with God? Also, explain in what way they seek to control members of the human race. (J. H. W.)

Answer.—In Genesis vi. 2, we read that the "Sons of God" (the angelic host) unto themselves wives of the daughters of men." As the result of these mesalliances there were produced "giants in those days * * * mighty men, * * * men of renown." (Verse 4). Evidently, these angels went contrary to the Divine will in leaving their former habitation, the spiritual realm. For this Apostle in writing about them says that the Lord "hath reserved them to age-lasting chains, under darkness, unto the judgment of the great day." (Jude 6). These are the "spirits in prison" to whom the Lord preached in proclaiming by His death and resurrection. (I Peter 18-20). The age-lasting chains, under darkness, we signalize that their operations are restricted to the darkness of the night, until the judgment time, when they will be released from their chains."

Take your Bible and read carefully the following citations—Genesis xvii. 18; Deuteronomy xviii. 9-12; Leviticus xix. 31; xx. 6, 27; II Kings xxi. 2, 6, 9, 11; I Chronicles x. 13, 14; Acts xvi. 16-18; Galatians v. 19-21; Revelation xxi. 8; Isaiah viii. 19-20; xix. 3; Luke vii. 39; iv. 35, 36, 41. From these citations, we learn that the demons seek to cross the members of the race by causing control of the body. In many instances the mind has been completely wrecked by the operations of these "fallen angels," and the victim made a "demoniac."

Q.—Will you kindly explain the following Scripture: "Blessed and holy is he that hath understanding count the number of the beast, for it is the number of a man; and his number is six hundred three score and six."—Rev. 13:18, 17:9, 10. A. E.)

Answer.—This passage of Scripture has been interpreted to about six hundred different guesses many of which are not to which one is correct we would not presume to decide. However, we will present what appears to us to be accepted or rejected as the reader may elect so to do. In the seventh chapter of Daniel, four great world kingdoms or governments are represented under the symbols of beasts—the lion, bear, leopard, and dreadful beast with ten horns. Medo-Persia, Greece, and Rome. The first two verses of this 13th chapter of Revelation, describes still another beast, having all of the characteristics of the "dragon"—Pagan Rome, as described in Revelation xvii. 3. The governments of Rome was a combination of civil and ecclesiastical authority, the head of which was called "Pontifex Maximus," or chief priest. The old pagan arrangement of Rome was superseded by a new civil and ecclesiastical government which received all of the beastly powers and attributes of the former system. This last system is sometimes referred to in the Scriptures as "Babylon." It is the mystical Babylon" of which the ancient city was a type. Babylon, the city, is said to have been divided up into 600 squares. Anti-typical Babylon, "the beast," the false ecclesiastical system, will probably have the same number of divisions—religious territories, or sects. The number, 6, in civil-ecclesiastical combination made up of different sects, denominations, etc., (and there are over six hundred denominations in the world) is recognized, "count the number of the beast; for it is the number of a man, and (it) his number is six hundred three score and six." Then you will have the "wisdom" but the "understanding" of recognizing the "beast."

The Heavenly rider (Christ).

The Gentiles who came into membership in the Body of Christ were not required to conform themselves to the rules of the Jewish Law. For instance, a Jew, according to the Law, might not eat flesh of the swine, seashellfish, etc., neither might he eat rabbit meat, nor pork, and in a variety of other ways he was restrained and limited in his eating and drinking. Likewise of these restraints apply to Christians who have come from amongst the Gentiles and who never have been under the Law Covenant. Transformed by the renewing of their minds, they have come to acceptable and love righteousness and truth. These things they prize and not specially the privileges of eating pork or some other thing forbidden to the Jews. Joy in the Holy Spirit, fellowship with the Father and with the Son and with all who possess the spirit of righteousness, is the privilege of every member of the earthly Kingdom class, of "the Church which is the Body of Christ."

Her Possessions.

"I have two lovely little puppies," said Mrs. Towsley.

"I have met your husband," replied the man. "Who is the other one?"—Exchange.

Q.—After one has truly repented; made the good confession; been buried with Christ in baptism, and has arisen to walk in newness of life, to what Church does he belong? (R. W.)

Answer.—There is but the one true Church, and that is the Church which the Lord Jesus has been developing throughout the nineteen centuries of the Christian Era. Those who by faith accept the Lord Jesus as their redeemer and Savior, and, having been justified freely from all things, present themselves in full consecration to God, covenanting to be obedient to the Divine will even unto death, these are probationary members of the Church of Christ. Their names are enrolled in the "Lamb's book of life." (Revelation xiii. 8.) Those, who through neglect or carelessness, lose their appreciation of the privileges that are placed before them, and who become disobedient to the Lord, will have their names blotted out of the Lamb's book of life, and thus will fail to become full-fledged members of the Church. (Revelations iii. 5.) It is only to the development of Christlike characters, through faith and obedience, that those who are called to be of the bride of Christ, the Church, may make their "calling and election sure." Justification and baptism into Christ are merely the starting points of the Christian experience. He must "work out his own salvation with fear and trembling."

Q.—What are the ways in which a Christian can serve the Lord, and are there any principles laid down? (J. H.)

Answer.—There is but one way in which the Christian can serve the Lord, and that is, to be subject to the Divine will. By coming into relationship with the Lord Jesus as the Head over the Church, which is His Body, as members of God's spiritual Body, "members in particular of the Body of Christ." (I Corinthians xii. 12-27), the consecrated come under the influence of the holy spirit, which is the power of God, the enlightening agency, by which it is possible to have an understanding of the Scriptures, the inspired Word of God. (I Corinthians ii. 12-14). The operation of the holy spirit is to be in the understanding of the Scriptures. The Christian serves the Heavenly Father by being subject to, or obedient to the will of the Lord, as revealed through the Word of Truth. It is through faith and obedience that the Christlike character is developed, the disposition of meekness, kindness, goodness, and love. All of the instructions of the Scriptures are along these lines of justice, love, wisdom and power, and it is by complying with those principles that the character is moulded to make progress in righteousness.

Q.—Should a Christian pay his poll tax, and should he maintain a political position and take an interest in civil affairs? (Subscriber).

Answer.—When during our Lord's ministry, some came to Him and asked if it was lawful to pay tribute to Cæsar, He truly was "Render unto Cæsar the things which be Cæsar's, and unto God the things which be God's." (Luke xx. 21-25). The Roman government was represented in the emperor, and the nation of Israel was at that time a tributary nation to the Roman Empire. Therefore, it is lawful for the Christian to be subject to the powers that be, and to pay any and all of the taxes that may be imposed by the government under whose protecting care he may be. As to the Christian accepting a political position, perhaps, under certain conditions, it might be advisable, but in general, the law of the follower of Christ has to do with civil and political affairs, the latter it will be for his spiritual interests. There is no account of the Lord or the Apostles having anything to do with the affairs of state, or with their meddling with political matters.

Q.—What is the meaning of the "white stone" (Rev. ii. 17)? (J. P.)

Answer.—The "white stone" would beautifully represent that condition of purity of heart, or degree of righteousness to be attained by all the faithful followers of Christ. These must have their characters hardened or crystallized along the lines of Christlikeness—"white" being an emblem of purity, and "stone" being a symbol of hardness or firmness. The "new name" will be the name of the Bridegroom, to be given to the Bride, the Church of Christ. An ancient custom to which this verse may refer, was as follows:—A king, nobleman or wealthy person to show special favor, and to give an assurance of love and protection, would take a stone, a white pebble of fair size, and breaking it into two parts, would inscribe certain letters on the two parts; one to be retained by the one only by himself and the one receiving the other half. Should the one receiving the inscribed stone ever get into difficulties, he need only to present the stone to the nobleman, to receive the protection and favors which had been promised. The Rich Nobleman would represent the Lord, and all of those who have received the impress of His holy spirit upon their hearts, and bear the name of Christ, shall receive the promised favors and blessings when they shall have passed beyond the "Veil" into the "Holy of Holies."

British Miners Hold Important Annual Convention--Review of the Miners' Year--Railway Workers and Their Proposed Amalgamation--Important Strike at New British Naval Base. Big Railway Rising in Spain.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

LONDON, October 11.—The annual conference of the Miners' Federation of Great Britain was opened at Swansea, South Wales, on October 1. There were present 150 delegates as representatives of the 1,600,000 members of the Federation. Robert Smillie (Scottish Federation) presided.

The president in his fraternal address said that the past year had been the most momentous in the history of their movement, not even excepting that terrible year 1893. The year had brought them face to face with the general strike. He thought the dispute must have brought the nation a little bit nearer to the State ownership of the mines. The mine owners, although they were patriots at certain times or if there was a war, showed that they cared more about profits than patriotism. They did not show any great concern for the industries or prestige of the nation during that dispute, and research quite as much as some of the miners' leaders the entrails of the Government. The mining industry was of far too great importance for the nation, as well as the 1,000,000 workers in and about the mines, to leave it any longer in the hands of private individuals, whose chief interest was earning profits and making fortunes out of it. The conference would be asked to consider the provisions of a bill to the nationalization of mines. They had already affirmed the principle. They would now be asked to consider and approve the details so that they might set on foot a vigorous agitation for the State ownership of the coal mines of Great Britain.

During the past year, continued the miners' president, a good deal had been said about syndicalism. A good many of the wealthy and employing classes went to their beds every night in fear and trembling that they might awake, figuratively speaking, with their commercial throats cut by some of the leaders in the trade union movement. There fears were unfounded. The capitalist class would soon have their throats cut for a good, long year. They need not be afraid. And the trade union leaders might possess their souls in patience. Syndicalism was not going to ruin the trade union movement. He wanted to advise that conference and the trade union movement not to condemn a thing merely by its name. He remembered the time in the early days of their movement when the proposal that there ought to be a 5-foot minimum wage for miners and that ought to be the first charge on a ton (2,240 pounds) of coal was referred to as a conspiracy to destroy the employing class.

Syndicalism according to some was a means by which the workers in the different industries were to take over those industries and work them for the benefit of the workers, reducing the production as far as possible and increase wages to the highest point. To make it impossible to continue the industry at a profit and then take over the work by the industrial workers, independent of the workers in other industries. That in his opinion would be individualism run mad. He understood that was not syndicalism in the form in which it was advocated by those who understood. Syndicalism was an organization of each industry into a trade union common to that class and the combination of that union with the unions of other trades until as far possible a common union of all workers should be formed, not only of this country, but internationally. If that was syndicalism he did not think that many of them need object to it. He personally he felt that the time had come when a forward movement should be made to widen the influence of their trade unions. He was one of those who believed that the power for improving the condition of the people by the trade union movement was only starting. He believed it must be from a closer connection of all the trade unions together. Your correspondent has given rather full expression of Mr. Stimmie's views as indicative of a prominent note in modern British trade union development.

The work of the convention then got into full swing. The resolution was carried unanimously, to secure the abolition of the three shift system. It was urged that the continuous work of eight hours throughout the whole of the twenty-four hours was dangerous. The conference further voted that there should be secured by legislation state insurance for those miners whose age or infirmity may debar them from working under the Minimum wage Act. The Minimum Wage Act was several times attacked but the following resolution was lost by 314,000 votes to 378,000: "That the Minimum Wage Act was quite meaningless and ineffective for the betterment of the workers. The basic part of which should be asked to bring in a bill with a view to establishing the principle of wages consistent with the grade of employment.

The Federation adopted a resolution to take steps for securing for all adult surface workers a minimum wage of not less than $1.25 a day, and after a lengthy discussion referred to the executive committee to report at once for an advance of 20 per cent on all contractors, piece-workers and day workmen employed by miners.

MINERS VICTIMS OF GREED.

WHEELING, W. Va., Oct. 14.—The Intelligencer, published in this city, in commenting upon the controversy now existing between the coal miners in the Paint and Cabin Creek coal fields, says in part: "One of the most serious comp aints of the striking miners is the company store system. In these mine communities the maintenance of a store by the mine companies is almost a necessity, but it is not necessary to charge exorbitant prices for all goods sold to miners, for it is necessary to compel miners to buy of the company store should they be able to buy elsewhere. The following is a list of prices charged in the company stores, and is sworn to by the miners before the investigating commission: Flour, $9.25 per barrel; breakfast bacon, 25 cents per pound; tomatoes, 20 cents a can; peaches, 20 cents a can; corn, 15 cents a can; apricots, 25 cents a can; beans loose white, 15 cents per quart; potatoes, $2.50 a bushel; lard, 15 cents per pound; 12½ cents per pound for sugar; miner's oil, $1 a gallon; powder, $1.75 per keg; miners' rerckles, haphazard methods that seem to exist in our mine sections. Scrubs, 15 cents per box. It will be seen that this partial list of prices enlarged from 10 per cent to 50 per cent higher than the average market price for the same goods generally. The company store selling at such prices puts those who buy of it. Miners compelled to buy of it lose a considerable portion of their wages. * * * Legislation reaching the 'pluck me' store evil might very properly be suggested. The industrial interests of West Virginia are too important and the cost of such disturbances as now prevail in the mine regions is too great to permit a continuance of the pluck me store and the armed guard must go. Decent living conditions can be introduced into mine regions. Men must be paid living wages and be allowed to spend the wage free and independently. Such a pea against organized labor is unjust and foolish. The miners of West Virginia are not going to play into the hands of the miners of Ohio and Pennsylvania. They have ample legislature to protect their own interests and if organized into a union they will not only be able to protect themselves against unfair operators, but they will be equally able to protect their interests in their district against the demands of competing districts of classifying him as a Christian. A people who were familiar with the letter of the Golden Rule, never thought that one man might save himself, "I have $300. I cannot keep it while others want. should not desire others to keep $300 while I wanted. Therefore, according to the command 'Whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them,' I cannot keep $300 while others are in want. So I will give it away."

So they took this incomprehensible man away and held an inquest to see what sort of insanity he was afflicted with! Yet, in Jersey day these Christians who learned direct y of Him did the very thing this man was called crazy for doing. They sold all they had and gave to the poor. They were communists, "having all things in common." And another crazy thing existed—we are told that "none wanted." They were poor, but they felt no poverty. Neither would any feel poverty today if all men would do wisely what this New York workingman did unwisely. There is enough for us all, if the Golden Rule were kept. Enough for all, were not real Christianity so far from our souls as to seem insanity! Sometimes one feels, in all reverence, that those are not far wrong who assert that Jesus would be adjudged insane in any American community.

BERKLEY'S CHILDREN'S GARDENS.

DURING the past year the children's gardens on the University of California campus have given 200 of more Berkley children an insight into nature. The departure was in charge of Professor Stebbins. The little tots, barred from the privileges of a playground, have found in these gardens a wonderful new land, where nature manifested itself; where they learned the mystery of growth, where they found recreation that tended to bodily vigor; where they were taught the joy of work; where they learned the rudiments of business administration and civics with their little market and banking system, and their staff of officers, the mayor, councilmen, street superintendent and other dignitaries. Meanwhile, there have been almost as many Berkeley mothers who had the assurance that their little ones were engaged in helpful play-work in who seems surroundings off the streets, away from danger, and under the kindly, character-building influence of Professor Stebbins. The work started in Berkeley should be carried on by school authorities of every city in this country, because it is one of the best influences, exclusive of the home influence, which have entered into the lives of the children.

HAT CASE AND SHERMAN LAW.

NOBODY should be surprised if the trusts should take advantage of the Dandbury hatters' case to stir up popular prejudice against the Sherman anti-trust law. Under that law a verdict was rendered in the United States Court at Hartford, Conn., yesterday holding the United Hatters' Union of America, a labor organization, guilty of conspiracy to restrain trade, and awarding damages to the amount of $80,000 (which becomes $240,000 under the provisions of the Sherman law) to the firm of hat manufacturers which the union is accused of having boycotted.

John Mitchell, Samuel Gompers and other executive labor leaders testified that no orders had ever been issued by the union for the boycott, but the verdict of guilty was returned nevertheless, and the union is threatened with the loss of $240,000 of its funds, while at the same time trades unions in general are threatened with dissolution having for its purpose the tying up or confiscation of their defense funds and the intimidation of their officers and members.

The suit has been in the courts for many years. The lawyers for the hat manufacturers think that yesterday's verdict foreshadows final victory for them. Possibly they are right. But even so, that victory will be no argument for the repeal of the Sherman anti-trust law. There is every indication that the courts have long been prepared to seize on it to make that use of it, but the workers of the country should beware of falling into such a trap. If the Sherman anti-trust law can be used against labor unions, it should simply be amended so as to release labor unions from its provisions. And as a matter of fact, a bill to that purpose has already been introduced in Congress. To repeal the act in its entirety, thus giving the trusts free hand to plunder the people, is not at all necessary in order to protect the organizations of workingmen for proper purposes. This should be the answer of organized labor to anybody who tries to turn it against the anti-trust law on account of yesterday's verdict. It should make the same reply to the politicians on this point that it makes to Gary, Perkins and Morgan, all of whom are trying to get the trust-law repealed to that they may reap profit from monopoly without running the risk of prison.

CAUSE OF HIGH MEAT PRICES.

IF THE good times which got under such strong headway throughout the country during the last few months should continue after the election next month, the notably high meat prices of recent days would cause the consumer less uneasiness than if business conditions were unfavorable and employment irregular. It may be that prosperity this winter will be so general and so pronounced as to make the price of beef not a pressing issue. The fact is, however, that there are reasons for believing it will sell considerably higher before it sells lower. To say nothing of price manipulation by the big Chicago packers, there are purely natural causes at work which threaten to make the meat bill decreasingly a luxury, wherefore it behooves American housewives to study the most advantageous cooking of the cheaper cuts. In a despatch from Chicago that with the population of the United States increasing steadily and rapidly, the raising of cattle steadily declines. Here are some figures obtained from the last census to which the National Labor Tribune invites the reader's attention.

The United States in 1910 had 5,918,000 less beef cattle, 9,100,000 less sheep, and 1,700,000 fewer hogs than ten years earlier. Thus the total number of standard meat animals was less by 16,718,000, while the population in the same decade has increased no less than 14,715,000. Inevitably meat products rose in price since the supply per capita had actually declined. The number of beef cattle, sheep and hogs in the United States is now less than one per capita of population. Argentina, the cattle-raising country which competes with our packers in Europe markets, has 13½ meat animals per capita of population. Uruguay has 24 meat animals per capita of population. It is no wonder that these countries have cheap meat and can undersell our packers in Europe.

We are far from believing that the beef trust does not extort unfair prices from consumers. The trust is greedy and its lawless monopolization of the home market demands that the anti-trust law shall be enforced upon it at any cost. But that is only a part of the remedy for the high price of American meat. Something to encourage cattle-raising must also be done. A western paper declares that "every steer that is raised for the market is hardly ready for slaughter until about three years of age, and so it takes from three to five acres of ground to support the steer during the time of its development and as ground rents in this country are $2 to $10 per acre at the present time, it is not very hard to account for the high price of beef." An investigation, under government auspices, by honest and impartial experts, might disclose means by which our whole cattle-raising industry can be relived.

INSANE!

SOMETIMES the United States is referred to as a Christian nation. And sometimes a thing occurs which enables us to see just what sort of Christianity we have to prove the claim withal. Such a thing occurred the other day in New York city. A workingman had saved up nearly $300. He appeared on the street and began giving this money away. To any who wanted he gave.

At once people in authority were charged with the duty of classifying this man. Why did he give money away? He was not a millionaire. He needed and had actually earned this money. He seemed to be giving it to others because he wanted them to have it. It gave him more pleasure to give something he himself actually could use than to use it himself. A Christian community, so-called, never

DR. R. C. MACLAURIN, PRESIDENT OF BOSTON "TECH."

A SCOTCHMAN by birth and a New Englander by training is president of that thoroughly New England scientific school the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He is Dr. Richard C. Maclaurin, who, from being almost unknown to the general public when he was elected four years ago, has come to be one of the most popular college presidents in the country as well as a very successful administrator of the affairs of the institution. One of the events that have served to draw general attention to President Maclaurin is the gift to M. I. T. of $2,000,000 from a living but anonymous donor. Born in Edinburgh forty-two years ago, Dr. Maclaurin spent his boyhood in New Zealand, but returned to the mother country for his university education at Cambridge. He specialized in law and mathematics and in 1898 was elected professor of mathematics at the University of New Zealand, of the law faculty of which he later became dean. He was head of the department of physics of Columbia university when he was called to his present position.

List of the Trades Union Members Who Are Candidates for Congress--Analysis of Latest Report of the Bureau of Immigration--Interesting Statement from Bureau of Mines on Progress in First-Aid Work.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—While it is not yet possible to get an absolutely correct list of trade unionists nominated on the various tickets for Congress, yet the following is accurate so far as the present information at hand permits concerned. William B. Wilson, from Pennsylvania; Isaac R. Sherwood, from Ohio; Charles B. Smith, from New York; James T. McDermott, from Illinois; John Hinkle Farr, of Pennsylvania; Robert E. Lee, of Pennsylvania; James P. Maher, of New York; Victor L. Berger, of Wisconsin; David J. Lewis, of Maryland; Frank Buchanan, of Illinois; Edward E. Roberts, of Nevada, and William J. Carey, of Wisconsin, have all been renominated and are making the canvass for re-election. Congressman Martin retires at the end of the Sixty-second Congress, but will not be succeeded by a card man. Congressman Hughes, of New Jersey has retired as a member of the House of Representatives, and has made a determined canvass for the nomination for United States Senator from New Jersey. Carl Anderson, of Ohio, who was a candidate for re-election, has met with a real accident a short time ago which resulted in his death. John A. Key, Mr. Anderson's private secretary and a member of Stenographers, Typewriters, Bookkeepers, and Assistants' Union No. 11,771 of the District of Columbia, has been selected to make the race as the nominee of the Anderson. Elmer E. Greenawalt, a member of the Cigarmakers Union, has been nominated as a candidate for Congress against Mr. Key on the Democratic ticket in Pennsylvania. John L. Young, of San Francisco, a tailor from molder, is running on the Progressive Republican ticket for Congress. Edward Keating, of Colorado, formerly a member of Typographical Union, is running for Congress-at-Large. Dr. Healey, President of the International Union of Stationary Firemen, is running for Congress on the Progressive Republican ticket in New York. Charles A. Sessner, of Kansas City, a union stereotyper, is one of the coal miners' union, is running for Congress on the Democratic ticket. John Walker, of Danville, Ill., a union coal miner, is running for Congress on the Socialist ticket. John J. Casey, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., a union plumber, is running on the Democratic ticket for Congress. Sam Price a union cigarmaker, has been nominated to the Senate (New York) district to run for Congress in place of Mr. Sulzer, who has received the nomination for Governor. In the State James W. Sheahan, of Troy, N. Y., a union street railroad man, is running on the Progressive Republican ticket for Congress. John G. Taylor, a union machinist, is running for Congress in the Sacramento district of California, on the Socialist ticket. This completes the list so far as the headquarters of the American Federation of Labor has official and accurate information.

The bureau of immigration and Naturalization, conducted by the Department of Commerce and Labor, has just issued an August immigration bulletin. As has been the case for several months past, the largest number of immigrants coming from any one country are southern Italians, the number of these nationality landing during the month of August reaching 14,918. The total number of southern Italians landing in America during that month was 20,225, of which 5,307 were males over 14 years of age. The total number of immigrants for August was 33,317. Unskilled laborers of the August landing amounted to 13,181; servants, 1,269; agricultural laborers and tailors, 526; mechanics not specified, 722, the balance following occupations both skilled and unskilled. The departure of aliens during August reached 25,225, 6,529 of these also southern Italians. There were 6 barred during the month mentioned for contract cases, 1,922. The total number of immigrants landing during the fiscal year 1912 numbered 838,172. These figures from the 48,416 below the immigration figures of 1911. Of the August immigrants 23,952 were destined to New York, 11,070 for Pennsylvania, 7,053 for Massachusetts, 7,007 for Illinois, 6,966 for Ohio, 4,726 for New Jersey, 3,864 for Michigan, with the balance distributed among the various States of the Union, including 5,458 that departed by way of the Canadian borders.

The Bureau of Mines has just issued a bulletin in reference to devices for lifesaving. H. M. Wilson, engineer in charge of the Pittsburgh experimental station of the bureau, says: "Experience indicates that the best results are effected by turning into first-aid work at least one mine work-

FEDERATION FOR COMPENSATION ACT.

The Pennsylvania Federation of Labor after a two-day discussion last Friday approved the tentative workmen's compensation draw n by the Industrial Accidents commission, appointed by Governor John K. Tener. President John H. Mason was empowered to appoint a committee to recommend several amendments to the commission and not to the legislature direct. These amendments summarized are: That compensation should be for the death of a husband continuing for the children should the wife die, that when lump sum settlements are made in lieu of weekly payments they be calculated that wives be paid compensation for death of husbands when the cases are arranged; that if an injured man enjoyed compensation dies from some other cause the compensation be continued to his family and other minor provisions.

SANITARIANS OF LAAOR

CINCINNATI, O., Oct. 15.—Representatives of the various labor unions in this city have formed an organization to be known as the "Sanitarians of Organized Labor," the object of which is to spread the gospel of sanitation. The work of the new society will be carried on with the cooperation of the health department. It will begin a systematic study of State laws and city ordinances affecting sanitary matters, and will endeavor to present the knowledge it acquires to the labor unions in the city.

Pastor Russell's Sermon

BLOOD ATONEMENT WAS NECESSARY.

Christ's Sacrifice Evidence of Justice of Divine Law—The Need in Pulpit and Pew—Pastor Declares It Is a Correct Appreciation of the Value of Blood Atonement For Sin—Failure to Understand the Philosophy of This Bible Teaching Is Leading Many Noble Minds to the Brink of Unbelief—Higher Criticism Infidelity.

LYNN, Mass., October 12.—One of Pastor Russell's discourses here today was from the text, "Without the shedding of blood, there is no remission of sins." (Hebrews ix, 22.) He said—

We have come again to the time of the year when the people of Israel, under the Mosaic arrangement, began their civil year. When God called them as a nation out of Egypt it was under the provision that He would make a Covenant with them through Moses. That Covenant was that if they would keep the Divine Law they should be released from all condemnation and have ever-lasting life. The alternative, failure, meant punishment with death. If they would obey the Law they should not only live everlastingly, but be qualified to be Abraham's specially promised seed, through whom all nations would be inducted into the keeping of the Law and into the attainment of ever-lasting life.

But God foreknew that they could not keep His Law because they, like the remainder of the race, were imperfect through the fall and God's Law is the measure of a perfect man's ability—"Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind; and thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." Surely none but a perfect man could fully live up to this requirement. Hence the Israelites continued to die the same as other people notwithstanding their Law Covenant.

But God, foreknowing their inability to keep this Law, arranged for their continuance in His favor under that Covenant by reviving it every year on the tenth day of the seventh month, the Day of Atonement. On that Day the year of their favor and relationship to God terminated.

LET US EXAMINE THE TYPE.

Before looking for the antitype, let us understand the type. The sacrifice for sins occurred on the Day of Atonement, and consisted of two parts: first, a bullock was slain and its blood sprinkled in the Most Holy, and through it Atonement offered for the sins of the priestly tribe only; then the high priest took his second-any offering, a consecrated goat, and treated it as he had treated the bullock. And the blood subsequently was sprinkled in the Most Holy, "on behalf of all the people," all the remaining tribes of Israel.

Why were these animals killed? What is the thought which lies behind this death of an animal? What lesson did God wish to teach in type? The condemnation on the Israelites for the violation of the Divine Law was not a sentence to eternal torment, nor to Purgatory, but a death sentence. This is clearly stated. By Divine commandment, all the people were called up between Mt. Ebal and Mt. Gerizim, and God's Law was read in their hearing. Certain blessings were read, which were to be the rewards of obedience. Contrariwise, curses were read, which were to be the penalty for violation of that Law. The curses related to death, sickness and disease.

These condemnations on Israel for failure to keep God's Law given at Sinai agree perfectly with the condemnation imposed upon Adam and, through him, upon his race, for failure to obey the Divine Law originally given, which was "written in his heart, his character, when he was a perfect man in the image of God. Hence Israel under the Law Covenant was merely condemned afresh to death—not to eternal torment, nor to Purgatory.

Then, as Israel typified the world, the Atonement Day was arranged for them as it will be on a larger, grander scale applicable to them and to all of Adam's race eventually. The death of the two animals, the bullock and the goat, specially consecrated by the priest, effected a covering for the sins of the people for another year, while they tried afresh to demonstrate their loyalty to God and his righteousness by obedience to the Law; but only failure could and did result. By the deeds of the Law shall no man be justified in God's sight, because all flesh is imperfect, weak, degenerate.

Thus year by year continuously for over sixteen hundred years the Israelites kept up their attempt to gain favor by obedience to the terms of their Law Covenant. And year by year they failed afresh, until Jesus came to be the antitypical Priest, in order that He might eventually become the antitypical King of Israel and the world. His priestly office was necessary to lay the foundation for His kingly office. As a King He could not uplift to perfection Adam and his multitudinous race contrary to the Divine sentence of death which rested upon all because all sinned and were alienated from God.

It was necessary, therefore, that, in order to become the Messianic King, Jesus must first be the Redeemer of men. He must first provide the sacrifice for sins. Then, applying it to the satisfaction of Justice, afterward by virtue of the right and authority thus secured, He could undertake the uplifting and blessing of all mankind.

THE ANTITYPICAL BLOOD ATONEMENT.

The great lessons taught by Israel's experience of more than sixteen centuries were—

(1) That all are sinners.

(2) That no sinner can justify himself.

(3) That an Atonement for Sin is necessary before Divine favor can be fully obtained for Israel and all mankind.

(4) That since the penalty is death, only by a sacrificial death can sinners be released from the death penalty.

We all know the arguments used by those who oppose the Bible doctrine of blood Atonement for sin. They claim that it is necessary, that God could just as easily as not cancel all sins without requiring the death of either a bullock or a goat, or of The Man Christ Jesus, or anybody else.

But are not such arguments illogical? Is it not illogical to suppose that the great Supreme Judge of the Universe would make a law and a penalty for it, inflict the penalty justly, and afterwards set aside the penalty without a reason? Surely no earthly judge would do so, and surely a Heavenly Judge could not do so without infracting the principles of His own Government; for if it is right to impose a death sentence as a penalty for sin, and to allow that sentence to be in effect for four thousand years before Christ, and to allow our entire race to suffer under it for that time, would it not be unjust to afterwards institute a change, set aside the Law, the Curse, the penalty for sin? Surely we all agree to this!

Some, however, will say, Surely God never made such a penalty. Why should He make a penalty which would cause the death of His Son, or the death of anybody, to eradicate it, to set it aside? We answer that God did make such a penalty; for it is manifest that our entire race is a dying one, which has been under the Reign of Sin and Death for Six Great Days of a thousand years each. Moreover, the Bible declares that God pronounced the penalty—inflicted the death penalty as we have it—for the very purpose and object of the death of His Son, that thus He might give evidence, both to angels and to men, that His Law is inviolable, but that His Justice is fully equaled by His Love.

"CHRIST'S BETTER SACRIFICES."

If the Jewish Law gave a view that a sacrificial death would be necessary for the cancellation of human sin, it also gave a hint that the death of bulls and of goats was not sufficient for the cancellation of human sin; because the sacrifices of the Jewish Atonement Day merely covered sin for one year, and did not actually cancel it at all.

The sacrifice was of a proper kind in life—but the life was not of sufficient value. Why? Because the Law of Justice would not be satisfied to accept the death of a bullock and of a goat as the equivalent for the forfeited life of Father Adam. If an angel had sinned and been condemned to death, only the death of an angel of the same grade and state would have constituted a full offset or Ransom for be life. Because the very meaning of the word Ransom is anti-lutron—a corresponding price.

So neither could an angel's death redeem a man, because it would not be the giving of a price to correspond. Neither could our Redeemer, in His pre-human condition, as the Logos, the Word, have given His life for Father Adam and the race because that would not have been a corresponding price—a Ransom-price or anti-lutron. To redeem Father Adam required the death of a man—and nothing more, nothing less, would do. Therefore it was that the Son of God left the glory which he had with the Father as the Logos and was made flesh and became The Man Christ Jesus, "that He, by the grace of God, might taste death for every man."

(1 Peter 1, 10, 11.) In harmony with this, St. Paul writes to Timothy (1 Timothy ii, 5, 6) that The Man Christ Jesus gave Himself a Ransom for all. Thus the apostle again declares, "As by a man (Adam) came death (not eternal torment), by a man also (Christ) comes the resurrection of the dead; for as all in Adam die, even so all in Christ shall be made alive."—1 Corinthians xv, 21, 22.

In this last text notice careful! (and also everywhere else in the Scriptures) that the contrasts are not heaven and hell, not joy and suffering, but life and death—resurrection life through Christ, death by Adam. Notice also that the penalty paid for Adam's sin by The Man Christ is not an eternal torment penalty, nor a purgatorial penalty, but a death penalty. Christ died for our sins, according to the Scriptures."—(1 Corinthians xv, 3.)

We notice again that it was only one man Adam who was originally in God's mind and was sentenced to death; that all of our race suffered death and its degradation by heredity and not by virtue of a death sentence; hence it was possible that the death of The Man Christ should constitute a full offset to the demands of Justice against Father Adam, and would incidentally include all of Adam's race.

THE REAL SIN-ATONEMENT.

God arranged Israel's typical Atonement Day as a type of the real Atonement Day, which began at Jesus' baptism and has continued ever since, and will continue for another thousand years in the future. The killing of the bullock on behalf of the priestly family found its antitype in the death of Jesus, which began with His consecration at Jordan and was completed at Calvary about three and a half years later. As a Man, Jesus offered up sacrifically His human nature, the body which He had taken for the specific purpose of sacrifice. That sacrifice was satisfactory to God, as was indicated by His raising up Jesus from the dead.

Therefore, we are assured that our Lord was not only raised up out of death, but raised up as a New Creature, to a still higher nature than that which He had before He undertook the Father's commission to be the world's Redeemer, Prophet, Priest and King. His resurrection was (Philippians iii, 10) to glory, honor and immortality, far above human nature, angelic nature, principalities and powers and every name that is named.—Ephesians i, 21.)

The risen Son of God remained forty days with His disciples, and when He ascended up on high He appeared in the presence of God, and according to the type made application of the merit of His sacrifice for the Household of Faith—the antitypical Levites. The acceptance of His Atonement Sacrifice, and incidentally the acceptance of His waiting followers, was manifested by the descent of the Holy Spirit at Pentecost.

ADDING MEMBERS TO HIS BODY.

As Aaron in the type, by Divine direction, accepted his sons to be members with him in the priesthood, under his headship, so in the antitype, Christ Jesus during this Gospel Age has been accepting members to the Royal Priesthood, of which He is the Head. And these are taken from the Levites, for which class the Atonement was made by Aaron in the type and by Jesus in the antitype.

Aaron in the type, after sprinkling the blood of the bullock and making Atonement for the House of Levi, came forth and slew the goat. So Christ, having finished making Atonement for the sins of the antitypical Levites, came forth at Pentecost to bless them and to accept them as joint-sacrificers and as joint-heirs. The goat which Aaron slew as the second portion of his sin-offering, represented all the faithful footstep followers of Jesus in the nearly nineteen centuries that have elapsed since Pentecost. Respecting these Jesus prayed, saying "I pray not for the world, but for those whom Thou hast given Me; * * * neither pray I for these alone, but for all those who shall be love on Me through their word, that they all may be one, as Thou, Father, and I are one"—"I in them and Thou in Me."—John xvii, 9, 20-23.

Incidentally, Jesus as the High Priest in glory began at Pentecost the sacrificing of the goat class, His faithful followers. The work has continued ever since. The sufferings of Jesus have thus been prolonged for centuries. As St. Peter declares, "The prophets spake of the sufferings of Christ and of the glory that should follow." (1 Peter 1, 10, 11.) The sufferings have not yet been completed, and hence the glory has not yet come. When the full number foreordained of God shall have faithfully finished their course in death in the sacrifices of the antitypical Day of Atonement will be at an end. The great High Priest with His Body will pass beyond the second veil into the heavenly glories, the First Resurrection completing the transfer. The blessing of the people will then be in order.

"I AM JESUS WHOM THOU PERSECUTEST."

That Jesus thus recognizes His followers as His members is clearly attested by the Apostle. In their flesh they are counted as members of Jesus; as New Creatures, spirit-begotten, they are counted as members of The Christ. Thus Jesus said to Saul of Tarsus, speaking of His followers, "Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou Me?" "I am Jesus whom thou persecutest." (Acts ix, 4, 5.) The same thing is true of any truly consecrated follower of Jesus.

While such are in the world and suffer, the sufferings of Jesus are not complete. And the glory of Christ can be fully attained only in proportion as the sufferings of Christ are completed. In the type, all this was pictured in the things which happened to the Lord's goat, which typified the faithful, sacrificed members of the flesh of Jesus. As the goat passed through all the experiences of the bullock, so the footstep followers of Jesus are to have similar trials, difficulties, opposition and persecution to those which came to the Master.

With the completion of the Priest of Glory at the end of the sufferings of the flesh will come the effusion of the blood on behalf of Israel and all of Adam's race of every nation. In the type Aaron took the blood of the goat, his secondary sacrifice, and sprinkled it on the Mercy Seat on behalf of all the people of Israel, representing all who will become the people of God of every nation. Forthwith Divine acceptance of these sacrifices spoke the forgiveness of the sins of all.

So in the antitype. When our Lord the second time sprinkles the blood in the Most Holy, the sins of all the people—the whole world—will be cancelled. At the same instant the Redeemer will take them over as a purchased possession and, under the Divine arrangement, He will establish over them His Kingly power. He will reign for their blessing and uplifting. As the great Prince of Glory He will bind the Prince of Darkness, Satan, and destroy all his works of evil and lift poor humanity back into harmony with God—all the willing and obedient.

Oh, how this should thrill our hearts and cause us to appreciate the Wisdom as well as the Justice of God and His great love manifested in the Plan which has required ages for development, but which was in the Divine Purpose from before the foundation of the world!

Appreciations

Pennsylvania, Oct. 13.

I am not a poet, or the son of a earthly poet, but would not say that I am not the son of a heavenly poet, for among all things else we believe our Heavenly Father to be so talented if we might so put it, yet if I personal have no such talents, I am glad to find so many of Christ's body members have this talent as to help clear the heavenly atmosphere, not only of smoky Pittsburgh, but elsewhere in the low or the world here and there, we also appear from time to time in your valuable paper, which also includes such grand helpful features as that of Pastor Russell's Sermons. Here is a little poem that greatly appeals to my heart and soul, perhaps it would be helpful also to others.

"THREE GATES OF GOLD."

Let every thought thy lips would utter pass
Three gates of gold—
But, if through those it fails to pass, then
Let it not be told;
And o'er each gate in silver letters written thou
Wilt find,
Above the first one, "Is it true?" the second,
"Is it kind?"
And "Is it necessary?" O'er the third
the last.
Then regard thy thoughts, let none escape, save those Thee gates have passed.

I herein enclose a money order to renew my subscription for you excellent paper. I am taking the Tribune solely on account of the Sermons of Pastor Russell and the other religious features you print for which I thank you. These are much appreciated.

With best wishes for the continued success of your labors, I am,

Yours truly,

Arkansas, Oct. 13.

For one year I have been enjoying Brother Russell's Sermons for your good paper, and as I do not want to lose a single issue of the paper, I am sending herewith draft for renewal of my subscription and also that of Brother A. H. Dooley, who is a warm friend of the Tribune, and through whom I first found the paper. We appreciate it very much for the Sermons and the Question Box and the Sunday School Lessons, and also for the nice print, but especially because of the wonderful Truths which are so dear to the hearts of Brother Dooley, beloved Brother Russell, as in no other paper that I have seen, outside of the Watch Tower and other publications of the International Bible Students Association, of which the Truths are the only line of religious teaching on the earth that is in accord with the Word of God, and the only line of teaching on the earth which makes the Bible in harmony with itself, and the only line of teaching on the earth which does not earnestly contend for the fundamental plain teachings of the Bible.

There are many other papers that pretend to print Bible Sermons, but they are so badly emasculated, that the heart hasn't a chance to feed, and only those who cannot get the Truth use can afford to read the others. I am telling the Truth, and as fast as my time on them expires, but so long as I am in the flesh, and so long as you continue to print the Sermons and other matter in the same line, as you are now doing, I do not want your paper to stop, nor to miss a single issue in me.

May the Lord abundantly bless you in your good work.

Respectfully yours for the Truth,

THE PASSING OF THE TITANIC.

Proudly she lay in the harbor,
Awaiting her maiden trip—
Titanic the modern wonder
Of the world—in the line of a ship.
Her builders had constructed,
With never a chance for a flaw,
From the best of the world's production,
Skilled workmen were in employ.

Massive the beams to support her,
Massive the plates of steel
That formed for the ship two bottoms
That had been hydraulically sealed
With thousands and thousands of rivets,
Weighing over a thousand tons,
And the wonderful ocean liner
Was by electricity run.

The anchors, propellers and "boes hem,"
The "fin keels" and Bilton bulkheads,
Spoke of the care that was taken,
To conquer the ocean's dreads.
His eleven steel decks—the staterooms
Spaciously furnished and full of light.
The "sun-deck" for recreation—
All told—she was a grand sight.

Thus massive and stately they made her,
So strong she was said to be,
With the greatest of ease and safety,
She could cross any storm-swept sea.
The largest and grandest vessel,
That ever on sea set sail;
Surely against her structure,
No power could ever prevail.

Eager they gave her her cargo,
Anxious to be on their way,
To show to the world her grandeur,
That homage to her they might pay.
Many the faces that thronged her
As she sailed on her maiden trip;
Over two thousand people
Were on the unshakable ship.

Gaily they waved their 'kerchiefs
As they sailed from the harbor pier,
With never a thought of danger,
With never a doubt or fear,
That the powerful ship that bore them,
Toward the distant land, could be Able to meet disaster
In the vast of the unconquered sea.

Greatly she swept the harbor,
Freighted with human souls,
Bound for the western country,
Bound for the land of gold,
Sailed on the giant Titanic,
Into the restless sea—
Little dreamin' that in his waters
Lay their final destiny.

Calm, uneventful she voyaged
Record time had been made,
Till the last night she sailed on the ocean,
In peace and beauty arrayed.
On the night of the fourteenth of April,
Hadley sang through the sea.
The Titanic was nearing an object,
That soon her master would be.

Down from the northern country,
Sparkling in radiance bright,
Gilded another monster,
On that same eventide night.
And there it seem'd calm, exultant,
Held it firmly in its place,
Was the forward resting palace
Would be clasped in its embrace.

Happy the evening on shipboard,
Just as if they had been on the land,
In rich dress and comfy jewels,
They had listened to the band,
And as time drew on toward midnight,
Scattering to their rooms at last,
Many "little boys you in the morning,"
Ringing gaily as they passed.

Some were sitting in their staterooms,
Still in evening dress attired,
A few on the decks were scattered
Others had already retired,
Gliding on through the stillness
Of the cold, calm, starry night,
At tulspeed, unwarned, the Titanic
Struck the iceberg with all her might.

Oh, pitiful scene that followed,
Nightmare was turned to death,
When the hull of the great Titanic
Broke like a trait'rous breath;
Broke where the boundless ocean
Surged as far as the eye could see.
With a shuddering, quivering lament
At the victims that could not flee.

Broke on the glittering monster
That came down from the northern land,
With no other vessel nigh them,
That could lend a helping hand.
Broke—treacherous waters filled her
In less than three hours of time.
Over her massive structure
Waves of ocean sublime.

From the awful scene on the vessel,
Ere she sank to a watery tomb,
We will pass—and only mention
The cold of the icebergs as a doom,
Of all the ship's precious cargo
Of over two thousand souls
Even the eight hundred survivors
Ever reached the land of gold.

O, from a scene so appalling,
What a lesson may be learned.
We only pause to heed it.
Here from it we shall be turned
By the hour nearer around us,
We are daily called to hear,
Soon forgetting the Titanic
That was so filled with earth and care.

It is this; With all his achievements,
Wealth and power at his command,
With the best of the world's production
done,
How helpless and frail is man.
In the face of his greatest enemy
That's been his for six thousand years,
That has filled the world with sorrow
And flooded the earth with tears.

Grim death and its powerful servants
Of earth—the seas and the storms—
Have never but once been conquered,
Only once been made to conform
To the voice of man—but once heeded
The rebuke He calm'd gave
In the long years they have ravished
And over the earth prevailed.

And this but another reminder
Of the terrible reign of death,
The result of disobedience,
Way back in the Eden nest.
Only another reminder
That without God, man would be
No more than the bit of wreckage
Tossed on the foaming sea.

Oh, indeed, dark and appalling
Would the things of earth now seem,
If beyond the black horizon
Had not God's great love been seen.
Surely His through man was working,
If the storms and sea obeyed;
Surely He the power had given,
If to man the dead were raised.

But the cure that these were conferred
Is it really, truly so?
Why this reign of death so low?
If for one, why not for all times?
Why do men still sicker bow?
What advantage is the victory
If it ends not death's career?

Know ye not, in days long gone by,
On the shores of Galilee,
That the perfect man, Christ Jesus,
Did obedience of all these?
And within the Book, as scripture,
"Jesus conquered once for all."
Surely that must mean redemption,
Soul deliverance from the fall!

Why does dying still continue
As it has since Jesus died?
To loosen the "unseen mystery,"
Choosing for himself a "bride"
Choosing for himself a people
Out of every kindred, nation—
A "little flock" to reign with Him,
Sitting on the "Great White Throne."

Rule—this earth will be their kingdom
And their work will be to raise
Out of sin and degradation—
Out of sorrow and the grave,
Lead them back to the perfection
Wherein God created man,
All the willing and obedient,
All who keep their just command.

Every baneful word and action,
Every impure thought will be Checked here in a heart number
Marm shall come to one of these.
Do ye raise one another?
Do you'd have them do to you;
Love your neighbor as your own self—
This will be the Golden Rule.

There will be no more dying,
No more sighing, no more pain,
When the thousand years are ended,
Earth Christ Jesus and reign,
In at-one-ment with Jehovah
At upon its arms shall be.
Then He'll take the sin and infallibility,
Each mental life shall see.

Life eternal for the faithful,
Hell destroy all those who sin.
Death and Satan will be dead,
Be as if they'd never been.
Lost will be the songs of triumph,
For the Lamb that sit adore,
And praises unto God the Father
Will ring from afore-more.

Is it long ere all these blessings
Will come to us here on earth?
Is it long ere all these sorrows
Of earth will be turned to mirth?
Nay—the "Bride" is almost ready,
Bridegroom has already come.
Soon will all the signs of waiting,
Ere He sits her on His Throne.

But before He sends the blessings,
All the earth must look to Him.
And will take a back seat while,
Such as ne'er before has been.
For these storms are hard and wicked,
Loving self and loving gold.
What if that poor stranger passing
Has no payment—suffer cold?

What if yonder toiling brother
Sinks beneath his heavy load?
What if sorrow, want and sickness
Fill with sighs his humble abode?
Man is not his brother's keeper,
Why should all this bother him?
They are driven to save great the effort,
If they do what's asked of them!

Oh, 'twill take scenes more appalling
Than Titanic's sinking low,
Ere their stony hearts are broken
And they seek His way to know.
They will cast their gold and silver
In the streets, and not be saved.
For the promised help from Heaven,
Is for those who have obeyed.

But unto the meek and lowly
Comes a promise—"I may hide
In the day of my fierce anger,
Or ye shall be safe abide."
Then let us flee to this refuge.
Let us strive to follow him,
And be safe for the kingdom
That Christ soon shall usher in.

Oh, ye mourners of the heroes
That Titanic carried down,
Lift your heads and cease your weeping;
Joy will soon your sorrows crown.
Soon these clouds so black and heavy
Will break into awful storm,
But beyond, how bright and cheery,
Will break the eternal morn.

Then your dear and long lost loved ones
In your arms you'll clasp again,
Never, never to be parted
If you pur away all sin.
Lift your heads! Seek to be ready
For the King now at the door,
Erect! Mellow, pennsylvania,
All behold! 'tis almost here!

POPULAR MECHANICS

MANY USES OF PLATINUM.

Demand For the Metal Comes From Industry, Art and Science.

The mineral called platinum is really a natural alloy of platinum, iridium, rhodium, palladium and often osmium, with varying amounts of iron, copper and gold, according to the United States geological survey. It is usually found as small spangles, scales and rounded or irregular grains. In color it is steel gray. Platinum is almost wholly produced in California and Oregon, and the output for the United States is practically limited to these states.

Owing to its high melting point and great resistance to acids, platinum is extensively used for laboratory utensils. Platinum salts are employed in chemical analysis. In the manufacture of sulphuric acid the metal has been used in making large concentration kettles, but of late gold has been substituted for it. In photography, dentistry and electric installation much platinum is used. Of late the manufactures of jewelry has consumed large quantities of it. It is extensively used for chains and for the setting of diamonds, the claim being made not only that it is more resistant than silver and harder than gold, but that the stones are better offset by platinum and appear larger than in any other kind of setting.

Owing to the high price demanded for platinum during the last few years a great demand for a substitute has arisen. A new line metal of platinum was used in the manufacture of incandescent lamps, but it is now almost entirely replaced by tungsten. Platinum troughs, used extensively in laboratories, have recently been successfully replaced by similar appliances made of an alloy of nickel and chromium. Nevertheless there remain so many industries in which platinum or some alloy of which no substitute can be found that it is not likely that the price will be much cheapened in the future.

The present extensive use of platinum in the manufacture of jewelry is stated to be unfortunate, since other metals can be substituted for it, and this fad is undoubtedly one of the principal causes of the great increase in the price of platinum.

WATER STERILIZER.

Apparatus For Treating City Mains With Ultraviolet Rays.

The sterilization of water by means of the ultra violet rays from mercury vapor lamps, a method which underwent successful tests at the Pasteur Institute in Paris, can be used in direct connection with city mains. The apparatus shown in the accompanying illustration is designed for this purpose. Sterilizing cylinders are provided with four hand holes, the mercury vapor lamps being attached to the side sides of the covers. A number of sheet metal guides serve to direct the water flow close to the lamps. About 30,000 cubic feet of water may be treated per hour.

STERILIZER FOR WATER MAINS.

Pasteboard Made of Shells.

A unique fleece of shells may be seen in St. Petersburg, Fla., and inclosed the premises of Owen Albright. The idea originated with the owner and he did the work himself. The framework of the structure is of iron meshing, and on this is spread cement. While the cement was still yet every shell was carefully placed by hand. Two hundred thousand shells were used in the making of this peculiar fence, and over forty varieties were brought into use. Many of the shells retain their pristine color. The idea is an original one, indeed, and the result is effective.

Repairing Cast Iron Pipe.

A crack in a cast iron pipe or a gasoline engine cylinder, caused by freezing, can be repaired in the following manner if the pressure the part has to withstand is not too great. Procure some sulphate of copper, commonly known as blue stone, and dissolve it in water. Take the edges of the crack well with a file or sandpaper. Paint the iron with the solution several times until there is a coat of copper on it. The copper surface can be easily soft soldered, which will produce a satisfactory repair in many cases.

Saving Gold With Oil.

The fact that oil can be used for the purpose of saving filings and other small particles of gold and other precious metals in jewelers' shops is probably not generally known. It can be easily demonstrated by filling a glass half full of water and pouring kerosene on top of the water to a height of about one inch. If then some very fine gold particles are dropped into the glass it will be found that they will lodge at the water line.

THE GREAT ONONDAGA SEA.

Middle Atlantic States Once the Basin of an Ancient Ocean.

It has been shown by geologists that at various times during the more recent eras of the earth's history great seas, diverse in size and form, existed in regions now lying in the interior of the continent of North America. These great seas, some of which had outlets to the ocean of the arctic and others were connected by straits with the Atlantic or possibly spread out into a great gulf to the south, were constantly changing in accordance with the depressed earth movements of the continent. Complicated and always varied warping of the earth's crust, sometimes with downward or upward thrusts of the land masses, accomplished sweeping changes in the geography, sometimes burying large regions below sea level and leaving only remnants—skeletons of the land, as it were—of large portions of the old continent surrounding interior seas. At other times the land rose, more warping took place, the seas were banished from the interior regions, and the continent stood larger and higher even than it does now. Even at the present moment large stretches of our coasts are subsiding below sea level.

An important addition to our knowledge of one of these very ancient seas—the Onondaga—has been made by E. M. Kindle in a paper just published by the United States geographical survey, the data, which is very far from being one of the most ancient of the paleozoic, though it dates back probably more than a hundred times as far as the present era. It is known as the Onondaga because the criteria revealing and characterizing it were first studied in Onondaga county, situated in northern New York. Mr. Kindle shows that the peculiar forma inhabiting this ancient sea extended through Pennsylvania, Maryland and Virginia for hundreds of miles in the waters of which those eastern shores the seas and far west of the site where the Blue Ridge now stands. From southwestern Virginia the shore line appears to have treaded northward not far from the Kentucky-Tennessee line as far as the present site of Cincinnati, where, at some point not connected with the great inland sea covering the present Mississippi valley, the Onondaga waters were warm, as is shown by the presence of corals and other tropical or subtropical types of sea life.

World's Oldest Museum.

Dr. Otto Kummel, head of the East Asiatic department of the Berlin Museum of Kiaochow, tells of the oldest museum in the world in the bulletin of the Society for Natural Sciences. This museum may be found in the city of Nara, the former capital of Japan. Since its foundation in 720 it "overwhelming of the changes of the Japanese empire without one single addition to its collection. Dr. Otto Kummel is one of the few Europeans who were permitted to visit this museum. It opens its doors but once a year, on a day in spring, when a special committee inspects the collection and a new list is made out. The museum contains about 6,000 articles, which are said to be the most beautiful specimens of decorative work which have ever been produced by human hands, such as lacquer ware, decorative furniture, enamel ware, cambric fabrics, etc. The article of the majority of the articles is uncertain. Some came from China and others from Corea, but most of them are supposed to be of a more exotic origin. All, however, came of a time prior to the year 756.

Sun Power Engine.

An interesting report concerning irrigation by sun power is made by the British consul at Alexandria, who comments on the arrival from Philadelphia of the Shumsen sun heat absorber, which, he says, was tested and found to be satisfactory. The plant is now located at Headi, near Cairo, and will be used to pump water from the Nile to irrigate the surrounding land. Several improvements have been added to reduce the cost of working. In Egypt both coal and other kinds of fuel are expensive, save the constant supply of sunshine can be relied upon at all times of the year, so that the experiment with this practical solar power plant will be of much interest to agricultural enterprise.

Gas Engines in High Altitudes.

A gas engine was recently erected several thousand feet above sea level. The engine did not give the power expected and it was concluded that the loss was due to the altitude of the station. Upon investigation of the theoretical and practical considerations involved it was found that there is a loss of about 1 per cent of the indicated horsepower for each 1,000 feet of increase in elevation. The effect of altitude on the compression is slightly less than with a high degree of compression.

Polishing Metals.

All metals are very effectively cleaned and polished by a mixture of a solution of rotten stone and spirits of turpentine. This removes grease and is very effective against the oxides and sulphides which tarnish the metal and prevents effective polishing. After the application of the paste it should be cleaned off by a dry cloth and the metal polished by any good means, polishing wheel or a flannel cloth, which is most effectively used.

APPRECIATIONS.

"WHY STAND YE IDLE?"

Ohio, Oct. 12.

Surely there never was a time when the words of Jesus rang more true than at the present. Lift up your eyes and behold the fields are white unto the harvest. Pray the Lord of the harvest to send more reapers into the fields, etc. Men give their lives to every interior cause, spend their best hours of time and money to serve self or vanities, while the Lord gives the legions of their interests allow inconsistent such a view and mind the eyes who so estimate their privilege. All is arrayed against the Lord? Even it one's duties circumscribe him to a certain round of daily necessities how we would lop off moments and hours if we were only a harvester. At this rate God used to leave home to be active in the work. A thousand opportunities are knocking at our door right now—just think of the list of addresses one can get to mail five copies of people's Pulpit for a cent in Canada, United States and the Sea Islands! Just think of the rural free deliveries in virgin soil for the sale of Bibles reached so fast by wheel, buggy and later, likewise by rail! Then maps can be had for a few cents to point out the route, while in very fact one book on newspapers the world over need encouragement. In disseminating the truth in their columns as against the narrow bigotry of sectarism and the spirit of self, I realized centered through the religious journalism of warring christianity. Suffered in the Civil War—A word of cheery "Godspeed"—A token of genuine love to the purchaser who fight whom. Can't we see how white the fields are and how much the prayer of the faithful avails? Is the grief caused by the failure to fulfill to all gone and the blackness at night fold the Scriptures. In view of this should not every home be a bureau of activities—an arsenal of ammunition—a depot for the warfare —yea, a Bethel of worship set apart for "seeking the mind of the Lord?" Again balls can be gotten for a few dollars, speakers glad to serve in a public way and ready to go forth, printing furnished for a pittance with possibilities of free insertions in the daily press with calls, with the "news" and gladly placed by all right-minded editors. But time would fail me to speak of foreign fields, the volunteer service for miles around your door, the Jews the opportunities and the best of other things that suggest that we could be more under the eyes—the milkman, the doctor, the grocer, the clothier, workman employed by the day. Shall we say "Ah! the argument is too overwhelming." Let us not look for big things else we lose our present chance. "He that is faithful in that which is least is faithful in that which is great." Beware! "Why stand ye idle?"

New York, Oct. 12.

Having for sometime past had the opportunity, through a friend, of perusing the columns of your excellent paper, I have decided to subscribe for it myself, having enjoyed and appreciated the many articles especially the Sermons of Pastor Russell which treat of the various problems of life in such a clear, logical satisfactory manner that cannot fail to be convincing to all thinking intelligent people giving them a more comprehensive view of the plan and purpose of the Creator of God and his wonderful revelation—the Bible. I desire therefore to congratulate the publishers upon their attitude in maintaining these Sermons as a feature of their paper and the consideration of the International Sunday School Lessons in question form. Such improvements, which I feel sure are doing much to promote the spiritual and moral welfare of readers. With best wishes, I am,

Very sincerely yours,
JOHN DE CECCA.

New Hampshire, Oct. 10.

It gives me great pleasure to send you my renewal subscription to your valued paper which is a welcome visitor in my home. I take it solely for Pastor Russell's Sermons, Bible Studies, School Lessons and Question Box, of Brooklyn Tabernacle, New York. I also enjoy your Labor Notes. The truth is bound to prevail. We long for all that come to a knowledge of the Truth. May you continue to publish the Harvest Message to the end.

Yours in the service of the Truth,
CHAS. G. BUTLER.

Ohio, Oct. 13.

We appreciate your paper very much especially for the good print, and also for Pastor Russell's Sermons, and am very much interested in the Bible Question Box and Answers. I think they are a great help to give light on some of the Scripture texts that heretofore have been unexplainable.

May the Lord bless you and he will surely reward you for the good that you are doing for the people, especially for proclaiming the gospel of Glad Tidings through your paper.

Wishing you all success in your work of hoping to spread the Truth, I remain,

Yours truly,
J. C. MANTHEY.

Enclosed find my subscription for another year's reading of your valuable paper, which I appreciate very much. I congratulate you on the privileges you have in connection with the Truth.

Sincerely,
MRS. SADIE BREWER.

Virginia, Oct. 12.

Through the kindness of a dear friend I am a reader of your grand and noble paper which becomes dearer with every issue. Every department is sound, but the grandest is the reading Sermons. It is a part of that table prepared of the Lord (Psa. 23:5) where his children may feast on the good things of God's Faithful Word, meat in due season. May the blessing of the Lord be yours for your good work in the harvest.

A. C. CARTWRIGHT.

Colorado, Oct. 4.

For some time I have been a subscriber of the Tribune and take this opportunity of expressing my appreciation of same.

The religious articles your paper affords are of special interest to me as I consider them the most enlightening articles in a Biblical way of this age.

May you continue to scatter the darkness by spreading the increasing light so soon in enlighten every man that cometh into the world.

Sincerely,
MRS. GEO. McNEIL.

In Massachusetts there are 376,775 women wage earners, one-quarter of the entire female population of the commonwealth. Of this number 91,000 are married women, three-quarters of whom are mothers with families averaging four children.

Declaring that their employers failed to pay them a living wage and that their tips are not enough to eke out their low Fortune waiters, waitresses and cooks have organized a local union of the Federation of Labor.

In the year 1910 there were more than thirty-five thousand deaths from industrial accidents, while more than five hundred thousand more were injured during the same time.

In Arabia the pay of cooks and house servants runs from $5.20 to $13.20 a month.

TO THE JEW FIRST.

Mark xii, 24-26; Matthew xii, 5-12
Oct. 29.

"Him that cometh unto Me I will in no wise cast out."—John vi. 37.

THERE IS general confession in the book of Jonah, one is impressed by the details given, showing that it would be impossible to interpret the story figuratively. However, some of the leading features of the narrative may be applied in a typical sense, as, indeed, the Savior did on one occasion. (Matthew xii, 39-41). Here the Lord Jesus vouches for the Prophet's story, and in so many incidentals is, which is a far different course to that pursued by some of the "higher critics" of our time. So while rejecting the stories of the Old Testament are unwittingly discrediting the testimony of the Lord and the Apostles, as given in the writings of the New Testament.

It should be noted also, that the word "Jonah" is the original language, has the significance of a great fish, and not necessarily a whale. Surely, the Creator, who designed all the wonders of the universe, would have the power to create a great fish, capable of accomplishing the Prophet for the space of three days. The Lord may have preserved one of the prehistoric monsters, whose fossilized remains he has been discovered in various parts of the earth, and whose dimensions were from twenty to thirty feet in length. Or one from which eight feet in length, amply large enough to become a man in comfort for several hours. Such fish are not the horror entirely of the fish commonly being discovered in the depths of the ocean, and possessing many of the same of these monsters still in existence.

Q.—No one time Christ died for our sins? (Romans v. 6). In other words did Christ die for our sins? I cannot understand how a person is made any better morally by the death of another, even though the one dying is more righteous than the one for whom the condition of death was entered in upon by the one making the sacrifice. (Truth Seeker.)

Answer.—The ordinary view of the life and death of our Lord Jesus is that He was sent forth to be merely an example of morality, and of devotion to the principles of righteousness even to the extent of martyrdom. If this were all that was to be accomplished by His sufferings and death, then His example was largely in vain, for many examples had already been furnished in the lives of the faithful servants and prophets of God who lived prior to our Lord's time, and who are specifically mentioned in the 11th chapter of Hebrews. The necessity for the death of our Lord is splendidly reasoned out by the Apostle in this same Epistle, and also in connection with the sacrifice heretofore of the Holy Spirit, are sanctified by the blood of the Everlasting Covenant." (Heb. xiii, 20). In verses 12, 13-21, verses 19-17 are thrown in as a parenthetical statement and apply to the argument addressed to the Jews, he is showing that by one man sin entered into the world, and death as the penalty for sin; and that this sentence of death passed upon all men because all had sinned—not all individually, but as representatives of in Adam, in whose loins we all were. "Therefore," he adds, (verse 18,) as by the offense of one (Adam) sentence came upon all men to condemnation; even so by the same law of heredity by the righteousness of one act of this one (Jesus) came upon all men justification of life; for as by one man's disobedience many were made sinners, so by the obedience of one shall many call of the race who will accept it be made righteous."

Q.—Will you kindly explain what is meant by the following expression in Revelation xiv, 5—"And no man could learn that song but the hundred and forty and four thousand which were redeemed from the earth." Does it mean that only 144,000 are to be redeemed?

Answer.—A perfect man stated our Lord's perfect life sentence of death. As the result of this disobedience and condemnation, the entire race was born in sin and shapen in iniquity, and likewise passed under the sentence of death. And thus the Apostle assures us saying, "As in Adam all die." Adam entered into the world and death by sin and so because of this death condition of death, it was necessary that a perfect one should give his life as a ransom price. No imperfect human being could be the perfect man, and as such, laid down his life to redeem the world—Hebrews ii, 9; I Timothy ii, 4-6; John i, 29; I John ii, 2. While our Lord died for all, yet He is redeeming specially a certain class—The elect according to the foreknowledge of God." (Romans viii, 29). And as the footstep followers of the Lamb, and are "redeemed (ransomed out) from among men to be the first fruits unto God." After these have been gathered out, then the world of mankind will be delivered from death, and "whosoever will" may have eternal life at the hands of the one anointed and forthcoming Redeemer, our Lord Jesus and His "joint-heirs."

"I say to one go, table."

and he goes."—The Centurion's faith, and God declared it was superior to anything that He had found amongst the Israelites. He got his request.

Jesus took occasion to say that the Israelites, who were counting so much on their relationship to God as the children of Abraham, were finding themselves greatly mistaken. Being the children of Abraham did mean that they would be the faithful servants of God, but these they were enjoying and not appreciating.

God took out of their nation the "israelites indeed"; meantime the rest were blinded, and for the past eighteen centuries He has been gathering the Elect Kingdom Church out of all nations. But He is selecting those every week and here the riches and excellence of Abraham and the spirit of Jesus.

Nevertheless the Scriptures most clearly indicate that the Jews are still heirs of a certain promise, which in due time will come to them. To them will come the great privilege of being the foremost nation amongst men during Messiah's glorious reign, when the Church, glorified, victorious, will be with Him in His Throne.

An Objection.

PEOPLE'S

BIBLE QUESTION BOX

YOUR BIBLE QUESTIONS WILL BE ANSWERED IN THIS COLUMN, OR BY MAIL IF DESIRED.

Q.—Genesis iv, 16, 17, "And Cain went out from the presence of the Lord, dwelt in the land of Nod, on the east of Eden. And Cain knew his wife." Who was Cain's wife? (A. C.)

Answer.—One of the peculiarities of the early writings of the Scriptures is that, in giving the genealogies of those who existed in former times, only the names of the males are mentioned, while their wives are left in obscurity. In our native country the custom is just reversed, and in the public accounts of marriages, more attention is paid to the bride than to the bride-groom. How minutely the bride's dress is described, and all about her family connections, before she comes from, and who her ancestors were, etc., etc.! In the next chapter where the genealogy of the race from Adam to Noah is set forth, not a word of their wives is to be found, although a period of over twelve centuries is covered. In view of this characteristic of the early chroniclers we are forced to omit from our list the name of the young lady who became Mrs. Cain! However, it would be reasonable to think that Cain married his own sister, for we read that Adam had sons and daughters. (Gen. v, 4.) When the race was nearly perfect intermarriage would not have the disastrous effects as would be the case now after six thousand years of degeneracy. This is the only real solution of the matter.

Q.—In a recent issue of the Question Box it was pointed out from the Scriptures that the six days of creation were in reality six periods of time, each, and therefore, according to this basis, the Seventh Day of rest would be a period of time 7,000 years in length. The Bible says that "God rested on the Seventh Day from all His works." Does it mean that He will rest for the period of 7,000 years or would the Scriptures have reference to a 24 hour day?

Answer.—Yes: the Scriptures present satisfactory evidence that the Lord intended in the Divine arrangement that there should be a great creative week of seven days, each day of which would be one thousand years in length. The work of creation was finished to the close of the sixth "day," when the Son, Christ Jesus, came to earth, and died for the sins of the ground. The seventh day or rest day of the Lord, having its beginning at the time of Christ's death, and there will draw to its close in the end of Christ's millennial reign—the last thousand years of the seventh period. In this great Sabbath day—when the world of mankind will have been delivered from the power of sin and wickedness, and when the Son will deliver up the Kingdom to the Father that "God may be all in all"—(I Corinthians xv, 24-28). The Jewish system of sabbaths was a duplication in miniature of the great Sabbath arrangement of the Lord God.

Q.—Were there any Catholics, and are there any Catholics who are members of the true Church of Christ? If there are, can they still be Catholics?

Answer.—It is more and more coming to be understood that the terms of the people that which the Scriptures teach, namely, that the true Church of Christ, in the Gospel Age, is composed throughout this Christian Era, and is being made up of saintly, Christlike characters, who are free from all unsound, repudiation of creed, color, sect or denomination. All fair-minded and unprejudiced readers of the Scriptures realize that in all of the various church denominations there are some grand and noble characters, who are living for more for the best in the sanctifying of the world to be the Bride, the true Church. The various ecclesiastical systems as a all of them, are not those who are no instructions given in the Bible to the effect that one must affiliate with any of those denominations in order to be of the true Church. Keeping directly to the question, we would say that there are, no doubt, some in the Catholic Church who are members of the true Church, just as in all other denominations. But, as such, as these realize their liberties and privileges as members of the true Church, they are no longer Catholics, but are "entangled with a yoke of bondage."

Q.—The Scriptures say that a hybrid is an abomination unto the Lord. This being so, what became of the offspring of the "Sons of God," the "angels that kept not their first estate," and the "daughters of men," when they married?

Answer.—We are not to suppose that the offspring of the union between the "Sons of God" and the "daughters of men," were hybrids. On the contrary, they were perfect beauty, human beings. The Bible distinctly declares that "they became mighty men, which were of old, men of renown." Both angels or spirit beings have the wonderful power of materializing as human beings, as well as many exercise all of the functions peculiar to the race. While in the materialized state they are held to human limitations of life, their heir-offspring must be of the same nature. As to the ultimate fate of these progeny, the Scriptures are silent on the subject, but it may be reasonably surmised that they became giants as they were not of Adamic stock, their life coming from the fallen angels and not from Adam. A reservation is promised unto the offspring of Angels and not from Adam. A reservation is promised unto the offspring of Adam as Christ died for Adam and not posterity.

British Railway Workers Hold Important Convention--Conciliation Versus Strikes--Important Amalgamation of Unions--Thirteen Thousand Manchester Workmen Receive Advance-Success of Spanish Railway Strike--Labor in Turkey.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

LONDON, Oct. 18.—The annual conference of the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants was opened in Dublin on October 7. President Bellamy in his inaugural address said the past two years had been unique in their history. During this period they had passed through the tests of war and peace. As a result they had increased their membership to an extraordinary degree. At the end of 1910 they had 73,152 members; today their membership stood over 120,000. They had faced financial obligations and difficulties the like of which had seldom fallen to the lot of any similar organization. Their expenditure on the three great strikes alone exceeded £650,000 and yet their resources were by no means exhausted. Since they met at Carlisle the Royal Commission which was appointed as part of the settlement of 1911 had issued its report, and after some further negotiations it was accepted as the basis of a new method of settling differences between employers and employed on the railways. It was for them now to give this new machinery a fair trial and it must be judged by its results. No serious attempt had yet been made to deal with the problem of the sympathetic strike by the Trade Unions of the country and until this was done there must inevitably be serious differences in every dispute. It could not be expected that as an organization they should at the desire or dictation of any other body assist their men to cease work; especially when that step had been taken without in any way consulting their executive committee. Their strength must not be jeopardized by erratic and spasmodic efforts on the part of other trade unions for purposes and objects which might or might not be in themselves sufficient.

Delegate Watkins proposed that inasmuch as the failure of conciliation as a means for redressing the workers' grievances had been amply proved in the case of railway men during the past few years and was one of the chief contributing causes to the industrial upheaval in August, 1911, that meeting regretted that the Joint Executive and its advisory council agreed to a settlement of the railway dispute, and declared that it obtained all such conciliatory schemes as were now being imposed on the workers by the employing class and its capitalistic backers in the State, and instructed the Executive Committee to give the necessary notice to terminate the existing scheme at the earliest possible moment. Mr. Watkins regretted that after the failure of conciliation had been demonstrated the Joint Executive should have accepted a settlement which meant the perpetuation of conciliation and arbitration. Any negotiations with employers were futile unless backed up by the organized power of the working class behind them. The whole object of these conciliation schemes was to delay negotiations for improved conditions and sectionalize the men as much as possible. The alternative to conciliation was not perpetual strikes, but a perfected organization whereby they could get successful results by negotiation, conciliation, common prey disputed strifes. It was owing to the failure of the previous conciliation scheme and the tyranny exercised by the companies under that scheme which forced the railwaymen into the national strike of last year.

J. H. Thomas, M. P., financial secretary, said that this was a most dangerous resolution, and, he asserted, did not reflect the opinion of the members.

Delegate Barrett considered that conciliation had done nothing for North-Eastern railwaymen. What had won concessions on the North Eastern had been the sporadic outbreaks. The North-Eastern Company had given nothing but what had been forced from them. The only remedy for the present conciliation Boards was a perfect organization. Their secretary was going to present a demand for an eight hours day on the North-Eastern but did they think there was any chance of getting it without striking and fighting for it? If they were advised to fight instead of crying way every time he thought the North-Eastern men would come out to a man, and they could force more out of the company than by talking across a table.

The Dublin convention of railway men eventually came to vote upon the matter the resolution in favor of giving the conciliation scheme a trial was carried almost unanimously. The vote is interesting, as being approximately a gauge of present opinion in the railwaymen's union as to the practical value of the conciliation scheme, and some value may possibly be attached to it also as an indication of the relative strength of the "moderate" and "forward" parties in the organization. Mr. Holmes, who spoke on behalf of the Executive, did not in his analysis of the resolution leave the conference in doubt as to the official view of what he took to be the implied alternatives to the conciliation scheme. The "down tools" policy, the sympathetic strike, or "a policy of striking to wipe out existing meats"—each of these, he asserting,

PROPOSED CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS.

THE proposed amendments to the constitution of Pennsylvania which are now being advertised for the information of voters and which will be voted on at the November election contemplate changes of considerable importance. The voter will accordingly do well to read the advertisements carefully and give all five of the proposed amendments earnest consideration.' One of the most deserving of the five is, in the judgment of many students of state needs, the first. It provides that the legislature may authorize the issue of bonds by the state to the amount of fifty millions of dollars for the purpose of improving and rebuilding the highways of the commonwealth. Under the constitution as it now is the state cannot create a debt except to repel invasion, suppress insurrection, defend the state in war, pay existing debt, or supply casual deficiencies in revenue, and on the latter account it is limited to one million dollars. The creation of such a system of good roads, as amendment number one contemplates would not only add greatly to the value of all farm land throughout the commonwealth but would also make it incomparably easier to get from one point to another in the country districts and to transport produce to market. It would unquestionably cheapen the cost of farm produce in all city markets, and would add in the permanent reduction of the cost of living by checking the abandonment of farms and increasing the number of people engaged in agriculture. It means much to the city wage-earner that country life should be made more attractive and the decline of agriculture arrested. The building of good roads would revive farm life and give farm production a wonderful new stimulus.

Labor will not only be disposed to favor the above amendment (which will create a great demand for labor) but will have reason for favoring amendment number five, which repeals the constitutional section prohibiting special legislation on certain subjects, so far as to permit special legislation regulating labor; or as the amendment specifies "for legislation may regulate and fix the wages of salaries, the hours of work or labor, and make provision for the protection, welfare and safety of persons employed by the state or any civil division thereof," or by any contractor or subcontractor performing work under such authority.

The fifth amendment is intended to correct the judicial-tenure muddle, providing that Common Pleas judges holding office at the present time whose terms expire in odd-numbered years shall hold over for one year in office (or another year. By the adoption of this amendment the tenure will be adjusted to meet the requirements of the law, judges hereafter to be elected in the odd-numbered years. By oversight this was not provided for in the amendment adopted three years ago.

Amendments four and five bear on taxation and are designed to aid counties and municipalities in meeting the greatly increased present-day need and demand for public improvements. Amendment four incorporates in the section requiring that "all taxes shall be uniform upon the same class of subjects," a provision that the subjects" of taxation may be classified for the purpose of laying graded or progressive taxes. Amendment five authorizes counties and cities to exceed the present constitutional debt limit for the purpose of public improvements yielding enough revenue to be self-supporting.

INDUSTRIAL CHEMISTRY'S LATEST TRIUMPH.

GOING group of college professors in Berlin, and another in London are now engaged in putting an end to the awful torture and ens'avement of negroes in the Kongo country; in Africa and the Peruvian Indians on the headwaters of the Amazon. These men send out no proclamations, muster no armies, fight no battles. They pour bad-smelling stuff from one bottle to another, potter about with beakers, stills and flagons—and finally they announce that they have found a way to make rubber in the laboratory. Natural products made in the laboratory are called "synthetic" products. "Synthetic" means "put together." "Synthetic" indigo" put the indigo plantations out of business. When rubber can be made of starch, metallic sodium, fusel "oil, isoprene, butyric acid, and a few other things, it will no longer be sought in the deadly forests, where every ton of it costs a life. Automobile tires will be cheaper. All rubber goods will go down in price. More potatoes will have to be grown for the making of starch, and the honest farmer will do the work with a corn-plow which is now done by a tortured Indian or negro with a machete.

Profs. Perkins of London and Fernbach of Berlin have made rubber in the laboratory which it is asserted is as good in every respect as that obtained from trees. The question of price depends on the cheapening of the production of fusel oil. This oil is now worth nearly $700 per ton. Fernbach of Berlin is credited with a discovery which will bring its price down to less than $200 a ton. Prof. Perkins says that this discovery should bring the price of synthetic rubber down to sixty cents a pound—with a probability of further reduction to twenty-four cents. We shall more of us be able to ride in motor cars when this happens. The poor man will be able to afford waterproof clothes with real rubber in them. The long arm of science will unlock the shackles of the slaves of rubber in the tropics. And then, if the professors will only give us synthetic ivory, the "White Man's Burden" may be quite removed from the Kongo.

DIRECT LEGISLATION.

DIRECT legislation is not a mere proposal everywhere. In some parts of the country it is in operation. Thirty-eight new laws, or constitutional amendments, are to be voted on in Oregon next month by the people, under the direct legislation system, and over 100,000 pamphlets of 250 pages closely printed have been sent to the voters of the state in order that they may study the arguments therein for and against the proposed measure. The Portland Oregonian correctly observes that "it is the high duty of every voter in Oregon to read the pamphlet and all its 125,000 words. Moreover, it is his duty, scarcely less imperative, to inform himself from other available sources as to the merits of the respective acts. If he fails to study the pamphlet, and the collateral discussion, he is not competent to be a legislator for the people."

There are many voters in Oregon who apparently are pleased to be required to do so much work, but it is doubtful whether either in Oregon or any other state the majority of voters will take the time and trouble that direct legislation requires. Not even the constitutional amendments which are proposed every few years receive consideration or are voted on by the majority of voters. That they would care to be bothered in the same manner that the Oregon system involves is not easy to believe. Direct legislation may be generally established by the remote future, but there is no evidence of a genuine popular demand for it at the present time.

ALFRED B. BEERS, COMMANDER IN CHIEF OF THE G. A. R.

ALFRED BISHOP BEERS, the new commander in chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, began his military career at the age of sixteen. He enlisted in the Sixth Connecticut volunteers in 1861 and served for four years in the same regiment. He was honorably mentioned for bravery in the battle of Poctaligo, S. C. He was engaged in the bombardment and capture of Fort Fisher, N. C., in 1865 and was mustered out as captain Aug. 21, 1865. He was admitted to the Plainfield county (Conn.) bar in 1871 and served successively as clerk of the city court of Bridgeport, as city attorney and judge of the city court. The last office he held for seventeen years. He has held office in the G. A. R., department of Connecticut, as follows: Assistant inspector, junior vice commander, senior vice commander and commander. He was made Judge advocate general of the G. A. R. of the United States in 1898 and resigned in 1899. He has been commander of Fitch's home, at Noroton, Conn., since 1882.

LABOR'S INTERESTS AT NATIONAL CAPITAL.

Appeal Taken from Wright's Latest Ruling in Gompers-Mitchell-Morrison Contempt CaseKier Hardie Again Avows His Complete Faith in Efficacy of Trades Unions--Louis Brandies Shows Up Inhuman Methods of United States Steel Corporation.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—Excerptions to much of the testimony and to the ruling of Justice Wright, of the District Supreme Court, in the contempt case against Samuel Gompers, John Mitchell and Frank Morrison have been filed with the clerk of the District Court. It is charged in the bill of exceptions that error was committed by Justice Wright in allowing the trial to proceed before the taking of testimony before Referee Parker had been concluded. The case is now on its way to the District Court of Appeals, where it will probably be heard early in the coming year.

Since the passage by the House of the injunction limitation bill, it has been noticeable that judges, and especially Federal judges, are not enjoining the grant restraining orders and injunctions in labor disputes. The efforts of the American Federation of Labor are beginning to show tangible results against what was an abuse to which the courts freely indulged. Recently the United States Court at Trenton, N. J., refused to grant an injunction restraining the officers of a local union of machinists from picketing the works of the Fuchs & Lang Manufacturing Company, at Rutherford, N. J., manufacturers of printing presses and printing inks, against which concern their firm been a strike since the early part of last June. It was brought out that some of the complaints which were made by professional strike breakers, who were trying to secure a home from the company in case the strikers were defeated.

In addressing the Massachusetts State Federation of Labor, Louis D. Brandies made copious observations in reference to the methods employed by the United States Steel Corporation, and referred to the term "sweating" of employees, now generally used as an argument for commercial combinations. Mr. Brandies quoted a description of the "sweating operations" by Hilbert H. Montague, which is self-explanatory, and is as follows: "As a result of pressure of finance in the business, the trust had an enormous advantage in dealing with combined labor. In 1899 during the smelters' strike in Colorado, the American Smelting and Refining Company closed the mills in which the strikers had been employed and transferred the work to the other mills; the effect was immediately to break the strike. The United States Steel Corporation had similar success in 1901 with the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers. As the renewed labor contracts, between the associations and the various mills of the American Sheet Steel Company, the corporation demanded that the wage be extended to all the mills of the company. This was refused, and on July 16, 70,000 men quit work in the mills of the sheet steel, steel hoop and tinplate companies. Had the association been dealing with competing employers, each eager to keep his mills running and to get the orders which his neighbors' mills could not accept, its flexibility would soon have been crushed. During that same year the convention of the International Association of Machinists had played upon the mutual distrust of their employers and had obtained the nine-hour day. The United States Steel Corporation, however, with its solid resistance and its immense defense fund, filled its orders from other mills, and became fall completely broke the strike. When workmen are not entirely organized throughout an industry, the advantage of combination over smaller enterprises is of first importance."

Upon the recent visit of Kier Hardie to Washington, he was tendered a banquet in one of the hotels by the local Socialist organization. President Gompers, Secretary Morrison, and several other trade unionists were extended invitations to be present, and President Gompers attended. Keir Hardie is in this country making a speaking tour in the interest of the Socialist ticket, and came to Washington upon his own motion, as he stated, to call upon President Gompers and Secretary Morrison, the former having been known in Keir Hardie for many years. Mr. Hardie visited the Federation offices and spent some time in an interview and looking through the offices of the Federation.

At the banquet Keir Hardie, while, of course advocating Socialism, made many pertinent remarks with reference to the trade unions of this country. "There exists in this country friction between Socialism and the trade unions, which I think all the Socialists have been particularly directed toward the president of the American Federation of Labor. Whenever the time comes that any Socialist or other party is strong enough to demonstrate their ability to build up and maintain as strong and as fine an organization as that of the American Federation of Labor—the direct result of the efforts of Samuel Gompers and his colleagues—then the Socialists may have some foundation upon which to base their criticism. The trade unions," continued Mr. Hardie, "are not only essential, but absolutely necessary, and must be continued in their effective form and nothing should be done by the Socialists or any one interested in the general building up of the workmen's movement to obstruct or disintegrate the unions of labor."

President Gompers followed Mr. Hadie and expressed himself as entirely to accord with the utterances of the distinguished Britisher in reference to the trade unions, and that he could appropriate Hardie's speech as his own, with the elimination of

DEFEAT "BOGY" RESOLUTION

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—It is reported that at the recent convention of the International Iron Molders' Union, held at Milwaukee, resolutions were introduced denouncing the National Civic Federation and forbidding members of that organization the right to hold membership in the union and the National Civic Federation at the same time. It is stated that these resolutions precipitated a very warm debate, but when the vote came the iron molders declared against the policy of extending the jurisdiction of the Iron Molders' Union over the private life of its members.

TRUSTS' BIG EARNINGS.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21. — The financial columns of the newspapers record each week the tremendous earnings of industrial corporations. It is noted that the American Telephone and Telegraph Company for the nine months ending September 30, this year, show gross earnings of $31,373,861, compared with $27,207,994 in the corresponding period of 1911. The net earnings increased from $21,624,788 to $27,713,194. The balance after the payment of dividends was $4,275,739 against $4,121,458 last year. The report of the Bell Telephone system in the United States for the nine months ending August 31, showed $129,615,073 against $117,567,844; net earnings were $17,079,838 against $25,942,585. The balance after dividends was $8,577,340 against $7,846,316. There remains $10,589,930 unexpended out of the depreciation fund for the first eight months of this year. Western Union reported an increase of $6,000,000 gross over 1911, $9,000,000 increase over 1910, and $10,000,000 increase over 1909. Compilations made in Wall street covering 184,871 of the 250,000 miles of railroad in the United States, 102 roads, showed that the earnings are keeping up their increase in a better proportion than gross.

SUCCESSFUL NEGOTIATIONS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—During the last two months agreements have been reached between the Order of Railroad Telegraphers and eight railroad companies, the provisions of the agreement carrying increased wages, and a betterment of conditions. This organization is showing remarkable progress for the year 1912 and if the balance of the year holds as many successes in store as the fore part of the year has shown, it will be a record breaker.

TUBERCULOSIS DAY NEXT SUNDAY.

In 1892 the International Typographical Union at a cost of $70,000 for the building and furnishings, erected at Colorado Springs, Col., a home for its aged and infirm members—a place where the printers when no longer able to "stick type" could spend his last days at his ease among his fellow craftsmen. At that time the union had but 25,000 members.

A few years later a hospital annex was erected at a cost of $40,000, then a library annex and other buildings were added. The membership was growing—so was the death rate from tuberculosis. The organization started a determined war on the "white plague" and a tuberculosis sanatorium was added to the buildings at the home. For a few years experiments were made with different so-called "cures for consumption" with varying success until now, with a membership of 66,000 and over 700 locals, the members can point with pride to the fact that in twelve years the average age at death by members was increased from 47.25 to 48.09 years. These and other facts about the International Typographical Union and its consistent fight to better the condition of the printer and aid in any movement to help mankind will be set forth by James M. Lynch, the International President, at the public meeting of Pittsburgh Typographical Union No. 7, in Harris theater at 2 p. m., next Sunday (Tuberculosis Day). Dr. E. M. Rinehart will give an illustrated talk on "The Prevention and Cure of Tuberculosis."

Dr. H. B. Burns, chief medical inspector of schools, will speak on "School Sanitation." Mrs. Enoch Rauh will talk on sanitation in the home. Rev. Alfred W. Arndel, rector of St. Mark's Protestant Episcopal church, and Dr. Laura G. Buron, will also speak. Professor New's orchestra will furnish the instrumental music and there will be no charge for admission.

Pastor Russell's Sermon

BISHOP-APOSTLES COSTLY MISTAKE.

Primary Cause of Doctrinal Errors of the Past — Untrammeled Bible Study—Pastor Russell Says That is the Proper Basis For Harmony and Union of All Followers of Christ. Jesus Chose the Twelve, and in a Message to the Church Made it Known That There Were Never to Be Any More Nor Any Less—The Success of Judas.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 20.—We report one of Pastor Russell's discourses here from the text, "Have not I chosen you twelve?" (John 6: 7.) He said:

As Christians we have long lamented our differences and wondered at their number. As we have been getting out from after sundry of the doctrinal errors of the past, and see their foolishness, and learn that they are not supported by Bible testimony, we wonder how they originally had a foothold in Christian faith. But a glance backward is sufficient to explain the situation.

During the ministry of our Lord and the Apostles the faith of the Church was kept pure, but as Jesus prophesied in the parable of The Wheat and Tares, all this changed as soon as the Apostles fell asleep. He says, "While men slept, the enemy came and sowed tares" amongst the wheat. The tares of error sown by Satan shortly after the death of the Apostles have yielded an abundant crop and well-nigh choked out the good seed of the Kingdom—Christ's saintly followers. The nominal wheat-their midst almost be called a tare-field so greatly do the tares predominate.

But in the Harvest, the end of this Age, the dawning of the New Age of Messiah's Kingdom, the Lord will favor such conditions as will effect a thorough separation between the "wheat" and the "tares." He will gather His wheat into the garner. All imitation Christians will, by the fiery troubles of that day, be reduced to the ranks of the world in general.

JUDAS' PLACE IMPROPERLY FILLED.

Whilst the eleven Apostles were waiting as directed for the Pentecostal blessing, they contrary to direction, busied themselves by appointing a successor to Judas. They chose two men, and of the two selected one by lot, and then supposed that they had made an apostle. Without reproducing from God latent evidence, therefore with we hear no more of Matthias. In His own time God brought forth the successor of Judas, and we all recognize at once St. Paul, of whom it is written that he was "not one whit behind the chiefest of the Apostles" and that he had visions and revelations more than any all.

St. Paul's writings constitute the major portion of the New Testament, and are invaluable gifts of God to His people. There never were to be more apostles than those whom Jesus declares that He chose The Twelve. Again He declares that God gave them to Him and that He lost none of them save Judas, by his disloyalty had already been foretold.

When Jesus prayed for these He differentiated them from His other followers, saying, "Neither pray I for these alone, but for all those also who shall believe on Me through their word." Their words are His words. They have been His mouthpiece to the Church. Of these Twelve, and of none others. He declares, "Whatsoever things ye shall bind on earth shall be bound in Heaven," and whatsoever things ye shall loosen loosed all shall know are loosed and not binding in the sight of Heaven. So carefully did the Lord intend to supervise these by their utterances, that their words would be infallible, and He wishes all of His followers to know this.

Furthermore, after our Lord had ascended to glory, He sent a message to the Church through St. John the Revelator. In that message He pictured the Twelve Apostles as a crown of twelve stars upon the head of the Woman, the Church. Again, in the symbolical picture of the New Jerusalem, which represents the Church in glory beyond the veil, He pictures the Twelve Apostles as the twelve foundation stones. There never were to be any more, nor any less. From this standpoint we see that we are not to expect an additional revelation of any kind. God's people are not to trust either in their own speculations and mental gymnastics, or in visions and dreams; for, as St. Paul declares, "If any man preach any other Gospel than that which we have preached, let him be accursed." (Galatians 1, 8, 9.) So, too, he declares, "The Word of God is able to build you up," and to "make you wise unto salvation." Again he said, "The Word of God is sufficient, that the man of God may be thoroughly furnished." (Acts xx, 32, II Timothy iii, 15-17.) We see, then, that the Church needed no more than the Twelve Apostles, nor any further revelation of any kind than those given to her through this inspired apostleship. But that there would be some who mistakenly would claim to be apostles, the Lord Jesus plainly indicated, declaring that there would be false apostles, "who say that they are apostles and are not."—Revelation ii, 2.

THE FIRST PSEUDO-APOSTLES.

When we speak of pseudo-apostles —false apostles—we should not be understood as charging intentional fraud. Rather, sympathetically, let us suppose that the early bishops, in accepting the title of apostles and in claiming for themselves succession to the Apostolic office, were honestly deluded, as much as were the people who thus accompanied them. Let us remember, further, that the matter grew gradually, just as tares and difficulties grow at that time.

But in the Harvest, the end of this Age, the dawning of the New Age of Messiah's Kingdom, the Lord will favor such conditions as will effect a thorough separation between the "wheat" and the "tares." He will gather His wheat into the garner. All imitation Christians will, by the fiery troubles of that day, be reduced to the ranks of the world in general.

Let us remember that the early Christians were not generally well-educated—that remarkably few people in olden times were able to read. Indeed greatness ability to read became to our generation to those living in this our wonderful day and dawning of the New Era of Messiah's Kingdom. Let us remember also that at that time books were very scarce, because very expensive. The few who did, indeed, endeavor to have a copy of the Holy Scriptures in each home were there to be read once a week, or portions, from large and costly scrolls.

Christians, expelled from the synagogue, had no longer the opportunity of the Jews for studying the Old Testament Scriptures. And the New Testament, written in a peculiar manner, was costly also, and not brought together as a collection for a long time after the death of the Apostles. The Sacred writings soon became relics, remembrances of the dead Apostles and of Jesus, worshipped by all, but not studied, even by those who were able to read. Their value for instruction was considered at an end, because the theory in the meantime had sprung up that the living bishops were the representatives of the Apostolic office and inspirations. The people, therefore, unable to read, asked not, What say the Apostles? but received their theological instructions from the bishops, whom they believed to be the living Apostles.

When we reflect that very few ministers in one city, even of one denomination, today fully agreed on all respects Divine Truth, we must not be surprised that during the two centuries following the death of the Apostles, these supposed "successors" got into all kinds of false doctrine each leading a company of believers and holding the pre-eminence of his own views, few thinking to measure their presumptuous claims by the Twelve, Divinely appointed.

"APOSTOLIC COUNCILS" NEXT.

The doctrinal strife between the bishops grew. Gradually the people of God, about A. D. 250, began to be separated into two classes, the clergy and the laity. The bishops, instead of being chosen by the vote of the people, publicly claimed the Divine right, as the superiors in the Church, to ordain for them their clerical teachers. The clergy, under the lead of the bishops as supposed successors to the Apostles, lorded it over God's heritage. Later, in the Sixth century, the Bishop of Rome began to be considered superior to all other bishops, and finally was declared to be the chief father, or pope, of the Church.

About the Fourth Century creeds making began. The Nicene Creed, the Athanasian Creed and the Apostles' Creed, all were promulgated in the Fourth Century. It was discovered that more than a thousand bishops—pseudo-apostles—were teaching very contrary doctrines on many subjects. The Emperor Constantine accepted Christianity and was perplexed by the variety of teaching. He convened the "Apostolic Council" of Nice, although he provided expense money for all bishops attending, only about one third obeyed the command.

These bishops disputed and wrangled over differences for days and weeks and months. Finally they reached a concession satisfactory to the emperor. It was promulgated as the Nicene Creed and signed with the declaration that any persons or teachings to the contrary were to be expelled. Thus a small minority of the bishops committed themselves, themselves inspired, under the leading of an Emperor who had not even been baptized, set up a theological standard which since then has served well to foster religious thought in many, and to make others believe that there is nothing in religion but superstition.

Gradually along these lines progressed the Dark Ages, during which while the Bible was neglected. It was not even thought necessary for instruction in theological seminaries. Latin, from a dead language, was declared were alone necessary to be believed. Can we wonder that in all those fifteen centuries the real majesty of Truth, which had been delivered by Jesus and the Apostles, and the Prophets became sadly incrusted with human tradition, superstition, misunderstanding, etc?

GROPING FOR THE LIGHT.

Our Catholic friends do not agree that a great Reformation movement started in the Sixteenth Century. None of us will claim that Luther and his friends were infallible, and that in one step they gained the full vision of fifteen Centuries into the full blaze of religious knowledge. All, however, Catholics and Protestants, honestly agree that some kind of direct impetus to righteousness came to the Protestant movement of the Sixteenth Century. We have the proof of it all about us.

No longer are Protestants and Catholics warring with each other, burning each other at the stake, etc. Each may feel free to investigate for himself and to accept or reject such doctrines and creeds as he finds to please.

All true Christian people deplore the division of Christ's followers into numerous sects. Nevertheless we may surely feel a great sympathy for all of them when we remember that each separate sect represents an additional effort on the part of honest minds to overcome the darkness toward the light. All who are awake are conscious that some terrible nightmare or error reared upon Christendom for centuries is passing away.

THE TORCH OF CIVILIZATION.

Well has the Bible been called the Torch of Civilization and Progress. The Bible, not men, was the great Reformer and leader into civilization. When the Bible was placed in the hands of the people they began to see that God's Message came from Jesus, and the Apostles, and the Prophets of old, and that clericism and sacerdotalism today were inconsistent. A desire to know what the Bible teaches became more and more prevalent. The first effort of the clerics was to limit the measure of this priesthood had the Bible and would read it to their hearing—but it was read in Latin, to those who could not understand one word.

Gradually the desire sprang up for the Bible in the English language. Dr. Tyndale was amongst the first to recognize this need and to supply it in the British. Later on Luther, with assistants, supplied the Germans. But not many were able to read. A partisan spirit arose. Being that the Bible was popular; all acclaimed it as the Divine Revelation. But each party condemned the translation made by the other, when in reality there was not particular difference between them. It was all the bishops could do to keep the people from studying God's Word themselves and to make them satisfied with the presentations already given them by their teachers.

Therefore the Bishops of London bought up a lot of Tyndale's Testaments and burned them in public that more were printed and the demand increased. People hungered for God's Word and felt suspicions of the creeds, as well they might. Then came the Catholic Bible in the English language, and later, our Common Version English Bible, and many others. Still the claim is made that the Protestants should not read the Catholic Bible, and that Catholics should not read the Protestant Bible, when in reality, the two are practically the same—good translations.

It would appear that there are many religious teachers of all denominations who outwardly extol the Bible for popularity's sake, but who in reality, inwardly wish that it never would never read it, for they realize that the Bible is the greatest foe in the world to ecclesiastical hypocrisies and superstitions.

BACK TO THE BIBLE, SAYS POPE!

The present Pope with a clear vision beholds the drifting of our day away from all faith and religion. Viewing the attitude of the Protestant colleges, universities and theological seminaries, he realized that nearly all the educated young men of Protestant lands are being taught Higher Criticism, which is but the polite modern name for Infidelity. He perceived that Protestantism, which originally boasted of its fidelity to the Bible and protested against the acceptance of the teachings of the bishops as instead of the Divine Word, has cut loose from the Bible as an inspired authority and is drifting upon the rocks of Higher Criticism, rationalism, atheism.

The Pope then bethought him of the Catholic colleges, and found the same Higher Criticism intruding itself there. He perceived that this general trend away from God's Word already created all religion in ninety-six per cent of the French, and in ninety per cent of the Germans. The awfulness of the situation greatly impressed the holy father. He realized that our increase of education and decrease in religious faith must speedily spell anarchy. At the price of condemnation from both Catholics and Protestants as narrow-minded and bigoted, the Pope instituted heroic measures to insure that all Roman Catholic ecclesiastics and teachers must be examined as to their faith, and must solemnly swear to it, and that all books along the lines of Higher Criticism should be tabooed.

Pope Pius X took another bold, courageous step. The Pope perceiving that the masses would no longer recognize the Bishops as Divine authority—as successors to the Apostles, the Papal hull directed the Catholic masses to no longer look to the successors of the Apostles for instruction, but to the Bible itself. He urged upon them that Catholics everywhere be encouraged to read the Bible. This is a move in the right direction. If Catholics should get to reading the Bible if care and whether they use the Catholic Version or the Protestant Version—(use both), Protestants may be shamed into real Bible study, instead of the sham make believe study which many are now at. Then, hope that all true Christians, Catholics and Protestant, of every shade, might through the honest study of this one great book of authority, come back to the "one Lord, one Faith, one Baptism," and the one "Church of the Living God," whose names "are written in Heaven." Toward this end let us labor. Let us each be students of the Bible, and let us be honest and loyal, not handling the Word of God deceitfully. So shall we have the blessing for which Jesus prayed: "Sanctify them through Thy Truth; Thy Word is Truth."

New York, Oct. 20.

Once more I take it upon myself to inform you of the 81th appreciation I owe to you for the ever increasing interesting religious features that appear in your highly esteemed publication, viz., the Labor Tribune.

What a more house of Biblical knowledge and great Truths has been brought to light, and, yet how wonderful it all seems. Yea, and how it cheers and encourages the weary pilgrim on the narrow way to the blessed goal. All these wonderful things, now they fill our hearts with love to you and all that are in harmony with the great Creator and His Wonderful arrangements for the betterment of humanity. May the good and well begun work go on to the finish.

Yours very truly,
K. W. DEAN.

Appreciations

Pennsylvania, Oct. 18.

My subscription to your paper has expired and I have just completed a communication with the Watch Tower publication association for a renewal of it for another year.

I consider it the best that I have ever taken. I have never seen anything that came up to my liking like the Tribune and on account of its many excellent features, more fully the religious, Pastor Russell's Sermons, the Sunday School Lesson and the review questions of Questions.

On account of this special feature I caused five subscriptions to be sent to you through the above agency to be sent into a rural district in that many people who were seeking for more light on the Bible, God's Word.

While I had the pleasure of meeting those people in their little chapel and in my feeble way explaining to them the mysteries which our God had hidden from the ages, I want to say to you that I am convinced that your paper has done more for those people than all the talking that I have done.

Now, in the matter up it amounts to this: Money expended in the interest is but temporary, but when more good-lasting results than my efforts intellectually.

While I am of the opinion many people are leaving opportunities pass by, their excuse being that they did not have the ability, intellectually, to read and understand, but it is marvelous what money will do when applied at the opportune time.

There are many who would read the National Tribune on account of this one feature, and many, the common people, would admire it on account of other features, as the paper is adapted to the taste of all walks of life, especially for this class, workers, men who create the wealth of this land. These are brought in touch with Pastor Russell's Sermon, the Sunday Lessons and questions, and thus gratifying they begin to appreciate their logic and style of reasoning which will appeal to any reasonable mind.

It was on account of this peculiarity in Pastor Russell's sermons that the common people heard Him gladly and that the Great Author, that by reason of the many testimonials that are daily pouring in upon you that you have given a proper appreciation of the great work you are doing for humanity. They are in a horrible pit and prayerfully I implore them.

In conclusion I want to assure you that those five subscriptions mean your paper very highly, as they had never taken a paper before which has received as much peace to discuss matter, and now they see the great importance of it.

I want to thank you for the continuance of my paper as I think my subscription had run out, but I know that I was getting a few copies more than was due me.

I want to thank you also in advance for any consideration you may give my communication, and should you see speed as well as all others who are engaged in the harvest work with our dear pastor, I will be satisfied.

I remain yours truly, in the one and only hope of salvation.

H. K. HAMMOND.

California, Oct. 18.

I feel I must write a few lines in appreciation of your most valuable paper. It is so full of rich spiritual food both for babes in Christ and for the grown men, that I feel the words of do gog in your last issue, "when we have such cream to drink why seek the skim milk of sectarianism," and I certainly do skim milk when compared with presenth Truth.

When I think of the fiery ordeal our dear pastor is passing through and the battle he has been in, how he is being persecuted and hated for Christ's sake, how his writing and saying are so misrepresented, how he should, should know better, statements made in many papers that are positively false, how sad it makes me. The Scribes and Pharisee, D. D.'s, of our day will certainly have to answer for Calvinism as they do.

How many person can read Pastor Russell's writings and then call him a wicked man passes my understanding. But you know they persecuted Jesus and his apostles for preaching the Truth, so we being not greater than our Master, can expect the same. May God give you the courage always, even under extreme circumstances, to continue to give to the household of faith meat in due season as it comes from the Lord, a faithful servant.

Yours for the Truth first, last and all the time.

Faithfully Yours,
A. F. TOMLINSON.

A friend sent me a copy of the National Labor Tribune which I enjoyed very much, and because of Pastor Russell's Sermons and the Sunday lesson feature of the paper decided to become a subscriber.

Yours respectfully,
MRS. CAL LICHTY.

Kansas, Oct. 18.

I notice that my time is up and must and have this day renewed my subscription to the Labor Tribune through the Watch Tower Bible and Tract society. Your paper is just fine and I don't feel that I can do without it. Pastor Russell's Sermons and the Question Box are very good.

Yours respectfully,
MRS. M. A. WELDEN.

Georgia, Oct. 20.

I want to add to the thousands of others my great appreciation of your work. I am sure it will not be fully estimated this side of eternity, but I will, we ever be able to render due thanks to the dear Father and to you, the instrument for the wonderful favor coming to us each week, a glorious scheme of truth (almost) from the great fountain of Truth in such clear beautiful type, with plenty of room in no shaky way.

J. T. BROWN.

Illinois, Oct. 18.

Enclosed you will find remittance covering renewal subscription for coming year. I hope your many subscribers enjoy the visit of the Tribune as well as I do, especially enjoying the religious features of the paper.

Respectfully,
MRS. E. A. REED.

North Carolina, Oct. 20.

Being a busy stenographer, I doubt very seriously if I would have subscribed to the Tribune had it not been for the fact that you published Pastor Russell's Sermons. I subscribe through the Watch Tower Bible & Tract society.

Permit me to say that I enjoyed the Sermon published in your October 10 issue, and wish that every person in the world today could have the benefit of reading it. I also read this afternoon, viz. that of reading this particular sermon. I enjoy so much the Letters of Appreciation, as well as the Sunday School Lesson and Question Box, as published each week.

May I make one request. Readers, will you not, after reading the Tribune pass it on to a friend that he or she may also get a blessing?

Thanking you kindly for publishing Pastor Russell's Sermons, which are enjoyed by so many, I am,

Yours for the Truth,
MISS MILDRED M. REAVIS.

Canada, Oct. 17.

I wish to say that I subscribed for your valuable paper through the Watch Tower and it is almost impossible in our home. It is certainly a treat to have such a paper to read for the general tone and standard is so far above the average and may you have the spirit of the Lord in abundance for the fearless manner in which you publish Pastor Russell's Sermons and many other Bible Truths.

I remain yours in the Truth.
O. A. ERB.

Vermont, Oct. 15.

One year ago I subscribed for the Tribune solely in order to get Pastor Russell's Sermons, but now after one year's trial, I freely admit that I am surprised to find it so much better than I expected in a labor paper, it is much above the average in that class. Especially of all labor questions being so fair and honorable, but of course my principle interest is in the Sermons. May the Lord bless and prosper your labors.

Yours truly,
J. H. DWYER.

Kansas, Oct. 20.

Enclosed please find money order for another year's subscription to your valuable paper.

We wish to express our appreciation for the way you print Pastor Russell's Sermons and all the other religious features and will continue to subscribe for the paper as long as you print these grand and glorious Truths.

Respectfully,
MR. AND MRS. F. W. WALL.

Michigan, Oct. 18.

I am a subscriber to your most valuable paper and I would rather be without many of the comforts of life than to be out of from your list. A clean cut, up-to-date official organ for all classes and I congratulate you on being able to secure Pastor Russell's Sermons and Everybody's Question Box.

Yours for continued success,
A. W. THOMPSON.

Washington, Oct. 20.

I want to add my tribute of praise and appreciation for your continued faithfulness in giving the "meat in due season" to the household of faith as well as the Glad Tidings of future joy and peace to the world and mankind, through the columns of your excellent journal. I am sure your work will be rewarded and a blessing be yours, full, sweet and satisfying. I cannot well do without my Labor Tribune.

Faithfully your friend and well wisher,
MRS. A. B. HATCH.

Pennsylvania, Oct. 15.

Just a line. I notice on examining the address tag on last issue of Tribune received, that my subscription is about run out, so please find enclosed money for renewal, as I would pay many times the subscription price rather than be without it. My chief reason for renewing subscription is Pastor Russell's Sermon feature of your paper, which I value very highly. The other religious features are very helpful also. The labor news is also up-to-date and complete. The Sunday School Lessons and Question Box features are much needed and are meeting the great demand which calls for just such information. Wishing you much success, will close

A true saying—A deaf and dumb person being asked to give his idea of forgiveness, took a pencil and wrote, "It is the sweetness which flowers yield when trampled upon." (This is a general sense.)

Yet I cannot refrain in expressing my hearty thanks unknown to you in person as well as any others even if it is not permitted to go beyond yourself, which, if possible, I hope it will, as only we have this much pleasure in the start of God to show you at least my heart in thankfulness for all past favors, as well as the present ones, inasmuch as you are still publishing Pastor Russell's Sermons and the very helpful letters of all others. With sincere ask a favor to me of God, one not to be lightly overlooked by me either, and which if I can do no more for you than offer prayer, I will not seek to do them harm (friend or enemy), I humbly seek to be whole minded and benevolent to all and to others, while personally seeking to walk in the narrow way, yet even in this realizing my need of the merit of Christ, and drawing no others the more privileged.

Nevertheless it is all a fact that the more we are blessed in the body has yet the same needs as I or one of the least of them; that is of the spirit of God, and though we be now double honor upon them.

And if any more of the weakness of the flesh, or a coarse twist or idea, or of man, it will fail me, but if my body we of God, or through a free, will creative power of which my heart is humbly given up under the enlightened free will, to its mastership of love thus neither the piety of man nor mind of man can do it, for it is of God, and will not thus make the devil rich be any form nor may be more. Let your light so shine that in His due time and way. So—

Heavenly light around you shine, Divinely blessing thee and thine, May joy and peace be thine to know To bless thee from thy Saviors grace.

Respectfully,
ROBERT J. GRAIL,

AT EVENING TIME.

I was sitting by my window,
Looking westward toward the day,
Where the sun with good night blessing
Was fading away.

Distant mountain peaks caressing—
Seem'd to whisper "One less day
You have left to work and pray."

Then my heart made answer quickly
As the sunbeams passed away—
I am glad I'm one day nearer,
For in vision will be clearer
When I cease to work, and pray,
And shall work and pray always.

BE STILL, AND KNOW THAT I AM GOD.

As the great Titanic swept the waves,
Loaded with human freight and brave;
Into the deep her course she steered,
Their earthly hopes would be flown.
Oh! how they heard were they left the sod.

A voice.

Be still and know that I am God.

The boast went forth we have at last,
A ship unsinkable and fast;
And as she made her maiden trip,
A mighty berg struck the ship,
And broken 'neath the shattering rod.

A voice.

Be still and know that I am God.

Weak and helpless, strong and brave,
Left to struggle with the waves;
Some lives to give and some to save,
But hundreds found a watery grave.
Oh! had they known ere they left the sod,

A voice.

Be still and know that I am God.

There's hope, ye nobles ones and brave,
Who see your lives the weak to save;
Yau'll not be lost, while He is near,
Who died for all, He holds you dear.
To those I love I wield the rod.
"Tis then you shall know that I am God.

When the mighty voice of God has said,
Oh, earth and sea give up your dead;
The blessed Christ will meet the cross,
Will bring the hope that none be lost.
Then in that day we shall be free,
There'll love and serve Him as their God.

MILLS AND MINES.

THE LATEST COAL MARKETS

At no time within recent years have coal selling conditions been so tense, so fraught with difficulties as has the first half of the month, October. And at the same time no mishaps to such coal premiums. These situations we have had rare have been scarce and prices have been hit-h, but the current state of trade probably holds in line matic of tying up perfectly good sales and bringing confusion down on the heads of both buyer and seller.

Buyers are hungrily bidding for any class of coal, to be shipped in any amount, in any kind of cars, and at almost any price. It is needless to say that such orders, received at this time, have about as much chance of being filled as the historical celluloid dog had of winning in his experience with the asbestos cat. Pro rata distributions of available tonnages are made by the shippers, the contracts, of course, receiving first attention. Under present conditions there is never enough to cover all contract needs, though here and there unexpected cars make an appearance in the open market.

Undoubtedly if more free coal were obtainable the present level of prices would climb considerably. The fact that bidding at any price, for most any amount of coal, is futile, keeps the prices at their present figures. How long this business of refusing business will continue is not known, but it will hinge considerably on the car supply and the status of the men to mine the coal.

One can sell most any amount of coal without leaving the office at the prices shown herewith: Mine run, $1.50; three-quarter, $1.60; linch and one-quarter, $1.85; gas slack, ninety-five cents to $1; steam slack slightly-five to ninety cents.—Black Diamond.

Martins Ferry And Vicinity

MARTINS FERRY, O., Oct. 19.—All the mills in the Martins Ferry district will be on in full first turn Monday morning, for the first time for two weeks. At the Laughlin tin plant a two days enforced shutdown in all departments occurred this week, no work being done on Thursday or Friday, but steel is again available and the plant will resume in full on first turn. Whether it will be possible to complete the week will depend on the supply of steel received during the course of the coming week.

At the Aetna-Standard plant during the week the operations were steady with the exception of mill No. 17 which has been off for two weeks. Repairs are being made to the foundation of this mill and these have been completed so that the mill will resume first turn Monday, making the plant once more operating to its extreme capacity.

At the Whitaker-Glessner plant, operations at the mills has been steady during the past week and the same schedule of work will be maintained throughout the coming week. So far the shortage of steel in the general market has not affected the local plant, owing to the fact that their Portsmouth plant is able to supply the demand of all rolling mills owned by the company not only in that city but in the local district as well. The Wheeling Corrugating plant will continue to operate steadily.

Mahoning Valley Mill News

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Oct. 19.—The mills will continue to operate to their full capacity next week. At the Brown-Bonnell works of the Republic Iron & Steel Company all of the departments, including the Lanslingville tube and open hearth departments will be in commission. At the Mahoning Valley works every department is in operation and orders are plentiful.

The open hearth department of the Ohio Works will continue on rails next week. Excepting three weeks this department has been turning out rails for the past nine months, which is an exceptionally long run.

The upper and lower mills expect to break all former records during this month, the departments being away ahead of the mark established in 1916.

Nearly every department is operating at the Sheet & Tube Company. An additional furnace is being added to the skelp department, and three new strip furnaces are planned for heating billets.

Work is being hurried on the open hearth furnaces and new blast furnace.

The Haselton mill is operating in all departments and orders are reported brisk.

There are three thousand women clerks in the British postal service, on salaries which begin at $328 and rise by $38 annual additions to a maximum of $650.

The general price for laundering collars in Russia is five cents apiece. The wages paid to women are from $4 to $8 a month, with rooms and board included.

In Germany, in May last, the unemployed amounted to only 1.9 per cent.

MARKETS

The Iron Trade Review says:

Conservative policies are being strongly supported and price advances are made cautiously. Nevertheless, a number of higher quotations on finished products have been announced within a few days and recent maximum quotations on pig iron have disappeared in nearly all parts of the country. In some cases, where advances on finished materials have actually been made there has been no official announcement. Orders for new business, especially for delivery after January 1, are being taken in a very conservative manner and every precaution is being exercised to avoid speculative buying.

* * * * * * *

Pig Iron.

Buying has not been so heavy this week, and the market is not so excited as it had been for almost a fortnight. Quotations remain practically as they stood a week ago on all grades except Bessemer and gray forge.

Quotations for prompt and first quarter iron follow:

|---|---|
| Bessemer, valley | $ 17.00 |
| Bessemer, Pittsburgh | 17.50 |
| Basic, valley | 16.00 to 16.25 |
| Basic, Pittsburgh | 16.50 to 16.75 |
| No. 2 foundry, valley | 16.00 to 16.50 |
| No. 2 foundry, Pgh | 16.50 to 17.00 |
| Gray forge, valley | 15.50 |
| Gray forge, Pittsburgh | 16.00 |
| Malleable, valley | 16.00 to 16.25 |
| Malleable, Pittsburgh | 16.50 to 17.00 |

* * * * * * *

Plates.

Steel plates are now quoted at 1.45c and 1.50c, the lower quotation being offered by the leading interest. Some of the independent mills are asking as high as 1.55c, and are booking small tonnage at that figure. The Philadelphia & Reading Railroad has placed an order with the Cambria Steel Company, Johnstown, Pa., for 1,000 steel hopper cars, and the American Car & Foundry Company will build 1,500 cars of the similar type for the same company. The Pittsburgh Crucible Steel Company, Pittsburgh, plans to build over 20 barges, to haul coke to the Midland plant on the Ohio river. The contract for steel, involving about 1,200 tons, has been placed with the American Bridge Company. The contract for riveted steel pipes, to be used in building an aqueduct at Los Angeles, is expected to be awarded late today. About 8,200 tons of steel are involved. Several inquiries for cars are pending, and it is probable contracts will be placed this week.

* * * * * * *

Sheets.

As had been expected by the trade for some time, manufacturers of black, blue annealed and galvanized sheets have advanced quotations. Blacks, including 16 mill sizes, and galvanized products have been advanced $2 a ton, and No. 28 gage black sheets are now quoted at 2.25c. No. 28 gage tin mill size, at $2.90, and No 28 gage galvanized at $3.40. Blue annealed products were also advanced a week ago Thursday $1 a ton, and again this week mills announced no further tonnage would be booked at less than $1.65, which means, in reality, an advance of $2 a ton since a week ago. None of the most important mills is able to promise shipments before next year, and premiums are obtained where rather prompt delivery is possible. Demand has been extremely heavy and one of the leading manufacturers booked more tonnage the first 12 days of this month than ever before in a corresponding period.

* * * * * * *

Tin Plate.

Mills are booking heavy tonnages for shipment next year, and so far as can be learned the prevailing quotation, $2.60, is being firmly maintained. Uncertainty regarding the price of raw material for next year has caused some of the mills to hesitate about accepting tonnage. The scarcity of tin bars is affecting some mills. The prevailing quotations follow:

Coke tin plate, 100-pound basis, 14x20, $2.60 f. o. b. mill, Pittsburgh district.

* * * * * * *

Merchant Bars.

The minimum quotation on steel bars has disappeared, although official action to this effect has not been taken. It now is impossible to obtain tonnage at less than 1.40c, and several mills are quoting 1.45c. None of the leading manufacturers is in a position to make delivery before the latter part of the first quarter, and some makers are booked well into the second quarter. Iron bars have stiffened, and most mills are refusing to quote below 1.55c. Shafting is being firmly held at 60 per cent off for car loads, although some jobbers are in a position to shade this figure. Premiums of $2, $3 and $4 are being paid on steel bars for early shipment. Revised quotations follow:

Common iron bars, 1.50c to 1.55c, Pittsburgh; Bessemer and open hearth steel bars, 1.40c to 1.45c; plow and cultivator, 1.40 to 1.45c; shapes, angles, zees, tees, under 3 inch, 1.50c to 1.55c, all f. o. b. mill. The following differentials are maintained on steel: Less than 2,000 pounds and not less than 1,000 pounds of a size, 0.15 advance; less than 1,000 pounds, 0.35. Cold rolled, and ground shafting, 60 per cent off in carloads and 55 per cent in less than carloads delivered in base territory.

* * * * * * *

Muck Bar.

In the absence of sales, we continue to quote muck bar at nominal, $21, Pittsburgh. There has been considerable new demand, but no sales are reported.

* * * * * * *

Wire Rods.

A sale of more than 1,000 tons of open-hearth wire rods at $38 was noted a few days ago, and another round tonnage of high carbon rods sold at $38.50, Pittsburgh, the end of last week. We now quote Bessemer and open-hearth rods at $38 and $39, Pittsburgh, although leading makers are refusing to shade the maximum quotation.

GROWTH OF MINE WORKERS

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Oct. 22.—The United Mine Workers of America continue to grow, and in September, 1912, reached the largest paid-up membership ever recorded in the history of the organization. The 9,671 water mark of the coal diggers is 338,890 members in good standing on September 1, 1912. This vast membership gives added proof of the efficacy of conducting a labor organization along modern business lines. The miners' organization probably has more Lazarenesque with employers in force, and more members involved under these agreements than any other organization in the American Federation of Labor. The facility with which these agreements are carried out, and the methods adopted to carry into effect their provisions, as well as to prevent every infraction by miners, has secured for the United Mine Workers a stability, power and influence which is of inestimable value in dealing with the coal operators of this country. Unorganized coal fields are being constantly invaded and year by year the non-union coal mined is less. Operators are taking their position with the organized miners of America.

BASEBALL

BASEBALL'S 1912 ROLL OF HONOR

Cobb and Zimmerman Lead the Leagues in Batting.

WOOD TOPS ALL PITCHERS.

Boston Americans' Star Pitcher Has the Best Twirling Average—Miller is Greatest Bag Pilferer—Pirates Best Batting Club.

All the old warhorses have their names enrolled on the baseball roll of honor for the 1912 season. You'll find the Cobbs, Speakers, Woods, Doyles, Mathewsons, Bakers and Zimmermans —they're all there—heading the big leagues.

Ty Cobb just simply murdered the ball this year. The Detroit star had .427 hits for an average of .434. No wonder they call him the greatest man on the diamond today. Cobb didn't restrict his energies to batting alone for in base stealing and run getting Tyrus was right around the leaders.

Joseph Wood of Boston led the pitchers in the American league with an average of .827.

It is peculiar that the pennant winning Giants and Red Sox were not the best hitting and fielding clubs in their leagues. The Pirates carried off these honors in the National, while the Athletics did the same thing in the junior organization.

In the National league Zimmerman of the Cubs led the league with a grand average of .368. Larry Doyle was also a long distance batter, with ten circuit clouts to his credit.

The National league had thirty-two hitting over .300, the Giants supplying four of that number. The Pittsburgh club carried off the batting honors with ten men hitting over .300.

The Pirates ranked first in club batting, Giants second and Chicago third, while the Cincinnati Reds brought up the rear.

Zimmerman was the slugger in chief, while O. Wilson was second, Wagner third, Cravath fourth and Larry Doyle fifth.

Pittsburgh was the best fielding club, with an average of .971. Fielding was the main weakness of the Giants throughout the season, for the best the New Yorkers could do was to land in next to last place with an average of .954.

It was on the bases that McGraw's men stood out brilliantly, for of the ten leading base stealers the Giants were responsible for five—Merkle, Murray, Doyle, Snodgrass and Herzog.

Hendrix of Pittsburgh was the league's star pitcher, with .727. "Big Jeff" Tesreau closely pressed him for the title with .695.

The National league had more Swat Milligans than its rival, for only twenty-eight players had ever come out on the American league against thirty-two for the National.

Cobb and Jackson were tied for the greatest number of hits. Each made 227, although Jackson played in fourteen more games than the Detroit wonder. "Home Run" Baker dabbed the year with 352 per cent. He pulled off ten clean-up wallops during the year.

The Athletics led in fielding with .965 per cent, and the lowly New Yorkers were flanked with .925.

The speedy Milan topped Cobb in base stealing. Milan pilfered eighty-six, while Cobb annexed sixty.

Eddie Collins was the best run getter and was followed by Speaker, Cobb, Jackson and Baker, all players of more or less ability.

The Athletics did the best club batting for .282 per cent. The St. Louis Browns finished in last place with a mark of .247 per cent.

Jackson was the heavy slugger, clouting for 107 extra bases.

The hero of the world's series was Jake Stahl, manager of the Bostons. Stahl played consistently good ball all through and outgeneraled Johnny McGraw. Herzog of the Giants led both teams in batting.

NO WONDER SPEAKER WANTED TO SEE THE CHEAP LONG HORNS.

This Speaker, the greatest of the Bostons, is a rich Texas cattleman in the off season. Walking up Broadway not long ago, he saw a sign in an automobile shop, "Long horns, $18." Immediately Mr. Speaker saw all interested. He dashed into the store, found the proprietor and exclaimed excitedly, "You're selling Longhorns for $18?"

"Why, yes, sir—very cheap, too, don't you think?"

"I should say it is!" cried Mr. Speaker. "I haven't seen a Longhorn or any other kind quoted under $72.00 on the hoof in seven years. Where's your ranch? I want to go out and see 'em."

JAP IN BILLIARD TOURNEY.

Yamada May Be Only Foreign Entrant in 18.2 Champ.

Kodji Yamada is coming over from Berlin to take a whack at the 18.2 balk line championship billiard tourney which will be held in New York about the middle of November. It looks as if the Jap will be the only foreign entry. Cashmel, the Frenchman, is making so much money by his commercial academies that he doesn't want to leave. William Hoppe, George Sloan, Harry Cline, Ora Morningstar, George Sutton, Calvin Demarest and Albert Cutler are probable entries; also Al Taylor of Milwaukee and Frank Daly, on whom the years sit lightly and who is now reeling off the carom in practice as in the days of his youth. The latest plan is to have a qualifying tourney, eliminating all but three, who will meet in the final.

Daly is to have a metropolitan handicap tourney at 18.2 balk line for nineteen of his boys, including the last part of this month. Poggenburg, Gardner, Conway, Gershel and Thompson are among those who are expected to play. No sanction will be asked for from the N. A. A. B. P. for this tourney. Gardner and Conway are at present on the N. A. A. B. P.'s disqualified list for having played in a club without permission. It was stated that many of the amateurs are not enamored with the N. A. A. B. P.'s methods and the 18.2 balk line is the usual match tourney regardless. It may result in a wider split between the room keepers and players and the national association.

BANKS AND SAVINGS

In a recent issue of one of our contemporaries the following item appeared: "In 1861 a man went into a Cleveland bank and deposited $130, following with subsequent deposits that made a balance of $474. He drew out $150, and later added $394 to the remaining $24, which made a balance of $418. From that time on he never put a dollar in the bank. The old pass book shows nothing but a record of withdrawals. Up to 1902, thirty years after making the final deposit, this man had drawn from the bank $572, and had left in the bank at that time $1,580."

The prosperous business men that you know in the vast majority of cases did not become wealthy by luck. They saved their earnings while they were learning their business, and when an opportunity came for them to go into business for themselves they had both the capital and the experience—the only certain winning combination. Young men should save all they possibly can out of their wages, and then they will be prepared when the chance comes. Only banks help by paying interest at the rate of four percent a year, and compound this interest every six months.

The way a man uses money—makes it, saves it, spends it—is perhaps one of the best tests of character. Money should not be regarded as the principal end of life, nor should it be regarded with contempt, for it represents to a great extent the means of mental and physical comfort. The finest qualities of human nature are related to the right use of money—generosity, honesty, justice and self-sacrifice.

The temptations of speculation are always very great as it is only natural for people to be interested in the prospect of obtaining unusually large returns on their money. Experience, however, has shown that for one to make money by speculating thousands must lose. Consequently it is best to be satisfied with a reasonable income return and be sure of absolute safety of principal. Banks invite savings deposits in any amount, and pay 4 per cent interest.

High cost of living is largely an individual problem which each one must solve for himself. The solution of it is very simple. Increase your income by saving your money and placing it where it will earn interest, which is equivalent to decreasing your cost of living.

It's really a terrible thing to be without money. Your happiness and comfort—the welfare of yourself and family—depend upon having money, not merely today but as long as you live. A savings account with one of our strong banks provides money when most needed, in the easiest and simplest way, and 4 per cent compound interest adds to your savings wonderfully. $1 opens an account.

SOURCES OF VANADIUM.

Deposits In Colorado Have Proved of Commercial Value.

Vanadium added to steel imparts great resistance to shock and to the "fatigue" caused through constant handling, and the high carbon chromium steels make much better tools such as saws, cutters and revolving dies. The use of vanadium to cast iron is also said to be beneficial. Metavanadic acid has been used to some extent as a substitute for gold bronze in paint, vanadium chloride is used in fabric printing and vanadium prussiate in dyeing.

The United States geological survey has just published a report entitled, "Notes on Vanadium Deposits in Colorado, Utah and New Mexico," by Frank L. Hess. This bulletin is of interest because of the scarcity of sources from which vanadium can be obtained at a cost which will allow its profitable use in the arts and because of the greatly increased demand caused by the use of vanadium in steel manufacture.

Late in the nineties a dull green sandstone in the steep valley walls near Placerville, Colo., was found to be vanadiferous, and although the percentage of vanadium is low, the deposits have become of commercial value owing to the increasing value of the metal and to the large quantities of vanadiferous sandstone available. The known workable deposits of the Placerville region extend through a distance of a little more than nine miles south and west from Placerville, in the Gramme Southern railroad station on Leopard creek, four miles above Placerville, to a point on Hale creek three miles south of Newmire. The deposits occur on both sides of Leopard creek, and the greatest thickness of outcrops to the valley of the river. Similar deposits occur on the east side of Fall creek, extending for a distance of about a mile above the mouth, and others are found on the south side of San Miguel river for a mile or more above Fall creek. In this region the outcrops range from one or two inches to over thirty feet. From present developments it appears that the workable tons of ore carrying over 3 per cent of vanadium can be mined profitably, but there are many tons of millions of tons of vanadium bearing sandstone which will show between 1 and 2 per cent of metallic vanadium in mill runs more running between 0.5 and 1 per cent. Sufficient ore has been mined in this area and to less extent in the carnotite fields forty or fifty miles to the west to cause the price to be reduced in the last three or four years from $5 a pound of metallic vanadium in ferrovanadium to $2.50 or less. The most commonly occurring deposits are those of vanadium sulphide at Minasragra, Peru.

For Safety at Sea.

The superintendent of the Johns Hopkins botanical gardens, William H. Witte, has given to the public his ingenious plan for automatically recording changes in sea temperature when a ship is passing through the Panama, says Scientific American. Water flows through a small tank in the bow of the vessel. In the tube there are two resistances serve to record the changes of temperature. These include a high and low temperature, so copper coils whose lengthening or shortening operates a lever and records the changes of temperature on a recording drum. The entire air of the tube filled with alcohol, the tubes being connected by a small alcohol filled pipe with a diaphragm, which through a lever on the pen also records the changes of temperature on a drum. All records may be read in the pilot house.

Peat Production Small.

While the United States is rich in peat deposits, the amount produced is small, that for 1911 being only 94,355 short tons, valued at $311,436, according to figures compiled by Charles A. Davis of the United States geological survey. By far the greater part of this production was used in the fertilizer industry, 51,738 tons being utilized for that purpose. In 1909, which was a year of consumption of peat for miscellaneous uses, the most important of which seems to have been the use as a fuel under forces for beet sugar and other molasses, so that these excellent feeding materials can be fed economically to cattle and other live stock. Charred dried peat is also used in poultry food and other commercial foods for stock.

Museum of the Rhine.

A Rhine museum is soon to be founded at Koblenz if present plans are carried out. It will include a big collection of charts, pictures, models and diagrams illustrating the physical conditions, past and present, of the famous river and a complete exposition of its economic history. Some of the models between will be models of the various types of vessels used on the Rhine from early times to the present, models of peat and present bridges, illustrations of the methods and apparatus used in maintaining and improving the navigability of the river. The city of Koblenz has already given a site for the building.

Big Steel Reservoir.

Buenos Aires is to have the largest elevated water reservoir of the kind in the world, a steel tank structure in four tiers, with a total capacity of 10,000,000 gallons.

UNIQUE POULTRY FEEDER.

Machine Scatters Grain When Fowls Pack at Swinging Lure.

A newly invented type of automatic poultry feeder depends upon the same principle that is used in building a trap, for this feeder has a bait that is picked at by the hungry fowls, and in exploding the machine lets a shower of grain fall on the ground, which they devour.

The machine consists of a galvanized iron supply funnel filled with grain and a revolving toothed wheel at the base of it. This wheel is mounted on very delicate bearings which admit of its movement at the slightest touch. Attached to the wheel is a shaft which supports the bait. The bait consists of a hollow tube of wire netting containing wheat. The fowls see the wheat through the netting and peck at it, causing the toothed wheel to revolve and throw out grain from the top supply funnel which falls on the lower metal cone and is scattered over the ground almost as efficiently as by hand. This prevents the fowls from ravaging themselves.

After the feeder has been in use for a time there is no great rush by the fowls to get at the bait, as they soon imagine. Some fowls, the "pirate" ones, will ground in a circle where the grain will be thrown out, but the bait which pecks at the grain usually gets very little of it.

LATEST IN PHOTOGRAPHY.

Remarkable Results Obtained by Means of the Infra Red Rays.

The study of the invisible colors of the spectrum through the medium of photography has brought surprising facts to view heretofore hidden from sight. The latest discovery in the line concerns the infra red rays. These possessing the greatest wave length of all light vibrations, appear from recent tests made by W. G. Michaud, a photo-Alcan student, to possess a carrying power through the atmosphere in excess of any other kind of light.

A most curious consequence results from the low range of the infra red rays. The baffling loss of distance—the space dank which throws over hills and mountains is said to "lend enchantment to the view"—is pierced away. Things hidden by the obscurity of the atmosphere to the most powerful glasses stand out clearly in the infra red ray. Though many miles distant.

In La Nature M. Michaud exhibits a striking example of what the infra red rays will disclose. He has taken photographed the same scene, village roofs in the foreground, a wide plain and a distant mountain range, all seen on a clear day. In the ordinary photograph the mountain and even the plain are lost in mist and foliageless; in an orthochromatic photo, while the foreground roofs show clearer, the distance is just as vague. But in the infra red photo it is as if a cover had been removed. Every tree on the plain, every field and rocky patch on the farthest mountain ridge stands out minute, but vivid. —New York Sun.

Locomotives as Fire Engines.

Ten years ago the Pennsylvania railroad commenced to use railway locomotives as fire engines. Today there are 612 engines in yard and switching service equipped with special fire fighting apparatus. The standard equipment for each locomotive consists of 100 feet of two and one-half inch hose and a fifteen inch cast iron nozzle with a five-eighths inch discharge opening, kept in a box under the running board of the engine. With this equipment engines can throw a stream of water seventy feet. The water is driven from the tender and is discharged through an ejector by steam from the locomotive boiler.

To Fit Loose Piston Rings.

The piston rings in my motorcycle engine became worn so that there was an up and down play of about one-thirty-second of an inch, causing the engine to knock and lose compression, says a correspondent of Popular Mechanics. As I did not care to stand the expense or take the trouble of fitting new rings, I remedied the difficulty in the following manner:

Some thin strips cut from sheet metal were fitted in beside the old rings, care being taken to have them the same diameter to prevent scoring the cylinder. The engine runs as smoothly and quietly as when new.

New York's Clay Products.

The value of the brick, tile, terra cotta, pottery and various other clay products made in New York in 1911, according to the United States geological survey, was $10,184,276. This is a decrease of $1,097,573 as compared with the figures for 1910.

APPRECIATIONS

WAITING.

All is waiting. One night in Judea
Angels sang of peace, good will to men;
And men's hearts leaped up in sudden gladness,
Was God's favor coming once again?
But the years passed on, and still no glory,
Wars and strife, instead of peace, good will,
And with hopes deferred and hearts grown weary,
They have waited, and are waiting still.

Poor old earth—sin cursed and still imperfect,
Stained with blood and tears that have been shed;
Prison house of Adam's dying children,
Waits to be unbosomed of her dead;
Waits to shine out in Eden's beauty—
Perfect, bringing forth her rich increase,
Waits to be Jehovah's glorious footstool,
Waits for blessings that shall never cease.

All the dead are waiting their redemption,
Some have lain them down but yesterday,
Some have slumbered ages upon ages—
Every human trace long passed away.
They are waiting for that voice of power
That shall sound one day o'er all the earth
And from fresh made graves—way back to Adam—
All the long lost captives shall come forth.

Man, and groans and fears, and many sorrows,
Ever weeps from his estate reliefless;
Vainly tries to be his own redeemer,
Sees his cherished plans all come to grief.
Longs to keep the loved ones all about him,
Longs for health, for happiness, for home,
Dead not know he's waiting, ever waiting
For the answer prayer, Thy King come.

Israel vainly waits Messiah's coming,
Knowing not Messiah he appeared;
Still looks longingly into the future—
Sees not dream their blessings are so near.
Though they've missed the place of Shiloh's home,
Through them all the world shall yet be blessed,
God had promised to their father Abram—
Everlasting life, if they believe.

All the Ancient Worthies still are waiting,
From the righteous Abel down to John,
Strong in Faith, they doubted not God's promise
Of the wondrous blessings yet to come;
But when they had served His holy purpose,
Calmly laid them down in dreamless sleep.
Knowing, he would call them in the morning,
And His mighty Oath-bound Covenant keep.

Waiting are the saints, God's holy children,
Those who slept in Christ down through the years,
Now are raised in resurrection glory,
And are waiting for their fellow heirs.
These last ones are gathering in the harvest,
They must wait until their work is done;
Then, in wedding robes, and trimmed lamps, burning,
Stand until the Father says, "Come home."

For his fellow heirs the Son is waiting.

For his pride all glorious within,
For the time appointed of the Father,
When his reign of blessing shall be gin.

Waiting, to raise up the poor and needy,
And make his redemptive conquest;
Waiting, on the hour when those who scorned him,
Low shall bow in reverence at his feet.

Long, long ages, has the heavenly Father
Heard his holy character blasphemed,
By the ones, who, even as they mocked him
Through his tender love had been redeemed.

With a godlike patience he has suffered
Me to charge him with the Devil's sin,
That man should be kept alive in torment,"
When His Word said, "Dying, thou shalt die."

Still he waits, for, knowing all the future,
He beholds the seal of sin and death
Sores how men will reverence and adore him.
When his plan is known o'er all the earth.

Oh, the waiting time is almost ended!
Drawing very near is that bright hour
When the world shall see with clear eyes vision,
His great wisdom, justice, love and power.

Washington, Oct. 16.

I am hastening to renew my subscription to the Tribune as I am belated. The Tribune is a very welcome guest. I take much pleasure in congratulating you in your success since in well doing. Your work is contributing to the need of the people, the laboring one in so much want, and not less in spiritual. I like Pastor Russell's Sermons. Trusting it may long hope and comfort to so many of the laboring class who are heavy laden.

Wishing you success in your grand work.

Yours very truly,

"HE DOETH ALL THINGS WELL."

Mark vii. 31; viii. 13—Oct. 27.

"He doeth all things well."—Mark vii. 37.
Be not thou afraid of his goodness, and let thine eye spare nothing for his tears.—Ecclesiasticus—P. V.

CHRIST'S journey across a special illustration among the kinds of faith in God. A person was brought to the Saviour to heal who was deaf and dumb. Apparently in his speech. The instance under consideration is peculiar. In Because Jesus took the man away from the multitude and healed him privately. It is peculiar, as to the means used. He put His fingers into the man's ears, and, though to attract the attention of the multitude through them; then He spat and touched the man's tongue.

We understand that these methods were used in order to attract the man's attention and assist him in the exercise of faith.

The statement that Jesus sighed is worthy of notice. We can only surmise that it indicated His deep sympathy with the race before Him and with the groaning creature in particular. The lesson seems to be just He was as had been proved. He was perfect. He did not have a body with aches and pains and blemishes, such as other men have. He could not have such a body and unsympathetic, rather the reverse. His perfect mind would make Him more sensitive than ours; His sympathy would be stronger. His sense of pain keener. He was a fallen race, and became so accustomed to many of our surroundings that they are commonplace and we are inclined to consider them natural, forgetting that the natural condition of man would be the perfect order and that the blemished state is the unnatural.

Touched With a Feeling of Man's Infirmities

In yet another way may we suppose our Master was touched with a feeling of our infirmities. Through the reason of His losing vitality on the occasion of each miracle. Is not this the meaning of the Scripture which declares that "He poured out His soul unto death?" Daily, hourly, His vitality was being exhausted in the healing, blessing, comforting and instructing of those with whom He was in contact. Only as He daily obtained proper bring our hearts into very close touch and sympathy with Him, and give us that much clearer view of the Savior's love.

The day before His crucifixion our Lord said, "My soul is exceeding sorrowful even unto death." Only a baptism to be baptized with, and how am I straitened until it be accomplished!" It was accomplished on the following day, on Calvary, when He cried, "It is finished!" His baptism into death was accomplished.

It is following the account of this miracle that we read that the multitude desired Him to depart from their vicinity. We are not to understand that merely this one healing was the basis of their dissatisfaction, but rather the many miracles mentioned by St. Matthew (xv. 29-31) tells of great multitudes gathered, having with them the lame, the blind, dumb, and maimed and many others, and they cast them down at His feet, and He healed them. Incidentally we learn that the multitudes wondered and glorified God.

"Manifested Forth His Glory."

Let us never lose sight of the great central thought connected with our Lord's miracles. His mission was not merely to heal, but also to cast out devils, but to "give His life a ransom for all, to be testified in due time." The healing of many was the calling of the multitudes indeed to be His footsteps followers, who would be counted worthy of the Father and begotten of the Holy Spirit, at and after Pentecost. The miracles were merely incidentals and not His real work.

"He Healed Her"

It would have been a still greater and grander work to have given sight, or pounded the Divine Plan, and to have opened the eyes of the understanding of the people, as they were ready, but this work could not be accomplished to any extent until after He had ascended on high, and had sent and printed the merit of His sacrifice to the justification of believers. Hence it was that Jesus said to His disciples, "Greater works than these shall ye do, because I go to My Father."

The lesson of the application of this lesson, of the feeding of four thousand people with seven loaves, and the taking of seven baskets of fragments, was another manifestation of Jesus' power, or as He would express it, of the Divine power in Him. When the five thousand were fed, five loaves and two fishes were used, and they were gotten from a small boy. In this case the disciples themselves had seven loaves, and gave their all for the feeding of the multitude, and all had sufficient. Let us exercise faith in God and partake of our daily bread with grateful hearts, there will be a blessing in it, however plain.

He that runs out by extravagance must retrieve by parsimony.—From the Dutch.

Lack follows the hopeful; ill luck, the fearful.—German Proverb.

Q.—In the days before Christ, was it right for men to have more than one wife? If so, why are the instructions to the people now to have but one?

Answer—Inasmuch as the Scriptures do not state specifically why the Lord permitted polygamy to be practiced by His people in olden times, and as there is no commandment given in the writings of the inspired Apostles, nor in the words of Jesus, restricting man's matrimonial proclivities to one wife, we could not say that it would be a sin against God, a violation of His Divine Law. However, we should not forget, in this connection, the Apostle's words, "Let every soul be subject to the higher powers." * * * The powers that be are ordained of God." (Romans xiii, 1-6). Where the laws of the land classify polygamy as a crime, it would be wrong for the Christian to go contrary thereto. In the Divine Plan of the Ages, an approximate period of seven thousand years has been set apart for the perfection of evil in the world and its gradual elimination during the last thousand years of the seven. The Creator has wisely arranged that in this seven thousand years, the race should multiply and increase sufficiently to fill the earth. This is very reasonably supposed. In view of the Divine arrangements, that the Lord permitted a plurality of wives in those days when the race was more perfect than at the present, to bring about a more rapid increase of the human family. But that the earth might be amply and reasonably populated within the stipulated time, the Scriptures evidently limit the number of the people who have come into existence in the past six thousand years to a little over 200,000,000, which would be very nearly the number the earth could reasonably sustain under favorable conditions.

Q.—If the Devil, of peculiar belief, is the author of all the mischief done in creation, and is the sworn adversary of God and man; why did the Apostle Paul, Simeon and Alexander ink his hands that they might learn not to blaspheme? (1 Timothy i, 20.) What means could the enemy of all good, use to teach man righteousness?

Answer—We are not to understand that Satan is an instructor in righteousness, but rather that he exercises his influence continually in the direction of evil. The great Adversary is often the unwitting instrument in the accomplishment of the Divine purposes. As an illustration of this—the Lord's people are referred to in the Scriptures as "Jewels" (Malachi iii, 17). These "jewels" are being dressed, polished, and prepared for the future inheritance of glory, and honor. The polishing of these jewels or believers is brought about by the constant resistance to the evil influences of the world, the flesh, and the Devil. Satan, therefore, may be said to be turning the grindstone which will result in the refining and preparation of those who are being made ready for the setting in the gold of the Divine nature. Some of these jewels, at the present time are found in the world of mankind to be prepared for heavenly honors, have been delivered up to serve Satan by means of self-will, pride, anger, evil speaking, etc., of whom were Hymenaus and Alexander. These are delivered over to Satan to be buffeted and knocked around by severe trials and experiences, and thus to be taught the lesson of meekness and self removed, knocked off. (1 Cor. v. 5.) These are infected with the leaven, and are placed in the "royal diadem in the hand of thy God" (Isa. lxii. 3), but will occupy a lower position in the Kingdom of heaven.

Q.—"Thou art my Son; this day have I begotten thee."—Psalm ii, 7. "If Jesus was one of the Trinity, co-equal in existence with the Father, at what point in the plan of redeeming love? Does not the word "Father" imply antecedent existence? (A Subscriber.)

Answer—The word "Father" signifies life-giver. In harmony with this definition, the Lord Jesus said, "For as the Father hath life in Himself; so hath He given to the Son to have life in Himself." (John v. 26.) The word "begotten" signifies only child or offspring. The Scriptures declare that Jesus was "the only-begotten Son of God," the first and the beginning of the creation of God." The Heavenly Father never had a "beginning." He is "the first-born of every creature." Colossians i, 15. The Son was not the same Father; neither was He His own son. Jesus never claimed to be equal with the Father, but always declared that "the Father is greater than I." (John xiv. 28.) Souls of the creeds formulated in the dark ages, however, have sadly warped, and twisted, and mixed the teachings of the Bible. In the midst of our day, however, the teachings of the Scriptures are seen to be reasonable, and in every way consistent with sanctified common sense. A careful study of the Bible will reveal the fact that there are but two passages that actually confirm the Trinitarian doctrine or theory. Of these two, one is spurious and the other is a perverted translation. The first is John v. 7, 8. The other is John i, 1. The Lord Jesus was a mighty one who was with the Mighty One.

Q.—Has man been a free moral agent since the fall? Do not circumstances and conditions have much to do in deciding one's course of action, either for good or evil? (W. E. R.)

Answer—There are two ways of looking at this subject, and the answers accordingly would be opposite. If by "free moral agent" is meant freedom of will in respect to moral questions, we would answer, Yes. Undoubtedly man is free to will as he may please on moral questions, although he may not be able to carry out this will in all the affairs of life by reason of the weaknesses of his flesh or by reason of circumstances and conditions of others with whom he is in contact. Thus the Apostle Paul says, "To will is present with me; but how to perform that which is good I find not." (Romans vii, 18.) If by "free moral agent" is meant one who is influenced entirely by his environment, the answer should unquestionably be, No, because we are all born in a condition of sin, slavery to ignorance, superstition and weakness, the results of the fall. Whoever is able to overcome these inbred weaknesses to have full liberty to do right as easily as to do wrong, but in reality we are all more or less influenced by our own depravity and that of others, especially "the Prince of this world" (Satan who binds the minds of them that believe not.

Q.—Please explain Isaiah xiii, 9, "And the wicked shall be destroyed out of it," and with the rich in his death." The fulfillment seems to have been just the reverse of this statement. Jesus died, He, our Lord, made His grave with the rich, and with the wicked, and was numbered with transgressors, and with thieves, in His death. How is it reconciled? (E. L.)

Answer—Our Lord Jesus died as a sinner though not a sinner. He was holy, harmless, undefiled and separate from sinners, and died for the sins of the unjust. He took the sinner's place. Therefore, He experienced all of the sufferings and hardships that the condemned sinner has experienced, even unto death. Yes, and while in the death state He was associated even with thieves. He made His grave with the wicked, and also with the rich in the death state. The Lord was buried in the tomb of Joseph of Arimathea, who was a wealthy man (Matthew xxvii, 57). The expression "In His death" is said to be understood as a ready reference to the dying of The Lord, but rather to the death state, the tomb. Perhaps the reason of the Prophet may be made clearer if we transpose the words slightly, as follows—"And in His death they made His grave with the wicked and with the rich."

Q.—If a person was christened when a little child and, in later years joined the Methodist church, would it be necessary for him to be baptized, the christening service received in childhood be sufficient, and constitute all that was necessary to bring a fully fledged church member? (D. E. E.)

Answer—The christening service might perhaps meet the requirements of the Methodist church relative to baptism, but, to become a true Church member, is absolutely not sufficient or necessary. Faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, and then full consecration to Him, and to the service of His cause, and devotion to the Divine will, are essential to becoming a member of the Church of Christ. A little child would not be capable of exercising faith, and then of expressing consecration to the Lord. The real baptism is the death or burial of the will into the will of Christ in full consecration, as the Apostle says, "Know ye not, that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ, were baptized into His death?" (Romans vi, 3, 4). The water immersion is merely the symbol of this the true baptism and should follow the real. Acts x, 44-48.

Q.—What are we to understand by the statement of the Bible Examiner, to the effect that the Lord's people are to come out of Babylon. Revelation xviii, 4? Does this mean that they should withdraw from membership with any of the churches, and have no further fellowship even the church rolls?

Answer—The name Babylon signifies confusion. The entire religious world is in a state of sad confusion regarding the teachings of the Bible, and perhaps the term "Babylon" would be a fitting appellation as applying to the entire church system, sometimes known as "Churchianity" as contradistinction to genuine Christianity. It is generally conceded by those who are acquainted that all of the various sects and denominations contain more or less of error in their creed formulated and professed form of faith. These erroneous doctrines must necessarily dishonor the Creator, God, as He is not the author of them. The message of the Lord's message to His people is that as soon as the error is recognized by whatever church system they may be associated with, they are to no longer lend their influence and support to that quarter of "Babylon," but are to "come out of her." As a matter of fact, there is not a single word of instruction contained in the Bible to which the Lord's people are advised to join some sectarian church. Find it who can, and fail which church it is!

Fusion of British Railway Unions--Unrest Spreading Amongst Miners--Proposed Big Building Trades Amalgamation--Strikes and Labor Disputes in Germany--Women's Trade Unions in France.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

LONDON, Oct. 25.—The National Union of Railwaymen is the name proposed to be applied to the new organization which is to be formed by the fusion of the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants, the General Railway Workers' Union, and the United Pointsmen and Signalmen's Society. So far, the Locomotive Drivers' and Firemen's Society refuses to join, but the terms of the amalgamation leave an open door for its admission at any time should its members change their mind. The new body—which will not be finally established until a delegate meeting of the present unions has approved the scheme and settled the details in connection with taking over the assets and liabilities—will have a membership of about 150,000. Members' contributions and benefits will remain as they are, and the working staffs of the three unions will be taken over by the new organization. For administrative purposes an executive committee of twenty-four, with president and secretary will be chosen by six electoral districts covering all members in the locomotive traffic, goods and carriage, and engineering and permanent way departments. These four sections of railway employes will be represented by four sub-committees of the executive, and each sub-committee will deal with the demands of grievances of its separate section. The full executive must first approve of any step likely to involve a strike. It will be remembered that the Railway Servants' Society, which includes drivers and firemen among its members, signified its entire approval of the scheme at the Dublin conference last week, and as the two societies are in full accord the amalgamation would shortly become an accomplished fact.

The Miners' Federation has undertaken to support the colliery surface workers in their demand for an eight-hour day and a minimum wage but they have laid down as a condition the need for thoroughly organizing the men throughout the country. In the Doncaster district of Yorkshire surface workers appear not to be disposed to wait, for these employed at the Bentley Colliery, Doncaster, have decided to tender a fortnight's notice. The pit employs over 2,000 men, and all may be laid idle, whilst other pits may also be affected. The Miners' Federation campaign has been opened in Northumberland, a county in which the wages of this grade of colliery labor are lower than in any mining district in Great Britain. This was the statement made at a meeting by W. Straker, a member of the Federation Executive, who contrasted the 5s 6d and one dollar per day of 11 hours paid to Northumberland with the one dollars and 21.6 paid in Yorkshire for an eight-hour day. This question is also engaging attention in South Wales, where, however, differences in the Miners' Federation itself militate against unity of purpose. The proposal for the centralization of the Federation's government and finance is threatening disruption and the supporters of the existing district system remain troubled. In connection with the same industry a grade of colliery leader in Scotland—the Overmen at the Firth on Forth pits—took matters into their own hands on October 12 by stopping work at 1 p. m. instead of 4 o'clock, the usual time. The employer have hitherto refused to concede the Saturday afternoon half-holiday, and their attitude in face of the men's action is awaited with interest.

Something approaching final decision with regard to the proposal to amalgamate the building trade unions should be reached at the conference which has been convened by the Parliamentary Committee of the Trade Unions Congress for October 21 in London. A ballot of the several unions has been proceeding all summer, and the result is said to be favorable to the proposal. The amalgamation would include such large unions as the Carpenters and Joiners, the Bricklayers, the Stonemasons' and Builders' Laborers', and the total membership would reach 300,000.

Complete statistics have just been published relative to the industrial disputes in Germany during the year 1911. In the 2,317 strikes which took place 225,532 persons were involved, and of these about 16 per cent were women. But independent of the resort to industrial conflict there were 6,786 passive movements on the part of workpeople to obtain better conditions of labor, and in these appeals 636,416 persons participated.

That the grievances of the workers were not imaginary ones is indicated by the fact that in 6,402 cases the demands were conceded by the masters after negotiations had taken place. In 1,770 cases the employers admitted without question, that there was cause for complaint, and straightway made redress; and only in 214 cases did the workers fail to obtain their wants.

Of the strikers 1,300 terminated successfully for the 318,613 workers involved. In 516 strikes, in which there were 122,060 people concerned, compromises were effected and in 279, representing 69,725 employes the struggle was won the day. In other cases the results are unknown or the strikes were proceeding.

The total loss in wages through these disputes amounted to over $6,250,000 and involved an expenditure on the part of the trade unions of $4,000,000.

On the other hand, the benefits obtained as a result of these agitations run into the millions, and are calculated in all a total advance in wages of over $750,000 per week and a reduction in hours of 760,537 per week. Contemplated reductions in wages to the amount of $6,500 per week and increases of hours totalling 19,127 per week were prevented.

Some interesting particulars have just been published with regard to

MILL OWNER GIVES OLD AGE PENSIONS.

Alexander Smith Cochran has put into effect old age pensions for the faithful employes of his big Yonker carpet mill, together with a plan to compensate those incapacitated while at work.

Seven thousand employes of the carpet mills received the announcement yesterday with satisfaction and words of praise for the company, says the New York Herald.

This is the second benefit the employes have received through the rich bachelor's generosity. Recently a bonus system was established whereby every six months workers who have been in the mills five years or more receive from 5 to 10 per cent of the total wages earned for that period.

The accident compensation system adopted will allow any person injured in the plant, whether through his own negligence or otherwise, to collect half wages while incapacitated, even if the incapacity is permanent.

Besides half pay the injured workers will receive the best of medical attention provided by the company. It is the company's aim to bring the terms to surpass any inducements which could be offered by an insurance company. There is no stated term of service nor age limit at which workers are retired. They are judged entirely on their physical condition and the kind of work they perform.

The first retirements have already been made. These two inducements have been offered to the employes to promote good feeling and co-operation between them and the company and to induce the skilled workers to stick to their positions.

The company now distributes in bonuses more than $100,000 a year. The retirement fund laid aside by the company will be increased from time to time. Several employes who have worked for the company from twenty to thirty years will probably be retired within a few months.

Housemaids in Cleveland, O., have organized a union.

COMPETITION AGAINST STANDARD REVIVING.

THAT it would be a grave mistake for the country to abandon the Sherman anti trust law and give the monopolies legal license to continue fattening on the people is the conclusion of probably three-fourths of all who approach the subject free from bias or political prejudice. It took Great Britain 46 years to make its child-labor laws effective, and it is only within the last few years that any attempt has been seen in this country to make our anti-trust laws effective. And that the recent decree of dissolution issued by the Federal Supreme Court against the Standard Oil trust is not the joke that light-hearted paragraphers consider it appears from the testimony of the secretary and general counsel of the National Petroleum Association, the largest competitor of the Standard Oil Company, that the dissolution of the Standard not only has been no "farce," but also has afforded the independents actual relief and a chance to live. They now have, the secretary declares, "an unrestricted opportunity to carry on business without unfair, secret and oppressive competition." He also testifies that there has been a very substantial increase in the exports of the trade controlled by the independents.

While this statement will of course be ridiculed by the interests which are working for legalization of monopolies it is to be expected that genuine, honest testimony of this character should begin to appear. It has been repeatedly stated that the time had been altogether too short to warrant any conclusion condemnatory of the court's decree, and this is what the secretary of the independents now urges upon impartial people. As a New England paper says, "one must deem his testimony concerning actual results in the oil business up to date, as favorable on the whole to the independent oil producer and refiner, and a notable contribution to the trust debate at this particular time."

IMPORTANT DECISIONS PENDING.

FAILURE of the Supreme Court of United States to signalize its resumption last week after the summer vacation by handing down the accumulation of decisions looks as if it had been determined to withhold the list until after the presidential election. The court has rarely, if ever, in its long history had before it for consideration at one time the first importance than at the present time. There are a dozen or more of them each of which might make or break a political party, and there can be no other inference than that the justices are convinced they will best serve the public welfare by declining to subject their decrees to such violent controversial discussion as it might suit desperate partisan purposes to excite over them in the closing days of the canvass.

Conspicuous among delayed decisions are those in the Reading Coal and the Bathtub trust cases. The former is the attempt of the administration to dissolve under the Sherman law the combination by which railroads in Pennsylvania control nine-tenths of the total anthracite output. The latter is still more widespread in its importance to the public. It involves the right of a patent owner to dictate what appliances shall or shall not be sold with the article patented. It may also be known in a few days whether Porter Charlton, the wife murderer, is to be set free from the New Jersey jail, where he has been for two years, or sent back to Italy to stand trial. Scheduled for argument are numerous cases affecting interstate commerce rates, and the liability of railroads to shippers for lost goods. Then there are the indictments of Patten for trying to corner the cotton market, the controversy between Wyoming and Colorado over the diversion of the Laramie river, the status of Texas cases under the pure food law, the limit of liability of express companies for loss of shipments, the right of the Interstate Commerce Commission to compel steam railroads to make connections with interurban electric lines and other issues of less general interest. The court cannot pass on the cases above listed (and others like them) without giving one or more views both to the drift of judicial construction and to the present status of the movement to restrain monopoly not by mere "regulation" but by extermination. Let the decisions come now or after November 5, they will be received with widespread interest.

A MODEL FOR WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION ACTS.

JASMUCH as the workmen's compensation acts in the states (Pennsylvania now has an official commission engaged in drafting one) will undoubtedly be affected appreciably by the principles and the operating results of the federal act of 1908, there is much interest in the report on that act by Solicitor Charles Earl, of the Department of Commerce and Labor. The federal act, which is regarded as a model and a pioneer, grants compensation for injuries to artisans or laborers employed by the United States. Since its enactment sixteen states have passed laws of similar character, and the number is likely to be increased during the coming sessions of state legislatures. The very general public interest which attaches to such legislation led Secretary Nagel, last July, to direct the publication of the solicitor's opinions under this act, as illustrating the construction and application of a law providing compensation as contrasted with a law giving a right to sue for damages. The opinions are now in course of publication by the department, which will issue the volume within a week or two.

The money benefits paid under the federal act between August 1, 1908, when it became effective, and December 1, 1911, aggregated $704,311.66 paid to injured persons on account of non-fatal injuries. Since December, 1911, additional benefits amounting to nearly $200,000 have been paid. During the first year after the passage of the act, 1,305 claims were submitted, of which 1,089 were allowed. During the second year, 2,624 claims were submitted and 2,499 allowed. The statute applies only to artisans or laborers employed in certain specified branches of the public service, or in certain hazardous occupations under the government. Any workman covered by the act who is injured in the course of his employment is entitled to receive for one year thereafter, unless sooner able to resume work, the same pay as if he continued to be employed, except where the injury was due to his own negligence or misconduct. If the injury results in death during the year, the compensation allowed is payable to the widow or children or dependent parent. The act is administered by the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, who is authorized to decide all questions of negligence or misconduct, who is made the sole judge as to when a claim is established, and whose decision is final. Payment of compensation under the act is made from the ordinary current appropriations for salaries.

The solicitor emphasizes that feature of the act which permits the establishment of a simple and direct mode of procedure, whereby technicalities and delays are avoided and the relief provided can be speedily given, and the further feature, whereby the government is forbidden to exempt itself from liability by any contract, agreement, rule or regulation. In this connection he says:

"The prompt payment of compensation at a time when the bread winner is stricken and money is most needed, without forcing the claimant to pursue an elaborate, expensive and dilatory process of proof, is one of the striking benefits of the act. Being in its nature a remedial statute, it is richly susceptible of a liberal interpretation, as contrasted with a strict interpretation, in order to bring home the benefits intended for it. It has been the interpretation regularly applied by the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, without, of course, disregarding any of the limitations of the statute, or extending it beyond its terms."

In giving a remedy where none existed before, in eliminating court trials and giving the Secretary of Commerce and Labor exclusive and final jurisdiction, and in waiving the right of the government to exemption from liability, the federal act commits itself to well-defined advanced principles, which are in full accord with the enlightened spirit of the age and to which the proposed Pennsylvania act should conform itself.

MONTAVILLE FLOWERS, HEAD OF BIG LYCEUM ASSOCIATION

EVERY year a thousand lyceum and Chautauqua managers, lecturers, entertainers, representatives and committeemen have a nine days' meeting at Winona Lake, Ind. They comprise the National Lyceum association. They have just held their tenth annual convention. The meeting this year was addressed by such notables as William Jennings Bryan, Bishop J. H. Vincent, Mrs. Maud Ballington Booth, ex-Governor Joseph W. Folk of Missouri and ex-Governor J. Frank Hanly of Indiana. Members of this association appear each year as lecturers or entertainers before 40,000,000 people in the winter lyceum and again before 40,000,000 in the summer Chautauqua. It is estimated that there are 2,000 Chautauquas, which average in length of season from five days to two months, and 10,000 lyceum courses of from four to twelve attractions each. At the annual gathering ways and means are discussed for maintaining a higher standard on the platform and insuring a better handling of the business of the lyceums and Chautauquas. The president of the association is Montaville Flowers of Los Angeles, an interpretative reader.

Long-Standing Conflict Over Glassworkers' Jurisdiction Ends in Admission of the Flint Glassworkers' Union to American Federation--Coal Lands Are Being Leased by Government Instead of Sold--Some More Information on Labor Candidates for Congress.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29—During the latter part of April this year, the representatives of the Glass Bottle Blowers and the Flint Glass Workers met in conference and adjusted to the satisfaction of both organizations the jurisdictional controversy which had long been pending. Upon a settlement being reached the Glass Bottle Blowers immediately informed the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor and withdrew their protest against the Flint Glass Workers being granted a charter. Application was made for affiliation with the American Federation of Labor by the Flint Glass Workers, but upon the consideration of the application by the Executive Council at its August meeting the International Association of Machinists, through President Johnson, filed a protest in the name of that organization against the admission of the Flint Glass Workers, for the reason that the Machinists claimed jurisdiction over "mold makers." Representatives of the American Federation of Labor have taken definite action upon this matter, in that the Executive Council has been instructed to issue a charter to the Flint Glass Workers whenever the machinists, the Executive Council held in abeyance the issuance of the charter and directed that conference be held between the representatives of the Flint Glass Workers, Glass Bottle Blowers, and Machinists. Such conference was held, but was not fruitful of results, the Machinists refusing to withdraw their protest. Therefore, in accordance with the instructions of the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor, a charter was issued to the American Flint Glass Workers Union, on Monday, October 7, and that organization is now part of the great American labor movement.

Agreeable to the demands of the conservation idea that coal lands be leased by the government to private corporations instead of being allotted or sold, the Interior Department has announced that the plan will be tried. A lease of 2,400 acres of government coal land in Wyoming to a local corporation will be entered into. The corporation is to pay $1 for each acre in the tract, and a royalty of 5 cents a ton for coal mined during the first five years and 8 cents for the following five years. After that the royalty will be fixed by the Secretary of the Interior, the leasing corporation having the right to renew the lease up to thirty years. According to the present determination the government proposes to maintain a rigid supervision over the manner in which the coal is taken from the ground, and will prohibit subleasing, traffic in inticlands on the premises, and destruction or mutilation of the property, and will reserve the right to revoke the lease at any time for violation of rules the department establishes.

In the issue of the National Labor Tribune of October 17 a list of union men running on various tickets for the Sixty-third Congress was given. This contained the names of only those whom the headquarters of the American Federation of Labor had authentic information in reference to. Since that time information has been received that Albert Johnson, of Hoquim, Wash., as active member of the Aberdeen (Wash.) Typographical Union No. 537, is a candidate for Congress on the Republican ticket in the Second District of the State of Washington. Fred C. Wheeler, a union carpenter, is also a candidate on the Socialist ticket for the Sixty-third Congress from the Los Angeles district.

Elmer E. Greenawalt, candidate for Congressman-at-large from Pennsylvania on the Democratic ticket, and member of the Cigarmakers' International Union, is making a vigorous campaign for election. Mr. Greenawalt is the worthy president of the Pennsylvania State Federation of Labor, and has had that position for many years. The office carried with it no emoluments, but great sacrifices. The work done is the interest of the trade union movement in Pennsylvania by Mr. Greenawalt is a history in itself, and gives evidence of the loyalty and preservevance with which he has endeavored to assist the movement. The citizens assembled in the State could have no more loyal supporter for the position to which he is honored by the nomination than Mr. Greenawalt, and the members of organized labor in the State of Pennsylvania should give him every assistance possible to secure election.

The Georgetown College of Law is about to establish a law journal to be edited by the students of that institution. Unlike many other temples of learning, funds were called for only from printing establishments that appear upon the list as union houses in Washington, D. C. Georgetown is a part of Washington, being only divided by an imaginary boundary line. The contract for bringing out the publication has been awarded to a union shop and the allied print-

OHIO'S NEW COMPENSATION LAW.

Nearly 100,000 employes of the United States Steel trust in Ohio will be insured against death and injury under the workmen's compensation law when negotiations now pending in Columbus between representatives of the Corporation and the State Liability Board of Awards are consummated. The Steel Corporation has three plants in Youngstown, Cleveland, Steubenville, Lorain, Columbus and other places. Agents of the board of trust have been investigating the benefits to be derived from accepting these terms of the compensation law, and will soon announce their readiness to abandon the system by which the corporation has heretofore acted to adjust its own damage cases. It is stated that should the system work out as successfully as it is now believed, it will also be advocated in Pennsylvania.

STREETCAR MEN WIN STRIKE

AUGUSTA, Ga., Oct. 29.—The contest between the management of the street railway system and the motormen and conductors has finally reached a solution. All of the former employes have returned to work and the strike-breakers have all been discharged.

Pastor Russell's Sermon

PURGATORY FIRES! NOT NOW BUT SOON.

Pastor Russell Interprets the Word of God—Purgatory of the Bible, Trials and Chastisements Are the Lord's Plan For Dealing With Mankind For Its Good—The Saintly of the Present Age Are Few, Yet All Must Become Holy Before Achieving Everlasting Life—The Wicked Will Be Destroyed in Second Death If Not Purified in Bible's Purgatory.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Oct. 27.—The world renowned Pastor Russell is here. We report one of his discourses from the text, "Some men's sins * * * go beforehand to judgment, and some they follow after." (I Tim. 5: 24. Revised—

Gradually, as the eyes of our understanding open to the true beauties of God's Word, we find that the gross errors of the past have, indeed, some foundation in the truth. And the two are so difficult that they might pass each other without recognition.

As Bible students are allowing the Word of God to interpret itself they are being blessed by the light it sheds upon the subject, and that the real teachings of the Bible are beautiful and harmonious and God-honoring and appropriate to sanctified common sense. As much of our confusion has been connected with the subject of future punishment, it is only reasonable that as fast as our leaning and enlightenment should come from a better understanding of the Scriptures bearing upon this subject. Our first lesson in harmony with the difference between the Bible idea and the Babylonish mystery chambers of our bewildered forefathers, who had not the Bible in their possession and who, if it had been presented to them, naturally the effort is necessary to read it.

When we found that the Hebrew word Sheol is the only word translated Hell during the Old Testament period of four thousand years, we were not surprised. But when we found that the word signifies the tomb, the death state, and that it is translated grave in our Common Version Bible more times than it is translated hell, we were surprised. And when further close investigation showed that the good, as well as the bad, go to Sheol and that the Bible declares that all who go to Sheol were redeemed by Christ's death, and that eventually He will destroy Sheol and deliver up the prisoners of hope (Zech. 9:12)—then we began to see what a serious blunder had been made in the translation.

The idea about to blame the translators for a decided error, we found that the trouble lay rather with a change in the use of language. All know that all living languages are gradually changing. And increasing knowledge has led English the word hell was used as a synonym for hole or pit, or something covered over, as the grave. Thus an English farmer in olden times might say, "We helled the hundred bushels of potatoes this fall"; or, "We helled (thatched) our cottage."

The fault was not so much with the translators as with the wrong idea already firmly imbedded in the human mind—not the teaching of the Bible—that God intends to punish in purgatory or eternal torture all except the saintly few. From the first Satan seems to have endeavored to deceive humanity respecting the true character of the Creator; and his success is shown by the warped and twisted perspectives that we all gave to our Heavenly Father's Word.

SHEOL SOMETIMES USED FIGURATIVELY.

In probably three or four texts out of seventy the Hebrew word Sheol and its Greek equivalent Hades are used figuratively, as, for instance, St. Paul refers to Hades, the tomb under the figure of a monster which has been ravaging itself with insanity. He represents it figuratively as yielding to the crucified Messiah at His Second Advent and discerning its prey in its resurrection. Looking forward to the completion of the resurrection at the close of the 'Mi millennium, he exclaims "O Death, where is thy sting? O Hades, where is thy victory?" Similarly the Prophet David likened the tomb to a greedy monster anxious to devour him, and likened the pains of his sickness to the teeth of the monster, saying, "The sorrows of death compassed me, and the pains of Sheol sat hold upon me. * * * Then called I upon the name of the Lord * * * and He helped me" (Psalm cxvi. 3-6)—the king was raised up from ill-health.

Again, the Lord through the Prophet, speaking of the great giant systems of this present time, declares that they will go down into Sheol, into death, and figuratively represents their meeting in death with the great oppressive systems of the past. (Isaiah xiv. 9-11.) But there is no suggestion of eternal torment connected with the word Sheol anywhere. And the fact that the Lord redeems our souls from Sheol, and will destroy Sheol eventually by raising mankind from the state of death, proves positively the gross error under which we labored in respect to the meaning of this word and its equivalent in the New Testament, Greek Hades.

True, there is a reference in the Second Death, where we read of those who shall be brought to a knowledge of God during Messiah's Kingdom and who then shall deliberately and intelligently refuse the way of righteousness. We read: "The wicked shall be returned to Sheol, and all the nations that forget God." (Psalm ix. 17.) These are not the ignorant and weak but the intelligently wicked. They are not those who have never known God, but those who, while knowing Him, forget Him and willfully choose the way of sin. For such God has no blessing of life everlasting. They "shall be destroyed from among the people."—Acts iii. 23.

In the New Testament, the word Gehenna represents the Second Death—the utter destruction of the class pledged to it. As every Bible student knows, Gehenna is the Greek form of the Hebrew word Geh-hinnom. It was the name of a valley outside the wall of Jerusalem, long used as a place for the burning of the "offscouring of the city." But it was never recognized by God as a place for torture or sufferings, or for any living creature.

Although the capital punishment of the Divine Law is death, annihilation, God has subordinate punishments, all of which are for reformation, or we might properly say, all of which are designed to be purgatorial, purifying. Among the Scriptures referring to these we might include St. Peter's words: "Think it not strange concerning the fiery trial which shall try you"—purify you and test your character, to demonstrate your faithfulness as the people of God and your worthiness of association with Messiah in His glorious Kingdom to be set up at His Second Advent—1 Peter iv. 12.

St. Paul, writing along these same lines, calls these "light afflictions, which are but for a moment," and designed to work out for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." (II Corinthians iv. 17.) They thus work out blessings for the Church by purifying them as New Creatures, eliminating the dross from the gold.

In Malachi's prophecy it is foretold that Jesus would institute purgatorial experiences amongst the consecrated people of God, the antitypical Levites. He does this to purify them of dross and to enable those who have offered their lives to God sacrificially, to be acceptable as His members. We read: "He shall sit as a Refiner and Purifier of silver, to purify the sons of Levi that they may offer unto the Lord an acceptable sacrifice."

I see him there now sitting as the Refiner and Purifier of His Church for more than eighteen centuries. The fires of persecution, tribulation, which He has permitted to come upon them, are all purgative—designed to purify, to purge to make them white. His people have the assurance that He will not suffer them to be tempted above that they are able, but will with every temptation provide a way of escape.

"THE WHOLE WORLD LIETH IN THE WICKED ONE."

All are "children of wrath," and still under Divine sentence of condemnation, except the Church of the First-borns—the sanctified Levites, Spirit-begotten. We who have thus been called out from the world have the settlement of our prospects for life everlasting or the Second Death in this Age, before the blessing of the Lord comes to mankind in general. The Church's trial and purgatorial experiences must all take place during this Age before the New Age opens, when, in the Divine arrangement is provided for the world's judgment. "God has appointed a Day (the Day of Christ, a thousand years) in the which He will judge the world in righteousness (give to each a faithful, righteous opportunity for reconciliation) by that Man whom He hath ordained (The Christ, of which Jesus is the Head and His faithful fellow-members)."—Acts xvii, 31.

THE WORLD'S PURGATORY FUTURE.

The Church of Christ constitutes the Elect, the spiritual Seed of Abraham, through which all the families of the earth, the non-elect, are to be blessed, according to God's promise. The foundation for the world's blessing was laid in the same sacrifice of Jesus by which the Church's reconciliation was made possible. Nevertheless, the prospects for the Church and the world are quite different. The Church, through following her Redeemer voluntarily and sacrificially, in suffering for righteousness' sake, is to be crowned with glory, honor and immortality, beyond the veil, with the spirit nature.

By this, the glorious resurrection change, the Church will be prepared for association with her Lord in His great work of blessing Adam and his race—representing them. A thousand years have been set apart for the work of the great Life-Giver. The life to be given to the willing and obedient of mankind will be another life, human life, human perfection, in Paradise restored, world-wide.

As purgatorial experiences are wise and proper, we expect the Church, similarly fiery trials and chastisements are the Lord's plan for dealing with mankind for their good. The purgatorial experiences will prevail especially at the beginning of the New Dispensation and will be abated for all who will turn to Messiah, seek forgiveness and strive to walk in ways of righteousness. But all who, with consciousness will then not mean as now to the Church, self-sacrifice. Now the Divine rule is that "He that saveth his life shall lose it," for there never would have been life and save it by obedience to the Divine laws, by abstinence to the extent of his ability, from sin. Such may gradually work up out of the imperfections mental, moral and physical, to the grand image of God originally represented in Father Adam and lost through his disobedience and his sentence of death.

Thus the world has had its sufferings all through the past; the whole creation has groaned and travailed together until now (Romans viii. 22) and sentences of death pronounced against Father Adam and adding fast against all of his race of posterity. To some extent those have been judgments or blessings for that; but on the whole we cannot call the world's experiences during the past six thousand years purgatorial. Purgatorial experiences would be those administered under the eye and care of a great director, and designed to purify.

HOT PURGATORIAL FIRES SOON.

Numerous are the symbolical pictures used in the Scriptures to explain and set before us the character of the purgatorial experiences of the world, as they will begin in an awful time of trouble as soon as the Church shall all have passed beyond the veil by the First Resurrection. Such will be the terrible troubles coming upon the world are designed of the Lord to prove the world, to bring mankind to a knowledge of responsibility, and to show the undesirability of righteousness and the undesirability of sin.

"Will ye upon Me, saith the Lord, call the day that I rise up to the prey: for My determination is to gather the nations, that I may assemble the Kingdoms, to pour upon them Mine indignation, even all My fierce anger: for all the earth shall be devoured with the fire of My jealousy." (Zephaniah iii. 8.) Here we have the purgatorial fire with which the New Dispensation will be ushered in. It will be on earth and not in some unknown place—neither in the interior of the earth, nor beyond the bounds of time and space. It will be purgatorial in the sense that it will be under the supervision of the Lord, with a view to bringing a blessing to mankind out of that trouble.

That a passing will come out of it is indicated by the sentence following, which tells us that the severity of the trouble God will grant grace and mercy and blessing. "Then will I turn unto the people a pure Message, that they may all call upon the name of the Lord, to serve Him with one consent." (Zephaniah iii. 9.) Thus we have another evidence that this is purgatorial or symbolical fire or trouble, and not literal fire, otherwise no people would be left to whom the pure Message could be given. But God's intention is that all mankind, living and dead, shall come to a knowledge of the Truth, of the Christ Jesus by the grace of God "tasted death for every man."

The trouble which will follow the gathering of the Church to the heavenly plane, by the First Resurrection, is symbolically represented as the melting of the earth (society) with the fervent heat (fiery tribulation, discord) of that time. Already we are the Capitalistic element and the Socialistic element and the Labor element preparing for that great struggle in to constitute the great "time of trouble such as never was" before.

Not only so, but the "heavens" also will take fire and pass away with a great noise. These are Scripturally shown to be the symbolical heavens, the ecclesiastical heavens. Thus the culmination of the prophecy is that the social strife will extend to and include not only social, political and financial conditions, but also include Ecclesiasticism. The fiery trouble of anarchy will consume everything of the present, and make way for the New Dispensation, of which St. Peter tells us. In the same symbolical language he calls the New Dispensation "new heavens and a new earth." The "new heavens" will be the Church in glory. The "new earth" will be the new social order of things established by that Heavenly Power—a reign of righteousness, justice, leading on to a reign of love.—II Peter iii. 10-13.

This great purgatorial experience at the inauguration of the New Dispensation is again Scripturally likened to a "fire." As we read: "The proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be stubble: and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of Hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch."—Malachi iv. 1.

All the fires of that time will be fires of righteousness, consuming the things of pride, sin and iniquity. They will burn as long as there is anything sinful to consume. As soon as all pride is abandoned, as quickly as evil doing is abandoned, so quickly will the fires cease. But the Prophet declares that those purgatorial fires will be thoroughgoing. They will leave neither root nor branch of pride and wickedness.

The intimation in this is that the race seed to brain may in individual cases burn on and on—perhaps in the cases of some individuals for a century, for the declaration is that all will be smitten down in the Second Death who shall fail to make some progress towards righteousness during the first hundred years of purgatorial and disciplinary experiences. The sinner a hundred years old shall be cut off (Isaiah lxv. 20.)

We also note the great distinction between the sufferings of the present time and those of the future. The Church suffers from the Adversary and his misguided servants; and the Lord merely supervises, that these sufferings shall not be too severe nor beyond our power of endurance. But the purgatorial experiences of the future will be a very severe ones. Only evil doers will suffer, and all the characteristics will be severe. The great Redeemer will with a view to purging mankind from sin and selfishness and preparing them by Restitution for the Heavenly Father's ever-lasting blessing—eternal life.

Ohio, Oct. 25.

For several months we have been taking the Tribune and we take this opportunity of expressing our appreciation for the same. We were just getting the paper each week and discovering the contents a week ahead. October 10 our paper failed to come, then we thought of the old motto, "You'll never miss the water till the well runs dry." We missed it so much this week we decided to write and ask you to please mail us the October 10 edition. We appreciate the paper as much, especially on account of the religious department and the large print.

There is the one blessed hope.

Appreciations

Kansas, Oct. 26.

It gives me great pleasure to send you a renewal subscription for your paper for one year; I appreciate your paper very much especially Pastor Russell's Sermons and am very much interested in "The Bible Question Box and Answers.

Wishing you every success in this great work I am,
Sincerely yours,
OLOF HOLMQUIST.

Pennsylvania, Oct. 26.

Have renewed my subscription to your valuable paper through the Watch Tower Society. The religious department affords a great treat to all interested in Bible study, and the development of the Christian graces. I would feel it a great loss to miss a single number.

The Lord will surely reward you for aiding the harvest work.
MISS M. C. SNYDER.

Pennsylvania, Oct. 26.

I appreciate Pastor Russell's Sermons so much, they are both many times the price of the paper.

Yours very truly,
RAY VAN HYNING.

Alabama, Oct. 26.

Enclosed find money order in payment for another year's subscription from date on wrapper. Being one of those separated by many miles from any one of the "precious faith," the weekly sermons of the Tribune, from Pastor Russell and the Editor of Bible Question Box, Truth Poems and Bible Studies, do indeed come to me as refreshing showers. Consider the Tribune a splendid paper in every respect, but I value it principally for its religious features, the Truth now due to the household of faith and all having an ear to hear, which it is giving in such good clear type and which comes as "a shining light illuminating our path more and more unto the perfect day," and being to us these "nourishing and thrilling after righteousness" the blessing promised in Luke 22: 27; Rev. 22:20. Surely all be living that a knowledge and appreciation of these grand Truths is now necessary in order to keep our minds stayed upon the Lord, and receive that perfect peace promised in Isa. 26: 3, and having "their eyes anointed that they may see wonderful things" these wonderful and beautiful things. Can "honor and watch" the King of Heaven all whose works are truth, and His ways faithment"—as they never could before and love and praise upon perfectly the "giver of every good and perfect gift," for His goodness and for His wonderful work to and for "the children," for His unspeakable gift, which is rendering us heirs and joint-heirs of Heaven. I also honor and highly appreciate all agencies used by Him and pray His continued blessing upon the management of the National Labor Tribune.

Faithfully yours
J. T. BARCLAY.

New York, Oct. 26.

For sometime I have been a subscriber to your paper and have had the opportunity of expressing my appreciation of the same. The religious articles especially the Question Box is of especial interest to me also Pastor Russell's Sermons. May you continue to publish the Truths now due to the households of faith. Wishing you all success in your grand work of spreading the Truth I remain, Yours in the blessed hope.

MRS. A. D. SHEA.

Pennsylvania, Oct. 26.

Have sent money order to Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society asking them to renew my subscription for the Tribune for another year. I enjoy every part of it, especially paper and while I take it especially for the Sermons and other knowledge of the Scriptures from Pastor Russell. Pastor Russell's and the Labor Tribune and other items interest me very much. Don't pretend that it is a pleasure to read and pass the paper on to others that they may receive a benefit also. Thank you so much for the help you give to those who want to know more and the desire for which you do it. I am ever your well wisher.

Sincerely,
FRITH E. S. MORROW.

Illinois, Oct. 26.

I have sent several copies of your paper and tract to friends and on account of Pastor Russell's Sermons and Bible Question Box, so am sending you money for which please send me your paper for a year.

Yours truly,
BEN RHOADS.

COMMENTS ON "HELL FIRE."

(From Christian Herald.)
DEATH IS DEATH.

From sermon by Dr. Charles M. Sheldon:

I have come to believe myself in the possible annihilation of those who never respond to God's offer of forgiveness, those who never believe in Christ and take Him as their Savior. It seems probable that the Bible teaches that the word "death," as applied to the soul that always refuses to repent, is a death that means total extinction.

I cannot interpret the use of such a term as we have today to mean anything less than that the wages of sin is death. What do these words mean, if not simply what they say—the extinction of life, the utter giving out of the flame that was meant to spread hither and brighter and purer on the altar of man's worship of his Creator and Redeemer.

(Detroit Times.)
"FIRE AND BRIMSTONE"
DOCTRINE POETIC IDEA.

Asked by the Times for his views in regard to the recent action of the International Bible Students' Association in going on record against the doctrine of a fire and brimstone torture for sinners after death, the Rev. T. W. Young, pastor of the North Woodward Baptist church, said:

"The resolution adopted by the recent International Bible Students' association, in session in Washington, D. C., repudiating the 'hell-fire and brimstone' theory as unscriptural, is mind one of the famous 'hell' concerning smokes in Ireland. After all was said it was decided there are no snakes in Ireland.' And these wonderful resolutions are aimed at something that not only does not exist but which practically nobody believes, or with few exceptions, ever did believe. There have been straitlace literalists at along who have believed and taught fanatical things about the Bible, and there are still. The whole idea of these 'modern times about the Devil and a hell' of fire and brimstone for the wicked, under God's direction, is modern. It is poetry—and not from the Bible. None of the ancient Church fathers—or that fruitful source of heresies—ever held fantastic views about the future torment of the wicked. But no such religious creed and no great religious denomination as such as ever advocated any such fanatical interpretation of the Bible. No present-day creed or church, as far as I know, believes in a 'hell of fire and brimstone.' Some few straggling literalists may—but they have little or no following. If there are any outsiders who think the religious denominations stand for this conception they are simply belated onlookers. They do not know."

(Brooksville (Pa.) Republican.)
METHODIST MINISTER APPRECIATIVE TO BIBLE STUDENTS.

In unanimous action, on July 8, 1912 the International Bible Students' Association, to the number of 4,000 delegates, in convention adopted a resolution unreservedly repudiating as thoroughly unscriptural the teaching of a place, state or condition of "hell-fire and brimstone" for the torment of the wicked.

The resolution appealed to every minister in the United States to publish in his local newspaper, over his signature, a statement as to whether he believed the Bible taught the doctrine of a literal "hell-fire" and brimstone, as a local minister of the Brooksville M. E. church, Erie Conference, so lingly responds to the above request and will state that I have not for the past thirty-five years or more believed in the doctrine (as claimed to be the teaching of the Bible) of a literal "hell-fire" or place or condition into which the wicked man and unbelievers would finally be cast, there to suffer the punishment for their sins.

I am not a believer in endless torture of no kind. I believe that sin will be punished according to the deeds done in the body, that it is not positive penalty, but, on the contrary, is remedial. I have long desired that some public manifesto on the part of the clergy should be given to the question, and I am glad that the opportunity now presents itself. I believe that the Scriptures, when properly understood and honestly interpreted do not teach endless torment, and that it is a travesty on the name and character of our common Father in Heaven to so teach, "whose nature and whose name is love."

With great respect I am sincerely yours in the hope of a redeemed humanity.

DAVID EASON.

Dunbar, Pa.

(From Worcester (Mass.) Evening Gazette.)
CLERGYMEN DO NOT BELIEVE IN BRIMSTONE HELL.

What is Hell? Should the Biblical references interpreted in the old-fashioned doctrine, as depicting a "fire-and-brimstone" hell, be accepted as strictly literal?

These questions were raised by the International Biblical Students Association the other day in a resolution declaring that the wicked would not believe in hell-fires, but only punished about them.

The representatives of four leading denominations were seen and unanimously repudiated the doctrine of a "fire and brimstone" hell in a literal sense.

Rev. Dr. Harvey W. Ewing, pastor of Trinity M. E. church, said:

"The exceedingly warm weather must have taken cool effect upon the International Bible Students' Association. It ought not to be necessary in this day to pass a resolution condemning the doctrine of a literal hell-fire. The terms 'fire' and 'brimstone' referred to in the resolution are figurative and must not be taken literally, but figuratively."

Rev. Dr. Edward P. Drew, pastor of Old South Congregational church, said:

"The notion of a literal hell-fire for the torment of the wicked has been confined to the belief of comparatively few teachers during the past few years and unwarranted literalism that to interpret the teachings of Jesus, the incarnation of love, never more than represented or misrepresented the character and being of God, by making Him the creator of a place for the torture of the wicked."

Rev. Dr. Alfred Harvey, of the First Presbyterian church, said:

"The question clearly is, Do ministers believe in the punishment of hell, as consisting in literal fire, the kind we know here on earth and ourselves by in colder weather than the present? My answer is, No, no more than we believe that Heaven has literal streets of literal gold or literal gates of literal pearl. Nor do we hesitate to tell our people what we believe."

I have been a subscriber to your paper through the Watch Tower for three or four years and am very much pleased with the paper and the way you publish Pastor Russell's Sermons.

Respectfully yours,
D. W. MATZ.

Ohio, Oct. 25.

Allow me to say that I appreciate the Tribune very much. It being of a high order in every department, but I enjoy most the religious department. While most people pick Pastor Russell's Sermons the clear type used in the Tribune makes the reading of them more enjoyable and the Question Box is a valuable source of Biblical information. Wishing you every success, I am,

Very respectfully,
S. R. CAMPBELL.

Texas, Oct. 22.

I write to express my continued and ever increasing appreciation of your good paper.

It has many commendable features, but the religious department interests me most. The Pastor Russell's Sermons and Sunday School Lessons are growing in popularity.

How often during the few months that we have been taking the paper have we found many good and precious answers in the Question Box.

Am sending two new subscribers this week.

Respectfully,

POPULAR MECHANICS

THE TRACKLESS TROLLEY.

Advantages It Possesses Over Other Means of Transportation.

Railless electric traction has attracted much attention in England lately. Several short transportation lines have been built on that principle, and some thirty similar schemes are now under consideration in various sanitrarai regions. The "railless trolley" system of Leeds and Bradford consists of a "bus" similar to the ordinary gasoline stage, except that its motive power is electricity obtained through a trolley from an overhead wire. It is said to be much cheaper to operate than a gasoline bus and where traffic is light and, of course, a similar advantage over the regular train running on tracks is the cause of lower first cost, the entire expense of a special roadbed being eliminated.

The cost of putting up the trolley wires at Leeds was but $6,220 per mile. The forty horsepower buses cost $3,500, and it has been found by experience that the complete cost of operation per mile varies from 11 to 13 cents. At Leeds the fare is 4 cents for a four mile journey.

R. E. Neale, who describes the Leeds and Bradford installations in the Engineering Magazine, says that the track less trolley can make money even where the traffic is thin as a fare of from 1 to 1½ cents per mile. Apparently the trolley has cannot compete with the train where traffic is heavy, but it has, according to Mr. Neale, a distinct field of its own in suburban regions and at resorts during the busy months at one season are followed by no passengers at all during the remainder of the year. Mr. Neale's figures indicate that it is cheaper to operate than the gasoline stage by from one-half a cent to a cent per passenger mile.

USES OF FLUORSPAR.

Employed in Glassmaking and For Open Hearth Steel.

Last year the total quantity of domestic fluorspar reported to the United States geological survey as marketed in the United States was 81,041 short tons, valued at $611,447, compared with 69,427 short tons, valued at $420,196, in 1900, an increase in quantity of 17,621 short tons and in value of $181,251.

Fluorspar is found in crystals, generally cubical, in color ranging from a clear, slightly bluish or green glass-like tint through various other brilliant colors to dark purple, although much of it is white and opaque. Associated with other minerals, fluorspar has a broad distribution, but deposits of workable size are not abundant. The deposits thus far exploited in the United States being found only in the states of Arizona, New Mexico, Colorado, Illinois, Kentucky, Tennessee and New Hampshire.

Fluorspar is used in the manufacture of glass and of enameled iron and sheet ware, the electrolytic refining of antimony and lead, the production of aluminium and in the open hearth steel industries, where it is used as a flux in blast furnaces and in gaste open hearth steel furnaces. It is estimated that about 80 per cent of the American fluorspar output, mainly in the form of ground spar, is consumed in the manufacture of basic open hearth steel. The use of fluorspar is increasing in practically all these industries.

Horses For the Tropics.

The endurance and disposition of horses in the tropics seem to depend much upon the color of their hair-covering. Lieutenant Colonel Charles B. Woodruff, army medical officer, some years ago showed the influence of tropical light upon white men and has now pointed out the need of considering color in choosing animals for warm climates. Gray and white horses proved to be most suitable and best survived. In Manila only the white, gray, roan and yellow have been able to survive the ordinary climate, and over 700 Chinese mules bought in 1903 for Philippine service only four—with white hair over black skins—lived more than seven years. Of troop horses are reviewed the gray and sorrel are quiet, the bays are excitable and restless, and the blacks seem to be most irritable of all.

New School Sanitation Plan.

A new idea in school sanitation has been tested by the medical director of Dartmouth college. About five years ago he began making bacteriological examinations of the air of the college halls and recitation rooms and soon found a great periodic variation in the number of bacteria colonies that developed on the culture media exposed in the usual shallow open dishes. He then adopted the plan of disinfecting with formaldehyde any room showing more than thirty-five colonies or the growth of any kind of bacteria to a dish. This custom has been continued, and the result has been quite striking, the cases of epidemic colds, influenza and bronchitis among the students having been reduced about one-half.

Repair For Leaking Canoe.

A leak in a canoe may be effectively patched with pieces of cheesecloth, well soaked in liquid shellac, and pasted on the outside of the leak. After allowing this to set for a few hours it will be almost impossible to remove the patch. This is an inexpensive and almost invariably a sure remedy for leaks. When the cloth is dry, paint it over with the same color as the boat, and the repair can scarcely be seen.

PRODUCTION OF GOLD.

Improved Methods of Extraction Increase Supply of Yellow Metal.

The extraction of gold from the surface rocks has been so low priced by means of the stamp crushing process has flooded the world during the past few years with that desirable metal and has, according to economists, helped send up the price on everything that gold buys. Now comes the information that other improvements in gold extraction are being effected which may somewhat further extend the possibility of mining low grade ores and further accelerate the yellow flood.

The stamp mill is being replaced by the tube mill, a device for pulverizing rocky particles by grinding them in what is a tubular container. This improved appliance surpasses the stamp in that it pulverizes a given amount of rock with far less labor and expense. Tube mills are now generally employed in the Rand, where they are still supplemented by stamps, to do the preliminary work of coarse crushing. Quite recently James Yule, president of the South African Institute of Engineers, suggested the likelihood that roll crushers might soon replace the stamp mills, even for much of the coarse work.

All these changes mean a cheapening of the cost per ton of rock of extracting gold and for each cent's reduction in the cost of extracting per ton, millions of tons of rock which previously were not worth handling that come paying. Predictions as to the early slackening of the fevered gold production of the past decades may therefore prove mistaken.

SIMPLE FASTENING KEY.

Emergency Device For Securing Doors Unprovided With Locks.

Every now and then a patent is brought to unscrupulous use for locking doors, which would seem to indicate that there is a considerable demand for such an appliance. No doubt travelers frequently find themselves in hotel apartments inadequately equipped with locks. Under such conditions it would be convenient to have a pocket device for securing the door against intruders.

The accompanying illustration shows a door securer consisting of a flat key with a single sharp tooth on the edge and mounted to turn within a yoke. The key is turned to the plane of the yoke and inserted between the door and the jamb. Then it is turned crosswise to wedge the sharp tooth into the wooden door and its frame. It is impossible to open the door under such conditions without tearing out the wood engaged by the teeth of the key.

Effects of Conserved Food Coal.

Dr. Jacques Lioville, who was part of the staff of the antarctic expedition which recently returned to the north, has given the name "the disease of conserved food" to the malady which is the cause of most of the illness encountered on these expeditions. There is a very decided alteration in the composition of the blood, owing to a lack in the food of the necessary elements of health. The patients suffered from overpowering drowsiness and shortness of breath, which prevented them from taking part in marches or other severe work. All these symptoms disappeared when a supply of fresh meat was obtainable.

Auxiliary Sailing Schooners.

George Westinghouse is strongly of the opinion that the typical American sailing schooner of many masts has a great future before it in the ocean carrying trade, provided that it is equipped with auxiliaries. He believes that the best auxiliary will be a 250 horse power turbine, provided with reduction gear, such a plant being suitable to a five masted schooner of 2,200 tons. Such a vessel with a speed of eight knots is practicable and that the economy would be such that these vessels would cost the typical tramp steamer as an economical freight carrier.

Frosting Glass.

Procure a piece of flat iron similar to an ordinary box iron; heat it to the shape of a flattened spiral to make a piece three inches long and one and one-quarter inches wide and fit on one side smooth. Sprinkle some fine sand over the glass, dampen the sand and rub the smooth edge of the iron head over the glass. It requires only a short time of rubbing to produce a beautiful frosted surface on the glass.

Uses of Barytes.

The greater part of the barytes produced in the United States is used as a pigment in the manufacture of mixed paints. It is also used in the manufacture of lithopone, a white pigment. Barytes is used for the mineral ore in the manufacture of rubber, wall paper, asbestos cement and poker chips and in tanning leather. A new use of barytes reported from Italy is in the manufacture of gorgonzola cheese. The cheese is made in the manufacture of large and thick heavy crust of the fine ground material, which has the property of affording just sufficient protection from aeration.

Barytes occurs in veins as a gangue of metallic ores, also in veins in limestone and limestone or as a replacement of limestone. The mineral has a wide range in geologic time and is extensive distribution. In the United States the principal sources are, however, limited to five districts—the Missouri district and the Appalachian district. A single county in Missouri—Washington—produces about 54 per cent of the total output.

Improved Coal Carrier.

An improved type of coal carrying vessel has just been launched at Blyth, near Newcastle, England, which, in the opinion of experts, will begin a new era in the building of cargo ships. The vessel is constructed on what is known as the "deck" principle, which, it is claimed, offers important advantages over boats of the ordinary type, with a flat keel, straight sides and a draft of eighteen feet four inches. It is asserted to be the fastest coiler built and it will be used for the single purpose in connection with the British fleet. Smaller capital outlay, cheaper maintenance and increased rate of speed are among the favorable features claimed for the vessel.

Starting a Tight Screw.

When a screw cannot be turned with an ordinary screwdriver the following method is usually successful: Put the cutting edge of a cold chisel in the slot of the screw head and strike upon the chisel in the direction to loosen the screws. This will cause the chisel to "rebound" and cut and a trifle. Hit the head of the chisel a light, sharp blow, which will cause it to bottom in the slot, but the hardness of the chisel in turning to its original position will cause the screw to turn a small amount in the direction desired. By repeating this several times the screw can be loosened so it is easily turned with a screwdriver.

APPRECIATIONS.

Nevada, Oct. 25.

I have just received the subscription to the Labor Tribune through the W. T. B. and Tract Society. I am also sending you the name of a subscriber for the Tribune. We enjoy the good tidings of great joy and the good fight it brings to a home where they are hungering and thirsting for righteousness. I am a reader of Pastor Russell's Sermons, the Sunday School Lessons and also the Bible Students' Monthly. Readers of appreciation and you still reveal the good work of the Master in your papers.

MRS. BURK J. FRANK.

Indiana, Oct. 24.

No where else than in Pastor Russell's writing can I find the "Upon the wooden door and its frame." Scriptures treated and as all Bible students know, it is a wonderful help as understanding of the "types and shadows" before the realities can be understood.

I gladly testify to the fact that it is by the study of the Bible—Bible through the writings of Pastor Russell that I am able to understand my God and the place I may have in his great plan of redemption.

So with much appreciation of your good paper, I am

Respectfully yours,
MRS. ANN FISK.

New York, Oct. 25.

We certainly appreciate your noble efforts in helping us to spread the Truth and we hope that you will continue to publish the harvest is ripe.

Yours in the interest of the Truth.
J. A. GREAVES.

Ohio, Oct. 25.

I do not like to miss a single copy for I know I am missing something good. We are especially interested in the religious department. We are very much disappointed if the Tribune does not come on Thursday. We get another paper that publishes Pastor Russell's Sermons, but we prefer to read them in the Tribune because of the large clear type. We expect to be a subscriber as long as we live and will continue to publish the Sermons and the many Letters of Appreciation and Encouragement. We are very interesting. May you continue in the good work is our prayer.

BROTHER AND SISTER, J. C. HICKEY.

Alabama, Oct. 25.

We have been taking your paper several years and seriously appreciate the clear type and valuable matter given to Pastor Russell's Sermons. We certainly have been blessed by reading his Sermons and also the reading, "Scripture Studies." He gives so many explanations on Scriptures we have always wished to understand and now we have a clear understanding of them. We pray God's blessing on the work and know you will be rewarded for your works.

Yours very truly,
I. H. WRIGHT.

Pennsylvania, Oct. 24.

I certainly feel it is time I add my name to your list of grateful readers. When I pick up the Tribune and read the Letters from so many of the Lord's little ones it is almost like being in a praise and testimony meeting. Your paper has been a blessing ever since it came to our homes. When we are finished reading it I send it to some one whose sight is not good and I have heard of those whose eyesight is almost restored by reading our beloved Pastor's expositions of the Scriptures.

I am very thankful that the harvest message ever reached me. I was fast losing all faith in the Bible, thinking it taught the terrible doctrines heard from childhood.

Thanking you for all the privileges you put within the reach of the dear ones in the Light of present Truth, I am,

Your friend and well wisher,
MRS. H. D. ROBERTS.

Minnesota, Oct. 23.

I notice my subscription will soon expire so will renew through the Bible and Tract Society because I don't want to miss it. I have not missed one issue yet since I started to take it. I take other papers too but truly they cannot be compared with the Labor Tribune, because your clean paper carries in its columns a load of refreshing and encouraging "meat in due season" from the precious Word of God. Indeed I appreciate your paper and like it more and more each week. Every time I read it it gives me such an encouragement in the joyful service that I cannot describe with words or pen. How thankful I am to God for giving us such courageous and noble helpers in spreading the Truth of His Word; fearless of all opposition and persecution. As you know that darkness hateth the light at the present time I want to thank you for helping disperse some of this great darkness which covers the earth and people.

The poem in your paper on the parable of the Wise Virgins was a very good one, also the Letters of Appreciation are very helpful and now what shall I say about Pastor Russell's Sermons, Brooklyn Bible Studies, Sunday School Lessons and Question Box? I will leave that for you to imagine. The harvest truly is great but the laborers are few. Finally I want to assure you that your paper is always welcome here and also as it contains these columns of pure Truths from God's Word.

"When the enemy shall come in like a flood, the spirit of the Lord shall lift up a standard against him." Isa 59: 19.

"The God whom thou servest continually, he will deliver thee." Dan 6: 16.

Wishing you continued success, I remain,

Yours sincerely,
GEORGE E. KAFOONY.

A SIGN FROM HEAVEN.

Mark 8:11-26.—Study Matt. 11:25—Key 1.

Verse 11. The Pharisees came forth, and began to question with him, seeking of him a sign from heaven, tempting him.

Verse 12. And he sighed deeply in his spirit, and saith, Why doth this generation seek after a sign? verily I say unto you, There shall no sign be given unto this generation.

THE Pharisees, Scribes and Sadducees of Jesus day were perplexed by His success in preaching the gospel. They chose to be heard Him gladly were clearly of the common people, which the Jewish teachers had refused to recognize as leaders. They considered Jesus a competitor and feared for their own reputations because of the superiority of Jesus whose "Wonderful Words of Life" touched the hearts of many.

These Pharisees came to find fault They asked Him for a sign from heaven. Their purpose was to belittle the sign He was giving, ignoring these and all who would. We want a heavenly sign; give us this, and we will believe.

In order to be able to appreciate these tests of the power of Jesus, we must know the people. The Jewish nation were the people of Jesus' Messiahship from whom they had supposed. The Prophets had foretold the coming of Messiah, but they had given heed to those which spoke of the power that would come to their favored nation.

Other Scriptures spoke of how Messiah should be led as a Lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before the shearers is dumb, so He would open not His mouth. They fell of how He would "preach deliverance to the captives," "the opening of the eyes of the blind, but this they associated with the glorious Kingdom. Their attitude was that they were open to receive, and to these the Master's teaching were allegorize. They were guided in the correct understanding of the Divine Plan, and were ready for the Pentecostal blessing as part of the "elect."

The Sign of Jonah.

Our lesson tells that Jesus asked, "Why doth this generation seek after a sign?" referring to the sign of the prophet Matthew (xvi. 1-4) gives a more detailed account: Jesus called the attention of the Pharisees to the signs that He was giving, and then said there would be one sign given that nation could not refuse. That sign was to be the sign of Jonah. Three days and three nights in the belly of the great fish, and finally born of the spirit at the resurrection morning. These are to be His only sign to prove to the world that He is raised from mortal to spirit nature. All others, Adam included, are to be awakened unto a resurrection by judgment (John v. 25-28—not damnation. See Revised Version), a raising up to perfection as human beings. All these are to be habit the earthly plane of existence. Only the Lord Jesus and His joint-heirs, the Church of Christ, will inherit the Kingdom of Heaven, the heavenly or spiritual honors and blessings. Indeed His death would bring to general all obtain blessings and life eternal as natural or fleshly beings. See 1 Corinthians, xvth chapter.

Q.—In 1 John iii, 2 we read: "The Sons of God are manifested that He might destroy the works of the devil." Will this result in a final salvation or the final condemnation of all the willfully wicked?

Answer.—The Scriptures show us that because of Satan's deception of our Mother Eve, sin entered into the world and that death followed as a result; therefore we could properly say that the works of the devil have been sin and death. The reign of Christ will result in the destruction of all who work wickedness, and as our Lord declared in one of His great parables, "Every tree He ye cursed into everlasting fire prepared for the devil and his angels" (Matthew xxv. 41). The language here used by our Lord symbolically represented a condition of destruction. Other Scriptures declare that only the righteous shall be preserved, as we read: "The Lord preserveth them that love Him, but all the wicked will He destroy" (Psalm cxlv, 20). This destruction includes Satan himself and all that are in agreement with his evil methods (Hebrews ii, 14).

Q.—In Matthew xviii, 16, we read, "Whatsoever ye bind on earth shall be bound in heaven; whatsoever ye loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven." Do we understand from this Scripture that the power is vested in turn over his arrangement to the Apostles and be governed by what they did?

Answer.—This Scripture does not teach that the Lord would yield his authority to the Holy Apostles in the dictates of the Apostles, but it does teach that they should be so kept by the guiding of the Holy Spirit in their decision in the church, respecting what things should be considered orderly and what things should be considered optional would be proper decisions; and that the church in general thereupon would know that the matters were fixed and settled, and that the conclusions arrived at were the Lord's decisions as well as those of the Apostles. This was a guarantee of Divine supervision in the organization of the Church. Jesus assured them that they should be guided by the Holy Spirit, and for this cause we may be assured that the writings of the Apostle in the New Testament are for the benefit of the Church, testing the Divine approval and constituting the message of God to the Church.

Q.—If we know a great many good and honest people who do not even claim to be Christians, why don't they believe on the Lord Jesus Christ?

Answer.—The Apostle Paul declares that "By faith ye are saved." Some people cannot exercise the quality of faith. The Apostle also declares that faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God, which means in order to have faith one must study the Word of God and believe it. The Apostle Paul answers this question when he declares that the God of this world (Satan, manifested in this present evil order of things, has blinded the minds of those who do not believe (II Corinthians iv, 4). The great Adversary, Satan, is the author of so many false doctrines that many good, honest people have become greatly oppressed by them. One system has taught one doctrine, another class, equally honest, another doctrine, until we have in the world more than three hundred different denominations, all having some truth mixed with much error. Many honest people have been unable to separate the truth from the error, and accept only the truth and reject the error, hence the confusion and refusal to have anything to do with either. Paul were to follow the admonition of the Apostle, "Study to show yourself approved unto God," and not from man-made theories, there would be less confusion and more who would readily accept the Scriptural teachings.

Q.—The first man Adam became a living soul (I Corinthians xv, 45; Genesis ii, 7), the last Adam (the Lord from heaven, I Corinthians xv, 47) at the resurrection became a lifegiving spirit, in the general resurrection, will the first men Adam become a lifegiving spirit also?

Answer.—The Scriptures in outlining the Divine Program as it relates to the salvation of mankind plainly teach that in the present Christian Era, during the days of our Lord's first advent to the time of His second coming, has been set apart for the purpose of selecting and developing a special class, the members of which in the resurrection will be changed from earthly to spiritual conditions. In this present life these are said to be begotten of the spirit and finally born of the spirit in the resurrection morning. These are to be like their Lord and see Him as He is, glorified from mortal to immortal conditions. All others, Adam included, are to be awakened unto a resurrection by judgment (John v. 25, 26—not damnation. See Revised Version), a raising up to perfection as human beings. All these are to be habit the earthly plane of existence. Only the Lord Jesus and His joint-heirs, the Church of Christ, will inherit the Kingdom of Heaven, the heavenly or spiritual honors and blessings. Indeed His death would bring to general all obtain blessings and life eternal as natural or fleshly beings. See 1 Corinthians, xvth chapter.

Q.—In 1 John iii, 8 we read: "The Son of God was manifested that He might destroy the works of the devil." Will this result in a final salvation or the final condemnation of all the willfully wicked?

Answer.—The Scriptures show us that because of Satan's deception of our Mother Eve, sin entered into the world and that death followed as a result; therefore we could properly say that the works of the devil have been sin and death. The reign of Christ will result in the destruction of all who work wickedness, and as our Lord declared in one of His great parables, "Every tree He ye cursed into everlasting fire prepared for the devil and his angels" (Matthew xxv. 41). The language here used by our Lord symbolically represented a condition of destruction. Other Scriptures declare that only the righteous shall be preserved, as we read: "The Lord preserveth them that love Him, but all the wicked will He destroy" (Psalm cxlv, 20). This destruction includes Satan himself and all that are in agreement with his evil methods (Hebrews ii, 14).

Q.—In Matthew xviii, 16, we read, "Whatsoever ye bind on earth shall be bound in heaven; whatsoever ye loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven." Do we understand from this Scripture that the power is vested in turn over his arrangement to the Apostles and be governed by what they did?

Answer.—This Scripture does not teach that the Lord would yield his authority to the Holy Apostles in the dictates of the Apostles, but it does teach that they should be so kept by the guiding of the Holy Spirit in their decision in the church, respecting what things should be considered orderly and what things should be considered optional would be proper decisions; and that the church in general thereupon would know that the matters were fixed and settled, and that the conclusions arrived at were the Lord's decisions as well as those of the Apostles. This was a guarantee of Divine supervision in the organization of the Church. Jesus assured them that they should be guided by the Holy Spirit, and for this cause we may be assured that the writings of the Apostle in the New Testament are for the benefit of the Church, testing the Divine approval and constituting the message of God to the Church.

Q.—In the present day enlightenment, if Christ were here in person as at the time of His first advent, do you believe the people would treat Him the same as they did then?

Answer.—There are representative of Christ in the world today—not those who are merely professing Christians, in name only—but the true, heart-devoted, sincere followers of the Master and by considering the world's treatment of these we can safely approximate as to what would be the Lord's experiences were He to appear in the flesh as at His first advent. The saintly few who humbly walk in the footsteps of Christ, devoting their all in assisting the poor and in preaching the Gospel, are not held in very high esteem by the people, as a rule. And it is not like to be otherwise with the words of our Lord and the Apostles! (Matthew v, 10-12; Romans viii, 17, 18; 1 Timothy ii, 12; 1 Corinthians i, 26, 27). After all, the common people heard our Lord gladly and marvelled at the gracious words that proceeded out of His mouth. They wished to make Him their king on one occasion, and resented it greatly in Him at the time of His entry into the city of Jerusalem. It was the Scribes and Pharisees, the religious leaders of that time, that opposed and persecuted the Lord, and finally induced the multitude to cry out for crucifixion. It is even so now. Worldly people admire an upright Christian man, his sincerity and his honesty of purpose. They might consider him foolish for striving to live up to his faith. But it is the modern Scribes and Pharisees who hate those that are setting forth the true teachings of the Scriptures. Therefore, in the view of the foregoing, we have reason to believe that the Master would fare no better in the world today than at His first advent were He to appear as then.

Q.—Why were the Jews called "God's chosen people" and are the ancient Jews different from the modern ones?

Answer.—Abraham was the father of the Jewish people. God made promise to him, saying, "In thy Seed all the families of the earth shall be blessed." From Jacob, the grandson of Abraham, and twelve sons, who became the head of the twelve tribes of Israel, or Jews. God made a covenant with his people, saying to them, "If ye will obey my voice indeed, and keep my covenant, then ye shall be a peculiar treasure unto me above all people, for all the earth is mine; and ye shall be unto me a kingdom of priests and an holy nation" (Exodus xix. 5, 6). For more than eighteen centuries God's decision were with this people exclusively, as he said through His prophet, "Ye only have I known of all the families of the earth" (Amos iii, 2). Time after time God reiterated His promise that the Messiah should come to them. And when finally came the masses of the Jews were not heeding God's promises; being led by the clergy (now known as leaders of the people, therefore blind, as Jesus said, "Blind leaders of the blind." God rejected Jesus Christ and were cast off from God's favor (Matthew xxiii, 37-39). The words of our Lord still apply to the Jews, but will again return to this people; He said, "Ye shall not see me thenceforth till ye shall say, Blessed is He that cometh in the name of the Lord." The Apostles point out that God there began to turn his favor to the Gentiles, and when the regular number have been selected from among these to constitute the Kingdom class, as promised, then God's favor will again be shown to the Jews as a people.

Q.—Were the six days of creation literal days of twenty-four hours each?

Answer.—The word "day," as used in the Scriptures, signifies a fixed period of time. We read of a forty years' day, "the day of temptation in the wilderness" (Hebrews iii, 8, 9). Again, we have the Scriptures stating that "One day with the Lord is as a thousand years." (II Peter iii, 8.) A year is frequently spoken of as a day, as "I have appointed thee each day for a year." (Ezekiel iv, 6.) Furthermore the entire Gospel Age is called "The day of salvation"—II Corinthians vi, 2. When considering the statements of Genesis respecting the six creative Days or periods, or epochs, we should not limit our thoughts to a twenty-four hour day, but examine the subject and see what period of time is signified. Doing this, we find that a twenty-four hour day could not be the case for the sun did not appear until the fourth of these creative days; hence, in the first three of these creative days there could have been no twenty-four hour day period such as we now note. We would not, however, go to the opposite extreme and join with so-called Scientists in their claims that there were millions of years elapsing in the creative period.

We find satisfactory evidence in the Scriptures that the ordering of these creative "days" was a period of seven thousand years and, hence, that the entire creative work would be 7,000 X 7=49,000 years. And although this period is fantastical when compared with some geological accounts, it is, we believe, quite reasonably ample for the work represented as being accomplished therein,—the ordering and fitting of the earth, already in existence.

Progress of the Amalgamation Movement Among British Trade Unions Steel Workers Still for Isolation--Big Dyers' Movement Pending--400,000 British Coal Miners Get Weekly Increase--Austrian Hired Female Help Organize for Better Conditions.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

LONDON, Oct. 28.—It will no doubt be noticed by readers of this journal that one marked tendency of British trade unions is toward amalgamation or fusion of over-lapping unions. The object aimed at is the ideal of "One trade, one union." The railway unions are working well in that direction but perhaps a still more striking example of this beneficent process is found in the building trades. At the present time the workers in these trades are spread over about thirty sectional societies, there being many unions even in the separate branches of the craft. Even the bricklayers or painters are not in one single union.

A private meeting was held in London on October 21 for the purpose of receiving reports on the balloting of members of all the building trade unions. A conference on amalgamation was held in London last July and upon the results of that conference building workers have voted. At the conclusion of the meeting on October 21, which was held in private, C. W. Bowerman, a labor member of Parliament, the secretary, stated that the result of the ballot showed a large majority in favor of the principles of amalgamation. After the discussion, the delegates passed a resolution adjourning the conference and inviting the executive committees of the various unions whose members have voted in favor of amalgamation to send representatives to another conference, for the purpose of drawing up a full scheme of amalgamation to be submitted to the unions for adoption. It was further agreed that should any union which has refrained from voting hitherto, on the subject desire to take a further share in the conference, they shall be supplied with voting papers and be invited to attend the conference, and the amalgamation being successfully carried through the new union will have a total membership of close upon three hundred thousand men.

Whilst the proposals for the fusion of the building trade unions, like those of the railway and shipyard unions, are receiving a large measure of support, the scheme for the federation of unions in the iron and steel trades does not at present appear to find favor. A ballot vote of the 17,-983 members of the Steel Smelters has just been taken showing only 829 for with 13,908 against and 7,246 indifferent. The result is the more surprising inasmuch as this union some time ago declared strongly for the amalgamation of unions in the steel trade. That scheme fell through owing to the opposition of some of the smaller unions, two of which were absorbed later by the Steel Smelters and with this the society appears to rest content for the present.

The Lancashire and Yorkshire piece dyers' application for an increase of their wages to 14 cents an hour, with time and a half for overtime after 6 p. m and no overtime on Saturday and Monday morning, was considered by representatives of the unions involved at a conference at Bradford on October 19. The General Union of Textile Workers was also represented and the executive of this union is to meet to consider whether they shall join in the demand. All the dyers' firms in the two counties have been carefully scheduled, and the application is to be submitted to all of them before November 1. About 22,000 dyers and finishers are affected, and the granting of the wage demand would mean an addition of $7 .5cents to the adults' present weekly wage of $6.10 to $7.

The coal miners of the "federated area," which includes with North Wales all the English mining districts except Northumberland and Durham, on October 21 signified through their representatives on the Conciliation Board their acceptance of the terms upon which the colliers were prepared to grant the 5 per cent advance in the general rate of wages asked for some months ago. The men obtained an immediate advance of 2 per cent in wages—roughly representing an average weekly increase of 25 cents to each of 400,000 men. The agreement also gives them, in the opinion of the leaders, more favorable conditions for calculating the wages than have been offered in any agreement yet, both the minimum and maximum limits having been raised. The coal owners, on their side, obtain an agreement which decides the wage-rate variation for three years and secures immunity from disputes on this head for the same period.

The agreement not signed in the federated area leaves the miners free to proceed with the program for the whole of the Federation area mapped out at the Swansea, South Wales, conference last month. The bill for the nationalization of mines is to be the subject of a political campaign, and on the industrial field the demands of the surfacemen (or banksmen, as they are called in some districts) for an eight-hour day and a minimum wage are to be supported by the Miners' Federation. The men's representatives on the South Wales Conciliation Board brought this matter before the coal owners' representatives on October 21 in a tentative manner, but the latter

IMPORTANT DECISION TO LABOR.

The United States Supreme Court new ruling in regard to the issuance of injunctions is hailed by local leaders in the labor movement as a great victory for the workingmen's cause. John Williams, president of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel & Tin Workers, was elated over the new decision. He said:

"A government by injunction strikes at the foundation of good government and this is particularly true, be it effects the government as applied to the workingman. Its workings can be seen to advantage in labor difficulties. It is simply an application of the old Austrian code. That law is for the purpose of protecting property while the Saxon law recognizes the right of the individual to protect himself, which has been denied under the court rulings of recent years in the issuance of injunctions. Workingmen are compelled to strike on various occasions to obtain their rights and when they do their leaders are enjoined from interference in any way in carrying out the strike by a lawful conclusion.

"Labor demands that it shall at least be put on the same basis with property. If an employer deliberately defaults his employes and oppresses them, I believe the individual ought to have the same rights of legal process that is given to them who employ labor. The spirit of the decision is being recognized more and more, and the opposition to labor's measures is growing less steadily. I earnestly believe that the new rulings handed down by the Supreme Court will aid labor materially in comparison with the injunctions that have been enforced in recent years."

T. J. Williams, president of the Building Trade council, said:

"The new ruling as handed down by the Supreme Court in the matter of issuance of injunctions is a great improvement on that of the past, and if carried out by all courts as I have every reason to believe it will be, establishes a rule which will be invaluable. Particularly is this true of that part of the ruling which treats of the notification of action which must be given, and it is this which will prove to be a great benefit to organized labor."

The Sheep Herders' Union of Butte, Mont., is sending out an appeal for moral and financial assistance in the work of organizing the sheep herders of the country.

QUALIFYING THE I. AND R.

WE DO KNOW exactly what the initiative and referendum mean in actual practice the voter should take notice of what is transpiring in Oregon. The voters of that state were called upon last Tuesday to vote yes or no on 39 distinct pieces legislation, some of which are no more vital to democracy than the bill to create a state inspector of hotels at a salary of $7,000 a year, or the bill "to put into effect the flat salary state officer law on December 1, 1912, instead of January 1, 1915." The voters of the city of Portland, Ore., also had a special election on the same day to vote on 21 charter amendments and a referendum bill, so that within a week they have had to pass upon 60 different measures.

It is unreasonable to argue that the voters have the time or the means to acquaint themselves with the merit of such a large number and a great variety of propositions. It worries them, if they are conscientious, to investigate the merits of constitutional amendments, one or two of which may require consideration every five or ten years. Compared with this the duty of passing upon forty or fifty or a hundred propositions at every election involves an infinitely greater responsibility. It is to be doubted if it is possible for one voter out of 100 to discharge the duty conscientiously. Is it of no consequence how the duty is discharged.

Mr. Bryan is one of the advocates of the initiative and referendum who honestly admit that its working already warrants alarm. He deems it necessary that something be done to prevent a mass of measures from being unloaded upon the voters at each election. In the confusion created by so many propositions many vicious measures would unquestionably be initiated and slip through. Mr. Bryan's remedy is to make it difficult for measures with a sinister motive, private and to be initiated. In a recent address on the Pacific coast he argued that no one should be permitted "to solicit signatures for any petition that has a legislative intent. Let the petition be exposed in some suitable public place. Let it be known that it is so exposed, and that it may be signed by any one sufficiently interested to go there, and by no one else. In this way we should have a guaranty of at least some sort of political (that is, public) purpose and design on the part of the petitioners."

It is quite evident from Mr. Bryan's attitude that the new panacea has developed serious working defects even sooner than its most ardent friend anticipated. It will be interesting to note how its advocates receive Mr. Bryan's suggestion, the immediate inspiration of which was the experience in California a petition recently circulated in relation to some matter of telephone supervision contained 14,000 names, but it was found that less than 300 of the signatories had telephones in their homes. It thus appears that in the I. and R. states the process of securing signatures to an initiative petition is becoming a business for experts, who go out and get them in any number desired.

HOW GERMANY DIDN'T CHEAPEN MEAT.

GERMANY'S experience with the high-cost-of-meat problem has been one which upsets a good many favorite theories. It has been confidently asserted that if it were not for the high tariff in this country meat here would be cheap enough. Well, Germany suspended its tariff on meat, and still the price to the consumer remained so high that Berlin has just had meat riots. The story as briefly summarized from recent cablegram reports is that under the pressure of public agitation against the prices of food the German government issued an order permitting the importation of foreign meats under reduced tariff rates, to be put on sale in the public markets. Thereupon the butchers doing business in one of the workingmen's districts in Berlin refused to handle the imported meat, and the housewives' insurrection followed. The assailants of the present United States tariff evidently feel that the incident calls for some explanations from them, and the New York Evening Post responds as follows:

"The middleman is by no means averse to making the biggest profit the traffic will bear. But it still remains true that, insofar as high prices can be explained by manipulation, the first impulse and incentive come from above. An increase in the price, emanating from the manufacturer, travels down through jobber, wholesaler, and retailer with cumulative snowball effect. A half-cent increase at the source of production becomes the 'sizna' for additional pennies all along the line. In trade, as in politics and police administration, the moral influence of the man higher up must be reckoned with."

In view of the learning and perspicacity with which the Evening Post is edited, the paragraph just quoted is significantly full of unconscious confession. If this is the best explanation that can be offered for the failure of low-tariff to cheapen meat in Berlin, it is clear that low tariff need not be expected to cheapen meat much in New York, Philadelphia, Boston or Pittsburgh. For the Evening Post is obliged to admit that unless the abolition of tariff also abolishes greed (greed of retailers, greed of middleman, greed of the packer or "man higher up") the consumer does not benefit. And in Germany abolition of tariff did not abolish the dealers' greed or the combination of the dealers to extort high prices from the purchaser. So it is apparent that the remedy for combinations to raise prices is enforcement of the laws penalizing such combinations, as the Republican party has maintained since the question became acute, and is still maintaining.

FARMERS OUR BEST-OFF LABOR.

ONE can begrudge the farmers of the country their good fortune in the bountiful crops of this year. They richly deserve all the reward that comes to them. However much of the profits of many other lines of production may be due to unfair manipulation, the farmer creates his values through his soil, and in creating them enriches all. The prosperous, middle-aged farmer of today, facing his declining years in comfort and plenty, may be envied by the wage-workers of the cities.

But let us not forget that the now prosperous farmer has bought his present condition at cost of ceaseless toil and tireless energy, of almost inconceivable self-denial and sacrifice, of disappointments and discouragements that only the fittest could survive. If any life in this country has been harder than that of the farmer it is that of his wife. She, generally without help and with scanty tools, cooks the meals, does the family washing and the sewing, milks the cows, raises the chickens, makes the soap and apple butter and bakes the bread and pies, brings up a generous brood of healthy children, and often finds time in the harvest seasons to help her husband in the fields.

The lives of these men and women have been the most extraordinary of most fruitful in all history. It is the farmers that have converted our vast domain from a wilderness into rich fields and made possible the flourishing cities. While their bordon was still bounded by the clearing his ax made the prophetic pioneer farmer and his wife boldly dreamed of continental conquest. Their vision saw beyond the dank swamp, the bleak desert and the dark forest to the lofty buildings and the jostling multitudes of mighty cities—beyond the rank, grass-clad prairies to the seas of golden grain—beyond the harsh life of the log hut and the sod house to the cozy homes of their children, where should be comfort and the lighter things of life those they might not be for him and her. Fairly have they earned all the good that comes to them. For they have established our country, have built our cities, have made our civilization possible. Without them the rest of us would be naked savages. Their reward is the richest set themselves alone, but the nation. Agriculture ever has been and ever will be the backbone of all business in this country.

Officials of American Federation of Labor Complete Annual Reports in Readiness for Rochester Convention--Folly of Using Cheap Labor--President Taft Takes More Public Offices Out of Politics -- Machinists' Brotherhood Likely to Join International Association.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4. — The reports of the President and Secretary of the American Federation of Labor, together with the executive council's report, which are to be submitted to the annual convention of the American Federation of Labor, which convenes in Rochester, N. Y., November 11, have been completed and are in the hands of the printer. A general resume of the accomplishments of the year shows the American Federation of Labor still forging ahead. While there have been many wage contests and other obstacles, yet this report shows that material progress has been made. The history of the past year is interesting, and shows that the general labor movement of this country is not only virile, but is aggressive in reaching out to secure betterments for those already organized, as well as entering the fields where large bodies of men yet remain unorganized. These reports, subsequent to the opening of the convention, will be given wide publicity.

Under the caption, "Folly of Using Cheap Labor," the Washington Herald recently printed the following editorial: "Fiber and Fabric says the Lawrence mills know all about the economy of skilful labor, but they cannot get it. They have filled up with new immigrants, many of whom cannot speak or understand English, because native labor has withdrawn from the mills. The same organ of the textile trade says that the skilful labor that retires from the mills as fast as this great labor is admitted. The exit of one class was going on while the other class was coming in, and there is a substantial reason for believing that the mill owners are responsible for the substitution of the inferior labor. They have been trying to get the cheapest labor they could get for lower wages. But they are beginning to find out that the cheap labor is not economical. It leaves a long list of destructive articles to 'boot.'"

Since President Taft passed, by executive order, the fourth class postmasters under the civil service, arrangements are being perfected to carry the plan into effect. The offices have been divided into two classes: Class A and Class B. Class A comprises the postmasters whose compensation is $200 a year or more. Class B includes offices of which the compensation is less than that figure. Appointments to all Class A offices will be made from names certified by the civil service commission after competitive examinations of the applicants. Vacancies in all Class B offices will be filled on the recommendation of postoffice inspectors after personal investigation. Hereafter all vacancies in the postmasterships for fourth-class offices will be filled without regard to the political affiliations of the applicants.

After a week of conferences, relative to changes in management, wages, and methods of employing men in the navy yards and stations, the commandants of the navy yards and stations of the United States, Cuba, and the Philippine Islands, have not made public their findings. It is stated that the most of the questions discussed were of a nature that would require only departmental action for their settlement. The result of the conference will be submitted to the Secretary of the Navy. One of the chief questions which arose was whether or not it would be advisable to place all navy yard employes, except naval officers, under civil service rules, which provoked an animated discussion. The result of the action of the department on the recommendations of the commandants will probably be made public in a short time.

Officials of the International Association of Machinists have held conferences with an organization known as the Brotherhood of Machinists, the latter organization being dual to that of the International Association, the major portion of the strength being in New York City. The conference resulted in arrangements being perfected whereby mass meetings will be held to discuss the plan of the Brotherhood with coming into the International Association. The meetings referred to have been held and a decision was reached to refer it to a referendum. That vote has not yet been taken, but indications are that a majority of the members of the Brotherhood of Machinists are favorable to abandoning the dual organization and joining the International Association of Machinists.

More than $1,100,000 in death and injury benefits to men or the families of men employed by the United States in hazardous work has been paid out of the treasury since August 1, 1908, the date when the government workmen's compensation act went into effect. This information is included in a report submitted to Secretary Nagel, of the Department of Commerce and Labor, by Solicitor Charles Earl of the department. Of this sum, $784,311.65 went to the injured themselves and upward of $100,000 was paid to the surviving dependents of men killed. Whenever a government workman is injured through no

SUPREME COURT HEEDS LABOR.

ANNOUNCEMENT is made by the United States Supreme Court that it has adopted rules respecting the issues of injunctions, which will have to be obeyed by all Federal Courts and which are of the most intense interest to all labor organizations. The rules may not be accepted by labor as a complete substitute for the anti-injunction laws that it is trying to compel Congress to place on the state books, but they go a long way in the same direction and show that the highest court in the land has been watching the progress of public opinion in this country and has obliged to defer to it by voluntarily correcting at least a portion of the injunction evil.

The first rule forbids the issue of either preliminary or temporary injunctions without notice to the opposite party, except in cases where it shall clearly appear from specific facts, shown by affidavits or the verified bill, that immediate and irreparable loss or damage will result to the applicant before the matter can be heard on notice." If the compelling necessity for such a case, the matter shall be made returnable at the earliest possible time, in no case less than ten days, and shall take precedence of other matters except earlier proceedings of the same character. When it comes up for hearing, the applicant shall proceed upon the application for an injunction, and if he does not do so the court shall dissolve the temporary restraining order.

On two days' notice by the party against whom the order is obtained a motion can be made to dissolve or modify the restraining order, and the court shall proceed to hear and determine that motion as expeditiously as the ends of justice may require. All temporary orders shall be filed forthwith in the clerk's office.

The American Federation of Musicians has at present a cash balance of $59,000 in its treasury, and 553 locals on its roster, all in good standing.

Pastor Russell's Sermon

ARMAGEDDON OF THE SCRIPTURES.

Startling Presentation of Coming Events—Pastor Russell's Views. Churches of All Denominations and the Civil Powers of Earth Are About to Unite in Common Cause—Powerful Influence Preparing for the Battle of Armageddon—A Reign of Anarchy Will Be the Result of the Warfare Until the Messiah Takes Control.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Nov. 3.—The Brooklyn Academy of Music was crowded to the limit to hear Pastor Russell's discourse on "The Battle of Armageddon." His text was: "He gather them together unto a place called in the Hebrew tongue Armageddon." (Rev. 16: 16.) The speaker said:—

Armageddon in the Hebrew signifies the "Hill of Meridah," or Mount of Destruction. It was famous as a battlefield in Old Testament times.

The Lord has seen fit to associate the name Armageddon with the great controversy between Truth and Error, right and wrong, God and Mammon, with which this age will close, period, and the New Age of Righteousness be ushered in. He has purposely used highly symbolical figures of speech in the last book of the Bible, evidently with a view to hiding certain important truths until the due time for their revealment. But even in the due time, the Bible assures us, "None of the wicked shall understand" (Daniel xii. 9, 10)—none who are out of heart harmony with God—but only the wise of His people—the "wise virgin" class of the Master's parable.

I have long avoided presentation of my understanding of our text and its context. I take it up now by request and because I believe it is due time to be understood. I disclaim any special inspiration. In some particulars my views agree with those of other Bible students, and in other respects they disagree. Each hearer must use his own judgment do his own Bible study, and reach his own conclusions.

Kindly remember that I am not responsible for the figures of speech used by the Lord. My interpretations do indeed constitute a terrible arraignment of institutions which we have all reverenced and which embrace good people, of good words and good works. God's saints people in these various institutions, being comparatively few, are known to Him as wheat as a whole are dealt with in prophecy.

THE DRAGON, BEAST, FALSE PROPHET.

Our context tells us that three impure spirits (teachings) will go forth from the mouths of the Dragon, the Beast and the False Prophet, and these three will be in accord, and symbolically the doctrines are represented by "frogs." These three doctrines are to have a mighty influence throughout the civilized earth. They are to gather the kings and their armies to the great Battle of Armageddon.

The ecclesiastics, kings and princes, and their retinues of clergy and faithful adherents, will be gathered in solid phalanx—Protestants and Catholics. The kings and captains of industry, and as many as can be influenced by them, will be gathered to the same side. The political kings and princes, with all their bondsmen and retainers will follow in line on the same side. The financial kings and merchant princes, and all whom they can influence by the most glamor power ever yet exercised in the world, will join the same side, according to this prophecy.

These "doctrines of demons," represented by the "frogs" will lead many noble people in this great army to assume an attitude quite contrary to their preferences. For a time the wheels of liberty and progress will be turned backward and medieval restraints will be considered necessary for self-preservation—for the maintenance at the present order of things.

In giving this interpretation, it is necessary for us to indicate what is symbolized by the Dragon, the Beast, and the False Prophet. Bible students of nearly all denominations agree with us that the "Dragon" of Revelation represents the purely Civil Power. Protestant interpreters generally agree that the "Beast like a leopard" (Revelation xiii. 2) represents the Papacy. But fewer still, we fear, will be ready to support our view that Protestantism is the "Image of the Beast" (Revelation xiii. 14) in our context given another name, "the False Prophet." We urge no one to accept our interpretation, nor shall we think hard of any who refuse it. We will neither slander nor misjudge him now, nor threaten them with eternal torture. They have the same right to their views that I have, and the same right to make them known to others. And I, for one, will be very glad to consider anything which opponents may set forth as their interpretations of our text.

"UNCLEAN SPIRITS LIKE FROGS."

The symbolism of Scripture, rightly understood, are always forceful. When the Holy Spirit used a "frog" to symbolically represent certain doctrines or teachings, we may be sure the true application will fit well. A frog has a sage look, a wise look. It sees itself up in an apparent endeavor to impress the beholder. Its great mouth well represents its effectpower, used to croak.

Applying these symbols, we learn that an evil spirit, influence, teaching, will come from the Protestant churches federated, from the Church of Rome, and from the Civil authorities, all in full agreement. The spirit of all will be boastful, an air of superior wisdom and knowledge will be proudly assumed—all will croak in harmony. All will tell of drive results that would follow, involving the interests of both the present and the future life, if their counsel be not followed. However conflicting the creeds, the differences will be ignored in the general proposition that nothing ancient must be disturbed, or looked into, or repudiated.

The Divine authority of the Church, and the Divine right of Kings, aside from the Church, will not be allowed to conflict. Any persons or teachings in conflict with these boastful and unscriptural claims will be branded as everything vile, at the mouths of these "frogs" speaking from pulpits and platforms and through the religious and secular press. The nobler sentiments of some will be arrayed on the philosophy of the same evil spirit which spoke through Caiaphas, the high priest, respecting Jesus. As Caiaphas declared it expedient to contain a crime in violation of justice, human and Divine, to be rid of Jesus and His teachings, so this "frog" spirit will approve of every violation of principle necessary to their self-protection.

The croaking of these "frog" spirits or doctrines will gather the kings and princes, financial, political, religious and industrial into one great army. The spirit of fear, inspired by the croakings of these "frogs," will scourge the passions of otherwise good and reasonable men to fury, destruction. In their blind following of these evil spirits, evil doctrines, they will be ready to sacrifice life and everything on the altar of what they mistakenly suppose is Justice and right and righteousness, under a Divine arrangement.

For a brief time, as we understand the Scriptures, these combined forces of Armageddon will triumph. Free speech, free mails, and other liberties which have come to be the very breath of the masses in our day, will be ruthlessly shut off under the plea of necessity, the glory of God, the commands of the Church, etc. All will seem to be serene, until the great social explosion into our context described as the "great Earthquake." An "earthquake," in symbolic language, signifies social revolution, and the declaration of the context is that some like unto it ever before occurred. (Revelation xvi. 18, 19.) Jesus described it as a time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation. —Matthew xxiv. 21.

THE LORD WILL GATHER THEM.

The false, fearful teachings will gather together into one host—the great, the rich, the wise, the learned and the kings of the earth, to battle. At this juncture Divine Power will step forward, and our text tells us that HE shall gather the marshaled hosts to Armageddon—to the Mountain of Destruction. The very thing which they sought to avert by their union, federation, etc., will be the very thing they will hasten. Other Scriptures tell us that God will be represented by the Great Messiah, and that He will be on the side of the masses. Thus we read in Daniel xii. 1: "At that time shall Michael (the God-like One—Messiah) stand up," assume authority. He will take possession of His Kingdom in a manner little looked for by many of those who erroneously have been claiming that they were His Kingdom, and authorized by Him to reign in His name and in His stead.

Jesus declared, "His servants ye are unto whom ye render service." Some may be rendering service to Satan and to error, who claim to be rendering service to God and to righteousness; and some of those may be serving ignorantly, as did Saul of Tarsus, who verily thought that he did God a service" in persecuting the Church. The same principle holds true reversedly. As an earthly king does not hold himself responsible for the moral character of each soldier who fights in his battles, so the Lord does not vouch for the moral character of all who fight under and for Him in any question. "His servants they are to whom they render service," whatever the motive or object prompting them.

The same principles will apply in the coming Battle or Armageddon. God's side of that battle will be the people's side, and the very moment actual fighting begins, the great Messiah will be looking for Messiah's Kingdom. These will bide the Lord's time and wait patiently for it; they will be of good courage, knowing the outcome outlined in the Word were sureties of progress, for which they have done well to take heed, "as unto a light shining in a dark place until the day dawn."—II Peter i. 19.

The masses will be restless of their restraints, and will become ashamed of their own weakness as compared to the kings and princes, financial, religious and political, which will their hold sway. Besides, the masses have no sympathy with anarchy. They realize truly that the worst form of government is better than none. The masses will seek relief through the swift and peaceful re-adjustment of earth's affairs for the e'imination of evil, for the placing of monopolies and utilities and the supplies of nature in the hands of the people for the public good. The crisis will be reached when the hitherto upholders of law and resisters of the will of the majority as expressed by the ballot. Fear for the future will lead the well-meaning masses to desperation; and anarchy will result when Socialism fails.

THE CLOUD'S SILVER LINING.

Horrible would be this outlook for the future did we not have the infallible Word of God assuring us of a glorious outcome—Divine Wisdom not withheld with our day the great knowledge and skill which is at the same time breeding millionaires and discontents. Had God lifted the veil in Jehovah's good time, the world would have lined up for its Armageddon a thousand years sooner. But that would have been too soon for the Divine purpose, because Messiah's Kingdom is to be the great Thousand-Year-Sabbath of the world's history. God in kindness veiled our eyes until the time when the gathering of Armageddon would immediately precede Messiah's taking to Himself His great power, and beginning His reign.—Revelation xi. 17, 18.

"SEND THEM STRONG DELUSIONS."

St. Paul wrote prophetically of our time, that it would be one of serious trial and testing to many professing to be Christians. The reason for this he states—they received not the Truth in the love of it. (II Thess. Ionians ii. 10, 11.) They preferred their own erroneous theories, the Apostle explains, and therefore God will give them over to a "strong delusion," and let them believe the lie which they preferred, and let them suffer for missing the Truth which they did not love. Thus they will be in the condemned host, "fighting against God," because of their lack of love for the Truth.

It is sad to say that we all as Christians have been laboring under a thorough delusion respecting God's Plan. We have claimed that Christ set up His Church in Kingdom power, and that the Church has been reigning in the earth as His representative. On the strength of this delusion, Jews and heretics have been persecuted to death as opponents to Christ's Kingdom. All the while we thoughtlessly repeated the Lord's prayer: "Thy Kingdom come; Thy will be done on earth, as in Heaven." We knew that the Redeemer said that He would come again to make us His Bride and joint-heirs; but we ignored the Scriptures. We were drunk, as the Scriptures symbolically say, "all nations were drunk" with the false doctrine. It is this false doctrine that will constitute the "frog" spirit which soon will begin to croak and to prepare for Armageddon.

The Bible presentation is that the world is a section of the universe in rebel ion against Divine authority, under the expionicy of Satan and his associated fallen angels. By Immanuel are Jesus has already "tasted death for every man," and the merit of that sacrifice must, eventually, grant Adam and his posterity a full, fair opportunity for the attainment of everlasting life. All who thus seek the Divine program and are walking in the light may know something at least respecting the times and seasons. Those in darkness "are not in darkness, that that day (and that battle of Armageddon) should overtake" them "as a thief"—unaware.

ARMAGEDDON NOT YET BUT SOON.

For forty years the Armageddon forces have been massing on both sides of the conflict. Strikes, lockouts and riots, great and small, have been merely incidental skirmishes as the belligerent parties crossed each other's paths. Court and Army scandals in Europe, Insurance, Trust and Court scandals in America, have shaken public confidence. Dynamite plots, charged by turns on employers and on employers, have further shaken confidence and tended to make each distrustful of all. Bitter, hateful and angry feelings on both sides are more and more manifest. The lines of battle are daily becoming more distinctly marked. Nevertheless Armageddon cannot be fought. Divine matters intervene, according to prophecy.

Gentile times have still two Years to run. The "Image of the Beast" of our context must, therefore, have power. The Image must be transformed from a mere mechanism to a living force. Protestant Federation must be such that organization will still be fluffle unless it receive vitalization—unless its clergy directly or indirectly shall be recognized as possessed of apostolic ordination and authority to teach. This the prophecy indicates will come from the two horned beast, which, we believe, symbolically represents the Church of England, high-handed activities of Protestantism and Catholicism, operating in connection for the suppression of human liberties, await this vivifying of the image. This may come soon, but Armageddon cannot precede it, but must follow—perhaps a year after it, according to our view of the Prophecy.

Still another thing intervenes. Although the Jews are gradually flowing into Palestine, gradually obtaining control of the land of Canaan, and although reports say that already nineteen millionaires are there, nevertheless prophecy requires an evidently larger number of wealthy Hebrews to be there before the Armageddon crises be reached. Indeed we understand that "Jacobs trouble" in the Holy Land will come at the very close of Armageddon. Then Messiah's Kingdom will begin to be manifested. Then forth Israel in the land of promise will gradually rise from the ashes of the past to the grandeur of prophecy. Through the long appointed princes Messiah's Kingdom, a) powerful but invisible, will begin to roll away the curse and to lift up mankind.

Massachusetts, Oct. 31.

I thank you very much for sending me the Tribune here in Watertown, Mass. It is quite a privilege to be able to read Pastor Russell's Sermons as they become due and all the other religious matter you have so much space for.

MRS. A. E. BARBER.

Pennsylvania, Oct. 29.

We want to tell you that we appreciate and recommend your paper highly for all its interesting features.

Pastor Russell's Sermons are certainly educational and are making our home so happy and makes the Bible so much more appreciated. May you continue this good work with much success. We remain,

Yours truly,
MR. AND MRS. J. H. MARTIN.

Kansas, Oct. 31.

Your valuable paper is very highly appreciated by me, especially that portion containing Pastor Russell's Sermons and Question Box. I also highly appreciate the part of your paper under the heading of "Popular Mechanics." I have received my subscription through the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society.

Yours sincerely,
LEON VAN DYNE.

Pennsylvania, Nov. 2.

I wish to express my appreciation of your most valuable paper. I am taking it solely for the religious feature, and for some time to come, my understanding have been opened. Think God for the riches of His grace, and for His love to the human race.

Yours sincerely,
A. K. BUPP.

Oregon, Oct. 31.

Fellow-Workers in the Gospel of Christ:

A short time ago I sent you a list of nine subscribers for the Tribune, but now I also desire to have the Tribune sent to a party in Alberta, Canada. I have sent a few copies of the Tribune to Canada, but they much prefer to have the Tribune to be sent regularly every week. I have heard from a few of the other people for whom I subscribed, and they are highly pleased with their Tribune. God bless you for the good work you are doing and may you continue the good fight of faith, the finish a large one—the labors, that we be witness for the Truth of God, let us therefore be watchful and diligent in the Lord's service. Remember, we are in a fall time and thank God for the blessed privilege of filling a small place in His precious vineyard. Thank God for having opened the eyes of our understanding to behold the glorious Divine plan of His salvation. We now see most clearly that our Lord is indeed "God of Love." Let us therefore worship Him in Spirit and in truth, and let us "Exalt Jehovah's name unto His Holy Name—His Honor and Glory. We are the light of the world, a city set on an hill, which cannot be hid." "Neither do men light a candle and put it under a bushel, etc." Matt. 5: 14-15. Let new creatures in Christ, we are thus admonished to let our light shine forth unto the world as witnesses for the Lord's blessed Truth. Let us progress in the Lord's vineyard. Therefore my other concern shall be to pray and speak and toil for Thee."

Yours in the love of God and our blessed Redeemer, Christ our glory.

COMMENTS ON "HELL FIRE."

DR. LYMAN ABBOTT REPUDIATES HELL.

"I find nothing in the New Testament to warrant the terrible opinion that God sustains the life of the ungodness throughout eternity, only that they may continue in sin and misery. That immortality is the gift of God through our Lord Jesus Christ. That men is mortal and must put on immortality, that only he can put it on who becomes a partaker of the divine nature, and to an inheritor of life who only hath immortality. That eternal life is life eternal and eternal death is death eternal, and everlasting destruction is destruction without remedy—this is the most natural as it is the simplest reading of the New Testament."

Speaking as a liberal Congregationalist, Dr. Lyman Abbott is reported as having declared that Modern Congregationalism does not accept the doctrine of eternal punishment as preached by the celebrated Jonathan Edwards, "I do not believe that any of God's creatures will be kept by God in eternal existence simply that he may rejoice in their pain and misery."

This doctrine is inconsistent with the character of a rhateous God. I might fear such a God; I might tremble before such a God; I might, because I was a coward, obey such a God; but I could not reverence such a God."

—Marietta Register-Leader.

HELL'S FIRE IS UNQUENCHABLE.

There is no literal Hell, no definitely located place of fire and brimstone, where the wicked and unredeemed suffer eternal physical torment, as the term "literal Hell" is usually interpreted.

Modern theology no longer teaches the once generally recognized belief of L. Holl such as is described in Dante and Milton, and, throughout the life to come, according to the thought now accepted, the strong and the weak are confronted by opportunities to regain the favor of God and obtain access to the life divine. Such is the consensus of opinion among the majority of Methodist clergymen who have been interviewed on the subject of the possible future damnation of an innumerable host of the children of God.

A Few of the Comments.

Rev. J. M. Hunter, of St. Luke's Episcopal church, said: "The popular misconception arises over a misunderstanding of what certain Hebrew terms, Gehenna," and others, really mean. The English Catholic Church and her daughter in this country, the Episcopal church, lays no stress whatever upon conditions after death, except in order to teach her people to repent and practice right conditions before death."

Rev. Abbot Y. Wilcox, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, refused to discuss the question, stating that it was purely a doctrinal question, but one which was entirely too big to endeavor to answer on a moment's notice. "Of course no reasonable person believes in a literal Hell, although there may be a belief in future punishment."

Probably the most outspoken in the repudiation of the idea of a literal Hell was Rev. H. H. Kelser, pastor of the First Congregational church, who declared in an emphatic manner: "My conviction is that few, if any, have ever believed in a literal Hell, in which there is a material fire. It is impossible to conceive as if it is to conceive that in heaven there are actual gates of pearl and streets of gold."

The Post-Dispatch Investigates.

Inquiries as to their stand on this matter have been made by the Sunday Post-Dispatch of several well-known St. Louis clergymen. The inquirer failed to find any minister, either Catholic or Protestant, who would express his belief in the existence of a material hell-fire. The Protestant ministers interviewed were unanimous in their direct disavowal of any such belief. The Catholic priests were more noncommittal as to personal opinion on the subject but referred the inquirer to the position taken by their church, which likewise is noncommittal.

"We don't know," was the Catholic reply.

"We don't believe it," was the Protestant response.

The Sunday Post-Dispatch" was unable to discover, from the clergymen interviewed, that either the Roman Catholic Church or any of the Protestant evangelical churches, especially its ministers authority for preaching or teaching a material hell of fire.

Each of the Protestant ministers was asked to explain the disavowal of a personal belief in such a hell. The Rev. Dr. Beverly, of the large Anglican Stephan pastor of the Mount Calvary Methodist Episcopal church, South, who also has charge of the pastorate of several other St. Louis churches, remarked that Pastor Russell has "set the fires of hell burning and proceeds to demolish." He explained that he did not mean that the dogma of a material hell is not held by the American clergy, hence it is labor lost to set it up and knock it down.

Catholic Church Non-Committal.

Archbishop Glennon, when requested to state the position of the Catholic church on the matter of hell, replied good-naturedly:

"It's too hot to talk about such a subject today. You can find what the Catholic church accepts by referring to the catechism. As to whether Catholic clergymen preach hell-fire, I will say that we preach the faith, and our faith is the faith of the church. Ask some of the priests downtown."

Appreciations

Pennsylvania, Nov. 2.

Your paper has been highly appreciated in our family for some years. We have been weekly feasting on its spiritual food, and until tonight have I noticed that my subscription has run out.

Thanking you very much that you have not stopped the paper, as we would not like to miss a single copy.

We highly appreciate the great interest you are taking towards religious enlightenment and working for liberty of the laboring class.

Yours very respectfully,
A. M. ZIMMERMAN.

Texas, Nov 3.

I want to tell you how that a appreciate your good paper, of which I have been a subscriber to for the last two or three years. That it is always welcomed at our home, and we always look forward to its coming on account of the good news which it brings, which is soon to flow to all the world of mankind. The question arises, are you among us or go down.

And we are posted on all the wonder works of our day through the columns and it is in such good clear type that one does not have to use a magnifying glass to read it.

I am also sending you two subscribers with my renewal through the Watch Tower.

May the Lord bless you in your endeavor to help spread the good news.

A. B. LANDRUM.

New York, Nov. 2.

The Sermon by Brother Russell of October 20 was a masterly outline of how the predicted failing a way occurred, II Thess. 2; 3, and how in God's due time people began to awaken to the fact that they have been giving heed to the teaching of self-appointed religious teachers instead of the Word of God. Certainly the world is waking up on all subjects which concern their vital interests and the Lord whose providence seems to be behind all the movements for the true enlightenment of the human race is causing great light to shine upon His Word through Pastor Russell's great work. Hoping this will find you rejoicing in the privilege of spreading the true teaching of God's Word with kindest thoughts and best wishes for you in the hope of the coming kingdom.

E. F. YORK.

Tennessee, Oct. 29.

I hereby enclose you price for Tribune for another year. You print a most excellent sheet, and its religious department, Question Box, etc., are price-ess. No one can read Pastor Russell's Sermons without being a better man, and gaining a clearer conception of the Bible. Wishing for your efforts on behalf of Truth much joy and happiness now, and in the life to come Heavenward.

I am,
Yours in Master's Name,
E. P. ROSE.

POPULAR MECHANICS

IMPROVED PLUG COCK.

Provided With Removable Sleeve to Facilitate Repairs.

A plug cock or faucet is much more desirable than a compression cock or screw faucet because it is cheaper to produce and is quick acting, for a quarter turn or less of the lever of the plug cock will wholly shut off the flow or open it to full flow, whereas with a compression cock several turns are necessary. However, the objection to a plug cock is that it is not durable and is apt to leak. Furthermore, the repair of a plug cock is rather expensive. Trouble usually manifests itself in wear of the edges of the ports and the only way of repairing the damage is to replace the worn off plug with a new one.

In order to reduce this item of expense and provide a ready means of repairing a worn off plug cock an inventor has recently designed a cock having a removable sleeve on the plug. When the ports through the plug become badly worn it is a simple matter to remove the plug from the cock and replace the worn sleeve with a new one. The details of the invention are shown in the accompanying cut. A key on the body of the plug fits a keyway in the sleeve and insures proper register of the ports in the sleeve with those in the plug. The plug is held in place on the cock by means of a nut bearing against a split ring washer, not shown in the engraving.

The Color of Water.

Some interesting experiments were made at Liege for the purpose of ascertaining the true color of water. The water was first boiled four hours to obtain manganate and permanganate and then distilled twice in platinum vessels and the product received in a silver vessel protected from contact with the air. This water when evaporated left no stain.

In order to obtain the requisite depth of water for the light to pass through and make any color it would show a violet tube, there were used glass tubes of sixteen feet in length and rather more than one and one-half inches in diameter. The tubes were closed at both ends by glass flats and furnished with a pipe through which the water could be introduced. When pure water was placed in these tubes and white light sent through it the water was of the color of which it is difficult to represent the purity." It is said that the finest blue on a fine day in a mountainous region, where the grosser emanations of the soil, can alone be compared with it. No change occurred when the water was kept in the tubes for several weeks. The addition of a little limewater, which appeared quite limpid, entirely stopped the passage of the light, just as if ink had been put in.

Care of an Electric Fan.

Most people have no use for an electric fan in the winter. It should be stored away properly, however, so that it will be kept in good condition and be ready for service next season. Here's the best way to do it: After you have unscrewed the connecting plug at the end of the flexible wire which has been used to supply current to the fan from the lighting socket place the fan on a table and wipe it off thoroughly with a dry soft or dry cotton waste. Go over the whole fan carefully and get the dust off all the exposed parts, even to the blades. Now unscrew the top of the oil cups, which are at each end of the armature shaft, and fill them with good lubricating oil. Replace the caps and wind the flexible connecting wire around the base of the fan and inclose the whole in a paper bag.

The Automatic Range.

The latest development in electric cookery is the automatic range, which possesses many unique features. It will get breakfast while you sleep, prepare luncheon while you are shopping and cook dinner while you are at the matinee.

The vital parts are a clock and a thermometer. Into the food that has been prepared and placed in its receptacles in the range the clock automatically turns on the heat at the appointed time, and the thermometer automatically turns it off when the boiling, baking or roasting point desired has been reached. The stored heat completes the cooking process.

A Yielding Tire Filler.

There appears to be considerable interest in the provision of yielding fillers for tubular rubber tires. William Edgar Tower and Albert M. Wolfe of Greensboro, N. C., have patented a tire filler which consists of pulverized cork, sulphur and corn oil with the proportion of corn oil about three-fourths of the entire composition

PROTECTION FROM FIRE.

Water Supply For Sprinkler Systems Should Be Quickly Available.

The water supply for sprinkler systems is variously provided by elevated tanks or reservoirs, by pressure tanks, the city water pipes or fire pumps. Good protection requires that at least two separate and independent sources of water supply, properly checked against each other, be provided for each system and that at least one of these be automatic—that is, continuously ready for immediate operation without the intervention of any human agency.

The elevated or gravity tank, if at a sufficient elevation, of good size, and if properly safeguarded against freezing, forms a good, reliable primary supply. A connection from the city mains may be better if ample pressure and an adequate volume of water are constantly available.

The pressure tank is a closed steel tank, usually placed in the upper story or on the roof, filled to about two-thirds of its capacity with water, and the balance with air under 75 to 100 pounds pressure. The object of the air is to force the water out of the tank under heavy pressure, the proportion of the air compressed at the water being such that all of the water will be forced out of the tank under sufficient pressure to supply the sprinklers on the topmost line. This tank forms an excellent primary supply, owing to the heavy pressure available at the start, but it is not as reliable as either the gravity tank or the connection to the city mains, as it requires close supervision in the maintenance of the air pressure.

Fire pumps are not satisfactory as a primary supply, as in order to be of any value they must be automatic in their action, and the regulations necessary to effect this are too often out of order. Fire pumps, however, form an excellent secondary supply.

In addition to the regular water supplies, all sprinkler systems investigated to prohibit fire departments should be equipped with one or more stationary steamer connections to enable the public fire department to force water into the system. Whenever practicable a system of outside control over the water supplies by means of post indicator gate valves, placed at convenient points about the buildings, should be provided.—Engineering Magazine.

RADIUM IMPROVES GEMS.

Interesting Discovery Made by a German Scientist.

The latest experiments made with radium confirm the statement that it has the property of changing the color of precious and semiprecious stones. The change is effected merely by combined exposure to the rays and to the gems which give the best results are sapphires. A young German chemist is said to have secured amazing results from this discovery. He recently purchased several varieties of sapphires and placed them in a box with a small quantity of radium bromide. The transformation of the stones after about six months' exposure is described as follows:

ORIGINAL COLOR. NEW COLOR.
White or uncolored. Topaz-like yellows.
Green. Emerald green.
Yellows. Sapphire blue.
White. Beautiful ruby.
Darker dun colored Deep violet.

The chemist visited the jeweler from whom he bought the stones at an average price of $5.50, a carat and asked the jeweler what he would offer for the parcel. The jeweler, suspecting both that the chemist was color blind and that, even after close examination, he fancied $2s. 6d a carat for all the stones with the exception of the small ruby quietly ruby colored one, for which he said he was willing to give no less than £20 a carat.—Chicago Tribune.

Sand and Gravel.

One of the important industries in the United States of which comparatively little is known is the production of sand and gravel. In 1911, according to a report just issued by the United States geological survey, the production of sand and gravel amounted to 93,848,629 short tons, valued at $73,158,583. The production in 1910 of all kinds was 90,253,977 tons, valued at $14,438,500, and that of gravel over 2,292,982 tons, valued at $6,720,083. The production of glass sand was valued at $1,547,733, an increase over the figures for 1910. The sand used for building in 1911 was valued at $7,710,296, a slight decrease as compared with 1910. The production of molding sand in 1911 was valued at $2,132,403, a marked decrease as compared with 1910, the production of all other sands in 1911, such as sand for grinding and polishing, fire sand, engine sand and filtration sand, was valued at $3,043,012, an increase of over a million dollars in value as compared with 1910.

A Queer African Plant.

In South Africa there is found a plant of the genus mesembryanthemum growing on stony ground, the leaves closely resembling a pebble that it is invariably taken by the stranger to be a stone. Another species of the same plant growing on the hills round the Karoo produces two leaves about as large as ducks' eyes, having a surface resembling weathered stone of brownish gray color. Hissed with green. These plants look like stones, but for a short time they put forth bright yellow flowers. Still another species of the same plant resembles the quartz pebbles among which it grows.

APPRECIATIONS

Indiana, Nov. 7.

Again I remind you of the pleasure I have in perusing the pages of the Tribune, which I consider the best newspaper published.

As you are already aware, the Sermons by that man of God, Pastor Russell, are what I find most helpful in the Tribune, though I appreciate also the Sunday School Lessons which seem to be quite in harmony with the Sermons, and also the Question Box, which also seem somewhat different from what we find in the various creed teachings of Lebanon, Ind., and other cities round about to which my works brings me. Indeed I find that many of the ministers of the various "churches" of Lebanon and surrounding cities seem to oppose the teachings of these various features of your paper, though so far I have not found any who would point out anything in them which they could refute from the Scriptures.

The greatest most of them seem to be anxious to avoid discussion of them entirely. Will some of your readers please tell me through these columns why?

I find that many seeming honest and conscientious persons ask what is the use, that would be interesting either in this world or the next, as Jesus says in Matt. 12: 31, 32, and does this mean that some are to be forgiven in the world to come?

You seem to have some deep Bible students among your readers, will some of them please answer through your columns?

I have an answer to the question in a book called "The Atonement Between God and Man," which appeals to me as reasonable and I submit it for the approval of your army of readers.

From the context, we notice that our Lord Jesus had just been casting His Divine power, or holy Spirit, conferred upon Him by the Father, to cast out a devil. The Pharisees who saw the miracle, and could not deny it, sought to turn aside its force by claiming that it was performed by Satanic power. In reply to them our Lord declared that blessed be God He used as being His own, and assures that it was Divine power, or influence, saying, "I cast out devils by the Spirit of God." He then upbraided the Pharisees for being so malicious as to attribute to an evil source that which they could not deny was a good work, and accompanied by no evidence whatever of sin, selfishness, or even ambition. He emphatically shows a generation of vipers, so set upon the traditions of their church that their minds were blinded to most simple and manifest Truths.

It was plainly evident that the power or influence which had possessed the afflicted one was devilish malignant, and that any one who's work would dispossess it must be out of harmony with it, and consequently so that these teachers were inexcusable, when they claimed, without any cause, that it was being performed by the power or Satan."

Our Lord points out further, that although they had not intentionally blasphemed Jehovah, nor had they particularly blasphemed the Spirit, they had blasphemed against the holy power, or Spirit, which was operating in Him. Our Lord's words I understood and misrepresented the invalidity of which would have been a much lighter offence; and to have spoken evil of our Lord Jesus and to have misinterpreted His teachings claiming that He was merely trying to usurp a throne and set Himself in power would also have been a comparatively light offence—measuring His motives by their own selfish ambition and pride. But their conduct was worse; after they had witnessed the manifestation of Divine power in performing a good deed for the relief of one of their fellowmen, from the power of the devil—to blaspheme this holy power, meant a decree of wickedness and animosity of heart of much deeper dye than either of the other natures would have implied.

Our Lord pointed out to them that in their ignorance and blindness they would have misinterpreted Him, His words, His efforts, and in similar blindness they might have misinterpreted many of God's teachings, and spoken evil thereof; but that since the power of God had been witnessed by them, in direct contrast to the power of the devil, the fact that they spoke evil of it implied most unmistakably that their hearts were in a most unholy condition. Sins of ignorance may be forgiven men—or will be forgiven men—because the ignorance came through the fall, and a ransom has been paid for all who shared in the fall and its curse. But sins against clean manifestation of Divine grace cannot be attributed to weakness of the flesh and heredity, but must be properly charged up as wilful viciousness of the heart, which is unforgivable.

Such intentional evil will never have forgiveness—neither in this age nor in the coming age. God's property is not to force men into harmony with Himself; but after redeeming them He will furnish to all an opportunity of coming to a knowledge of the Truth and witnessing the goodness of God through the operation of His holy Spirit; whoever then continues out of harmony with this Divine arrangement proves himself a willful sinner, an intelligent opposer of the holy power of God; for such the Lord has no further provisions of grace.

Every sin against the holy Spirit, against clear light and knowledge of Divine power, is unforgivable, because wilful.

If it be a wilful sin against a measure of light, then "stripes," punishments will result, unavoidably; if it be a wilful sin against a larger measure of light, and a greater favor in connection with the holy power of God, then a greater measure of stripes; but if the transgression involves a full, clear conception of right and wrong, and full knowing opposition to the holy power of God, it would mean everlasting destruction, the Second Death, the full wages of sin. The forgiveness of sins secured by the ransom covers sins of ignorance or weakness resulting from the fall, and not sins against wilful, intelligent light.

We are not to forget, however, that many sins which come as a result of willfulness, and with them a measure of weakness, or of the ignorance of right principles, or both. To the proportion of its ignorance and weakness any sin is forgivable through the grace of God in Christ—through faith in and acceptance of His atonement; and to the proportion that any sin was wilful, intentional sin, it is unforgivable—and hence is designated by expressions "stripes" so long as some forgiveable quality inheres in the sin; death's destruction, when no forgivable quality can be found in the sin. This applies to all wilful sin as against light, against the holy Spirit of truth and such sin hath never forgiveness.

This seems a reasonable answer to me, but if any of your readers can find a better one I should like to hear it. I was thinking of how some of the ministers of our day, who speak evil of Pastor Russell who they say, sin is doing a most wonderful work in building up true faith in God's book, the Bible, showing its harmony and beauty as no other man of our day has, and converting tares and sifting and establishing more Christians than any other, seem to be acting the same part of the Pharisees of Jesus' day. Not able to disprove by the Bible the teachings of Pastor Russell they speak evil of him, misrepresent his teachings, and claim that he is doing all for the sake of love of self, selfish motive. It occurs to me that many of them are sinning against the holy Spirit in thus misrepresenting Pastor Russell and his teaching.

May the Lord bless the dear Tribune in its co-operation with the holy Spirit in setting forth these wonderful "words of life" which show the wisdom, justice, love and power of our God, to the ransom of the people of the dark ages, and those who upbold these creeds. Count on me as a loyal supporter of our Tribune as long as Pastor Russell continues to send forth the Glad Tidings through its pages.

With Christian love,

COME AND LET US REASON.

Isaiah v. 7-16—Nov. 10.

"For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace."—Isa. 9:6.

TODAY'S lesson had its primary force in connection with the affairs of national Israel in the Days of the Prophet. But when we remember that Natural Israel types Christendom, we find a value to this lesson, very pertinent to our time. "And the world, for judgment [justification], but behold, oppression; for righteousness and, behold, a cry of distress." As to the natural eye, as to the reason for it, see verse 8, which reads:

"Woe unto them that join house to house, that lay field to field, till there be no place, that they may be placed alone in the midst of the earth!" Here is represented that a spirit of selfishness prevailed in Isaiah's day, as it does today; as then prosperity was disposed to accumulate in the hands of the more successful, as it is today. As then landlordism took possession of vast areas, neglectful of the fact that "the earth hath the Lord given unto the children of men," and not merely to a few, so is it today.

A Time of Trouble.

Divine disapproval of human hard heartedness, selfishness and neglect of the poor is expressed in the Scriptures with equal clearness and forcefulness of the fact that we are all children of one blood, amenable to the laws of the same Creator, and that the favor upon the favorites Divine judgments upon the disfavored. Therefore the Scriptures with proportionate force express disapproval of the course of trouble now in progress in the world, especially over Christendom—a time particularly mentioned in the Bible as "the time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation, even to that same time." Now, ye rich men, weep and howl for the misery that shall come upon you." This time of trouble is mentioned in today's study, verse 9: "The Lord of Hosts said in my hearing. Of a truth many houses shall be desolate, even great and fair, without inhabitant." If we rightly appreciate what the Scriptures foresee respecting times to come ahead of us, we will see that many of the great and rich will be in a sad plight if in their prosperity they fail to see the needs of the poorer in the congested cities, for the time of trouble, it is declared, is at the door.

Music, Revelry, Intoxication.

The text given us for today's lesson comes next in our study. In the days of Isaiah's prophecy many of the people indulged in intoxicating liquors, music, revelry, etc., to their own injury as well as to the neglect of their responsibilities to God. They asked, "Am I my brother's keeper?" even as Cain did in the days of Adam, and, unless related wealth they had more than heart could wish, while others were needy.

Such a condition must obtain today. We answer, Yes, and no. With many it is the same exactly, but with a considerable number of the people today it is very different, we are glad to say. Continually we have evidences of the growth of love and sympathy and possessions as a trust from the Almighty, to be used in the service, and not in the selfish position. But, unless we greatly misjudge, there are comparatively few. The majority of the rich, like the majority of the poor, seem to be blind.

When the selfish rich and the selfish poor shall join issue in a great struggle, as the Scriptures indicate they will do, then the evil days which will mark the time of trouble prophesied—"such as never was since there was a nation"—will be a time of trouble which Jesus declares will never be again, because following that days of trouble will be the setting up of the present glorification, Messiah will establish the Kingdom of God, for the blessing of all the families of the earth—the rich, the poor.

Thus Socialism, according to the Bible, will be the ultimate blessing of the earth. Socialism, not aware of this, is ignorant of God's Word, or if aware of it doubts the ability of God to take over in the interest of all mankind the great blessings which are now in the hands of the few comparatively few. To their schemes for the betterment of humanity are impractical. To us it appears as the Scriptures indicate, that failing to accomplish their beneficent designs, Socialists will become bitter anarchists, and plunge themselves and the whole world into the most awful trouble ever known. We need the conversion of the world to a heart-harmony with God and the principles of righteousness.

"Am I my brother's keeper?"

Will this ever come? Ah, yes! The mouth of the Lord hath spoken it: "And it cometh to pass through all nations of ours. "Walk ye upon Me, saith the Lord, saith that Dayt" "For then will I turn to the people a pure language, that they may all call upon the name of the Lord, to serve Him with one consent." Then, and only then, following the great time of trouble, God will humble the world. Meantime the Church saints will be glorified, and with Messiah, constitute the long-promised Kingdom of God for the blessing of humanity.

EVERYBODY'S BIBLE QUESTION BOX

YOUR BIBLE QUESTIONS WILL BE ANSWERED IN THESE COLUMNS IF MAILED AT ONCE TO THE EDITOR OF THIS DEPARTMENT

Q.—Why does God the great Creator who has all power and wisdom permit the reign of sin and evil in the earth? When we see all of the sorrow and misery existing in the world because of the evil we wonder that a just and loving Creator would permit these things when He has the ability to put an end to them at any time?

Answer.—This is a very important question and one that, thinking minds have pondered over for ages past. We believe that it can best be answered by using a fact of history to illustrate the matter. In ancient times, during the reign of a wise and just ruler over a large part of the earth, a rebellion occurred in a certain portion of the empire. A usurper arose and, misrepresenting the character of the monarch, succeeded in inducing the people of this particular province to no longer render obedience to their rightful sovereign. Although the emperor had the power to suppress the rebellion at once, he permitted the trial to go on for the province, and so this way let the people experience the hardships and evils of misrule, that they might the better appreciate the advantages of the wise and beneficent reign of the monarch. Also it would furnish an object lesson to the people of the other provinces. And thus it turned out, the people in time grew accustomed to many of the woe and sorrows inflicted by the usurper, and when the opportunity finally present-ed itself for escape from his domination they gladly returned to complete harmony with their emperor, expressing their thankfulness and full submission to his just commands. Satan, "the God (ruler) of this present evil world," is to be tested eventually and the people liberated from the dominion and tyranny, and instructed in righteousness, for, when "the judgments of the Lord are in the earth, the inhabitants of the world will learn righteousness," will then appreciate the wise and righteous commands of their Creator (their rightful Sovereign).

Q.—What does it mean to be born of the spirit? What happens when that takes place? Some have said that I am not saved unless I have been born of the spirit, and received some miraculous evidence of this. That has made me a trifle anxious, as I earnestly desire to be saved, and so far I haven't experienced anything remarkable in the way of supernatural demonstrations, although I am endeavoring to live a Christian life.

Answer.—The Scriptures abound with illustrations which were intended to portray the varying conditions of the Christian's experience, and, unless we give careful attention to the details of these word pictures, we are liable to misunderstand and to be in their use ambiguous. In the conversation which Nicodemus had with our Lord Jesus, recorded in the eighth chapter of John, which is born of the flesh is flesh: and that which is born of the spirit is spirit. Jesus here is the beginning of the fleshly being, then the quickening and finally the birth, so also with the spiritual ones. The Church is the first-born of the spirit (begotten again—1 Peter v. 3), then quickened by the spirit (Romans viii. 11), and then having attained to full development as an underpriest "New Creature" he will be "born of the spirit" in the resurrection—"changed" from a fleshly, human being to a heavenly spiritual one. In the language of Paul, we shall experience the new birth will be invisible, powerful, even as are the angels and all spirit beings. Observe the force of the Master's words—Marvel not that I said unto thee, ye must be born again. The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth: so is every one that is born of the spirit."

Q.—The Jews caused Jesus to be crucified, and as a people have not yet accepted Him as the Christ. Does this mean that all Jews are eternally lost?

Answer.—No, the Lord has yet many favors in reservation for the Jews. The Apostle Peter declared that Jehovah foreknew the Jews would cause Jesus to be put to death. The Jews were cast off from God's favor because of their rejection of Jesus as the Christ. Jesus at the time declared unto them, "Ye shall not see Me henceforth till ye shall say, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord." (Matthew xxiii. 39.) The clear inference here is that at some future time the Jews would recognize Jesus as the Messiah. The Apostle Paul (Romans xi. 25) wrote that the Jews were blinded to the truth concerning Jesus, and that "blindness happened in part to Israel until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in," declaring that when the Gentile times were finished then all Israel shall be saved from such blindness, at which time the great Deliverer, The Christ, shall turn away ungodliness from that people. All the Prophets testify concerning the restoration of Israel. We can therefore confidently expect that the Jews will some time in the future be restored to their own land, come into complete possession and control of Palestine, and accept Jesus as the great Messiah, and receive the blessing that the Lord has in store for them.

Q.—The Apostle says—"We are fools for Christ's sake!"—what did he mean by this expression? How are Christians made fools? See 1 Corinthians iv. 10.

Answer.—The Apostle Paul, because of his zeal and earnestness in the cause of Christ, had suffered opposition and persecution of various kinds and had even endured hunger and thirst and hardships, as he proceeds to narrate in this same chapter. To those without faith in Christ and His teachings this was all foolishness on the part of the Apostle. To them he seemed to be a religious fanatic—a fool. And evidently some of the Christian brethren at Corinth not this same idea, deeming it necessary to endure so much contempt and hardships for the Master's cause. These conditions have prevailed all down throughout the Christian Era, the consecrated, devoted people of the Lord, who have given their all, sacrificing ease, comfort and worldly fame and riches to their desires to serve Him who endured so much for their sakes, have ever been ridiculed and despised by the common lot who, because of their diminutive mental and moral powers could not appreciate the grandeur and the nobility of the characters and teachings of Christ as truly exemplified in those of Christian. Well has one expressed the matter in the following lines:—

"The lowly whom high was reckoned wise
Who foolishly their full hearts left unscanned
Bewildered by the crowd their noble vision
Have always banished been and crucified."

Q.—Were Adam and Jesus in any sense resurrection days of the race?

Answer.—Adam, as the federal head of his family, was its representative in Eden. This is demonstrated by the fact that all of his posterity are involved in everything affecting him; thus the sentence of death which directly passed upon Adam affected and impaired every one of his offspring. Jesus was a representative in this sense: He was made a man, a "little lower than the angels, that He might, by the grace of God, taste death for every man" (Hebrews ii. 9). He becomes Adam's substitute, his redeemer. As such He was entitled to be commanded by divine Justice. He gave His life "a ransom for all, to be testified in its due time" (1 Timothy ii. 6). Since Adam was the representative of the whole human family, therefore all of the human race must share with him in the benefits secured through the redemption provided by Jesus, his substitute. Thus the death of Jesus is made available from to all who will accept the benefit thereof, by believing on the Lord Jesus Christ, as we read, be in Adam all die, even so all in Christ shall be made alive."

Q.—According to Revelation xx, 6; 1 Thessalonians iv, 16, will the Millennium be before or after the coming of Christ? Is it established during the Millennium began in the year 799, and ended in the year 1878, as Millennialism meaning one thousand years—and is known as the Papal Millennium, or is the Millennium mentioned in the Bible?

Answer.—The Scriptures above referred to, together with many others, show that Christ will reign during the Millennium, and we all know that Christ has not reigned yet. If Christ was reigning now we would not have the great sickness of evil in the earth for the Scriptures declare that when "His judgments are in the earth then the people shall learn righteousness" (Isaiah xxvi. 9). A further testimony to your question declare that "the dead in Christ shall rise first" at His coming. In harmony with the Bible word about that the Millennium began in the year 799, and ended in the year 1878, is the Papal delusion, meaning one thousand years—and is known as the Papal Millennium, or is the Millennium mentioned in the Bible?

Answer.—The Scriptures above referred to, together with many others, show that Christ will reign during the Millennium, and we all know that Christ has not reigned yet. If Christ was reigning now we would not have the great sickness of evil in the earth for the Scriptures declare that when "His judgments are in the earth then the people shall learn righteousness" (Isaiah xxvi. 9). A further testimony to your question declare that "the dead in Christ shall rise first" at His coming. In harmony with the Bible word about that the Millennium began in the year 799, and ended in the year 1878, is the Papal delusion, meaning one thousand years—and is known as the Papal Millennium, or is the Millennium mentioned in the Bible?

Q.—Is hell a condition of eternal remorse and heaven a condition of eternal happiness?

Answer.—The word hell in an old Anglo-Saxon term and signified the concealed or hidden state. It was applied to those who had died it meant that these were hidden or concealed in the grave. In the Bible it is named in the slightest thought of torment or sorrow or remorse. This is also true of the Hebrew word sheol and the Greek word hades, the former occurring in the Old Testament and the latter in the New Testament. The term hell, used in translating these words from the old manuscripts into the English, merely signifies the state of the dead, a condition of rest, unconsciousness. The Bible says—"The dead know not anything." The word hades in the original manuscripts signified an eternal, a holy place. See also 1 Thessalonians, the abode of the Deity, who "dwells in the high and holy place." In the teachings of Christ and also of the Apostles the Christians (the earnest, devoted footsteps followers of the Lord Jesus) are assured of heavenly rewards of the Divine, spiritual plane of existence in the presence of God and in this state will enjoy eternal conditions of glory, honor, and immortality. Hell-death, destruction is the condition reserved for the incorrigibly wicked, while Heaven life, immortality is the condition reserved for the righteous and obedient.

Numerous Movements for the Betterment of Labor--Strange Lace Workers' Disease--British Bakers Start National Campaign -- Substantial Advances Secured by Building Trade Workers -- Building Trade Unions Proceed With Amalgamation Scheme

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

LONDON, Nov. 7.—Several important decisions will be shortly made in regard to labor disputes now in progress in Yorkshire the question of the pressing for an advance of 15 per cent in the textile workers' wages and making a joint demand with the dyers and finishers will be considered by the Executive and General Union of Textile Workers. The general feeling in the union is strongly in support of pressing the demand in Liverpool the carters will decide upon the nature of their rejoiner to the master carters' refusal of their terms. A deputation of the men's union conferred with representatives of the employers but beyond their intimation that both sides would report the result to their respective organizations nothing was published of the result of the interview. In the meantime the Transport Workers' Council which includes representatives of the dockers and seamen, has endorsed the carter's demand for more pay, shorter hours, and a Saturday half holiday, and will "support them by every legitimate means." The decision of the Horwich engineers on the modified terms offered them by the Lancashire and Yorkshire Company at the locomotiveworks will not be finally given yet.—As was expected the condition of a three years' agreement is proving somewhat of a stumbling-block.

The committee appointed by the British Government to inquire into the question of industrial disease will visit Nottingham and take evidence regarding "Dupuytren's contraction," a disease of the hand which is said to be peculiar to those working the heavy lace-making machines. The representatives of the work people have prepared a case for the inclusion of the malady amongst the industrial diseases which which employers are liable for compensation. The disease is said to affect more particularly those employed on the Leaver machine those in the curtain and plain net branches being less liable to it. The starting and stopping of the machine is said to require a grip that involves a jerking strain, and the contention of the workers is that this leads to a gradual gripping of the fingers until the hand is useless. The adoption of better mechanical means for starting and stopping the machine is advocated as a remedy, but in the meanwhile it is sought to place the malady on the schedule. The Nottingham branch of the Lacemakers' Society numbers about 2,500 of whom about half are employed on the Leaver machines.

THE ELECTION AND THE TARIFF.

HAVING won even a greater victory than it had anticipated in the presidential election, the question now is, what will the Democratic party do with it? We have already pointed out one pledge which the people will insist shall not be forgotten—the pledge, namely, to proceed with the work of tariff revision in such a manner as to insure the least possible disturbance and injury of industry. It is fortunate to a degree not easily overstated that Governor Wilson is precisely the sort of man that he is. Unless the country is woefully mistaken, he is not only big-minded and patriotically desirous of the highest good of the mass of his fellow-countrymen, but he is also, in his own phrase, hard-headed—a man who is singularly honest, quietly courageous, but withal intensely practical. He seems to have no intention of permitting the reform of the tariff to prostrate legitimate business enterprise. On the contrary, he distinctly outlined a plan in speeches in Pittsburgh and in written communications both before and after his nomination for a revision by which schedules should be reduced gradually. It is believed, solely because businessmen trust the pledge against ill-considered and precipitate reduction that business has expanded and prospered in the face of two-thirds Democratic success. And unless as President he disappoints every expectation of him based upon his past career, he will prove that the confidence of businessmen in his good sense and wholesome conservatism has not been misplaced.

If, as the Republican overthrow in so many states indicates, there be a strong Democratic majority in both houses in the next Congress, there may be an effort on the part of the more radical tariff revolutionists to carry a radical and abrupt revision over his head. But that any effort of that sort will avail against the opposition of the new President is highly improbable. The Democratic party hitherto has been more radically antitariff in its campaign talk than in its after campaign performance. The contrast between the two was very marked during the last Democratic administration. President Cleveland found it impossible to get the Democratic Congress of 1893 to slash the tariff according to promise, and Wilson ought to have no trouble in keeping the Congress of 1913 from slashing it too much.

Unless convened in extra session the Congress elected last week will not assemble for more than a year hence. It will assemble then to carry into effect not a program of blind destructive radicalism, but a program of conservative, progressive reform differing little in essentials from the program favored by all sincerely progressive Republicans. It is the part of all good citizens, whether they voted for Governor Wilson or for President Taft or Colonel Roosevelt, to give the new chief magistrate their loyal support. His needs, as every President needs, the help of the people. That he desires that help, and practically means to deserve it, there is little doubt. There is reasonable though the National Labor Tribune has always been that Republican policy best promotes the well-being of the great industries upon which the working classes depend, it cannot forbear from testifying its conviction that if the country must have a Democratic administration it could not have elected a better or a cleaner, stronger or better hands than those of Woodrow Wilson.

HOW TO SAVE--AND PREVENT--CRIMINALS.

IN A Pittsburgh pulpit last night one of the ablest, eloquent, and deeply impressive sermon pleading for more enlightened treatment of criminals—for jails and penitentiaries which shall seek to redeem as well as to punish fallen humanity, and for missions by which convicts desiring to lead a better life may be aided by their former friends. That sermon was preached by a man who has himself been a missionary to convicts and who speaks from personal knowledge and experience of his subject. Sometimes, in listening to an appeal of this sort, and seeing the heartlessness with which professing Christians turn away the ex-convict who asks them for work, there is a feeling of despair. The increase of the inhumanities, which are the highest wisdom, in the treatment of criminals has been marked, however, in the last few years, and it is gratifying that every year adds to the progressive States of the Union in this respect.

Let us remember, while demanding more enlightened treatment of criminals, that the best place to deal with any evil is at the root. We shall never do the utmost possible to minimize crime until we have given a square deal to children. The man who, twenty-five years from now, will, somewhere in this world, commit the crime that will set humanity aghast with horror, is today a fine, lovable boy. The girls who will be "walking the streets"—yes, only ten years from now—are today tots from whose childish minds evil is as far as from the angels themselves. But the cruel environment which surrounds them—the environment of the factory, tenement district or the slum—will in a few years have done its deadly work, and instead of today's childish innocence and capacity for good there will have sprung up the hardened sensibility and enmity against society from which criminal careers come.

Our children today, in the great factory districts like Lawrence and other centers of great poverty and oppression, are crying for help. If you have the right kind of ears you can hear them. Those children are sinking into criminality. What does the world do? With its cruel right hand, greed and oppression, it thrusts them into the whirlpool. Now and then, with the diamond-bedecked left hand, representing, for instance, the wishy-washy charitable societies that such men as J. Pierpont Morgan and John D. Rockefeller give their money to, it extends a gracefully curved little finger, with a make-believe help that makes the drowning all the more terrible. We know where the criminals-to-be can be found among the children, but we are too selfish to save them; we think it is cheaper to put them in jail after their full-fledged careers as criminals have begun.

A WARNING FROM ENGLAND.

THE latest reports of the British lunacy commissioners are a convincing answer to the advocates of the "strenuous life." They show a decided increase in insanity, and trace its direct connection with modern conditions and habits of living. The statistics of the growing insanity in England and Wales are a sad story which the lunacy statisticians are compelled to tell in our own country, also. The tremendous movement in recent years from the country to the cities, the swelling of the slums and the increase in the factory population, coincident with modern industrial development are held by the British report to be the chief causes. These are the influences which are said to depress the general vitality of nations and lower the entire health level.

Life today is materially different from what it was a century, or even a generation, ago. Then a large proportion of the population, particularly in this country, was engaged in agriculture, or in close touch with the soil, leading an outdoor life. Now a large proportion of the population is in factory, warehouse or at a desk. The general increase of hours in school adds to the duration of the unnatural life for a large and increasing number. The growth of industry and the flight from the country add to the burdens of the present and increase the dangers of the coming generation, and the means taken to offset the evils of a bedhouse existence make little impression.

Specialists who treat consumption apparently are the only ones who have awakened to the importance of fresh air and sunshine. While it is clear to everyone that a cow or a plant cannot thrive without air and sunlight, intelligent persons are still laboring under the delusion that human beings can be grown healthfully under the worst and most unnatural conditions. A simple sanitary creed published by Lecky, the English historian, is worth observing, especially at this season: "Moderation and self-restraint in all things, an abundance of exercise, of fresh air and cold water; a sufficiency of steady work not carried to excess; occasionally change of habits, and then fresh air and sunshine."

AMERICAN SYMPATHY WITH BALKAN ALLIES.

A BIG mass meeting at famous Faneuil Hall, Boston, which on Sunday last cheered the United States and condemned interference with them by the great Powers unquestionably represented fairly American public sentiment. The Turk has been a blot on Europe for more than 400 years. Only the territorial jealousy of the Powers has prevented Turkish misrule from being corrected. Now that the Balkan states have taken the thing in hand and are battering down the gates of Constantinople it becomes no other Christian nation to stay their hand. Politically, at least, Mohammedanism should be banished from the European continent.

There is no longer any question that unless the Powers interfere (as a Paris cablegram now before us says they have agreed to do) the Balkan allies will make the defeat of Turkey so complete that the sultan's government must sue for an unconditional peace. That, as one writer points out, would enable them to dictate precisely the measure of territory they want in Macedonia, and would also justify them in demanding territorial or pecuniary compensation for their war expenditures. Whether Turkey can be compelled to cede territory on the mainland is a question which cannot be settled until the policy of Austria-Hungary and Russia is fully disclosed, but there is reason to believe that no objection will be raised to the Greek demands in regard to Crete and other Turkish islands of which the population is Christian. Nothing could be more severe the terms the allies have in view, it is not to be denied that they are winning the right to say how and when the war shall end without asking either the advice or consent of stronger nations. Those nations might long ago have made the war impossible by insisting upon the very reforms for which Montenegro fired the first gun only a few weeks ago. They were too greedy, too distrustful of one another, to do their duty. And now that the Balkan confederation has done the work, and effectually punished Turkish iniquity, that work should not be undone. America hopes the Balkan confederacy will be made permanent and that it will secure the Turkish territory (peopled mainly with Christians) from which it has so bravely fought to banish the crescent.

GEORGE BERNARD SHAW HITS AT THE SUFFRAGETTES

GEORGE BERNARD SHAW, the famous novelist, playwright, satirist, wit, Fabian and what not, has written and said a great many odd things in his life that have made him popular and unpopular. His keen flashes of humor and his two edged sword of satire have both amused and cut deep. But he took his life in his hands the other day when he said that the suffragettes who were starving themselves out of English prisons ought to starve. Did he wish to have a whole brigade of them pounce down upon his head, or was he once more indulging in just mere Shavianism? Perhaps only Shaw himself could tell, and then no one would be sure. Shaw was born in Dublin on July 26, 1856, and started the famous Fabian society, a socialistic organization, in London in 1884. He soon became a cult. Some of his works which have been widely discussed are "The Irrational Knot," "An Unsocial Socialist," "The Perfect Wagnerite," "Plays, Pleasant and Unpleasant" and, most of all, "Man and Superman."

A. F. OF L. ANNUAL CONVENTION MEETS.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Nov. 11.—The thirty-second annual convention of the American Federation of Labor assembled here with the usual ceremony today. For several days little will be done except organize the convention and await reports from committees. President Gompers' report showed the organization to be exceedingly prosperous. He said:

"The average membership reported and upon whom per capital tax was paid by the affiliated organizations to the American Federation of Labor during the past year, was 1,770,145, an increase over the number reported for 1911, which was 1,761,235. On September 30, 1912, the membership of affiliated organizations was 1,841,365.

"Perhaps it would be well to again repeat that our International organizations each have jurisdiction over the classes of work performed by their respective memberships within the American continent. Each international is composed of various local unions. Affiliated to the 112 international belonging to our Federation are 30,984 local unions.

"The success and the growing appreciation of the value of organization along international lines has been particularly gratifying during the past year. This progress is discussed under the section on Canada in this report and in the American Federation of Labor for June and September, 1912.

"The state and city central bodies are composed of representatives from various local organizations; such organizations are intended to secure for the workers advantages impossible of achievement by isolated organizations or those who often call themselves 'independent.' It is an isolation and independence on a par with the position of members of the so-called 'independent' wage-worker.

"The city central bodies and state federations have been of tremendous importance in securing for the workers in the local unions and for all wage-earners, improved conditions in all he affairs and interests of the working people.

"Our International unions and our American Federation of Labor can do the cause of Labor no greater benefit than by encouraging and assisting in strengthening and extending, the power and influence of the state federations and central bodies, and by se-

LABOR'S INTERESTS AT NATIONAL CAPITAL.

American Federation of Labor Shows Its Intention to Prosecute Plan for Organizing the Steel Industry by Issuing Another Ringing Circular to Men Working in the Mills -- Low-Wage Effects of Non-Unionism Clearly Shown.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—A vigorous appeal to the workers in the unorganized steel mills (mainly the United States Steel Corporation's plants) has been issued from A. F. of L. headquarters. It is known as Circular No. 2 and is signed by Secretary Frank Morrison and President Gompers and is as follows:

The individual workman today is helpless. He can not increase his wages or shorten his hours of labor by his own efforts. But wages can be increased and hours of labor shortened if the individual workman will combine with his fellow-workmen in a labor organization.

The labor organizations adopt to membership all workmen without reference to color, creed or nationality, whether they be the highest skilled or common laborers. The labor organization seek and do get the men who join them better conditions of labor, shorter hours, and better wages, but men who labor can not get any benefits for themselves unless they make common cause with their fellow-workmen. Individual efforts are weak at best, but "in union there is strength."

There are 2,000,000 members in the American Federation of Labor. The workmen retain their membership in the American Federation of Labor because they have all received increases in wages, shorter hours and better conditions under to labor. Employers of labor pay the lowest possible wages to men who are not organized, because men are dealt with as individuals, and the bargaining power of individuals is extremely weak, and unorganized workmen are compelled to accept what the employer offers. The employer takes advantage of this and forces workmen to work for low wages —in other words, the employer sets the price for the labor which the workman has to sell.

Workmen who organize themselves into a labor union have sufficient strength to have a part in determining what wages they shall receive for their labor. Labor unions have a voice in setting the price upon the labor of their members, thus preventing the employer from establishing a wage that is below what the organized workmen believe to be just.

Let us make a comparison between the organized and the unorganized workmen, and find out the difference in wages and hours. This will prove that it pays workmen to organize.

In the unorganized iron and steel mills of the United States and Canada, workmen laboring from ten to twelve hours a day, got about the following wages: Laborers, from $1.96 to $1.85 per day, and the mechanical tradesmen get from $2.25 to $3.00 per day, with no extra pay for overtime on weekdays or Sundays, no matter how long they work.

Now see what the organized men get, and determine for yourself what immense benefits are gained solely through labor organizations. Organized laborers and trades, working only eight hours per day, get: Laborers in the mines, average $2.62 per day. Building laborers, working at semi-skilled labor around construction of buildings, average $3.00 per day.

If these organized men had remained unorganized they would have still been working for about the wages paid by the iron and steel companies to their workmen. You can verify these figures given in "generally every industrial center of the country.

The men working for the Steel Company can get an increase in wages if they want it. But you will have to organize to get it. The Steel Company will not pay you any more wages than you are now getting neither will it shorten your hours of labor until you learn labor organizations by the protection of your fellow-workmen and yourself.

You will be told of other schemes, but if you will investigate you will be convinced that the American Federation of Labor, with its large and increasing membership, has the only plan whereby substantial benefits are conferred upon its members.

If you want more money for your labor, organize!

If you want shorter hours—Organize!

Pastor Russell's Sermon

SOME FOREIGN MISSION FACTS.

A Pithy Discourse on an Interesting Subject—From the Bible Viewpoint. Pastor Russell Claims Report of the International Bible Students Association Committee of Seven Was Chairman Was Too Mild Rather Than Too Severe—Committee Unanimously Stand by the Report and Challenge Criticism—Full Report Now Offered Free to All.

OTTAWA, Ontario, Canada, Nov. 10.—Pastor Russell's text had large audiences. We report one of his interesting discourses, on Foreign Missions, which is stirring Christendom. His text was, "This Gospel of the Kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the End come." (Matt. 24:14.) He said:—

A year ago the International Bible Students Association, perplexed by the conflicting reports, resolved to send a Committee of Seven to investigate and give a candid report on missionary prospects in foreign lands —especially in South India, where it is making a special effort. I was one of that Committee, which otherwise was composed of four successful business men—one doctor, and General Hull, of the U. S. A. The Committee performed its duties conscientiously and made the Report in one of the largest Christian gatherings ever held in New York City—in the Hippodrome, March 31. Its Report published in pamphlet form, reached in every civilized civilization amongst Christian people. I am authorized to offer the remainder free, one copy each, to all interested in Foreign Mission work. A postcard addressed to "C. T. R., Brooklyn, N. Y.," requesting a copy of the Missionary Report, will receive prompt attention as long as the supply holds out.

The Committee, in preparing this Report, felt sure that it would be discouraging to some loyal Christian people, and they therefore laid bare the facts in as kindly and Christian manner as possible. Every one of them being deeply interested in the heathen, every one of them a sincere Christian, what else could they do?

Now, as the Committee feared, the truthfulness of their Report, which so many Christian people gratefully acknowledged, has irritated a few persons. These evidently fear that we have shattered their idol and discredited their fairly tales respecting the immediate conversion of the world by human instrumentality and more millions of money. We sympathize with those enthusiasts, who do not deceive themselves as well as others and who shun their eyes to facts, while hoping against hope to maintain exploded theories.

One of these, Mr. W. T. Ellis, alias the "Religious Rambler," attacks our report after the style of Don Quixote. Falsely he declares that we journeyed on the same vessel from San Francisco to Shanghai, giving the impression that we had not visited Japan at all. Then he declares that we merely went through the country, and not visit all the mission stations nor talk with all the missionaries; and he wants to know how we could know anything on the subject of our Report. Our Report tells the facts. The Committee of Seven scattered, and spent six days in Japan, or a total of 42 days of investigation. Our 22 days spent in India, similarly recorded, would be the equivalent of nearly six months' investigation by one person.

Our I. B. S. A. Committee were not commissioned to investigate missions, nor merely to ask missionaries to corroborate reports promulgated by missionary societies. We visited and interrogated the people, saw their conditions, attended meetings, etc. As for myself, this critic charges in one breath that I did not preach the sermons which appeared in the newspapers of the world; and in the next breath he declares that I spent all my time in preaching and therefore had not time for investigation. A discerning public read between the lines of such criticism what the Bible symbolically describes as "gnashing of teeth."

THE ONLY PRACTICAL METHOD.

If millions of money were being spent to give instruction in French, if the teachers got a growing report of their success, and if a committee of business men were sent to investigate the success, would they ask the teachers and professors for a confirmation of the reports they had already made, or would they go amongst the pupils, and seek to ascertain to what extent they had a knowledge of French? There can be but one answer to this question. The principle applied to Foreign Missions, shows that our Committee took the only proper course for ascertaining the facts. They did obtain them, and I believe that every missionary and every other person who has been in touch with the fields, within the last few years, will on reading our Report, concede that it is very truthful, at the same time extremely kindly and sympathetic.

Surely our Committee's method and Report will commend themselves to unprejudiced intelligent minds. Probably Brother Ellis difficulty is fear that the Londoners who make missionary claims is coming to the light.

"NOT UNDERSTANDING THE SCRIPTURES."

Sympathy for the heathen and doctrinal errors respecting the everlasting nature of Christianity astray in its missionary work. In full harmony with other messages received from the Dark Ages, we believed God intent upon hurling all the heathen to everlasting torture, unless they should hear about the Savior in the present life and should accept Him and become saints. Frenzied by the misconception of the Divine Character and Plan, godly people hastened to spend their lives and their money for the rescue of the heathen from the fate which they erroneously supposed an all-wise, all-just, all-loving and all-powerful God had foreordained for the None-ect.

Now our (former) darkness is departing. As we began to see the utter hopelessness of our claim that the world was ever going to be saved, so also was that we had misunderstood our Heavenly Father's Plan in respect to the heathen. We began to see that only the first part of the Divine Program has yet been put into operation; viz., the gathering of the Elect from all nations to constitute the Bride of Christ, to be Joint-heirs with Him in the Abrahamic promise. "All the families of the earth shall be blessed in the Seed." Now we see that the saints grow from every nation and from every denomination under heaven, undoubtedly constituting the True Church, the True Bride of Christ, the Queen of Glory, the Seed of Abraham. —Galatians iii. 29.

"THIS GOSPEL OF THE KINGDOM."

Our hallucinations respecting eternal torment, which the Bible, rightly translated and properly understood, does not teach—as every scholar in the world will agree—has been the foundation of all our errors. As that to which we have clung, and loaned men should have cast away their Bible without ascertaining that it is in direct conflict with all our creeds! Missionary love has appealed to the most devout of God's people, the most sympathetic. Even though they have misunderstood, we may be sure that God has created a heart blessing in all sincere and supporters of missions. This is no reason, however, why we should continue to be blind to the true situation. We must no longer be double ourselves with the thought that it is possible to convert the people even in our home lands, until God's time, under Messiah's Kingdom, for glory and service. Such believers in the teachings of the Bible alone are preaching that the coming of Messiah's Kingdom is the hope of the world, and that the call of the present is for the Elect, to share in the Kingdom. Hark to the Master's words, "Fear not, Little Flock; for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the Kingdom."

To these it is not astounding that the heathen are not all converted, either at home or abroad; for they realize that God's Word does not so teach. They find the Scriptures to tell that at his Second Coming of Christ "the nations will be angry," and God's wrath will overtake them. Their shall be a time of trouble such as there never was since there was a nation. They find that during this time Messiah's Kingdom will be established, and that incidental to its establishment the First Resurrection will take place. They note Jesus' words, "Blessed and holy are all they that have part in the First Resurrection." " " they shall be priests unto God and unto Christ and shall reign with Him a thousand years," upon the earth.—Revelation xx. 6; v. 10.

But Premillennialists very generally make two mistakes: (1) They think of His Kingdom as one in which Christ and the saints will hold earthly courts. They fail to discern that the resurrection change raises both Christ and the Church fully out of the human nature into the Divine nature; and that God's Kingdom, established and powerful, will bless mankind through earthly agents already prepared. These will be the saints who died previous to Pentecost, and whose resurrections will be in human perfection —to which all of the Non-Elect world will be granted opportunity of attaining.

(2) Premillennialists fail generally to discern that the Bible teaches that blessings will be granted the Non-Elect who have died during the past six thousand years, without having had opportunity of attaining the life everlasting. They have overlooked the Scriptural statement that all the dead of Adam's race sleep until the resurrection; that the Kingdom of the Great Day of Messiah's Kingdom will be the resurrection morning, not only for the church, but for the sleeping billions of humanity. Our unscriptural conceptions of the dead, as alive in Paradise or in Purgatory or in a Hell of torture, came originally from the heathen; but we have used our greater enlightenment to add many of the Joys of the heathen Paradise, and the sufferings of the heathen Inferno, to the intermediate state. Hence it is that the most intelligent people in the world, by neglecting God's Message, the Bible, today believe things respecting God and His purposes more monstrous than any of the doctrines of demons which afflict the heathen world and drive them from God in fear.

APPLYING NOW OUR TEXT.

We note that the Lord did not say that the Gospel would convert the world, but merely that it would be a witness to them. The word now translated "witness" is in the Greek martyrion, from the root martus, the equivalent of our English word martyr. This seems, then, to agree with all of the Bible testimony as to His followers that in becoming His disciples they would be sacrificers; earthly friendships, honor, etc., and that they would be called to lay down self-love sufferings. To be His disciples, therefore, they must be martyrs, witnesses for the Truth and the light in the midst of darkness, slightly and misrepresentation. Such are the ones whom He has seen, the next agrees with all of the Bible testimony as to His followers that in becoming His disciples they would be sacrificers; earthly friendships, honor, etc.;

"DARKNESS AND DAWN"

(Written for the Tribune.)

A Graveyard Reverie.

O, city of the Dead, What Thou Could'st Tell, What tales unfold!
Of all the captives Thou hast herein held, The Young, the old,
The soft grass waves, the birds above them fly, And Laved Ones rend the air with bitter cry, but here, unconscious of it all they lie still and cold.

O city of the dead, your master death Claims all the earth
And sets his mark on Adam's helpless race,
Before their Birth.
A little while he may be kept at bay, And life prolonged a month, a year, a day,
But sooner or later he demands his prey,
At every Hearth.

Sometimes he warns them of his dread approach,
By failing pain,
Gainst which Love's watch, combine with skill and Power,
Are spent in Vain.
Sometimes like the thunderbolt from clear sky,
His Victims, drop without a word or cry,
And crape, and Hearse, and pall, all Testify,
To His Dread Reign.

O City of the Dead, with heads bowed low,
They Sadly come,
And lay their dear loved ones, with tenderness hands,
In Their LAST Home.
And then—per Souls—With breaking hearts they go,
And leave them here, where storms of rain and snow,
And winter winds beat wildly, to and fro,
With dreary moan.

As My Mind Wonders, O, 'er the shadowed Earth,
I stand appalled,
On 30 Thousand, New made graves such day,
The Hot tears fall,
No Wonder Jesus Wept, at Lazarus' tomb,
When He Foresaw, How deep would be the gloom
Ere He, With Kingly Power, could assume,
And break Sin's Thrall.

That Long Procession, moving ever On,
Strikes Our Hearts Dumb.
With anguish keen, we voice Our ONLY Hope,
Thy KINGDOM COME;
Sore need have men, of words, of hope and cheer,
'Tis Ours to tell, them that the end is near,
And all earth sorrow clouds, shall disappear,
Before Thy "SUN."

DEATH. I have come, to have a word with Thee,
To Tell Thee Here,
Thy Cruel still Graves, where Thy DEAD Victims lie, Thine END Is Near;
Man's path Thru Centuries Thou Hast Marked,
With blood.
But O, Thou Terror in the Holy Word,
Thy Doom Is Written, By Almighty God.

In Language clear,

Jehovah sent his son as mortal man,
That He Might Die,
Down in the tomb, be held in bonds, by Thee,
Man's Ransom free
That man might be released, brought back again,
To share the blessings of Messiah's reign;
And that to life once lost, he might attain,
His Fullness known.

Think not, O, Death, Christ's new begotten mind,
Could harden be;
The Father quickened Him on High—set Him
Immortal.—Free.
That shall increase with every passing hour,
His Reigns in Power.
He has Keys, O Death, He'll make Thee cower
And Vanquish Thee.

He is thy Master, Death, and when His time
Is Fully Come,
He will "Destroy the power of Death"
This world's dread Prince.
Shall mete His Doom.
Those angels who have wreaked on man their hate,
And who have not Re-gained their state
With Hell and Thee, Grim Death, shall meet their fate
Within the silent tomb.—(Tophat.)

Dost think, Oh, D'ath, that man will shed a tear
Because thou art gone,
The whole glad world will dance upon thy grave,
With Song and Song;
Mothinks Our Ancient sires, will lead the strain,
And all their children join with might and main,
Until the Hut of Heaven shall catch the strain,
And pass It on.

By Faith, I catch a glimpse of that blest day,
Earth's Golden Age
Dreamed of by Poet, written by Seer,
Sought for by Sage,
When eyes long blinded, come at last to see
The Glorious meaning of Earth's Jubilee,
When man no more shall helpless Victims be Of Sin's Dread Wage.

I see the Earth made Glorious Indeed—
Her Storms all O'er;
On Mountain, Valley, Hill and Plain,
From Shore to Shore.
The Fields and groves in radiant beauty lay,
Abundantly supplying day by day
The Needs of all;
Grim Want, has flown, forever away
From EVERY Door.

And there as Princes over "All the Earth,"
I see in Grand "array" a race,
Who look like Gods—so grand of form are they
So very full of Grace.
In Ages they walked by Faith alone,
Earth's Holy ones, from Abel down to John,
And now, as Rulers on the Earthly Throne
They take the place of happiness.

Some died believing that their Spirits would,
In Heaven Dwell;
Some died with shrieks and curses on their lips
In Fear Of Hell—(Fire)
Some welcome death as sweet relief from pain,
Some Thought, forever dead they would remain;
All Stand amazed, to find themselves again,
ALIVE, again—and well.

But Greater Wonder Stirs them at their change,
Since they lay down,
No Sickness or disease in all the Earth
Can now be found.
Sweet peace and PLENTY, both have come to stay,
And none shall have power to HARM in that blest day,
The Righteous Kingdom Laws, all must obey,
The Whole World around.

In Righteousness they rule with the "Iron Rod"
And in "Justice" Lays,
Her Lines and angles straight, and true and plain.
The dreadful gloom shall flee away
As mists before the Sun.
And on this Dear Earth, Thy will shall yet be done
And Thy Great Love, be known by every Tongue.

And these Praises, The Eternal Years, ascend to Thee, from Beneath these Stones.
Lovingly submitted yours for the whole truth,

EMORY WILLIAMS.

APPRECIATIONS.

Georgia, Nov. 11.

I am renewing my subscription through the W. T. B. & T. Society, and am looking forward to the regular visits of your good paper every week. I take the Tribune on account of Pastor Russell's sermons, the Question Box and Sunday School Lessons. May the Lord bless you in thus feeding the sheep. I appreciate the privilege of reading so many letters from the friends everywhere. I always pass on or send the Tribune to some one else after reading it.

Sincerely,
CHAS. M. PARSMAN.

Kansas, Nov. 10.

I desire to express my appreciation of Pastor Russell's Sermons, Brooklyn Tabernacle Studies and Everybody's Question Box, published weekly in your paper. It seem to grow better with each issue. With very best wishes, I am,

Respectfully yours,
MRS. D. M. GILLESPIE.

Maryland, Nov. 10.

I enjoy the Tribune very much indeed, and am especially interested in Pastor Russell's Sermons and the Bible Questions.

Cordially,
MRS. JULIA M. BOYD.

Oregon, Nov. 9.

For some time I have taken your paper and feel I would like to express our appreciation. We take the paper principally for its religious features, viz., the Pastor Russell Sermons. The famous preacher is giving to the public a clear, logical exposition of the Bible, such as we do not hear nowadays in the nominal churches.

We are glad to recommend your paper to our friends in search of religious helps. We wish you success

Very truly,
ALLAN RHODES.

Connecticut, Nov. 8.

Am sorry that I have neglected renewing my subscription until now, as I appreciate your paper so very much for all your issues in printing the true word so full. Hoping you will continue the good work until the end of the harvest. Am inclosing money for which please send your paper for the ensuing year.

OLGA ANDERSON.

Tennessee, Nov. 10.

I cannot express in words my appreciation for the good work done by the Tribune. We sure enjoy the Sermons and Letters, also the Question Box. Oh, would you be numbered as one of his fold? Be spotless within, be robed and all ready the spirit doeth say, for a present guest. I hope you will continue to publish the good things which will soon be to all people.

Yours for Truth,
L. M. HAMILTON.

Indiana, Nov. 6.

I am sending three new subscribers to the Tribune via the W. T. B. and Tract Society, which I should be pleased to have printed in the Tribune as I think it may of itself be helpful to your readers or bring forth some helpful thoughts from some of them.

It gives me pleasure to renew the subscription list of your excellent paper and I should be glad if I could do more along that line.

With grateful appreciation,
E. S. MASON.

New York, Nov. 8.

I am renewing my subscription to your paper through the W. T. B. and T. S.

I enjoy the weekly visits of your valuable paper and do not want to miss a single number. I, with many others, appreciate the space given in its columns to Pastor Russell's Sermons. Question Box, in which treat upon subjects which we believe will be of great value to the world in the near future.

Believing that the time will come when we will reap a rich reward for using you opportunity to spread the Glad Tidings of great joy which shall be for all people, I remain,

Yours respectfully,
J. DARIEH.

Pennsylvania, Nov. 9.

I greatly thank you for the four back numbers and I sincerely hope they will not be delayed any more. I did not know until just recently that the Tribune was the grand paper it is and thanks be to God in the highest for the blessings it is sending forth to the world of good, which shall be in due time to all. I cannot express in words my appreciation of Pastor Russell's Sermons and the Question Box and Answers and may the Lord's blessings be yours for your good work in the harvest.

Yours in the maker's service,
J. E. BOWLIN.

PARTICULAR NOTICE

Owing to the unusual demand of Pastor Russell's Sermon of Nov. 7, entitled "Armageddon of the Scriptures," we have decided to again publish it in our issue of November 21. Persons desiring extra copies will please notify us at once.

All our friends who have sent in orders will be supplied by mail on November 21.

Scientific methods are to replace the old system of factory inspection in Illinois. In a recent civil service examination for factory inspectors, men specialized for different classes of inspection passed. For mechanical appliance inspectors mechanics alone qualified; for ventilation inspectors, experts on the subject secured the position and for structural iron work and all the other classes, and expert in each trade was made an inspector.

Decatur, (Ill.) colored women, wives of union men, have organized an independent women's union label league. So far as known this is the first auxiliary of colored women in the country.

"The Gospel of the Kingdom. Mark viii, 27—ix, 1—Nov. 17.
"These are the words, that the Son of the Living God"—Matthew xvi. 16.

FOR a considerable period of His ministry our Lord did not declare Himself openly to His disciples, to be the Messiah. Undoubtedly He chose the wiser course. He did, however, wish His disciples to know, and He approached the question by asking, "Who do men say that I am?" He got their reply. Then came the point of the question: "But who say ye that I am?" St. Peter answered, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." Jesus said, "Blessed art thou, Simon, son of Jonah, for flesh and blood hath not revealed this unto thee, but My Father which is in Heaven."

Forthwith Jesus began to explain to the beloved Twelve the experiences that lay before Him—His death and resurrection. Doubtless all of these apostles were disappointed, but only St. Peter had the courage to express himself, saying, "Be it far from thee, O Lord, this shall not happen."

"Thou art the Christ."

In this course St. Peter was opposing the Divine will and plan, for which the death of Jesus was the very Center or Hub. To make the matter very emphatic, Jesus said to St. Peter, "Get thee behind Me, adversary, thy words savor not of the things of God, but the things of men." The Lord desired to make clear to His followers what had not been "meat in due season" to till such Present Truth Epoch, namely, that which He desired to be His disciple must deny himself, take up his cross and follow Him in the path of sacrifice, etc. He who will faithfully lose his life for Jesus' sake will save It—will find the reward of life on the spirit plane.

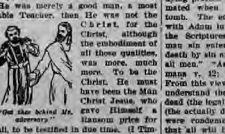
"What Shall It Profit a Man?"

God has provided a future life for every man, redeemed and restored, accomplished by Jesus, but only the noble of heart, of character, of life, who will faithfully follow the Captain of their Divinely appointed way, will get it. If they selfishly seek for the whole world, the selfishness thus developed will unfit them for the entrance into life. For what would a man take in exchange for the loss of his life? Would he consider wealth or fame the same for a few years in the present time worthy of exchange at profit, if it were to turn second glory, and eternal life? Surely not. We are therefore to have in mind that character-building be scientifically essential to our attaining eternal life.

Whoever becomes a follower of the Lord must be ready to pay the price of everlasting life and glory on the spirit plane must some out fully and courageously and acknowledge Jesus and His words. To be ashamed of the Truth, of the Divine Plan, of what we see to be the teachings of God's Word, because it is unpopular with men, is to offend the Lord and to prove ourselves unworthy of His favor.

The Great Question.

The great question of eighteen centuries ago is the great question of today: "Who do men say that I am?" He was merely a good man, a most able Teacher, then He was not the Christ, for the Christ, although the embodiment of all these qualities, was more, much more. To be the Christ, He must have been the Man Christ Jesus, who gave Himself a ransom price for all, to be testified in due time. (1 Timothy ii. 5, 6.) And that signifies that the Christ is not, not of Adamic birth, but extraordinary, born from above, because it born in the ordinary course of nature He would be like others of Adam's sons, subject to the sentence of death and hence unable to save others. Himself or others. Because He was the Christ, the Sent of God, who left the glory of the Father and was made flesh that He might "taste death for every man," then we behold Him as the great Redeemer of the world, with the power to outcarry as a Ransom, or corresponding price, to secure the release of mankind from the dire effects of Adam's sin, and possible the resurrection of Adam and his race.



"God Also Exalted Him," etc.

More than this, the word Christ signifies The Anointed. The Bible declares that the Anointed Lord shall be the Great King, Prophet and Priest, whose Kingdom shall exist for a thousand years, and shall destroy sin and all who love sin, and lift up all humanity willing to return to harmony with God. This is who Jesus is, according to the Scriptures—the Messiah. And His present work is the selecting of a Bride class, to be His Joint-heir in His glorious Kingdom, which will be set up soon after the Elect Church shall have been completed by the glorious change of the First Resurrection.

What think ye of Messiah? What think ye of His invitation to become His associate in His glory and Kingdom? What think ye of the cost of self-denial, self-sacrifice? What think ye of the great reward?

Great Plant.

Q.—Do Ananias lied the first lie, and is that the reason why we appreciate of an "Ananias Club" whose members are reputed to be notorious liars?

Answer.—The Lord Jesus declared that Satan told the first lie, saying, "He was a murderer from the beginning and abode not in the truth because there is no truth in him. When he speaketh a lie he speaketh of his own: for he is a liar and the father of it." (John viii. 44.) The first lie told was by Satan in Eden when he said unto Mother Eve, "Ye shall not surely die." (Genesis iii. 4.) This was false because a contradiction to God's plain sentence. "Thou shalt surely die." (Genesis ii. 17.) It may truly be said that all the false doctrines of "Heathendom" and "Christendom" have had their foundation in this falsehood told by Satan. Satan's falsehood was the cause of the disobedience of the first man which resulted in the sentence of Adam to death, and which death sentence has passed upon all his posterity as part of his offspring. (Romans v. 12.) Ananias was an offspring of Adam. He was born under the sentence of death, sinned in sin and brought forth in iniquity. (Psalm li. 5.) Therefore, the natural tendency was downward, hence all who would be honest and upright must fight against evil.

Q.—The Bible says "The earth abideth forever" (Ecclesiastes i. 4). How can we reconcile this with the conclusions reached by scientists that the earth is gradually growing cooler and that eventually the earth will become cold and lifeless?

Answer.—Even if the conclusions of scientists were realized as suggested above it would not be out of harmony with the Bible statement for the earth would still be "abiding" although in a lifeless form. Various have been the conjectures as to the ultimate fate of the earth. Some have conjectured that the earth would eventually drop into the sun and thus be consumed. Others have suggested that a collision would occur with some comet or with another planet, and in this way the earth would be disposed of. The suppositions of scientists have served to amuse a few inconsequent people and have certainly not been taken seriously as to their wild guesses. How reasonable and consistent the statement of the Word of God that the Creator formed the earth to be inhabited, and that while it is still in an imperfect condition as a habitation for mankind, yet eventually it is to be made glorious and perfect and in its perfected state will form an everlasting dwelling place for the regenerated human race. See Isaiah xiv. 18.

Q.—How shall we understand the Savior's words—"Let the dead bury their dead" (Matthew viii. 21, 22.)

Answer.—When our first parent, Father Adam, disobeyed the Divine commands the death sentence passed upon him, and in the legal sense and from the Creator's standpoint he was dead, even before he died for nine hundred and thirty years afterwards. The dying process began and was consummated when death declared him for the tomb. The entire race was involved with Adam in this death sentence, as the Scriptures declare—"By one man sin entered into the world and death by sin and so death passed upon all men." "As in Adam all die." (Romans v. 12; 1 Corinthians xv. 22). From this view of the matter we may have in mind the Lord's words. Those dead the legally dead bury their dead (the actually dead). It is because all were condemned to death in Adam that all will be made alive in Christ (see Romans v. 18, 19). Corroborating the words of the Lord Jesus the Apostle says, "For the love of Christ constraineth us, because we thus judge that if one died for all then were all dead" (1 Corinthians v. 14). Jesus, to the laying down of His life, was giving Himself "a ransom for all" (1 Timothy ii. 5, 6) And that signifies that all would be made alive in Christ (see Romans v. 18, 19). Corroborating the words of the Lord Jesus the Apostle says, "For the love of Christ constraineth us, because we thus judge that if one died for all then were all dead" (1 Corinthians v. 14). Jesus, to the laying down of His life, was giving Himself "a ransom for all" (1 Timothy ii. 5, 6) And that signifies that all would be made alive in Christ (see Romans v. 18, 19). ## OUR OLD COUNTRY CORRESPONDENCE.

Sweated British Women on Strike--Wins by Machine Shop Workers--Big Concessions to Birmingham Tailors--Belgian Miners in Convention--Germany's Largest Union--French Child Labor Horrors--Russian Strikes.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

LONDON, Nov. 14—The women in the British hollow-ware industry have been earning $1.25 to $2 for a long week's work. In earning that money they have to deal with chemicals which destroy their bodies. They are at last on strike but their demands are remarkably moderate. They now ask that their work shall not be more than 51 hours a week (nine hours a day) and that they shall receive not less than $2.50 a week. They are content for this to go on giving up their bodies to disease and decay. The special commissioner of the new labor daily newspaper the Daily Citizen, Keighly Snowden, who has been appointed to look into the disputes, writes as follows of one interview he had:

There was a little middle-aged mother with her face tied up. She pressed her fingers on her cheek bones or held her hand on the top of her head all the while she talked. She is a pawnbroker. The effect of chemical fumes has been to give her incessant headache, but did not speak of it until I asked why she wore the bandage. She was telling me about the strike.

"It's not so bad as enamelling," she said; "their hair comes off. It comes off nearly as soon as they start.

"I ran stand it," said this mother. "My girl here couldn't; it stopped her breathing. Some can't. Their teeth go black and they can't find an appetite.

"You should come and see what it is like when we are working, so thick sometimes we can hardly see one another. The masters keep out of it, I can tell you."

The wages dispute at the Horwich locomotive works of the Lancashire and Yorkshire Railway where the engineers and kindred trades claimed an increase of wages was satisfactorily settled on the basis of the settlement covering the engineering industry at Bolton. The men obtain an immediate advance of 50 cents weekly and 2½ per cent on piecework rates; the employers secure immunity from strikes on their disputes on the question until May, 1914, when the Bolton agreement expires. At Blackburn the strike of engineers at the Greenbank foundry is in its sixteenth week. There is little prospect at present of a resumption of work. The dispute concerns the employment of "unskilled" men on certain kinds of lathes, this being objected to by the engineers.

Some 10,000 men are concerned in the present negotiations for an advance of wages for the "unskilled" men in the Manchester district engineering trade. Present wages run from $5 to $7 a week, and advances of $1.75 cents and $2 cents are the rates asked for to bring up the lowest paid men to $6, the $5.50 to $6.25 and so on. The men on piecework ask for an advance of 7½ per cent on present rates. At a conference the employers offered in reply a 2½ cent increase all round on time rates and 2½ per cent on piecework rates and this will now be submitted to the men.

Men resumed work on October 26 in the Birmingham tailoring trade. All along the line the men have scored a big victory. Not only have the operatives gained an increase of 4 cents per garment for pressers and machinists, 25 cents per day for tailors and the payment for pressing and repressing garments to be 12 cents for morning and lounge coats, 18 cents for Raglans and Chesters, and 25 cents for frock and dress coats but they have also obtained agreements regarding security of tenure—a point which was not gained until after prolonged discussion with the merchant tailors.

The most important questions at the National Conference of Belgian Miners, which has just come to a close at Brussels, concerned the organization of a national strike to secure universal suffrage. The congress also resolved to send delegates to the coal owners urging an immediate rise of wages conformable to the rise in the price of coal. The congress accepted unanimously the following resolution against war:

"The congress, having deliberated on the possibilities and organization of an international general strike expresses its wish that preparations for such a strike would be taken well in hand by all the unions during the current year, and, protesting against the policy of war in the Balkans, calls on the unions to be prepared, in case of a European conflict, to refuse to work for production of coal destined to serve for eventual transport of warlike forces."

At its final sitting the congress expressed a demand for the revision of the laws concerning the pensions of miners. The miners ask for the introduction of a uniform pension rate for all miners after 25 years' service, and that the compulsory contribution of the employers of the miners be continued until the capital derived from the contributions of coalowners, which, on the provincial, the communal and the workmen shall ensure the pension of 2½.

The congress unanimously rejected the proposal for a five-day week, and also added the establishment for an annual five-day week, and demanded the

WHAT OUR PENSION ROLL DOES.

THE commissioner of pensions has just issued an interesting statement of the Civil War pensions. The aggregate of the payments from 1866 to the present time is in round numbers $4,000,000,000. And they are still increasing although the war closed forty-seven years ago. The disbursements in 1911 on pension account were $157,425,149, but this is the high-water mark of the annual expenditure, which in 1907 was only $50,784,789 and did not reach a hundred millions until 1890. Except in the year 1893 the annual payments did not reach $150,000,000 until 1908, and the highest figure was in 1910. In the last fiscal year 23,991 pensioners died and their names went off the roll. There will be a much larger mortality this fiscal year and the Civil War pension must soon disappear.

A contemporary in New York which very properly approves the payments to old soldiers and dependent survivors of old soldiers points out that American tourists in Europe spend $20,000,000 annually. This money is lost to us. It enriches the Professor and we get no return. The pension money is spent in our own country and, therefore, stays here. It does an enormous amount of good in the relief of poverty and old age and it saves immensely in the cost of pauperism. It does more than that. It teaches the young men of today that if their country needs them and they respond to its call, neither they nor their dependents will ever come to want by reason of the sacrifice. It is thus an investment in patriotism which brings large returns. America has no need of the huge standing army that is needed by every great European nation. Her best defense is the love of her sturdy and patriotic citizenship.

NEW TARIFF TO BE "WELL-CONSIDERED PROTECTION."

COMING Republican President-elect Wilson has fixed the date for assembling an extra session of Congress to revise the tariff. His campaign speeches are being carefully scanned for expressions of his belief as to the spirit in which revision should be undertaken and the results to be sought should go. The daily newspapers have frequently quoted utterances of Mr. Wilson's in which there was evidence of an unmistakable intention to impose such revision which, if followed by hasty and immoderate change work injury to our industries and halt the widely prevailing prosperity. Perhaps the most significant utterance of all, however, was the speech Mr. Wilson delivered in Duquesne garden, this city, in the closing days of the campaign.

In the Duquesne garden speech Mr. Wilson left no ground whatever for alarm. If his party follows his leadership—as we believe it will—the Democratic revision will not be on the whole materially different from the revision that the Republican party had pledged itself to make in case of President Taft's re-election. It will be seen from the portion of the speech quoted below that Mr. Wilson does not object to the present tariff so much because it is protective, as because it does not give the same protection to all. And it is merely to rid the tariff of its concealed special favors that the new administration proposes to exert itself if we have read Mr. Wilson's Pittsburgh speech aright. But let the President-elect speak for himself:

"I welcome the opportunity (he said), of stating what I believe to be the well considered position of the Democratic party with regard to the tariff.

"The Democratic party does not propose free trade or anything approaching free trade. It proposes merely a reconstruction of the tariff schedules such as will adjust them to the actual business conditions and interests of the country. Every observant business man must have realized long ago that the tariff schedules were constructed in such a way that business was not upon a normal basis in the United States. They do not constitute a system of well considered protection. On the contrary, they embody innumerable, cunningly devised and carefully concealed special favors and particular groups of capitalists and manufacturers have taken advantage of these special favors to build monopoly up in a way that is threatening and dangerous to every new and independent enterprise.

Our field of industry is like an untended garden. Some of the plants have so over-shadowed the rest as to give them no chance of light or air. Their roots, moreover, have monopolized the soil, and new growths are all but impossible. If we would have stable prosperity, we must admit light and air and freedom into the whole process of our industrial life, and it is with that object that the Democratic revision will approach the revision of the tariff. Their desire is not to check, but to aid; not to embarrass, but to quicken. They will not undertake the task like amateurs, either. They will seek and obtain the best possible advice in the country, but they will seek it far and wide, and not only in the quarters from which it has usually come."

THE COUNTRY WITHOUT STRIKES.

ALTHOUGH it is generally admitted that the social and industrial legislation of Prussia, which has gone a considerable distance along the road in what American nonprogressives call "paternalism," was an implication and result of many of the Roosevelt platform in the recent national campaign, it is still true that New Zealand has exercised a deeper and more world-wide influence upon the legislation of civilized lands during the last two decades than any other commonwealth under the sun. And the reactionary press is never weary of holding up New Zealand's "huge debt" as a warning of the financial burdens that paternalistic government leads to.

The New Zealand national debt, amounting to $261,000,000 last year (the latest date for which we find figures in the various year books) is fairly large for a nation of 1,100,000. But is smaller than Russia's debt of $4,650,000,000 when we compare the debt with what the country has to show for it. Indeed, on that basis the comparison is in New Zealand's favor as against Great Britain, whose debt is $3,567,000,000, or France which has the enormous debt of $6,280,731,000. In spite of its tremendous indebtedness, the French nation is commonly regarded as the wealthiest on the globe. Only the New Zealand debt seems censurable, however, to the reactionary mind, in spite of whose quibblings it remains a fact that New Zealand's debt is a constructive one, not a destructive one; an investment and not an extravagance; an asset rather than an obligation.

Practically all other national debts are incurred either as a result of past wars or because of expectation of wars to come. It is the unique and enviable distinction of the New Zealand debt that it was deliberately incurred by the million people, who make up the little state, for the benefit of all. It was used in buying up land from those who refused to sell to small farmers and in purchasing the railroad, telegraph and telephone companies and enough coal mines to fix the price of that great commodity of civilization. The result has been that the legislature as a whole, without alums, public utilities which give good service at cost and public funds which are loaned on farms at low rates, with never a foreclosure, but, says the reactionary, it is rumored that this policy has made the people careless, easy-going and improvident. To which those who know reply:

"We admit that our people have not the worried look and nervous manner that your American businessmen and workmen have. They don't have to have it. The poorhouse does not stare them in the face. In the twenty years we have tested our new plans, our manufacturers have increased four and a half fold and employ 60,000 instead of 20,000 hands. Despite our shorter work days and our weekly and monthly holidays, the output of our mechanics per head is one-third more than in America. They have twice as many deposits in the savings banks and twice as much life insurance."

It is to New Zealand, the beacon light of the new democracy, and not Russia, the ideal of all who hate and fear democracy, that America eyes will more constantly turn.

KING PETER OF SERVIA MOUNTED THRONE AFTER MURDER.

IT was only a little more than two years ago that King Peter of Servia paid the ashes of Turkey a formal visit at Constantinople and was received with elaborate ceremonies. He had been proceded a few days by King Ferdinand of Bulgaria. Now both rulers of the little Balkan kingdoms, to league with King Nicholas of Montenegro and King George of Greece are joined to death war upon the porte. King Peter, with an army favorably estimated at 120,000, took the throne in 1904, following the tragic assassination of King Alexander and Queen Draga at Belgrade on June 11 of that year. With murderers all about him and even he himself under suspicion of being concerned in the treacherous plot, his lot was not a pleasant one. Shunned by the fellow monarchs and despised by not a few of his own countrymen he lived in a reign of terror unto himself. But Peter Karageorgevitch was no longer pretender to the throne—he was king and he had his close followers who stuck to him through it all.

LABOR'S INTERESTS AT NATIONAL CAPITAL.

The Labor Group in the New Congress Will Contain Seventeen Members, a Gain of Two Compared With the Last Congress--One Will Be a Senator, Elected from New Jersey--Program for the Short Session--Latest Statistics on Immigration.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—Unofficial reports are to the effect that the labor group in Congress has been augmented by two additional members. Unfortunately two of the labor group were defeated in the recent contest—W. B. Wilson and Victor Berger. In the Sixty-second Congress the labor group consisted of fifteen members, while in the Sixty-third Congress the labor group will consist of seventeen members, one of these being a United States Senator, William Hughes, of New Jersey, having been successful in the primary campaign, and the Legislature being in control of the party to which the aspirant belongs. John A. Martin of Colorado, volunteer retired, as did also William Hughes, who resigned his seat in Congress during the latter part of September, to make the race for the United States Senate, Carl Anderson of Ohio, was the victim of an automobile accident which cost him his life. Thus, in summing up, there are four members of the labor group of the Sixty-second Congress who will not appear in the roster of the Sixty-third Congress, they being W. B. Wilson, John A. Martin, Carl Anderson and Victor Berger. The six new members elected are John I. Nolan of California; Edward Keating of Colorado, John A. Key of Ohio, John J. Casey of Pennsylvania, Albert Johnson of Washington and G. T. Helvering of Kansas.

While it is known that there were a very large number of aspirants of the various political tickets for members of state legislatures, it is difficult at this time to compile a list of successful candidates with any degree of accuracy, owing to lack of certified reports. As an indication of what has been done it might be stated that in St. Louis alone three union men have been elected to the State Legislature of Missouri. Maurice L. Cassidy, who is secretary of the St. Louis Building Trades Council, and Joseph Brogan, a member of the Molders' Union, were elected members of the State Senate, while James J. McNamara, secretary of the International Association of Heat and Frost Insulators and Asbestos Workers, has been elected on the popular branch of the State Legislature. Another feature which enters into the situation is the fact that labor have been re-elected a large number of Congressmen, aside from the labor group, who have in the past been friendly and helpful in securing labor legislation, while also there have been elected for the first time a large number of Congressmen who have declared themselves as favorable to the demands of labor for legislation in the interest of fairness, justice and humanity.

The following is a list of union men who have been elected to Congress, according to unofficial reports. There may be some change in the list, but so far the American Federation of Labor headquarters is not in possession of any information which would change the personnel of the list here given:

United States Senate.

William Hughes, Textile Workers' Union, New Jersey.

House of Representatives.

Isaac B. Sherwood, Typographical Union, Ohio.

James McDermott, Telegraphers' Union, Illinois.

Frank Buchanan, Iron Workers' Union, Illinois.

David J. Lewis, Coal Miners' Union, Maryland.

William J. Carr, Telegraphers' Union, Wisconsin.

John R. Farr, Typographical Union, Pennsylvania.

James P. Maher, Hatters' Union, New York.

Charles B. Smith, Telegraphers' Union, New York.

Robert E. Lee, Blacksmiths' Union, Pennsylvania.

R. E. Roberts, Metal Miners' Union, Nevada.

John I. Nolan, Ironmolders' Union, California.

Edward Keating, Typographical Union, Colorado.

John Key, Stenographers' Union, Ohio.

John J. Casey, Plumbers' Union, Pennsylvania.

Albert Johnson, Typographical Union, Washington.

G. T. Helvering, Street Carmen's Union, Kansas. Unofficially reported.

In 1906 when the American Federation of Labor began its campaign of securing the election of union men to Congress it was not anticipated that it would be possible to secure the election of any union man to the United States Senate for many years to come. This policy, however, of the American Federation of Labor has been crowned with a very great degree of success, in that there has been an increase in the representation of workmen in Congress each election since the first effort was made. ## LABOR FEDERATION FLAYS BURNS.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Nov. 15.—The most interesting event of the last few days in the A. F. of L. convention was the reading of the report of the executive council. In it William J. Burns was arraigned as an example of his own characterization of private detectives and the investigation of the Federation since the McNamara trial was declared to be a concerted attempt to destroy the Federation and bring its officers into disrepute.

Parts of the report recommended that the convention take measures to aid in the movement to abolish child work and referred to the conversation of natural resources as a measure in which labor is vitally interested and should participate.

One section dealt with the Boy Scout movement. At the Atlanta convention of the Federation a resolution was presented denouncing the Boy Scouts of America as breeders of militarism and antagonistic to labor. The report reviewed attempts by leaders of the scouts to eliminate the features that were objectionable to labor and recommended that the convention this year refrain from denouncing the movement.

Of the McNamara the report said:

"The McNamara offense was a social crime. Thinking people, who were made to realize the poisonous, miasmic influences corrupting the atmosphere of industrial life, were well-nigh overwhelmed by the weight of collective responsibility devolving upon them as a result of the existence of such conditions.

"The McNamaras were either criminally insane or insanely criminal—either conditions due to imperfect education, incomplete education or defective mentality. In any case society is responsible for the remedying of conditions. What concerns labor and society generally is preventive measures and human betterment, so that life and working conditions may be pure, wholesome and clean. Labor, affected by deadly social poisons due to social neglect are the heritage of our own sins and those of our kind.

Of Burns' connection with the McNamara case the report said in part:

"Burns has not and could not produce a scintilla of evidence to substantiate his oftrepeated misstatement: 'Gompers knew.'

"The report charges that Burns made it appear that officers of the Federation were the 'higher ups' and that when Mr. Gompers made reply this turned upon him the brunt of the attack.'"

The flour, feed, cereal, mill and grain warehouse workmen at San Francisco, Cal., are discussing a proposed organization.

TRADE UNIONISTS IN COLORADO MAKE POLITICAL RECORD.

DENVER, Col., Nov. 18.—If the record of the trade unionists in every other State in the Union equal that of this State, the action of the coming Legislature will be reflected in the laws enacted. There are at present two members of farmers and trade unions holding seats in the next session of the Colorado Legislature, and, when the Legislature as a whole, indications are that it will be exceedingly fair and give favorable consideration to all measures affecting the interests of labor.

Through the initiative and referendum adopted at the recent election the woman's eight-hour law and also the miners' eight-hour law, defeating a fake measure that 150 mine operators had placed on the ballot by petition. The heedless ballot law was also adopted. A measure was also carried, dealing with consumptive contracts, so that a judge cannot impose punishment for contempt of court except it be committed in the court room, and so that a judge cannot in contempt must be tried by jury. A probation law was adopted by the referendum, permitting no other legal tribunal save the Supreme Court the authority to issue laws passed by the State Legislature unconstitutional and even decision by the Supreme Court on the constitutionality of a law can be sent to the referendum, so that the people in this manner can reverse even a Supreme Court decision. A mother's compensation act has been adopted, providing that mothers who are left with children to support can be cared for by the State, through county officials being authorized to allow them a stated sum to support each child, thus making it possible to keep mother and children together.

The women's eight-hour law applies

A PLAN FOR A BREAK.

The autumn season when the tourist region is southerly was opening, and the resorts of the border states were well stocked with guests. The rocking chair brigade—as those ladies who daily occupy the porch of the Eastman house, rock and all plying some kind of needle as an accompaniment to their melodious gossiping voices—was in session. Two ladies sitting somewhat apart from the rest were engaged in earnest conversation in a low tone.

"I sympathize with you, Mrs. Harper," said the one, "but I don't see how I can help you. My son is actively engaged in business and can't be away from it at this season more than a few days at a time. Could he be here with us, say, for a fortnight I would be glad to lend him to you for the purpose of drawing your daughter's attention from the young Ruggles, who you fear will win her. There is another course I will suggest. A young man has just arrived who has entered his name on the hotel register as Edward Carton. Being the only young fellow of prepossessing appearance (Ruggles excepted) in the hotel, he will soon be besieged by the girls. If I can, I will make his acquaintance, introduce him to your daughter (telling him she is the belle of the place), and she will naturally be interested in taking him away from the others. This will serve to divert her mind from Ruggles and make a breach between them. But why do you object to Ruggles? He is said to have an income of $5,000."

"My dear Mrs. Crawford, what would $5,000 a year be for Gwen?"

"What you wish I presume is simply to break off her affair with Ruggles, that she may be free to marry a fortune."

"Precisely. If you can accomplish this break by introducing any one—no matter who he is—I will consider myself under a lasting obligation to you."

The same evening the introduction was accomplished. Gwendolen Harper and Edward Caton were introduced, and before the guests left the dancing hall in the evening Mrs. Crawford said to Mrs. Harper:

"Did you ever see such a remarkable case of love at first sight?"

All the parties to this scheme were pleased except Sam Ruggles, who went off in the far end of the veranda and scowled and smoked and smoked and scowled, hearing by himself where he could see his rival's success but in should make a scene.

But on the third day after the bowl had been made perfect, when Mr. Ruggles was reading a northern newspaper, he saw something that thrilled him. It was an advertisement of Mrs. Edward L. Caton for information concerning her husband, who had deserted her and their three children, and immediately cut the ad. out of the newspaper that he alone of those at the hotel might possess the information that he might consider a plan by which he could get the greatest satisfaction out of it.

The same evening an anonymous letter went to the advertiser that a gentleman had appeared at the Tuckahoe hotel at ——, answering to the description mentioned in the advertisement. Ruggles, who mailed the letter, could not refrain from adding that "the fellow was evidently bent on committing bigamy."

From the time the discarded lover saw the evidence that his rival was sailing under false colors he changed his bearing toward Miss Harper. Where before he had made his jealousy evident he now assumed an air of superior assigned with pity. Also Caton had become aware that his attentions to Miss Harper had made Mr. Ruggles his enemy and had averted the antagonism of the latter's boring reward him whenever they met. One evening while Mr. Caton was dancing with Miss Harper he unintentionally ran against Ruggles, who was also dancing. The look Ruggles gave him was ominous. Later, when both went out on the veranda for a whiff at a cigarette, Caton stepped on Ruggles and apologized for running against him in the dance.

"One who is sailing under false colors is beneath my notice for any insult," was the reply.

"How did you get onto that?" asked Caton with surprising imperturbability.

"I saw it in the newspapers."

"I wish the newspapers would let me alone." was the only rejoinder, and Caton went back into the dancing hall, where Ruggles soon saw him whirling with Miss Harper.

Now, the only real attachment in this triangular affair was between Sam Ruggles and Gwen Harper, and from the time Ruggles began to assume that air of superiority Gwen began to be troubled. She was too proud to call him back, but she looked as if she would be willing to take him back if he would apply for reinstatement. One day when they met in the garden of the hotel she remarked that it was a pleasant day.

"I don't call it so," answered Ruggles gruffly, "for me, only."

"Why, I see no indications of it."

"Perhaps if you would take the trouble you'll see a thunder cloud coming."

"You speak in riddles."

He could not answer even by voice, it came out in spite of him that he, a part of it.

"When the storm breaks it will strike the man whom you have honored with your favorable consideration."

"How? Where? Where?"

"You shall see."

"Won't you tell me?"

"Nothing is to be gained by my telling you. I prefer that you should see for yourself."

And Mr. Ruggles with cold politeness lifted his hat and passed on.

Miss Harper went straight to her mother with the information or, rather, the insinuation. Mrs. Harper had been a bit worried lest she had lifted her daughter out of the frying pan to drop her into the fire. Her object now was to take advantage of what Ruggles had said to discredit both the rivals.

"My dear," she said to the first place, it is very mean of Sam to cast a slur upon this Mr. Caton. It shows a very contemptible disposition on the part of Sam. But we must remember that we know nothing about Caton. He may be a gentleman and he may not be. Likely he is some young man who has got hold of a little money and is spending it in the only outlet of his life."

"What can't be, mamma. He has the manner of one accustomed to the very best society. As for Sam, if he knew anything about Mr. Caton, if he knew very wicked of him not to warn me."

"Then why doesn't he tell you the whole story and have done with it?"

Mrs. Harper was not considering the inexperience of youth or the deficiency of judgment occasioned by jealousy. It was enough for her to get her daughter out of the toils of a man worth only $5,000 a year and under the spell of one worth ten times as much. Gwen should not become too far interested in one who for all that was known about him was not worth a cent.

It was a few days after this scheme were pleased except Sam Ruggles, who went off in the far end of the veranda and scowled and smoked and smoked and scowled, hearing by himself where he could see his rival's success but in should make a scene.

MARRIAGE BY PROXY.

This Curious Ceremony is a Purely Dutch Institution.

Some three ago a Boer in Pretoria was married in a girl in Amsterdam, in Holland, the ceremony constituting what the Dutch call Hantschoen, or glove marriage.

In spite of the fact that a distance of 6,000 miles lay between the bride in the Netherlands and the bridegroom in the Transvaal they were just as effectually married under the Dutch law as if both had been present in the same church.

The bridegroom went to his friend, or best man, in Amsterdam a power of attorney to represent him as his proxy at the ceremony and at the same time forwarded his glove, which at the proper moment, when the two were made one, was held by both the bride and the proxy.

The wedding was duly registered at Amsterdam and at Pretoria, where the bridegroom filed an affidavit with the landdrost, or magistrate.

This curious form of marriage is a purely Dutch institution, the custom having originated, it is said, in the old Roman Dutch-Batavian rule. It is, however, a dead letter in the Transvaal since the English took over that colony.—New York Press.

After the Deluge.

She had just returned from her first trip to Europe and everybody was given an opportunity to know about it. One of the first to be entertained themselves, but at last she found it silent youth in a corner who proved to be an attentive listener. To him she rhapsodized on the beauty of life abroad," and especially in England. He is different from the most enthusiastic tourist to exist long without consulting from an auditor some expression of wonder or delight, so she sought to hitch her listener's respectful silence even at the expense of losing a little time herself. "Were you ever in England?" she asked.

"Yes," he said modestly. "I was born there, and I am fairly-six years old. I came to America three months ago. If you can tell me anything about America I should be awfully glad to. I want to learn all I can."—New York Press.

Diseases of Metals.

Metals suffer from contagious diseases analogous to those of living beings. Among these diseases one of the most striking is that called "tin pest." Sometimes a block, a plate or medal of tin attacked by this disease crumbles and falls into dust, and sometimes warty, protuberances appear on the surface of the metal. Various other metals suffer from a disease that manifests itself by a spontaneous recrystallization. The most remarkable cases occur with lead and hard drawn brass. These diseases are not due, as has been possible for the figures of speech. Temperature plays a part in producing them. The most extraordinary fact perhaps is that the "tin pest" is easily of spreading by contagion.—Harper's Weekly.

Maybe a Little—After.

The play was not to my means brilliant, and when it was over I was bored. Suddenly he leaped to his feet.

"I heard an alarm of fire," he said. "Some one is in danger. I must go."

His wife, whose hearing was less acute, made way for him in silence, and he hurried out.

"It wasn't a fire alarm," he said on his return.

"Nor after, either," said his wife coldly, with a sniff.—Exchange.

Caustic.

Scene—Train stopping at small roadside station. Irritable Old Gentleman—What on earth do they stop at a station like this for? Objectionable Passenger (alighting)—To allow me to get out, Irritable Old Gentleman—Ah! I see it has its advantages, then!

Showed Her Age.

Grace—They say that Miss Forty-odde was named after her Aunt Georgiana. Gwendolyn—She looks as if she was named before her Aunt Georgiana.—Judge.

Mamma (to Bobby)—Bobby, you must not tease Sammy so much. Remember, he rejoices in having enjoyed a week of freedom from curiosity and especially from society reporters who telegraphed his presence wherever he went.

After the sensation was over Sam Ruggles and Gwen Harper met in the drawing room of the hotel.

"Well," said Sam, "you just missed snaring a multimillionaire. I'm sorry for you."

"And you missed seeing the multimillionaire captured by a deserted wife."

"Funny, isn't it?"

Their eyes met, and they smiled.

"Maybe it isn't," Gwen continued. "I suppose so. Well, what are you going to do?"

"Why, I'm not going to do any thing."

She held a rose in her hand and going up to him, fixed it in his button hole. He cast a quick glance down him. There was no one besides them in the room. He kissed her.

"What a pity, Mrs. Harper," said Mrs. Crawford, "that we couldn't have got her to acting as to the identity of young Carrington."

"It's just too disgusting for anything."

PASTOR RUSSELL'S VIEWS.

Churches of All Denominations and the Civil Powers of Earth Are About to Unite in Common Cause—Powerful Influences Preparing For the Battle of Armageddon—A Reign of Anarchy Will Be the Result of the Warfare Until The Messiah Takes Control.

PASTOR RUSSELL

Brooklyn, N. Y., Oct. 15.—The Brooklyn Academy of Music was crowded to the doors today to hear Pastor Russell's discourse on the "Battle of Armageddon." His text was: "He gathered them together unto a place called in the Hebrew tongue Armageddon" (Revelation xvi, 16). The speaker said:

Armageddon is the name applied to the "Hill of Megiddo," or Mount of Destruction. It was famous as a battle field in Old Testament times.

The Lord has seen fit to associate the name Armageddon with the great conflict impending, which will be the final outpouring of the wrath of God, the Christ and Mammon, with which this Age will close, period, and the New Age of Messiah's glory be ushered in. He has purposely used highly symbolical figures of speech in the last book of the Bible, evidently with a view to holding certain important truths until the due time for their revelation. But every time in the Bible the Bible mentions Babylon, the wicked shall understand" (Daniel xii, 10). Whenever we see a word or sentence misused in the Bible, we may be sure that it is applied to the Lord's people. Whenever we see the word "Babylon" we may be sure that it is applied to the world, and that the Lord's people are to come out of it, that they partake not of her sins and receive not of her plagues.

The symbolisms of Scripture, rightly understood, are always forceful. When the Holy Spirit used a "beast" to symbolically represent certain doctrines or teachings, we may be sure the true application will fit well. A frog has a voice; took a wide look. It swells itself up in an apparent endeavor to impress the beholder; its great loudly well represents its vain power, used to croak.

Applying these symbols, we learn that we will see the various sects of earth will come from the Protestant churches federated, from the Church of Rome, and from the Greek and Oriental, all in full agreement. The spirit of all will be boastful; an air of superior wisdom and knowledge will be proudly assumed—all will croak in harmony. All will tell of fine results that would follow, involving the interests of both the present and the future life, if their counsel be not followed. However, unheeding the croaks, the differences will be settled by the arbitrary methods that ancient greed is disturbed, or indeed lose or repudiated.

The fine authority of the Church and the divine right of kings, aside from the Church, will not be allowed to croak. And nervous or heedless in conflict with these boastful and unscriptural claims will be branded as "agitating rots, at the mouths of three "frogs" speaking from pulpits and platforms and through the religious newspapers. These three powerful elements of some will be strangled by the philosophy of the same evil spirit which gave birth to the claims. The high priest respecting Jesus, as Caiaphas declared it expedient to common that one man should die for the people and Divine, to be rid of Jesus and His teachings, so this "frog" spirit will appear in every one in fury, declaring it necessary to their self-protection.

The croaking of these "frog" spirits or powers will be heard in the courts of princes, financial, political, religious and influences into one great armament, the spirit of which, inspired by the croakings of these "frogs," will scout the position of otherwise good and reasonable men with fury, degenerating in their blind following of these evil spirits, evil doctrines, they will be ready to sacrifice all—everything—on the altar of what they mistakenly suppose is justice, truth and righteousness, under a divine arrangement of law in force at this time. We understand the Scriptures, these combined forces of Armageddon will triumph. Free thinkers, socialists, and other liberties which have come to be the very breath of life to them, will be swept away as never known before. Revelation xvi, 18, 19, Jesus described it as a time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation, even to that time.

The Lord Will Gather Them.

The false, frog-like teachings will gather together into one post the powers of earth, the air, the sea, the sand and the kings of the earth, to battle in the Supreme Divine Power and day that great day of God Almighty. Our text tells us that He shall gather the mentioned hosts of Armageddon to the Mountain of Megiddo, symbolic for the battle which they sought to assert by their union, federation, etc., will be the very thing that will destroy it. The Scriptures tell us that God will be represented by the Great Messiah, and that He will be on the side of the masses. This we read in Daniel xii, 1: "At that time shall Michael [He Godlike One—Messiah] stand up, even the great prince which standeth for the children of thy people." He will be the possession of His Kingdom in a manner little looked for by many of those professing to have been His people, claiming that they were His Kingdom and authorized by Him to reign in His name in the Millennial age.

Jesus declared, "His servants ye are unto whom ye render service." Some may be rendering service to God and unto righteousness, while others may be rendering service to sin, while others will be rendering service to God and to righteousness, while others will be rendering service to sin, while others will be rendering service to God and to righteousness, while others will be rendering service to sin, while others will be rendering service to God and to righteousness, while others will

PASTOR RUSSELL IS CHALLENGED.

Complete Answer to the Query "Who Ordained Him" — Whole Subject Clarified—Clergy and Laity Unscriptural Terms—Pastor's Reverend Fathers, Etc.—Ordinations Various. By the Catholics, Baptists, Presbyterians, et al. — The Divine Ordination the Only Genuine Article. Without It No One is Authorized to Preach or to Teach the Holy Scriptures—Many Ministers in All Denominations Lack This Real, Divine Authorization or Ordination.

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 17.—Pastor Russell got the swords. We report his discourse on ministerial ordination and titles. Very evidently it was a reply to an attack recently made upon him by a Mr. W. T. Ellis, editor of "The Continent" and also of the "Religious Rambler." Ellis charged Pastor Russell with being unordained and claimed that his ordination as basis is fraudulent. The editorial accused that Pastor Russell understands the situation. He fully justified his position before his vast audience and showed up the "rambler" editor in the unenviable light either as being ignorant of the subjects discussed or of attempting to deceive the public. His text was, "Not of men, neither by man, but by Jesus Christ, and God the Father, who raised Him from the dead." (Galatians i, 1.) He said:—

Evidently the time has come for calling the common people what the Bible teaches respecting clergy and laity, titles of ministers, and ordination to teach and preach. We have previously pointed out that the doctrine of Apostolic Succession started in the second century, A. D. The bishops claimed that they had the same authority that Jesus had ordained, given exclusively to the Twelve Apostles. On the strength of this claim they appointed and ordained the inferior clergy.

This custom still prevails in what are known as Catholic Churches—Roman, Anglican and Greek. The principle is wholly wrong, unscriptural. According to the Bible, the Church of Christ is not composed of two parts, clergy and laity. Jesus declared, "One is your Master, Christ; and all ye are brethren." Therefore, "Call no man (Master or) Father." St. Paul's writings clearly show that in the early Church the ministers were the servants of the Flock, and not of a different worldly caste. They were of the people; and when chosen by the Ecclesia by the stretching forth of the hand (Greek, cheirotoneo), they were recognized as of Divine appointment to the ministry through the Church.

The customs of centuries were so difficult to throw off that many of the reformers coveted the titles accorded the Catholic clergy. Nor did they care to let the congregation that its word was supreme in the matter, and that its ministers were merely by the grace of God its servants. Others of the reformers, realizing that Jesus and His disciples were not styled Reverend, Doctor, etc., decided to lay aside titles, preferring to be called pastors. This custom still prevails very generally in Protestant Germany and Scandinavia. My Christian friends and Bible Student associates will know my objection to the title "Reverend," and hence address me as "Pastor"—shepherd. Furthermore, I am the elected pastor of the Brooklyn Tabernacle congregation, and also the London Tabernacle congregation. I fail to see any ground for criticism of my course in this respect; and I make any attack upon Christian brethren who accept other and unscriptural titles.

MUST PASTORS BE ORDAINED?

There is no question that ordination is necessary to the proper holding of the office of pastor. The whole question is: What constitutes an ordination to preach, teach and be a pastor amongst the people of God?

This question has received a wide variety of answers. The Roman, Anglican and Greek Churches, claiming Apostolic Succession, declare that the authorization to preach must come through their apostle-bishops. For this reason Protestant ministers have not been allowed to enter the pulpits of these denominations—until the Episcopalians a year ago granted this concession. Their theory has been that Protestant ministers are unordained. Of course, if their proposition be correct, I am just as much unordained as all other Protestant ministers—and no more so.

Only since the organization of the Evangelical Alliance (1846) have the different sects of Christendom acknowledged each other and each other's ordinations. Some of these recognize the word ordination in its true light, as meaning simply authorization; and others of less spiritual discernment see merely an outward ceremony. Each denomination does it own ordaining, and makes such ceremonies as it deems proper. If, therefore, the congregation of Christian believers in Brooklyn and the other congregation in London choose to ordain or appoint me their Pastor, it is wholly a matter of their own discernment. If any shall accompany the ordination or appointment who cast dispute that? No Protestant denomination, sure; for their own ordinations are on this basis.

"NOT OF MEN, NOR BY MAN."

The entire subject of ordination of ministers of the Gospel seems to have fallen into confusion during the shufflings of the Dark Ages; and few seem to have gotten fully back to the Bible teachings on this subject as on other subjects. St. Paul is particular in emphasizing the fact that he did not receive his commission as preacher and Apostle of Christ from his brother Apostles. He distinctly declares himself an Apostle by Divine authorization. This is the general Scriptural principle underlying Divine Ordination to the ministry of Christ.

Before we proceed with an exposition of the Bible teaching on Divine Ordination, it will not be improper for us to note the practical operation of the different human organizations—of men and by men merely.

Have all bishops of the Catholic Church, the Anglican Church, and the Greek Church been models of propriety, patterns to the flock? Have all given evidence of Divine authorization to preach and preach the True Gospel? Their staunchest votaries must admit that many of them have been unworthy; and that from these unworthy ones have proceeded doctrines and practices contrary to the Word of God. Of what value, then, are their ordinations by men and of men? None whatever! On the contrary, the claim that they were Divinely authorized, and guided and inspired to be teachers of the Church, helped forward the errors which they promulgated. By reason of their claimed authority to teach, the people believed them too implicitly and did not sufficiently criticise their utterances and practises in the light of the Holy Scriptures.

How is it today in the various Protestan denominations of Christendom? Are all those who receive ordination or ordination of men and by men, benefitted thereby? Has such ordination kept them free from weaknesses of the flesh to which others were subject? Has it not, on the other hand, exposed them to greater temptations, because they were pedestaled by the people and thereby injured with pride, haughtiness, etc.? Has such ordination in any denomination preserved its ministers from doctrinal errors more than the people who did not have a similar ordination of men and by man?

The answer is found in the numbers who have left various denominations and ordinations to go to the Bible for authorization and ordination. It is answered also in the fact that today the great majority of ordained ministers in all denominations subscribe to repudiate the Bible as a Divine Revelation. Their ordination did not protect them from our modern infidelity, called Higher Criticism. Under its influence they have ceased to be teachers of Bible. Christianity, and have become merely essayists, leaders in political and social reform and in humanitarian work. Manifestly their ordination of men and by man did not hold them to the "faith once delivered to the saints." (Jude 3.) It did not assist them to appreciate the Bible as being inspired, that the plan of God might be thoroughly furnished unto every good word and work.

Let us consider the matter again, from another standpoint. Do not any of these human ordinations of men and by man impart the Holy Spirit or give a mental illumination by which any of these humanly ordained ministers were qualified for preaching and teaching the Lord's people? The answer is, No! As deeply spiritually and as deep insight into the teachings of the Scriptures has often been found outside of the pulpit as inside. The ordination, evidently, brought no enlightenment, no gift of the Holy Spirit—the thing above all needed by those who would teach others and expound the Gospel.

HAS SERVED A BAD PURPOSE.

The ordination of ministers, of men and by man, has been injurious in that it has perpetuated the misconception that the Christian people are two classes—clergy and laity. The ordained have been injured by being puffed up to suppose themselves of a higher order than their brethren. The unordained have been injured in that human ordination has helped to bring their minds in respect to the real ordination. Thus the "laity" have considered hundreds of things upon the very service which God intended should be their chief aim and object. In the early Church, the Elders were considered merely elder brothers of the Church—no elders in years necessarily, but advanced ones in spiritual things, able to help the brethren properly to understand the Word of God and to attend to all the duties and privileges incumbent by the Gospel for their preparation for a share in Messiah's Kingdom. The ordination of reverend men to be elders, and in some cases dictators of a Church, has taken away from the Elders the very services that the Apostle tells them they should perform. The Apostle expounds them the empty honor of passing the collection plate and the commonion service. St. Paul, in his address to the Elders of the congregation at Ephesus, said, "Take heed therefore unto yourselves, and to all the Flock, over which the Holy Spirit hath made you overseers (Greek, episkopos, literally, bishops), to feed the church of God." (Acts xx, 28.) All of those Elders were under-shepherds, pastors, bishops, overseers of the Flock, and the duty assigned to feed the Flock. All of them had opportunity for teaching, instructing the Church.

DIVINE ORDINATION TO PREACH.

All will admit that if preachers are representatives of God, if they speak in His name, they must have Divine ordination from Him. Whoever has not Divine authority is usurping a holy office and placing himself in antagonism to ones have proceeded doctrines and practices contrary to the Word of God. Of what value, then, are their ordinations by men and of man? None whatever! On the contrary, the claim that they were Divinely authorized, and guided and inspired to be teachers of the Church, helped forward the errors which they promulgated. By reason of their claimed authority to teach, the people believed them too implicitly and did not sufficiently criticise their utterances and practises in the light of the Holy Scriptures.

How is it today in the various Protestan denominations of Christendom? Are all those who receive ordination or ordination of men and by man

SELF HEALING TIRE.

Rubber Inner Tube That Holds Air After Being Punctured.

Various Industries.

A new form of inner tube which has recently been placed on the market is well worthy of consideration as seemingly representing an important step in the right direction.

This tube contains no filler, no "dope" of any kind, but is a regular pneumatic tube inflated with air in the usual way, which, owing to some peculiar and very ingenious features in its construction, is in a large measure self-sealing and will hold the air for a long time. It is claimed, even after receiving a very severe puncture. The principle on which the remarkable action of this tire is based can best be explained by reference to our illustrations. The inner tube is made as usual, heavy at the tread and has imbedded in it a strip of canvas seen in section in Fig. 1, which represents the appearance of the tube when first made. We now come to the important feature of the new tube. After a length of tubing has been made as usual and with the structure shown in Fig. 1 the tube is now turned inside out. An inspection of Fig. 1 will show that the canvas strip, forming as it does an arc of the inner circumference of the tire as first made, is necessarily shorter than the corresponding arc of the outer circumference of the tube. The consequence of this is that when the tube is turned inside out the canvas strip is under tension, and, being inelastic and therefore unable to stretch, holds this tension. It holds the deflated tire in a flat position, as shown in Fig. 2. On inflating the tire is, of course, forced to assume a circular form, and the canvas strip, being now situated on the external circumference and being already pointed out, inextensible, compresses the rubber underneath it, so that the tread portion of the inner tube is always under compression and therefore self sealing. In point of fact, a puncture made with a sharp nail or point seals itself automatically, so that it cannot be detected by the usual immersion in water.

The diagram of Fig. 4 is intended to show roughly the way in which the rubber behaves when a puncture is made. The nail on the left is shown in its bearing position, having forced the fiber of the rubber with it and raises a tuft of rubber on the inside of the tube. The tuft on the right is being withdrawn, and the fiber of the rubber is following in its motion. On the extreme right is shown a puncture sealed by the rubber after the nail has been extracted.

Dictograph's Wide Range.

E. M. Turner, inventor of the dictograph, which he says has been imitated flatteringly, gave a public demonstration of its various ways in which the device could be practically utilized in New York recently.

"The dictograph," explained the inventor, "has been known as a detective device. This is the first public demonstration of its everyday commercial importance. With our commercial device a business man simply lifts the receiver and talks to one, two, fifteen or a hundred people, as he chooses, at one time. Each party to the conversation may be located in his own office, which may be in the same building or several blocks away. Anybody is able to hold a transmitter or receiver. They talk back and forth as though seated in the same room. The defective value of the device consists of the fact that the transmitter weighs only six ounces and can be concealed easily. It can be installed in four minutes by an expert and can be wired so as to transmit spoken words for more than a mile.

A Great Fuel Consumer.

More coal is consumed in the city of Pittsburgh and its immediate vicinity and more coal is shipped to and through the Pittsburgh district than to any other district in the world, according to Edward W. Parker of the United States geological survey. While a population of about one-sixth of that of Greater New York the consumption of coal alone in Pittsburgh is nearly equal to that of the much larger city. Greater New York consumed in 1911 approximately 19,000,000 tons of coal, and Pittsburgh used about 16,000,000 short tons. But Pittsburgh consumes several million tons of coke and also a considerable quantities of natural gas, which, added to the coal consumption, gives the city a good lead over New York as a fuel consumer.

Motor For Motorcycle.

A device for heating automobiles in winter has been invented by J. Robinson Duff, a New York broker. It consists of a brass cylinder which runs from the radiator of the machine to the limousine or body of the car, covering the cylinder heads and manifold. The air flows the air through this tube, in which it is heated by the excess heat liberated by the cylinder heads and manifold. The air is forced back into the body of the car, where a valve regulates the amount of heat desired. In summer time the hot air escapes under the car. This device has a tendency to cool the engine and keep the paint and varnish from cracking. It has been installed in several machines, and as it is very simple it can be made part of the equipment of every car.

TUNGSTEN AND ITS USES.

Important Mineral Widely Employed in Various Industries.

Last year there was a sharp decrease in the production of tungsten ore owing to the decrease in the demand for tool steels, in which the bulk of the tungsten produced is used. According to Frank L. Hess in a report on this metal just issued by the United States geological survey. The production of domestic tungsten ore in 1911 amounted to 1,700 short tons of concentrates, containing 60 per cent of tungsten trioxide, valued at $407,260; in 1910 the production amounted to 1,321 short tons, valued at $282,902.

Tungsten is used chiefly in making steels that will hold their temper when heated, but it is most generally known as supplying the filament of tungsten incandescent lamps. The great improvements in drawing tungsten wire and further notable improvements in the size of the globe of the tungsten lamp and in other mechanical details that add greatly to its efficiency are making it necessary to search upon the carbon filament lamp and the arc lamp, and it is rapidly driving from the market the carbon lamp, which was the first good incandescent lamp having a metallic filament.

Diamonds are used for dies in drawing tungsten wire. At first it did not seem possible to drill small enough holes through the diamonds to make wire sufficiently fine for lamps of small candle power, but wire 0.0006 inch in diameter can now be drawn in quantity. The total quantity of tungsten ore used for electric lights, however, amounts to only a few tons a year. New uses of tungsten, in making electric furnaces, electric contacts and targets for bullets, have been developed, and the last two products are being actively manufactured.

Even for purposes of war tungsten may have its uses, and investigations are now being made with a view to its application in the manufacture of projectiles.

LATHE SPINDLE STOP.

Labor Saving Device of Simple Design and Construction.

When cutting off a large number of small shafts much time is consumed in measuring the work at each cut. To save this time the stop illustrated herewith was constructed. Not only did the device serve as a stop, but it assisted in holding the work concentric with the hollow lathe spindle.

A small block, A, served to lock the stop B in the spindle at any desired position. When the stop had been adjusted to the desired location in the hollow spindle the screw C was turned, causing the cone end of the screw to bear against the block A and lock it against the interior of the hollow spindle. After the stop had been locked in this way the work was placed in the spindle and run back until it came to rest against the conical recess in the end of the stop, as shown in the sectional view.

Concrete For Firesproofing.

Concrete is rapidly coming to the fore as a firesproofing medium and as a common material in building construction. It has many marked advantages and also several serious drawbacks. It owes its strength to the hydration of the cement, which is accomplished up to a certain amount of water of crystallization. At temperatures above 600 degrees C. this water begins to be driven off, and the cement loses its strength. When the dehydration is complete the strength of the cement is practically destroyed. However, dehydrated concrete is a poor conductor of heat, and therefore the process of dehydration in the interior of the mass is slow. The length of time the hydrated material will resist heat in place and retard the process of dehydration will depend somewhat on the form of the mass exposed to heat to distinguish the fire. In actual fires concrete has been destroyed in the massive columns of a one-half inch to two inches.—F. P. Walther in Engineering Magazine.

Bicycle Popular in France.

Statistics recently published show that the bicycle is more than holding its own in France. It seems that the total number in that country in 1910 was 2,697,406 and that this had increased in 1911 to 3,360,626. Although as a means of recreation the bicycle still survives in Europe only, it is certain that both in the eastern and western hemispheres it has taken a permanent position as a useful means of travel, particularly for the artisan population.

Big Electric Locomotives.

A Swiss railway is building the most powerful single unit electric locomotive that has ever been destined up to the present time. The road will have ten of these engines, each of which will weigh 160 tons. At a speed of fifty miles per hour they are capable of developing 2,500 horsepower, while they can increase or reduce to seventy miles an hour for an uninterrupted run of one and one-half hours.

Repair For Stoves.

Patronized or loose asbestos mixed with a little plaster of Paris and water, makes a good paste for stopping holes in stoves.

APPRECIATIONS.

Canada, Nov. 12.

I desire to take advantage of this opportunity of telling you of the pleasure and profit I receive from your paper.

Anyone who has his hand on the pulse of Christendom at the present time cannot help but be aware of its feverish condition and that a crisis is rapidly approaching. I know of no better way of thus knowing the present condition of affairs, than by reading the Tribune, with its Labor News and Pastor Russell's Sermons. I am especially interested in the latter. Have just finished reading the Sermon in the last issue entitled "The Armageddon of the Scriptures" and have been greatly impressed with some of the thoughts there expressed. These are indeed momentous times and I appreciate very much your cooperation with Pastor Russell in the noble work of lifting the veil of ignorance and enlightening the people.

May the good work go on.

Yours respectfully,
GEO. A. OLIVER.

New York, Nov. 16.

Just a few words of appreciation for your good paper. Reading over each week filled with clean good reading for all and especially so much for the household of faith. The Sermons of Pastor Russell, Question Box, Sunday School Lesson and Letters of Appreciation by many friends, with notes and articles of interest in them, profitable to the Scriptures, are so helpful to God's children. I must have your paper as long as you continue to publish it. The Sermons, the Lord will surely bless you in the good works of spreading the good news which "shall be to all people."

MRS. P. VAN AMBUSH.

Pennsylvania, Nov. 14.

I herewith enclose my check for one year's subscription to Tribune.

We can truthfully say that your paper is the most valuable news paper we have in our home and especially Brother Russell's Sermons are indispensable with us.

Yours very truly,
H. S. KUSER.

Illinois, Nov. 14.

I take this opportunity to express my appreciation for your valuable paper. I cannot express in writing the extent that we have been benefited by the visits of our home. The Sermons, Question Box and the letters from the Lord's people are very encouraging in these times of trial. May the Lord still bless your work.

Yours in the service of our now present King and Master,
MR. AND MRS. J. E. CHANDALL.

Minnesota, Nov. 12.

I notice on my Tribune address that my subscription has reached its limit. Am sorry that I should not take note of this tend to it before so as to avoid losing any numbers. Am enclosing the subscription through the Watch Tower Society.

I can not afford to lose one of those wonderful Sermons that appear so regularly in your valuable paper and only that but the Sunday School Lessons and the Question Box are of great value to me, in assisting me to understand the Bible and to help me put on the whole armor of God. Yes and the communications we are privileged to have with the different ones of like precious faith through the columns of Appreciation from week to week, upon which we look forward for the next one smaller in the flesh. And all this I realize, depends so much upon each one who is privileged to space to it in your paper.

Yours in the love of Truth,
JOHN T. CLARK.

Maine, Nov. 15.

I wish to again tell you that I appreciate very much the way you print Pastor Russell Sermons. I am sure the Lord will bless you far more than you are now aware of.

Yours sincerely, and for the Truth,
W. S. MARSHALL.

NOTICE.

Dear Friends—Owing to our space being very valuable, we must from now on decline to publish poetry. We want letters of appreciation, but must draw the line there.

On the second page will be found the sermon of November 7, "Armageddon of the Scriptures."

Canada, Nov. 13.

We have often thought of writing to you that your might know how much we appreciate the Labor Tribune. We value it much more than any other paper we take.

The religious feature we are especially interested in is Pastor Russell's Sermons, Question Box and the beautiful Poems make your paper very valuable to us. We always pass it on to friends and several have subscribed in this way.

With very best wishes,
MR. AND MRS. A. EKROOD.

Pennsylvania, Nov. 12.

I am glad that you are using so much space of your paper for these Truths, as I understand that now is the Divine appointed time that they should be made known, and also that the people are hungering now for the Truth of God's Divine Words.

I am cutting the Bible Question out and putting them in a scrap book, which is very helpful and instructive.

Trusting that you will still continue to use your valued paper for the dispensing of Divine Truth, I remain,

Yours respectfully,
HARRY E. DUNBAR.

Kansas, Nov. 13.

I appreciate the Tribune so very much on account of its many virtues, clearness of moral tone, clearness as to type, its standing for the working people and last the greatest for publishing Pastor Russell's Sermons in full, that I shall subscribe for the year 1913.

Very truly yours,
MRS. LUCRETIA STILLEY.

Kansas, Nov. 12.

Seeing our subscription to your paper ran out in September, we have tolerated through the kindness of our editor, also sending you two new subscribers.

Wishing you success and God's blessing for the way in which you paper is the most valuable news paper in our home and especially Brother Russell's Sermons are indispensable with us.

Yours very truly,
H. S. KUSER.

North Carolina, Nov. 12.

I am 73 years old and appreciate your valuable paper more than another, and especially after reading my life's feat of all which appeals to me is Pastor Russell's Sermons, printed in such large type.

Please let my full address appear in connection with this letter so the same one in your Appreciation. I answer me from Florida, as I desire to visit that State with view to living there in a warmer.

W. W. GILES,
Browns Summit, N. C., Route No. 2.

Rhode Island, Nov. 19.

I also wish to once more express deep appreciation for the many good things you are giving your readers, especially Pastor Russell's Sermons and the Question, etc. May the precious service continue until the harvest is ended and all the laborers rewarded when the blessed times of restitution shall be for all people.

Sincerely yours in the love and service of the Truth,
MRS. GEO. E. BROOK.

Massachusetts, Nov. 16.

I see by the date on my paper that my subscription has expired and thank you for the "notice" in last issue which brought this to my attention.

I am renewing today through the Watch Tower and wish to say that I greatly enjoy your paper in its entirety especially the Sermons and Questions.

Yours in the love of Truth.
JOHN T. CLARK.

Maine, Nov. 15.

I wish to again tell you that I appreciate very much the way you print Pastor Russell Sermons. I am sure the Lord will bless you far more than you are now aware of.

Q.—Is there more than afull law opposed to polygamy? What is the Divine Law on the subject? (J. D. W.)

Answer—God's Law was not originally written on tables of stone nor printed in books. It was written in the heart of the first perfect man whom He created. The Divine provision was one husband for one wife, one wife for one husband. This the Divine will was, of course, the Divine Law. Afterward the sense of the God left mankind, as condemned sinners, to die, and to wait for the time when He would send the Redeemer; and, later on, would begin a work of restitution. The Scriptures tell us that many things of those past times God winked at"—He did not attempt to rule the world not left it in its degradation for Messiah to due time to regenerate it.

With the New Testament times, however, God began to speak to those who had the privilege of becoming of the holy harmony with Him. He does not yet speak to the world, but to the consecrated Church of Christ. To those in various ways He inflicted His will and Law. No suggestion favorable to polygamy could be found in the teachings of Jesus or His Apostles. St. Paul, writing to Timothy and Titus respecting suitable Brethren to be chosen as Elders and Deacons, examples to the flock, stipulated that they should be the husband of not more than one wife. Polygamy may have prevailed amongst the Gentiles, but it was never recognized by them.

St. Paul emphasizes monogamy in his letter to the Ephesians, saying, I have espoused you as a chaste virgin to one husband, Christ. He proceeds to speak of Christ as the Church in the character and applies the lesson to one husband and one wife and how their union constitutes a likeness to the heavenly union, as it is also a foreshadowing of the ordeal under which God introduced to Eden.

Q.—Since there are six hundred and more Christian religious sects; how are we to understand the text for one and wayfaring men [Isaiah xxxv, 8-10] tell which one is the true church? Why cannot we all unite on the all teach differently from one another, and why is it that we do not keep that of ——— you know, the place where He died and the brotherhood is to-day? (Mrs. Wilson)

Answer—Since all of the religious systems of the day professed loyalty to the Bible as of the Divine origin and to the Apostles, and since there is not a single command in all of the Scriptures to harmony any of these present day churches, no one could scripturally say that any of those was the true Church, but that one should join the one that or the other. Denominationalism—"Churchianity"—is coming sooner and more rapidly than the world and this is evidenced by the rapidly dwindling number of church going people. Those who are in the professed country church buildings which have been vacated by their congregations to worship alone, and those in the cities markets in the large cities are being loaded with cheap properties to the speculative builders. The more enlightened people of today are disgusted with the doctrinal errors and confusion of the creeds and are withdrawing more generally but firmly refusing to support what their minds and hearts cannot indorse in view of the Bible. The denominationalism—foretold in Scriptures —it would be wise for the honest truth-seeker to remain independent of all the church system, and to study the Bible for himself, endeavoring to live up to the instructions of the Lord Jesus and His Apostles, and as he has opportunity, meet with other earnest Bible students of non-sectarian views.

Q.—What are we to understand by the Scripture—"Who then is a faithful and wise servant, whom his Lord hath made ruler over His household, to give them meat in due season? Blessed is that servant, who his Lord, when He cometh, shall find so doing. Verily I say unto you, that he shall make him ruler over all His goods?"

Answer—In ancient times it was customary in large households for the master or the head of the family to provide a storehouse filled with food of different kinds and appropriate for the different seasons of the year. Then the master would appoint some special servant as steward over the household whose duty it was to take of the supplies of food in the storehouse and distribute to the household in its proper season. The Lord Jesus was unquestionably referring to this custom as illustrating the Heavenly Father's arrangements in dealing with the family or household of faith. In the last days of the history of the Church during the presence of the Lord Jesus at His second coming, some special "servant" or servants of the Lord would be appointed as steward over the household of faith, and it would be the duty of faithful servant and wise servant" to minister unto the Lord's people, things new and old, meant in due season"—spiritual food—from the great storehouse of truth, the Bible. The expression "ruler" would be better translated from the original Greek by the words placed in charge of, or in opposite over. This would signify that the faithful servant would be given full charge of the entire Bible, "all his goods"—the Master's spiritual storehouse.

THE KINGDOM IN TABLEAU.

Mark ix, 2-13—Nov. 24.

"A voice came out of the cloud, saying, This is My beloved Son: hear Him." Matthew xvii, 5. The voice was past. Jesus was found alone."

OUR studies continue to appear-tain to Messiah's Kingdom of glory. Today's lesson sets up a tableau illustration given to His disciples respecting it. The lesson deeply impressed the Apostles who witnessed the vision. Peter, James and John. St. Peter referred to it afterward in his Epistle (II Peter i, 16-19), saying: "We have not followed cunningly devised fables when we made known unto you the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, but were eye-witnesses of His Majesty * * * when we were with Him in the holy mount."

Jesus required His disciples for the transfiguration vision, saying, "There be some of them that stand here, which shall not taste of death, until they see God's Royal Majesty having come with power." The occasion will be remembered. Jesus had foretold His death, quite contrary to the previous expectations of the Apostles, and now He sought to draw their minds gradually to a realization that His death would be but a temporal relation of the promise of the Kingdom and its glory, but a fulfillment of their expectations on a higher plane.

Jesus was in pursuance of His purpose to prepare Himself to largest as King, riding upon the ass, for days before His crucifixion, yet He would be denied and rejected and crucified; but His Kingly Office and work would thereby only be confirmed. His authority to be King of the earth, to release mankind from the power of sin and death, to uplift humanity and bring the earth to Paradisaical conditions would all be founded upon His sacrificial death at Calvary.

All this was presented to the three chosen disciples. Jesus took them in the mountain-top and was transfigured before them. His face did shine as the sun, and His garments shone and glistened white, after the manner of angels, the vision thus representing the fact that after having experienced His resurrection change. Then with Him talked two men, "who appeared in glory" says St. Luke. In some manner the Apostles recognized these two men of the vision as Moses and Elijah. They had been dead, the course with Jesus respecting His decease "which He was about to accomplish at Jerusalem."

Then came a voice from the overshadowing cloud, saying, "This is My beloved Son, hear ye Him." And immediately the vision vanished. Several good lessons may have come out of this. It would be a great refreshment and strength to their faith to witness this vision, which showed them that the death Jesus was about to die, a sacrifice by and known of God and of Divine approval. The voice from God would also encourage them in this.

As the Apostles, with Jesus, were coming down the mountain side, wondering where they were to go and what they had seen, Jesus said to them, "See that ye tell no man the vision until after the Son of man be risen from the dead." (Matthew xvii, 9.) The fact that Moses and Elijah appeared as representing the Law and the Prophets in life, does not contradict the words of Jesus that what they saw was a vision. Moses and Elijah were merely given later on to one of these Apostles, St. John, recorded in the book of Revelation, to represent the Law and the angels and men, beast voices, etc., just as in this vision.

The Meaning of the Vision.

We have St. Peter's words just what they saw on the mountain represented the Royal Majesty of Messiah—the Kingdom. Moses and Elijah represented the faithful of Natural Israel, the "House of Servants"—Moses as a servant, and Elijah as a faithful over all his House." Elijah represented the Spirit-begotten of Israel in the flesh, the Elijah class, the Head of Sons. All these connected with spirit-begotten people of God during the Gospel Age, represented by Elijah, who, God promised, would be sent before Messiah would set up His Kingdom.

"Tell the victim to go" Messiah would set up His Kingdom.

In other words, the Elijah class appointed of Jesus and all of His footstep followers throughout this Gospel Age—in their earthly glorified condition, Spirit-begotten, but not yet spirit born.

There is no doubt whatever respecting the Kingdom promised—that it will come: that vision on the mount confirmed it. The Kingdom merely awaits the sufferings of those who will be the members of the body of Christ, before the Second Coming of Jesus these will be blessed and glorified; and the class represented by Moses will also be blessed and used as instruments of the Kingdom. Thus to the vision the entire Kingdom was represented: first of all, by Jesus Himself; secondly by Elijah, who represented the Church class; and thirdly by Moses, who represented the faithful on the earthly plane.

The art of being able to make good use of moderate abilities often confers more reputation than real merit.—Rochefoucault.

A Few Words on the Men Who Compose the British Labor Party in Parliament

Re-organizing the South Wales Miners' Federation--A Question of Union Officials' Salaries--Serious Trouble Threatening in British Shipyards.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

LONDON, Nov., 21.—The position of political affairs in Great Britain is becoming increasingly critical. The Government is only kept in power by the votes of the Irish and Labor parties and actually on November 11 it sustained a complete defeat on certain official clauses of the Home Rule bill. At any time now, however, it is possible that a general election might be precipitated and thus a few words on the men who compose the Labor party in Parliament here might not be out of place. In the first instance it should be borne in mind that although labor acts together on most questions there are found within its ranks what might be termed moderate and progressive sections.

Labor's keenest politician, Ramsay MacDonald, leads the party. He was educated in Scotland, and became a pupil-teacher, subsequently working in London as a clerk. Early in life he threw in his lot with the Labor party as a writer and speaker. Although he is really more a representative of the middle-class than the working class the Labor party have shown great wisdom in choosing him as their chairman. He is one of the finest natural orators that the House possesses, and has a handsome and commanding presence. He has, on the whole, exercised a moderating influence on their counsel, and has been blamed by the more advanced wing for not pushing the claims of labor more vigorously. Keir Hardie, Snowden and Lansbury, the Socialist wing of the party, have indeed caused him some trouble on this account. With his stock of white hair and picturesque red tie, Hardie, who began life as a miner, is still the most striking figure in the Labor party. Snowden, who is said to resemble the portraits of Cardinal Manning, has an indomitable will, which has triumphed over great physical sufferings. He is a little cold in his speeches, but lately he has come out prominently against the police of strikers, and seems to have moderated some of his old opinions. Lansbury, who created the scene in the House the other day, looks like a respectable churchwarden, and indeed is one. Hence his curious friendship with Lord Robert Cecil, one of the most picturesque young fossils of the Conservative party. But although he is a Churchman in one thing on the Labor benches where nearly everyone is a Nonconformist or Free Thinker, he is an advanced Socialist. The House has not taken very kindly to him, for he is too aggressive. He is about to voluntarily retire his seat and stand for re-election to see whether his constituents approve his recent conduct.

Another very extreme advocate of Socialist views is Will Thorne, who has the voice of a bull, and is noted for his startling interruptions at question time. It was Thorne who recently suggested that the roofs should be pulled up near the London docks to prevent the goods being handled during the strike. He began life as a brickfields laborer, and worked from the age of seven. Of considerable ability, however, has had its sobering effect on Thorne lately, and as chairman of the recent annual British trade union convention he showed himself less headstrong and extreme.

The miners' members are the quietest section of the party. They do not altogether like being merged in the Labor party. They are in many respects more in sympathy with the Liberal party. They have recently had their leader in the death of Enoch Edwards, who did his best to bring the coal strike to an end, and was always a moderating influence. Bruce now occupies the position that Edwards held, and he also started life as a miner. He is a quiet and unobtrusive fellow, with fierce black mustaches which belie his character. The palm for eloquence must be given to "Mabon" whose real name is Abraham. He is, like Burt, a Privy Councillor and is a perfectly dignified figure, who before now has moved members to tears by his eloquence. Quite one of the old school is Abraham.

Stephen Walsh is sometimes counted as another miners' member, but he was never a Liberal-Labor member. He is a little man who wears a curly shaped hat, half top hat and half bowler, like the hats that Winston Churchill, the First Lord of the Admiralty affects. He has been nicknamed by some people the pocket Venus of the Labor party but I notice that there is a little irony in the title. Walsh has a taste in boots as well as in intellect, and he is an uncommonly fine speaker, downright and exceedingly plain. He has recently given an opinion that is not popular. James O'Grady, the member for East Leeds, has played a prominent part in the House lately in connection with the Irish and Dublin strike of 1913 and the coal mined in the country. The total production of coal (both bituminous and anthracite) in the United States in 1910—the last year of which official reports are at hand—was 885,-599,428 tons. Of this amount Pennsylvania alone produced no less than 284,676,000 tons, and West Virginia 58,690,000 tons, or together 284,866,856 tons, which is approximately 60 per cent of the entire country's production. Since 1910 they have increased their proportion of the production, further nullifying our Louisville contemporary's reduction on the enormous relative fatalities in Pennsylvania and West Virginia coal mines.

It is very doubtful if there is another state in the union whose coal operators are taking as active an interest in the promotion of mine-safety and the general protection of the miners' lives as the operators of Pennsylvania. Their hearty co-operation with the officials of the federal bureau of mines is a fact to which the latter publicly testify.

WHY BUSINESS HAS NO FEAR.

THE general tenor of the advance comments upon tariff revision indicates that the country is preparing itself for a reduction, in the main, of former revision experiences under Democratic auspices. That is to say, the majority of tariff historians, as well as practical politicians, recognize the fact that there are much stronger forces working for moderation in tariff reductions than for immoderation.

In boating arguments for political change the leaders of the Democratic party are obliged to set a good deal of store upon the theoretical differences between their party and the Republican party. As against the Republican slogan of a "tariff for protection" they have had no choice except the slogan of a "tariff for revenue only." But the difference between a "tariff for protection" and a "tariff for revenue only" as the revenue needs of the country now stand, are theoretical differences mainly. As we have previously pointed out, even Mr. Underwood, the Democratic leader in the House, practically admits this now that the election is over and forecasts a tariff which will raise fully as much revenue as the law now in force. That means simply that, while considerable differences of an equalizing character may be determined upon in this and that schedule, the general average of duties in the Democratic law will be little if any lower than it would have been had the election as resulted as to leave the work of revision to the Republican party.

Thus the outlook is for as conservative reduction of the average of duties as followed the Democratic victory of 1892. Much as the Democratic tariff of 1894—the Wilson bill—has been denounced in Republican campaign speeches, everybody knows that its average duties were quite as high as those of the average Republican tariff. Of course, our industries as a whole have progressed so much in the last twenty years that the tariff which might have been required to protect them from European wage standards in 1893 is not needed now, and not even uncompromising protectionist Republicans will complain, therefore, if the new tariff reduces duties not enough to injure our manufactures but yet enough to make the reduction visible to the naked eye and put a stop to the chronic anti-tariff agitation, thereby assuring stability for a long term of years. That the line of safety will be passed, there is now no ground to believe. The uttermost limit of possible reduction in the average of duties as followed the Democratic victory of 1892. Much as the Democratic tariff of 1894—the Wilson bill—has been denounced in Republican campaign speeches, everybody knows that its average duties were quite as high as those of the average Republican tariff. Of course, our industries as a whole have progressed so much in the last twenty years that the tariff which might have been required to protect them from European wage standards in 1893 is not needed now, and not even uncompromising protectionist Republicans will complain, therefore, if the new tariff reduces duties not enough to injure our manufactures but yet enough to make the reduction visible to the naked eye and put a stop to the chronic anti-tariff agitation, thereby assuring stability for a long term of years. That the line of safety will be passed, there is now no ground to believe. The utterances both of President-elect Wilson before the election and of other Democratic spokesmen since the election, added to tariff history, should reassure businessmen of all classes.

As for iron and steel, we have no doubt the iron Trade Review is right when it says that there is little likelihood of a marked reduction in the tariff on these commodities, for the reason that there have been successive reductions in the iron and steel schedules in the last two or three tariff acts and further reduction of duties would not increase the revenues noticeably unless the reduction were so sharp as to produce a large increase of imports, shutting down the American mills. This tactical blunder the Democratic party evidently does not propose to commit under President Wilson's leadership. Hence the unshaken business confidence seen in all parts of the country.

SOCIALISM'S NATIONAL GAIN.

STATISTICS of the recent national election have by this time been pretty well canvassed, but there is one aspect of it which has not received the presentation in the newspapers that its importance entitles it to. We refer to the significant fact that, so far as the returns go, only one political party showed any increase whatever in the popular vote. That party was the Socialist. Other parties stood still, in spite of the gains they should have found in mere increase of population. The Socialist was the one party that progressed, if the popular vote be accepted as the criterian of party progress. Wilson got substantially the vote Bryan got in 1908, while the combined Taft and Roosevelt votes substantially equal the Taft vote of the same year. The Socialist vote is conceded to have more than doubled compared with 1908, when Debs polled 420,820.

There is some warrant for the position of a New England contemporary which argues that the Socialist vote of 900,000 is all the more remarkable when considered in the face of the radical appeal made by the Bull Moose organization. Mr. Roosevelt maintained that Socialism could be checked, and he would check it, by incorporating a number of Socialist proposals into the program of the new party. One of the main objects of the progressive movement was to head off the more revolutionary movement. The country was solemnly warned by Mr. Roosevelt's Harvard friend and supporter, Prof. Albert Bushnell Hart, to the following effect:

"Unless that movement (Socialism) is checked, within sixteen years there will be a Socialistic President of the United States; which means that a Socialist national committee will be President. There is only one way to head off the danger, and that is the formation of a party which will take over the reasonable part of the Socialist program."

GENERAL SIR JOHN FRENCH, WAR HERO, VISITS AMERICA.

ENGLAND'S greatest war hero, next to Lord Kitchener, is visiting the United States and Canada. He is General Sir John Denton Pinkstone French, the daring cavalry leader during the Boer war. Inspector general of the English forces since 1907, general officer commanding in chief of the first class and lieutenant colonel of the Nineteenth Hussars since 1902, he is a leading figure in English army affairs. He was born in Kent, England, in 1852, and after serving four years as a naval cadet and midshipman in the royal navy he severed the English army in 1874. Since then his record has been full of brave deeds and high honors. He was lieutenant general commanding the cavalry division in South Africa, 1900-1902. He figured in the relief of Kimberley, and under Lord Roberts was instrumental in the capture of Bloemfontein and Pretoria. He was made a general in 1907. General Sir John plans to visit friends in Denver and in Canada.

A PENNSYLVANIA MINE SLANDER REFUTED.

ANOT unreasonable optimism pervades the report just given out by the Bureau of Mines at Washington on the subject of mine disasters. So much has been accomplished in the establishment of safer conditions of mining that hopes of still greater accomplishment in the near future seem entirely warranted. The beneeau forecasts a notable decrease in mining fatalities throughout the country in the present year as compared with 1911. According to figures compiled in the bureau 1,457 men were killed in and about coal mines during the first eight months of this year. These figures indicate that unless there shall be an unusual number of disasters in the latter part of 1912 the mortality list will be far below that of 1911, when nearly 3,000 fatalities were reported.

The report gives statistics to show that a quite general impression to the contrary notwithstanding there has been a steady reduction in the number of fatalities due to coal mine disasters for six years past. The public naturally infers that mining is growing more dangerous because items regarding explosions are so frequent. What the public forgets is that the mine industry is constantly expanding and the number of employes increasing. The number of men killed each year is still distressingly large; but it is steadily falling in proportion to the whole number of men working. A Kentucky contemporary thinks it is "somewhat significant" that more than one-half of the fatal casualties during the first eight months of 1912 were in the two states of Pennsylvania and West Virginia, the former reporting 650 men killed and the latter 187. "Large numbers of foreigners of a low order of intelligence," says our contemporary, "are employed in the mines of these states, which probably accounts in large measure for the high casualty rate."

Our contemporary (the Louisville Courier Journal) very evidently thinks that the rate of casualty is much higher in Pennsylvania and West Virginia than elsewhere. With all due deference to the ingenious theory by which it undertakes to explain why this is so, we are obliged to say that it isn't so at all. The fatality rate is if anything, we believe, possibly a little lower in those two states than elsewhere. Pennsylvania certainly has the best-equipped coal mines and the most intelligent coal miners, in the union. The Courier Journal would have been better employed to learn that Pennsylvania and West Virginia produce more than half of the coal mine fatalities in the country if it had remembered that those two states mine a good deal more than half of all the coal mined in the country. The total production of coal (both bituminous and anthracite) in the United States in 1910—the last year of which official reports are at hand—was 885,-599,428 tons. Of this amount Pennsylvania alone produced no less than 284,676,000 tons, and West Virginia 58,690,000 tons, or together 284,866,856 tons, which is approximately 60 per cent of the entire country's production. Since 1910 they have increased their proportion of the production, further nullifying our Louisville contemporary's reduction on the enormous relative fatalities in Pennsylvania and West Virginia coal mines.

It is very doubtful if there is another state in the union whose coal operators are taking as active an interest in the promotion of mine-safety and the general protection of the miners' lives as the operators of Pennsylvania. Their hearty co-operation with the officials of the federal bureau of mines is a fact to which the latter publicly testify.

LOCOMOTIVE ENGINEERS WIN IN ARBITRATION.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 25.—Warren S. Stone, grand chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, and the 51 general chairmen of the roads affected by the decision of the arbitration on commission made public at Washington, will go over the details of the commission's report so that it will be thoroughly understood on all sides. The first session of the conference was held today behind closed doors at the Brotzeli hotel.

Chief Stone denied that he had gone into conference with delegates of the railways concern in the award, behind closed doors last night.

Regarding the commission's award, he said:

"I have no comment to make on the fairness or unfairness of the decision. It speaks for itself. On April 28, last, we signed articles of arbitration and agreed absolutely to stand by whatever decision was rendered by the board. I will say that I, personally, am satisfied and that the directions will be put into effect at once.

"The decision is far-reaching and will affect thousands of engineers. It dates back to May 1, and the increase in pay will of course date from the same time, assuming an increase in seven months back pay.

"Under the conditions," said Mr. Stone, "that we consented to arbitration of the matter, which of course affects the whole country, there is nothing for us to do, but to accept the findings of the body. This we do, cheerfully and will take steps at once to put the decision into effect.

"The decision affects about 21,000 engineers on the 52 railroads east of the Mississippi. By its terms the engineers are granted $4.32 for 100 miles or less and 50 cents an hour for overtime. The engineers had asked for $4.40 to $5 per 100 miles. On the through freight services, they were awarded $4.76 per 100 miles.

In local freight service they were awarded 25 cents additional, meeting full demands of the engineers for the branch of service.

"The increase in the cost of living in the State of New Jersey has increased $4.36 per cent since 1895, while in the same period wages have advanced only 23.4 per cent. These statistics are published by the State Bureau of Statistics.

GOMPERS RE-ELECTED PRESIDENT OF A. F. OF L.

The Thirty-Second Annual Convention of American Trades Unionism Still in Session at Rochester—Few Changes in the Election of Officers—Resolutions Adopted—Haywood of I. W. W. Causes a Commotion and is Arrested.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Nov. 25.—The American Federation of Labor decided Saturday to ask the unions affiliated with it to raise money to defend the alleged dynamiters on trial in Indianapolis.

The resolution adopted by the convention was "that delegates to the convention on their return advise their international unions and local bodies to provide financial assistance for the trade unionists on trial in Indianapolis to aid them in securing a fair trial and in appealing the cases should they be denied them."

The resolution also urged that the men on trial be "not convicted in advance of the decision, in their cases be influenced by the alleged fact that certain corporations and a private detective agency are clamoring for a conviction."

It was decided by a vote of 15,761 to 7,222, more than the two-thirds majority required, to revoke the charter of the International Association of Steam and Hot Water Fitters and Helpers, delegates from which were denied seats in the convention last week.

The convention refused to act in the dispute between factions of the International Brotherhood of Steel Erical Workers and ordered final decision that only the faction affiliated with the federation be heard.

Other resolutions adopted favor the initiative, referendum and recall, including the recall of judges; popular election of United States Senators, workingmen's compensation with the retention of employers' liability, old age pensions and the repeal or amendment of the Sherman anti-trust law to prevent the prosecution of labor unions under its provisions.

Whether the annual convention of the Federation of Labor is to adopt industrial unionism in place of its general policy of recognizing, except in certain instances, the autonomy of trade or craft organizations, will be discussed tomorrow. Near the close of last Saturday's session the committee on education reported on a resolution for the adoption of industrial unionism. A minority report was also voted for. Its rejection and a minority report favored industrial unionism where practicable and where not practicable a close federation of trade unions for united action.

The resolution was introduced by John Mitchell, Duncan McDonald, John P. White, William Green and J. H. Walker, of the United Mine Workers of America.

An hour of the afternoon session was given over to an address by Lewis Bryan, Commissioner of Labor of New Jersey, on the protection of factory employees from accident and fire.

Resolutions adopted condemned the defective jury, said to be used to break strikes in West Virginia; favored the development of State universities on the Wisconsin extension idea; commended the movement for wider use of school buildings and urged their use for labor meetings; commended the work of the National Conservation Congress, and approved the participation by American Federation of Labor officers in its proceedings.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Nov. 25.—Samuel Gompers was re-elected President of the American Federation of Labor Saturday afternoon over Max Hayes, of the International Typographical Union. The vote was: Gompers, 11,974; Hayes, 5,074. It was the first time in 11 years that there had been opposition to Mr. Gompers, who has been re-elected annually since 1895.

The convention defeated the United Mine Workers' resolution calling for future elections by a referendum vote of the Federation's 2,000,000 members.

Seattle was chosen as the 1913 meeting place.

In the election the only contest other than that for the Presidency was over the Third Vice Presidency. James O'Connell, the incumbent, a member of the Machinists Union, defeated Wm. H. Johnston, President of the International Brotherhood of Machinists by 10,839 to 6,176.

Then the convention re-elected all the other officials by acclamation. The Vice Presidents are James Duncan, John Mitchell, James O'Connell, Dennis G. Hayes, William D. Huber, Joseph F. Valentine, John R. Alpine and H. B. Perham. Secretary Frank Morrison and Treasurer John B. Lennon were re-elected.

The following were named as delegates to the British Trades Union Congress, which meets in Manchester, England, in September, 1913:

Charles L. Bains of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union, and Jacob Kemper, of the Brewery Workers.

William J. McGorigy, of the Wood and Metal Laborers' Union, was designated the delegate to the Labor Congress, which meets in Montreal in September, 1913.

Late Saturday night the convention was thrown into tremendous excitement when "Big Bill" Haywood, leader of the Industrial Workers of the World, entered the rear of the hall and assaulted J. Mahlon Barnes.

The attack was witnessed from the chair by President Gompers. He startled the delegates by shouting: "Stop, Bill! Haywood has just assaulted a delegate."

The Bill! Haywood has just assaulted a delegate."

Haywood was captured in Lincoln Monument square, one block away, and pummelled severely before the police effected his rescue. Haywood pleaded with the officers to take him anywhere except to Convention Hall. He said his life would be in danger if he returned there. Barnes, the man assaulted, was campaign manager for Debs, the Socialist candidate for President in the recent campaign.

A resolution passed by the Massachusetts State Federation of Labor declaring that the Legislature pass a bill calling for a Saturday half-holiday without loss of pay the year round for all laborers and mechanics in the employ of the commonwealth.

We have no desire to venture into the field of prophecy with Prof. Hart. But whether the election of a Socialist President by the year 1925 is a possibility or not, one thing is certain—namely, that the old political organizations are now being closely watched by the wage-earning masses, who do not know so much regarding the Socialist theory of government but who do feel a constantly strengthening resolve to get rid somehow of the burden that special privilege puts upon them. And a mass of them inline to think that the Socialist party deserves a trial—election or defeat—to (and underground connection with) the privileged classes than any other party now existing. If the old parties wish to increase their voting strength they only need to show to voters of every class that they deserve the public confidence and that absolute Socialistic government is not necessary to establish either prosperity or social justice.

HIS DESERT ISLAND

Captain Barnabas Fish was rowing in out to the breakwater, where the little bluefish were running in multitudes.

He bent to the oars and pulled with a long, even stroke, every exhalation of his deep breaths being marked by a little puff of blue smoke. Suddenly he looked up at me with twinkling eyes and spoke between his clinched teeth.

"I'll bet I know what you're thinking about, Miss Telham," he declared.

"Well?" I inquired skeptically.

"I do was changeable one in a puffing donkey engine, eh?" he grinned.

I shrugged and evaded the accusation.

"You're not so very little Captain Barnabas," I said hastily.

"He, he, he!" he laughed down deep in his throat and I realized that I must more had the captain exercised his almost uncanny powers of telepathy.

"You shall tell us a good story in return for that, Captain Barnabas," I said as he brought the boat skillfully around to the most advantageous spot to the fishing ground.

"I got to think up one, then," said he, plumping the anchor overboard and adding the cable along the forearm. Big as he was, the old captain stopped around the small craft as agilely as one of the cats that infested the wharves on the beach.

As he arranged the lines and tilted the bucket I looked curiously around at the encircling bluffs, wooded to their summits and faced with heavy yellow sand near the bobby beach.

"Ready!" called the captain hastily, and I reached forward and took the baited line from his hand and loosed it overboard. All around us were anchored other small boats whose occupants were industriously pulling in the hungry bluefish.

When harbor bines ago, running all Quiloe Island to redoubt, flying fish at the dinner hour.

Captain Barnabas dredged his line over, and immediately it was hauled in and then quivered suggestively. He began to pull in with a gratified smile dreading his leathery chin.

"You got a whale on there, cap'n," called a neighboring fisherman.

"What are bugs?" sang out another.

"Belay there!" retorted the captain, his grin changing to a frown as he yanked away over a large mullet, which, at the moment of landing, snapped the line and disappeared beneath the troubled waters.

At a sobering laugh run around at the captain's expense, and his hearty "Ho, ho, ho!" was the loudest of all. When he peered under the line I felt a mite sit my own and pulled in a wriggling little bass, which the captain promptly removed.

"This is a good time to begin the story," he intimated when we were comfortably settled once more.

"Lemme see," he mused, pushing the weather hat back from his head and artfully coiling his pipe in the other hand. "Something about that there skeleton I just caught makes me think of Ananias, Shiloe's whale."

"I'm rather sorry it's an Ananias story, captain."

"Why?" Again his eyes twinkled at me.

"Oh, because—"

He laughed heartily. "That's an insinuation against Ananias Shiloe, whose name is against him and—"

"He certainly lives up to it, captain."

"He, he! Of course I've described Ananias Shiloe to you before, and you know he was little and mean looking, with pop eyes and a light hair beard. I mean his hair was light also, what there was of it, and, come to think of it, it wasn't overloaded, with common sense and he had a most unpleasant smile and a hand that was cold and damp like a dead fish.

"When he was my first mate aboard the old Indus he used to sit aft with me and tell stories, the greatest yarns you ever did hear. I never did see a man who had so many wonderful adventures as did Ananias Shiloe and would tell them so straight-faced there like truth than fiction, sisher. Well, one night when we was bouncered bound from Akkoo we sat out, under the southern cross and watched the glimmering phosphorescent waves, and as a little spker breeze came along on its way from some little south Pacific island Ananias folded his arms and tilted back against the rail.

"Says he: 'This reminds me of the time I was wrecked hereabouts. Want to hear about it?'

"'Yes,' says I. And so he begin.

"'It was on my first voyage to sea, and I was a young fellow and everything was new to me. We was on our way to China when the ship got afire and all hands scooped in the boats, all except me. I was—

"'I'll bet you was scooping around the cabin to see if the captain had left any loose money behind or something like that,' I chipped in, but Ananias only gave me one of them murderous smiles and went on with his yarn.

"'I was still upon the ship when it struck on the breakwater, where the little bluefish were running in multitudes.

"'Ahoy, there!' I cries, and I see a couple of boats with men in 'em a-rowing for the ship. I was all right, then, but I suddenly remembered that there was some powder left. There wasn't enough to explode the ship, and so they got a little preserves and grabbed a box of biscuits and a can of fresh water and kept overboard. After I got out of danger the ship went down, and there I was in the south Pacific sitting in a dugout with nothing but a piece of canvas thrown over me and not even a bit of plank to use as an oar.

"'Well,' says I, 'this is a fine sea was calm, and the tub just bobbed along in an oily kind of way, kind of whistling around and chasing its tail.

"'Then I got hungry and thirsty and dizzy. Without nothing to get nowhere, I didn't know where I might be, and, well, on a whole I was thinking about it I just went off to sleep, and in the morning when I woke up there was something comfy against a kind of steep, sandy bank, while palm trees rustled overhead and monkeys chattered at me from the branches.

"'Of course I scrambled ashore and pulled the tub up on the beach and found it was a small island, and—but that's what it was. It was only about fifty feet long and thirty feet wide, and there were only five palm trees on it and three monkeys and a lizard tree and one that bore bread fruit. The soil was sandy, but void of sponge, or more like rubber, but there wasn't a skin of fresh water, except some that was gathered in cocoanut shells by the monkeys. Did I say there was a cocoanut tree? asked Ananias hastily.

"'You did not mention it, but never mind so long as you brung it in on time,' I says.

"'Well,' he scowled at me, 'how long do you think I lived on that island, cocoanuts?'

"'An unlikely length of time, Ananias,' says I coolly.

"'I'm not expecting you to believe it,' says he, scowling and mad. 'A man that wasn't always a deep sea sailor, if he had most of the seagoing lingo down his bay, I guess ain't seen such enough strange adventures to appreciate the marvels of—of—' He looked around for the proper word.

"'The marvels of invention, Ananias?' I asked slyly. 'I expect there's some sailors out of their depth in some of the sea selling codfish in a grocery store than you, Ananias.' I've told Ananias since used to be a clerk in a grocery store.

"He stared coldly at me and twisted his mouth into another horrible smile.

"'As I was saying,' he went on sourly, 'I stayed on that island three weeks before the great spinner of the sea sent me a sail.

"'Jonah was hove up in less time then that,' I chipped in, but he took no notice of me.

"'One morning just at daybreak the island quivered from stem to stern, and a mighty wave swept over it and washed completely over it. I would have been drowned only I clung to the branches of a tree, and before another wave came I was up in the tree among the branches out of danger. Next thing I saw was the stub tub afloat, and in it was the three monkeys as big as life, and they were rare enough to take a bunch of bananas along with 'em. They bobbed out of sight astern, and it happened so suddenly I didn't realize the situation. Then it dawned upon me that that island was racing along through the water at about ten knots. The water was washing over her and sluicing the sand right off. One by one the palm trees went over as the soil disappeared, and at last there was nothing left on the island except the banana tree where I was perched, and the bunch of nuts and shells around the roots was growing smaller every minute.

"'There the sand had washed off the ground was black and hard and oily looking, and the island rolled and wallowed in the sea like a log in the whals, and so I wasn't a bit surprised when all of a sudden there spouted into the air a jet of water, and I knew certain. Every minute I was afraid that whale would dive and carry me with it to Davy Jones' locker, but then I think it was waiting for the banana tree to go. It would be free then.

"'All at once I heard a shout, and, looking ahead, I could see that we were driving straight up on to a sandy beach a-reel one time. Some captains and men were shouting and shaking their fists at the whale astern. Then there was a mighty flap, and we went out of the water, the whale curving like a jelly, and the banana tree with me in it went sliding off to the ground.

"'That's all there is to it. The whale dead and all the white men on the island had patched up a theory about the whale might my story only substantiated. Hanging from one of his teeth was a short length of anchor chain nearly broken at the lower end. One of the links had caught in his tooth, and before the chain was broken it had come in dinner, I guess. Mine for mine.'

"Ananias stopped and looked at me with a queer smile, maybe a bit anchor on the bottom. 'Or,' you can call, capo, but I stood upon the very summit of a volcano or perhaps on the top layer of some island that was in the making. Anyhow, I was satisfied that beld that whale anchored there till the chain parted. All he had to do was to drift in Davy Jones' locker, but the food was certain right in. Of course I was not certain right in. If course I was not and then birds brought seeds, and the trees grew. Isn't it?

"'How about those monkeys?' I asked carefully, because I was mad Ananias should think I was that simple to believe his yarns. 'I s'pose the birds brought them too?'

"'Yes,' says Ananias, eying me fiercely, 'I expect they was cast adrift same as I was!'

"'In a whale's fish, most likely,' I add getting up and knocking out my pipe against the rail. That seemed to be his favorite monkey transportation for Ananias Silas', and I went below.

Captain Barnabas looked down at the pile of silvery bluies that filled the big basket we had brought and remarked in a sad tone. "Most time to quit, I suppose there was a lot more of 'em," he added, "but I'm afraid I'm not much of a fisherman."

SIRIUS. THE DOG STAR.

It Gives Out Thirty Times More Light and Heat Than Our Sun.

The dog days are the hottest part of the year, a period which the ancients associated with the helacal rising of Sirius, the dog star—that is, when Sirius and our sun are crossed the meridian at the same time in midsummer. The great heat was supposed to extend from several days before the rising of Sirius until several days after; hence the total dog days were forty. The Romans dated the period from July 3 to August 11.

The dog days can be no longer identified with the rising of Sirius owing to the effects of precession, the slow yearly change of position of the vernal equinox, which now occurs in midwinter. At present the dog days are popularly supposed to extend from July 15 to Aug. 25, but are not associated with the star. This is the hottest and most sultriest period in our latitude.

Sirius, the dog star, may be easily recognized, so he is for times brighter than any other star to our firmament. He gives out thirty times more light and heat than our own sun, but is 35,000 times further away. He now lies about fifty degrees south of due east and in our latitude is with us from October to May. In October he is in full view for ten hours every clear night.—Christian Herald.

Knowledge and Culture.

A great memory does not make a philosopher any more than a dictionary can be called a grammar. There are men who embrace in their minds a very enormous mass of facts, but who have no ability about their real relations to word each other. These may be antiquarians, simulists, naturalists, they may be learned in the law; they may be versed in statistics; they are most useful in their own places. They are worthy of honor, and undeserving of blame. Still there is nothing in such attainments to guarantee the absence of narrowness of mind. They are nothing more than well read men or men of information they have not what specially deserves the name of culture of mind or fulfills the type of liberal education.—Newman.

An Observing Boy.

Little Boy (who has just seen his mother dismiss the servant for staying away from home the previous night five or six hours without leave)—Mamma, wasn't it very wrong in Mary to stay out so late? Mamma (indignantly)—Yes, Charlie, and very impudent, too. She was. But I won't keep such a person in my house. Little Boy—When are you going to dismiss papa? —

PASTOR RUSSELL'S VIEWS

Churches of All Denominations and the Civil Powers of Earth Are About to Unite in Common Cause—Powerful Influence Preparing For the Battle of Armageddon—A Reign of Anarchy Will Be the Result of the Warfare Until The Messiah Takes Control.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Nov. 3.—The Brooklyn Academy of Music was crowded to the limit today to hear Pastor Russell discourse on the "Battle of Armageddon." His text was: "He gathered them together unto a place called in the Hebrew tongue Armageddon." (Revelation xvi, 16.) Armageddon is the Hebrew signification of the word "Har-Magedon," the "Hill of Megiddo," or Mount of Destruction. It is famous as a battlefield in Old Testament times.

The Lord has seen fit to associate the battle Armageddon, with the great controversy between Truth and Error, right and wrong, God and Mammon, with which the Age will come, perish, and the New Age of Messiah's glory be ushered in. He has purposely made slightly symbolical the language of the last book of the Bible, evidently with a view to hiding certain important truths until the time for their revealment. But even in the dim time the Bible mentions no "None of the wicked shall understand" (Daniel xii, 9, 10—none who are out of heart harmony with God—but only the wise of His people—the "elect virgin" class of the Master's parable.

I have long avoided presentation of my understanding of our text and its context, but I take it up now by request and because I believe it is due time to be understood. Liberalism and apostate Romanism, in various degrees, are the views agree with those of other Bible students, and in other respects they disagree. Even the Higher Critics, who own judgment, do his own Bible study and reach his own conclusions.

Kindly remember that I am not responsible for the flights of speech used by the Lord. My interpretations do not need confidence in the inspiration of instructions which we have all never erred and which endorse good people of good sense and good heart. God's saintly people in these various institutions, being comparatively few, are ignored when reckoning as a whole are blind with to prophecy.

The Dragon, Beast, False Prophet.

Our present text tells us that the pure spirits—deceptive—will go forth from the mouths of the Dragon, the Beast and the False Prophet, and these three will be empowered, and symbolical by the doctrines are represented by "Frogs." They are to gather the kings of the whole earth and the whole world to the battle of Armageddon.

The ecclesiastical kings and princes, and their retinues of clergy and false, fal adherents, will be gathered in solid phalanx—Protestant and Catholic. The kings and supreme of industry, and as many as can be induced to join them, will be gathered to the same side. The political kings and princes, with all their mechanical and financial allies, will follow in line on the same side. The financial kings and merchant princes, and all whom they can influence by the most gigantic power ever yet exercised in the world, will join the same side, according to the Bible.

These "doctrines of demons," represented by the "Frogs," will lead many noble people in this great army to do some an attitude quite contrary to their preferences. For a time the wheels of liberty and progress will be turned backward and medieval principles will be considered necessary for self-protection—for the maintenance of the present order of things.

In giving this interpretation, it is necessary for us to indicate what is symbolized by the Dragon, the Beast, and the False Prophet. Bible students of nearly all denominations agree with us that the "Dragon" of Revelation represents the purely Civil Power. Protestant interpreters generally agree that the "Beast the 2 leopard" (Revelation xiii, 2) represents the Papacy. But here still, as we have already shown to support our view that Protestantism is the "Image of the Beast" (Revelation xiii, 15) in its present form of ecclesiastic. "The False Prophet." We urge no one to accept our interpretation, nor shall we think hard of any who refuse it. We will neither evader nor otherwise injure them now, nor threaten them with eternal torture. They have the same right to their views that I have, and the same right to make them known to others. And in forming our views we have given no preference to any class, but have sought to find the truth as their interpretations of our text.

"Unclean Spirits Like Frogs."

The symbolisms of Scripture, dimly understood, are always forceful. When the Holy Spirit used a "frog" to symbolically represent certain doctrines or teachings, we may be sure the true application will fit well. A frog has a sage look, a wise look. It swells itself up in an eminent endeavor to impress the beholder. Its great mouth well represents its utter power, used to croak.

Applying these symbols, we learn that an evil spirit, influence, teaching will come from the Protestant churches, followers from the Catholic, and those from the Civil authorities, all in full agreement. The spirit of all will be beautiful, an air of superior wisdom and knowledge will be proudly assumed—all will croak in harmony. All will tell of fine results that would follow honoring the interests of God in the present and the future life, if their counsel be not followed. However evil the results may be, the differences will be ignored in the general proposition that nothing sinister must be disturbed by, or indeed into, or repudiated.

The Divine authority of the Church, and the Divine right of kings, said the Church, will not be allowed to conflict. Any persons or teachings in conflict with these beautiful and unselfish principles must be suppressed as everything vile, at the mouths of these "Frogs" speaking from pulpits and platforms, through the press and from all secular areas. The nobler small heads of some will be strangled by the Satisfactory to the civil power, which spoke through Columbus, the high priest, respecting Jesus. As Caiaphas declared it was better that one should suffer a crime in violation of justice, human and Divine to be rid of Jesus and His teachings, so the "Frogs" would suppress at every violation of principle necessary to their self-protection.

The strangling of these "frog" spirits or doctrines will gather the kings and princes, financial, political, religious and financial into one great army. The spirit of fear, inspired by the croakings of these "frogs," will sustain the passion of the powers, and they will prosecute war to fury, desperation. In their blind following of these evil spirits, evil doctrines, they will be ready to sacrifice life and everything on the altar of what they mistakenly suppose is justice, truth and righteous principles and Divine arrangement.

For a brief time, as we understand the Scriptures, these combined forces of Protestantism will triumph. Free speech, free music and other liberties which have come to be the very essence of the nineteenth day, will be ruthlessly shut off under the pies of necessity, the glory of God, the maintenance of the Bible, etc. All will seem to be serene, until the great social explosion in our context described as the "great earthquake" (Revelation xvi, 18) in symbolic language, signifies social revolution, and the declaration of the context is that no one like it ever before occurred. (Revelation xvi, 18, 19). Jesus described it as a time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation.—Matthew xxiv. 21.

The Lord Will Gather Them.

The false, fraudulent reactions will gather together into one host the great, the rich, the wise, the scorned and the kings of the earth, to battle. At this juncture the Prince of Peace will forward, and our text tells us that He shall gather the garnished hosts to Armageddon, for the battle of their destruction. The very thing which they sought to avert by their union, federation, etc., will be the very thing that will fasten. Other Scriptures tell us that God will be represented by the Great Michael, the Prince who shall be on the side of the masses. Thus we read in Daniel xii, 1: "At that time shall Michael [Jesus] stand up, the great prince which standeth for the children of thy people." He will take possession of His Kingdom in a manner that will be for the many of those who erroneously have been claiming that they were His Kingdom, and subsequently He will begin to reign in His name and in His stead.

Jesus declared, "He screens ye are not of this world, neither would My servants, my incidental skirmishings in the battlefield before crossed each other's paths. God has provided a means in Europe, insurance, Trust and Corporations in America, have shaken public confidence. Journalistic frauds carried by turns on employees and on employers, have further shaken confidence and tended to make all distrustful of the other. Bitter and angry feelings on both sides are more and more manifested. The rise of better and daily becoming more distinctly marked. Nevertheless Armageddon cannot yet be found. Other matters intervened, according to prophecy.

Gentile times have still two years to run. The "times of the feast" of our context must yet receive life—power. The image must be transformed from a mere mechanism to a living force. Protestant Federation realizes that its organization will still be futile unless it receive stimulation from the clergy directly or indirectly shall be recognized as possessed of apostolic ordination and authority to teach. This the prophecy indicates will come from the two horned beast, which, we believe, symbolically represents the Church of England. High-handed activities of Protestantism and Catholicism, operating in conjunction for the suppression of human liberties, await this vivifying on the image, one may come, but Armageddon cannot precede it, but must follow—perhaps a year after it, according to our view of the Prophecy from another thing intervenes. Although the Jews are gradually flowing into Palestine, gradually obtaining control of the land of Canaan, and although reports say that already nine ten millionaires are there, nevertheless prophecy requires an unlikely larger number of wealthy Hebrews to be there before the Armageddon crisis be reached. Indeed we understand that "Jacob's trouble" in the Holy Land will come at the very close of Armageddon. Then Jacob's Kingdom will begin to be manifested Theocratic Israel in the land of promise will gradually rise from the ashes of the past to the grandeur of prophecy. Through the Divinely appointed prince, Messiah's Kingdom, all-powerful but invisible, will begin to roll away the curse and so lift up mankind.

UNCLE JAKE DIDN'T AGREE.

The Old Man Upholds His Reputation For Being Contrary.

"Uncle Jake" was one of the characters of Bentley; the sort of character as a post—who is united to be and to continue as a bundle of sticks. One of the telephone wags into his yard one day and said: "Uncle Jake, I'd like to borrow your wagon this morning. I'm having a spring moving."

"I would like to spek kinder," replied Uncle Jake. "I don't hear very well, and I don't like to lend my wagon anyhow."

Uncle Jake was an expert maker of ax helves—an occupation in which there is more art than the uninitiated have any conception, and Uncle Jakeley be left at the village store by so soft an commission. One sharp day, as Uncle Jake was sunning himself in front of the store, another old fellow who was known as Uncle Dorcas sauntered to the same bandstand. Said the latter:

"I'll treat the crowd if I don't make Uncle Jake agree to the first thing I say. I'll bet a dime I can do it."

"Don't be rash, Uncle Dorcas!" called out the storekeeper. "That never happened yet, and it isn't likely to."

But Uncle Dorcas merely grinned and picked up one of Uncle Jake's ax helves. Then he walked up to Uncle Jake.

"Jake," said Uncle Dorcas, running his fingers up and down the smooth wood, "this is a mighty good ax handle."

"No, it ain't," replied Uncle Jake at once. "I can make good handles, but that one you've got in the kind people have to split before they can use it."

And Uncle Dorcas treated the company to rainbows, rockers and cheese.—Youth's Companion.

COURT ETIQUETTE.

Multy Millions Frustrated If and Lost His Diplomats Past.

A witty New York society man said at a dinner, apropos of court etiquette and diplomatic usages, that after all the ordinary etiquette—the laws of common sense govern it.

"Why," he added, "how Multy Millions lost his under secretaryship at our legation in London? Multy declined to kiss the—the common sense was lamentably lacking.

"It happened years and years ago, when Multy Millions was a young man in the 60s, and Multy Millions was dining for the first time at Buckingham palace.

"The dinner was a state one. The splendid gold plate from Windsor Castle was on the table. Seated next to Multy, when the entrants came on, the dear Queen Alexandra said:

"'Do you like your new bone lying about, Mr. Millions?'

"'Four years, ma'am,' Multy replied in a loud voice, 'I have never enough of course, to speak high and to say ma'am.'

"'What? I did not hear,' said Queen Alexandra.

"'Four years, ma'am,' Multy shouted, 'I have never enough of it.'

"Then Multy leaned forward, and with a polite and amiable smile, he said to the queen of England for before Queen Alexandra's face.

"He resigned the next morning."—Exchange.

A Vicious Fish.

In South America there is a small fish that not only attacks the fishes of the sea and river, but is greatly dreaded by the natives, who during certain seasons have to bathe in streams in which the caribies are found. Bathers are often attacked by these fishes, and, when defending, by taking a bit from the flesh wherever they attack. They are perfect scavengers, eating the animals that float down the river—dead or alive.

The Beginning.

"How many state can you see?" she asked.

"Two more than you," he said.

"How do you make that out?" she asked.

"I can see your grace," he said.

And that was the beginning of it all.

The Reason.

Pastor Russell's Sermon

JESUS IS GOD'S GIFT TO HUMANITY

Misunderstanding of What Constitutes the Divine Penalty Far on... Has Misled Us in Respect to Every Feature of God's Program For Our Recovery From the Penalty—The Redeemer Different From the Fallen Race—Deliverance From Satan.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Nov. 24.—Pastor Russell of Brooklyn is here. We report one of his addresses from the text, "Thanks be unto God for His unspeakable Gift." (2 Cor. 9:15.) He said:

Jesus, our Savior, is God's great Gift. To appreciate the teaching of the Bible on this and every subject, we must handle the Word honestly, not deceitfully. We must recognize that our Lord Jesus is one person, and the Heavenly Father another person. Only thus can we appreciate how God could give His Son, and how Jesus could consent to be the Gift of God to man. As we have previously noted, the oneness between the Father and the Son is not that declared by the creeds, a oneness of person, but is that declared by our Master Himself, saying that He and the Father are one in the same sense that He desired all of His disciples, His followers, to be one—one in mind, in purpose, in will, in effort. "That they may be one, even as we are one"—John xvii. 21, 22.

Jesus is God's unspeakable Gift in that it is impossible to tell the riches of God's grace in this connection—the numberless blessings and mercies which are ours through Jesus. He represents to us the very fulness of every Divine provision for our eternal welfare. "In Him dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily" (Colossians ii, 9.) In a certain sense all of God's intelligent creatures are in His image and represent Him. Thus the angels and cherubim are Godlike, even Adam, made a little lower than the angels—of human nature—was an image of God, in the flesh—fully in harmony in every line of his character and both with the Divine character. Adam, bodily, represented God in the world.

But all these things, true of angels and of men, are still more true of Jesus; and the Scriptures tell us that He was the "Logos," the Father's Word or Messenger—Jehovah's active Agent in all the work of creation. "By Him were all things made that were made, and without Him was not one thing made." The Logos, the highest, the first, the Alpha and the Omega of Jehovah's Creation, became the Gift of God to man.

Nor was this Gift compulsory; rather, the Logos entered fully into the transaction. He had entire faith in the Heavenly Father's Wisdom, Justice, Love and Power; hence, when the proposition opened that He might leave the heavenly condition for an earthly condition, in which He would perform a great service pleasing to the Father and beneficial to man, the Logos delighted to do the Father's will. He was made flesh. The disciples and others beheld that He as a man was not as other men, but was "holy, harmless, undefiled and separate from sinners."

The Redeemer's difference from the fallen race is again declared in the statement: "A body hast Thou prepared Me for the suffering of death." The Scriptures declare that He took the same nature as the flesh that had sinned, in order that He might redeem sinners. But in His flesh was no sin. Otherwise, He could not have been our Redeemer. Only a sinless one could fill the Divine requirements and give in God a Ransom for Father Adam, the perfect man, thus redeeming his life from destruction and, at the same time, redeeming all of his family involved in sin through him.

"FREELY DELIVERED HIM UP."

God's Gift was not completed in merely arranging that His Son should temporarily become a man, our Redeemer. Indeed, the transfer of nature from the heavenly to the earthly was merely an incidental, made necessary by the Divine Law. "An eye for an eye; a tooth for a tooth; a man's life for a man's life." And so we read that the Father set before the Son "the great joy," the influence of which was to lead the Son cheerfully to endure the bitter experiences of His earthly life, as we read: "Who, for the joy that was set before Him, endured the cross, despising the shame."

This joy is intimated to have been: (1) the Father's pleasure in doing the Father's will; (2) the joy of bringing many sons to glory—the Church; (3) The pleasure and joy of being the world's Restorer, delivering them from the power of Satan, sin and death. These joys, commingling, were quite sufficient. The Redeemer endured such contradiction of sinners against Himself as, eventually, brought Him to the cross, saying, "Not My will, but Thy will, O Lord, be done." He realized that under the contract into which He had entered, in love to the Father, would issue His faithfulness "unto death, even the death of the cross." Wavering, also, God hath highly exalted Him, and given Him a name above every name—(Philippians ii, 8, 9.) Thus the Redeemer has attained this glorious exaltation to the Father's right hand—to the Divine nature, glory, honor and immortality—as the result of His faithfulness.

AN OPPOSITE COURSE FROM SATAN'S.

The Apostle, evidently, purposes to draw our attention to the difference between the course of Satan and that of the Logos in respect to loyalty and obedience to Jehovah. Satan proudly assumed that if he had a separate Empire he could manage it better than was the Divine arrangement. Lucifer, the morning star, said in his heart: "I will ascend above the stars (the other angels); I will be as the Most High (dictator, a ruler)." Pursuing this ambitious course, Satan beheld in our first parents a new order of beings, with procreative powers designed to bring into existence a race that would fill the earth. Lucifer aimed to be ruler over this human creation. He became a rebel against the Divine arrangement in so doing; he captured the first pair by his misrepresentations, and not only did he thus become the "prince of this world" (the present order of things), but additionally, as Jesus explained, he became the "murderer" of the race. (John viii, 44.) He has, indeed, had a reign of thousands of years, but with what horrible results! The whole creation is "groaning and travailing in pain," under the death sentence.

"MEDITATED NOT A USURPATION."

St. Paul intimates that although the Logos was still higher in glory and honor than Lucifer, in that He was "the Only Begotten," the chief representative of Jehovah, nevertheless He was humble. The Logos "meditated not a usurpation to be like God" (Philippians, ii, 6, Emphatic Diaglott.) On the contrary, he was very willing to accept the Divine proposal that He should take the lower nature of man for a time, in order to carry out the Father's Plan. How detestable the pride of Lucifer, afterwards called Satan! On the contrary, how beautiful is the humility exhibited by the Redeemer! He was loyal to the core. He would be the Father's Agent, His Word, Logos, mouthpiece. His pride should be, not in seeking self-advancement, but in glorifying the Father, and the Apostle points out that His faithfully and loyally carried it out to the conclusion of His course—in all things desiring the will of the Father who sent Him.

What an exhibition this was to all the holy angels! And did the Father permit Him to really suffer loss because of His loyalty, His faithfulness? Assuredly not! He was not left in death. He was raised from death. Neither was He left by the Father on the lower plane of human nature, which He took merely for the purpose of suffering death on man's behalf. On the contrary, the Father highly exalted Him and exhibited to angels and to men the character pleasing to Jehovah's sight. Pleasing the Only Begotten Son forever, Jehovah prophetically declares: "Let all the worshippers of God worship Him."

This same privilege has come to the Church. In response, the invitation to become joint-sacrificers with Christ, to walk in His steps, and to enter into a share of His glory, has been accepted by one after another of God's saints in people, from Pentecost until now. They have confidence that "He who brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus, that great Shepherd of the sheep," is both able and willing to bring them also, through Him, to eternal glory. As He walked the "narrow way," they have courage to walk in His steps. As He overcame, they have the encouragement of His promise that "His grace will be sufficient" for them.

To this class Jesus is God's unspeakable Gift. To these favored ones His footstep followers, the Savior is specially an unspeakable Gift of God. If as a Gift to the world His merit is beyond the power of tongue to tell, how much more so is He the unspeakable Gift to the Church—to the Elect! As the "Captain of their Salvation," He is leading forth these other sons of God, His younger brethren, to glory. —Hebrews ii, 10.

The Savior is an unspeakable Gift to the Church as the Bridegroom. The benefit of becoming His associate and joint-heir in all the glorious work of God throughout the Millennium, is an inspiration which makes the trials and difficulties of the way seem as nothing. Besides, we have the assurance of the Lord that it is subsequent Ages the Father will continue to show special riches of grace and loving kindness toward us who are in Christ Jesus. As our "Elder Brother," the Savior is an unspeakable Gift. Our interests are His interests; our welfare, His welfare. He is not ashamed in His footsteps which He invites us to take, and which He arranges for us, He has passed over before. We gladly walk in His steps.

As our great High Priest over the House of Sons, He is an unspeakable Gift. Through Him we are privileged to be the Royal Priesthood. Our offering to God and our little all, are made be unacceptable, because we are all by nature sinners, children of wrath, blemished. But our great High Priest's merit, imputed to our sacrifices makes them acceptable. As Christ's "members" we are privileged to "present our bodies living sacrifices, holy and acceptable to God." (Romans vii, 1.) From whatever viewpoint we look, the Savior is God's unspeakable Gift, especially to His Church.

OF GRACE, NOT OF JUSTICE.

Undoubtedly Justice must be recognized in respect to the Creator's dealings with all of His creatures. God, being the great Representative of the principle of Justice, continually holding it up before His creatures, and demanding their obedience to the Divine Law, surely could not be exempted from its operation Himself. To this the Scriptures agree, assuring us that "Justice is the foundation of His Throne." Our Creator's dealings with us have been in Love and Justice with our great Creator's dealings with humanity have continually involved us in difficulty. We were condemned by the unjust creeds of the world that the Creator had knowingly and willingly brought us into existence under such conditions that the great majority of mankind would spend an eternity in torture.

We were unable to see Justice in any such arrangement, yet feared to criticize our Creator, lest He should, if possible, do something still worse for us. But our reason balked at the proposition, while we desisted from criticizing the Creator. We could not endorse such a program, nor could we see it to be in harmony with the Divine regulations governing ourselves. If we are to love our enemies and be compassionate toward them, should more be expected of fallen beings than of our perfect Creator?

JUSTICE ALWAYS SATISFIED.

From the Divine standpoint the human family are all convicts, under death sentence, dead in trespasses and sins, wholly without rights or privileges. As the French Government, not unjustly, has allowed the medical profession to make experiments with condemned criminals under the sentence, to try upon them the effects of fear, poison, etc., so God not unjustly has allowed mankind, all under death sentence, to practise all kinds of evil upon one another, and to learn from each other great lessons respecting the exceeding sinfulness of sin and the terrible results of sin.

Justice merely exacts the penalty; but that penalty paid by Adam and his family left them hopeless respecting our future life. The worthy of everlasting life they died; and surely they become no more worthy while dead. None has any claim upon Justice. Adam at the very moment of his fall might have been smitten with a thunderbolt, without having any claim upon Justice; for he was under a death penalty. The fact that Justice allowed him to live for many years with a forfeited life meant not a waiving of the death penalty, but Divine liberality in respect to the execution of the criminal.

When, therefore, in the Bible God presents a hope of a future life through the death of His Son, His unspeakable Gift, it must not be understood as signifying obligation on God's part toward the sinner. It means mercy, grace. Nor does God ignore His own sentence and the justice of the case in the exercise of His mercy. His Law must stand. The death sentence must stand. Justice must be vindicated without a shadow of turning. Divine Mercy is ready to intervene by providing the unspeakable Gift.

"Herein was manifested the love of God," in that "He gave His Only Begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him might not perish, but have everlasting life;" as we have just seen, Adam and his race under the deadly sentence had perished, except as God from the beginning foreknew His intention to send His Son into the world for human Redemption—His unspeakable Gift. This Redemption, when finished, will fully have satisfied the claims of Divine Justice—not only as respects the little company now being selected—the Bride, the Wife of Christ—but ultimately also as respects the "sins of the whole world." This is a Gift, then, pure and simple, not called for by any obligation, but merely prompted by Divine Love.

DIVINE LOVE AND JUSTICE CO-OPERATE.

After the unspeakable Gift shall have been made applicable to the whole world of mankind in the beginning of Messiah's reign, Divine Wisdom will insist that, although the Redeemer may give to all mankind every opportunity possible for recovery from sin and death, and every assistance possible for Restitution, nevertheless, sin shall have eternal death except as perfect beings in heart harmony with the Creator. Therefore the work of Messiah's Kingdom will be to deliver humanity from sin and death, and to give opportunity for all to return to harmony with the Father; and any who will not so do, Justice will insist shall be destroyed in the "Second Death," Against such a decision, Divine Wisdom, Love and Power will offer no objection, nor will any redemption be effected for their willful sin.

"THANKS BE UNTO GOD."

The Scriptures declare that the world knows not God, and that only the eyes of the consecrated Church are open to behold the "Love of God, which passeth understanding." This class only, therefore, is in any sense prepared to give thanks to God now for the unspeakable Gift. Their thanks go up, not only in words, but also in actions, which "speak louder than words." These thanks ascend as sweet incense to God on His throne, and mercies abound in all spiritual things toward those who are in Christ Jesus.

By and by, "All the blind eyes will be opened and all the deaf ears will be unstopped." Then the whole world of mankind, including those awakened from the sleep of death, during Messiah's reign, will be in a condition to recognize God's unspeakable Gift and to render thanks. When the willful evildoers shall have been destroyed, "Every knee will bow and every tongue will confess, to the glory of God." Then every creature in heaven and on earth and in the sea shall be heard saying, "Praise, glory, honor, dominion and might be unto Him that sitteth on the Throne, and unto the Lamb, forever," for the unspeakable Gift.

Appreciations

Tennessee, Nov. 26.

Have renewed my subscription to your paper and take this opportunity of expressing my appreciation.

In these busy days it is essential that we have our needs supplied in condensed or concentrated form, and in a clean, attractive manner and clear type.

We find, in the Labor Tribune, the nearest approach to these conditions of any labor paper coming to me or us. Labor News headed in such a way as to give confidence in the reliability. Other features which appeal to interest of others in the family circle are also well taken care of. I can truly state that I have read the real value of your paper to me is in the space given to religious topics.

If there ever has been a time when we needed all the comfort, all the encouragement, all the wisdom possible, now is the time.

I have been deeply impressed by the expressed opinion of many whom I have talked with—business men, professional men, and those in the more humble walks of life, and it seems to be the general thought that some great universal change in the existing condition is imminent.

Very many are apprehensive of the future, many fearful, particularly those who find the struggle to exist growing harder year by year. Therefore it is my thought that no paper can do a grander work for labor's being selected—by the Bride—for making known through the Sermons, Bible Studies, Conventions and the Sunday School Lesson, the wonderful change for the better, so close at hand, and which will be most assuredly taking in bringing this about.

As long as these Sermons continue in the paper, so long it is my purpose to have my name on your subscription list and to add others to it.

Yours very truly,
A. LYLE.

Minnesota, Nov. 26.

As my dear friend and companion, the Labor Tribune, has come to me each month I have sent in my renewal through the Watch Tower Publishing Company, but this month I have sent it direct, as I have found so many reasonable and Scriptural explanations of texts that was a mystery to me, I could not understand, and which was told were a mystery, and that which I have never answered for in the textbook of by-faith (Lutheran Language). It is needless for me to say that we enjoy these discourses very much, and we trust you will see your way clear to publish the same in the future.

My subscription will be forwarded through the Bible Society at 12-17 Hicks street, Brooklyn, N. Y. If you do not receive same in the course of several weeks, please advise.

Yours truly,
A. C. KRUEGER.

While sending you inclosed subscription for your much valued paper, will take the opportunity to express my further appreciation of your efforts to give your readers the matter that will be most helpful to each and all. Many of us are taking the Tribune because of its many contributions to our spiritual sahperment and yet I am sure that most of these note with much approval, the clear and straightforward manner in which the Tribune discusses the questions of general interest. On other hand, those who see in the Tribune only its staunch loyalty to the cause of labor, must surely approve of your endeavor to give them something that will assist in their moral conscience, along with the more material questions of the hour. And so we all join heartily in one with a determination to help whatever aid we can to increase the Tribune's circulation and thus widen its influence for good.

I wish to express my appreciation of your valuable paper. I am taking it solely for the religious features, Pastor Russell's Sermons, Sunday School Lessons, Question Box, etc. I take great pleasure in sending it to others that their too many receive a blessing. Best wishes for you in your grand work of spreading the glad tidings. May the Lord bless all good done. Time shall be to all people.

Yours sincerely,

I wish to express to you my appreciation of your excellent paper. All its features are good, but I think which appeals to me especially is the religious feature, particularly the Sermons of Pastor Russell. The Question Box is also very helpful and the large, clear type makes easy reading. You are truly doing a glorious work in spreading the Truth.

Through the loving kindness of a brother in present Truth, I am receiving the Labor Tribune which I greatly appreciate, that is, I appreciate the advice and guidance of unseasoned love, also I am well pleased with the Tribune with all of its educational features in enlightening the world.

For the poor laborer, like myself, who can never hope for independence or wealth under the present order of things, this gospel of love and of the near coming of the Kingdom of Heaven gives me cheer and hope and drives away despair in this strenuous battle for life.

knowledge that you are helping the Lord's cause and proclaiming His Kingdom.

Although I am a subscriber to the Watch Tower and am partial to it as a religious journal, still I am never fully satisfied except by reading a snappy up-to-date sermon on Divine Truth.

Now then, since the National Labor Tribune publishes just such a Sermon each week, it furnishes a form as to enhance the pleasure of reading, please permit it to be a weekly visitor at time for at least a period of one year and oblige.

Sincerely yours,
MISS THERESA PETERSON.

Maryland, Nov. 23.

I am renewing my subscription to your valuable paper which I have so much enjoyed the year past. I trust you will continue to give us the same good spiritual food in the year to come. I assure you of my hearty appreciation of your paper, especially the Sermons, which you are giving so much space to. Praying the Lord's richest blessings on those Sermons as they go forth through the many newspapers weekly.

Very sincerely yours,
MRS. A. BOPP.

TRUE BEAUTY.

"Beautiful hands are they that do,
The work of the noble, good and true;
Busy for them the long day through,
Beautiful hands are they that wear
The light of a pleasing spirit there.
It matters little if dark or fair,
Eager to aid the needy or sad,
Are the precious souls who love the right."

I am still enjoying the many good features of your paper.

For Bible Studies and Labor News in general it is certainly the paper par excellence.

I admire the stand you have taken in giving so much space to these independent Scripture Studies, and I pray the Lord of the harvest to reward you in His own good time.

Very respectfully,

Your paper has now been a constant visitor at our home for about five years, and while we enjoy living by faith when you fairly and squarely place before your subscribers the cause of both labor and capital, we feel it is only delight with the way in which you are giving publicity to the Sermons of Pastor Russell. Although members of Lutheran, I have found many reasonable and Scriptural explanations of texts that was a mystery, I could not understand, and which was told were a mystery, and that which I have never answered for in the textbook of by-faith (Lutheran language). L. G. ROVERSON.

Washington, Nov. 22.

A few months ago a friend made me a present of a year's subscription to the Labor Tribune. It is certainly a fine present to give anybody, especially anybody who is deeply interested in the uplift of mankind. The Labor Tribune is a well printed paper which is doing its share in holding up the principles of the Great Teacher before the world. He died to redeem and will soon return and bless with a restitution of all things. Acts 3: 19-21. I especially enjoy Pastor Russell's Sermons, the Question Box and Sunday School Lessons. I like to pass the good tidings on to others who may be suffering for the Truth. I am sure many of my people have allowed the God of this present evil world to blind their minds with prejudice, a dangerous poison invented by the devil.

But I am glad he is soon to be bound and those who have been in bondage to him will be blessed in the glorious Millennial Kingdom. So I bid the Labor Tribune God-speed in the good work it is doing. Romans 2: 10.

Yours in the Truth,
GEO. R. MAYNARD.

We much appreciate the way in which you publish the writing of Pastor Russell and in deed we prefer your paper to all the secular newspapers publishing the sermons. We have recommended it to a number of our friends who have since subscribed for it.

With best wishes for the continuance of this good work, I remain,
Sincerely,
MRS. J. TOUTJIAN.

Kansas, Nov. 21.

I am sending by the way and through the International Bible Students a renewal of my own subscription to your paper, and I prompt more to other friends as I appreciate your good paper. The Sunday School Lessons and the Question Box and the Sermons all so much in one paper. I thank you and pray the Lord in publishing so much of the good things abroad and I don't want to miss one of the papers. Thanking you for the timely warning that my subscription was about out.

TRIBUNE APPRECIATIONS.

Arkansas, Nov. 21.

Being a constant reader of your most excellent paper, I take pleasure in saying that no paper that reaches my reading table is more welcome or affords me a greater intellectual and moral feast than the Tribune. It is not a miracle, but it is at least marvelous that the columns of the secular press are open word wide for the promulgation of ideas purporting of righteousness which are now due to the world for its general uplift in the Millennial age.

Colonel T. R. Roosevelt, the world's great progressive, has well said, "We stand at Armageddon." When asked to interpret his meaning, he replied in substance, we are fighting the last grand battle between right and wrong. The most casual observer whether he be atheist, infidel, Jew or Christian, optimist or pessimist, can read between the lines of national affairs that anarchy, the impending doom and downfall of the nations. The word of Jehovah is out that the kingdoms of this world shall become as the chaff of the summer threshing floor which the wind carries away, and that no place shall be found for them anymore. Never before in the history of the world has the great sea of humanity been in such a hurry to see this prophecy fulfilled.

The great Titanic world must soon founder upon the false rocks of our own despotic constitution. We are even now on the treacherous lagoons where the great sea is lashed into a white foam of restless frenzy and the breakers roar of death. Selfishness is as supremely rampant in the vast army of wage workers as in the ranks of the rich capitalistic combines, mergers and trusts.

Nearly two thousand years ago a voice of warning rang out to wanton souls upon the Galilean hills, thus saying, "Go to now ye rich men, weep and howl for your miseries that shall come upon you. Your riches are corrupted, and your garments are moth eaten. Your gold and silver is cankered and the rust of them shall be a witness against you and shall eat your flesh as it were fire." The prophet treasures together for the last days. Behold the hire of the laborers who have reaped down your fields which is of you kept back by fraud crieth, and the cries of them which have reaped are entered into the ears of the Lord of Sabbath. Ye have lived in pleasure on the earth and been wanton. Ye have nourished your hearts in a day of slaughter. Ye have condemned and killed the just and he doth not resist you."

Well, we have not yet reached the Rust period of Capital. The incessant demands of labor for better hours and more pay will vary soon be met by capital with the reply, "We do not have to run our mines, mills and factories. We have plenty laid up in the vaults and banks to keep us over the rainy days of our lives and we will just shut down our machinery and run unmolested discontented men who are can get your living the best way you can." It is the rust of capitalistic inactivity that will precipitate the crisis. Half fed, half naked men and women and children will have money, living in sweat shops, would be an army desperate to meet. They would be a irresistible as the ocean waves. In fact, the Apostle Luke, compares the end to the last days to the rainy days of our lives and we will just shut down our machinery and run unmolested discontented men who are can get your living the best way you can." It is the rust of capitalistic inactivity that will precipitate the crisis.

Half fed, half naked men and women and children will have money, living in sweat shops, would be an army desperate to meet. They would be a irresistible as the ocean waves. It is the rust of capitalistic inactivity that will precipitate the crisis.

The day is not far distant when labor will demand a rebate of all the money it paid out in defending itself against the merciless capitalistic mills of capital. When the shoe is on the foot of labor, capital will have to foot the bill, and it will run up into the millions. The social unrest grows apace. Nations are ripening before the awful situation. Kings, Emperors, Czars, Presidents, Senators, Representatives, Lawyers, Statesmen and Journalists are pointing headlong into the abyss of anarchy. And what wonder if the people follow them? Never before in the history of the world, have the people been so imperative in demanding their natural rights. Never was there more determined efforts in the mind of their oppressors than those rights of the people shall not be conceded. The love of money is the root of all evil which capitalists having coveted after will pierce themselves through with many sorrows.

When Columbus was trying to discover the new world, he found on a certain island a shingle stuck down supposed to have been set there by explorers, with this inscription upon it, "Hic Finxuiter" meaning, "Here Columbus scratched out the Ns and wrote Finnally—something beyond. So far as good government is concerned, we are having a government landslide into the sea of anarchy. We have just had a phenomenal Democratic land slide. Wilson has been elected by an overwhelming majority over all opposing candidates. With a Democratic President, House and Senate, the people will expect much but they will no doubt be worse disappointed than ever before in all their lives. When cruelly mocked by the money power, they will become desperate.

The prophet Daniel has briefly outlined the whole situation in a few words. "And at that time shall Michael stand up, the great prince which standeth for the children of thy people, and there shall be a time of trouble such, as there never was since there was a nation even to that same time, and at that time, thy people shall be delivered, every one that shall be found written in the book. And many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake; some to everlasting life and some to shame (Craigsilas), and everlasting contempt. And they that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars, forever and forever."

The midnight ages and the French Revolution pale into insignificance before this oncoming time of trouble. The prophet Jeremiah describes this day of trouble as follows, "The sound of the Lord shall be at that day from one end of the earth to the other end of the earth. They shall not be gathered, lamented nor buried. They shall be dung upon the earth. Again the prophet breaks out as if in extreme anguish. 'My bowels, my bowels, I am pained at my very heart. My heart maketh a noise in me, I cannot hold my peace, because thou hast heard, Oh my soul the sound of the trumpet and the alarm of war. Destruction upon destruction is cried for the whole land is spoiled, suddenly are my tent spoiled and my curtains in a moment. How long shall I see the standard and hear the sound of the trumpet?"

The nations war trumpets are its mighty guns on land and sea belching forth cyclones of molten steel, swatting maddened humanity into the whirlpool of death. If the Revelator tells us that demons will marshal all the fighting forces of the whole world in the battle of Armageddon, a great dragon, the beast and the false prophet, a dragon power of heathenism, the beast Catholicism, and the false prophet apostate Protestantism. Each power will create an image to the image to the beast. So we see Roman Catholicism and the church, master wheel so to speak in the center or civilized governments and so called Protestantism is verging upon bankruptcy. They have spiritual and soul banks under their place in a pale horse and rider, their debt. Then look at the condition of the classes. See Socialism and anarchism like a gaunt wolf in our own country look at the growing chasm between the "Aristocracy of wealth" and the "Democracy of labor," and look about him for a time. Open some of the heavy-ironed doors of the vaults of European treasuries. See how empty they are! See how each nation is verging upon bankruptcy. They have spiritual and soul banks under their place in a pale horse and rider, their debt. Then look at the condition of the classes. See Socialism and anarchism like a gaunt wolf in our own country look at the growing chasm between the "Aristocracy of wealth" and the "Democracy of labor," and look about him for a time. Open some of the heavy-ironed doors of the vaults of European treasuries. See how empty they are!

Before the final window the beast will be conceded power over all the earth through the Apocalyptic Beast, the great Ambassador of peace (?) Then will ring out the cry of "Peace and safety. Now they will say peace and safety, then sudden destruction cometh upon them and they shall not escape. Will the nations give ear to this? If not, why not? Because they have been blinded to them. Let all the world hear what the Lord says to the nations. "The God of the Lord is near upon all the heathen. As thou hast done, so shall it be done unto thee." Then shall return upon thine own head, for as ye have drunk upon my holy mountain, so shall the heathen drink continually, yea, they shall drink, and they shall swallow down and they shall be as though they had not been."

What grander and lottier work can a Democratic party do in this crisis than to be telling the nations these things? It is the "Present Truth" of the Labor Tribune, that so many shovers of appreciation are failing to send you from all parts of the compass.

Yours for God and humanity,

J. A. OPPY.

Enclosed find subscription-price for renewal of my subscription to the Labor Tribune for another year. Regret very much I have been somewhat delinquent in renewing. I will be a subscriber to your paper as long as you publish it, for I believe it does you now publish, especially the columns of dear Pastor Russell. We expect your paper with much eagerness and pleasure each week and assure you it is greatly enjoyed by me. If it is second to no other paper, it gives me much pleasure to know you are taking such a part in the harvest work, which we believe is now nearly at its close.

Thank you kindly for your good paper and the great help you are giving in the harvest work. Wish you great success. I am,

Your colaborer in the harvest work,

H. H. SMITH.

New York, Nov. 21.

I read your paper with interest every week. I am especially interested in Pastor Russell's sermons and the Question Box. I hope you may continue this good work until the end, and as long as you do so I shall be a subscriber.

Very truly yours in the harvest work,

E. H. HESTON.

New Hampshire, Nov. 22.

Inclosed please find money to pay for extra copies of the Tribune of November 7 issue, containing that great sermon by Pastor Russell "Armageddon and Antichrist."

Whether one accepts his Bible interpretations or not, Pastor Russell certainly gives us plenty of food for thought, and it seems to me that one must be indeed be a blind bigot or else utterly careless and indifferent, who would refuse to take heed and consider the question whether these interpretations may not possibly be true? Surely when one considers that all no one has been able, by the same authority (God's Word) to prove them false.

As I try to keep fairly well posted on the most important events which now look over the world, it does seem reasonable to me that Pastor Russell has the "book of the right hands" and is "turning to his deductions, even his sermons," and have very long to wait before they find out.

How glad we all ought to be that the Truth, whatever it is, or by whomsoever proclaimed, will ultimately prevail, and all error "or whatsoever maketh a lie," shall be overthrown! What a blessed day that will be for the world!

I am deeply grateful to the Tribune for publishing those Sermons, Bible Studies, etc. They are most helpful to me, and have had the effect of sending me to the Bible itself to find out once rather (paronsia.) "Knowledge shall be increased." Dan. 12: 4. When has there been a time of more rapid strides in education, invention and learning? "Many shall run to and fro. Dan. 12: 4. Are 60, 90 even more miles an hour on land and sea and air "but as the days of Noah's were, so shall the presence (paronsia) of the Son of man be." The world will be living along "eating and drinking and marrying." But the brethren are not in darkness that that day should overtake you as a thief." 1 Thes. 5: 4.

They shall say "Peace, peace, where there is no peace." The Local Paster is saying it, as are many others. Take off your colored glasses! Read James, Chapter 5: "Go to now, ye rich men, weep and howl for your miseries that shall come upon you. Your riches are corrupted and your garments are moth eaten. Your gold and silver is canker and the rust of them shall be a witness against you and shall eat your flesh as it were fire. Ye have heaped treasure together for the last day." Behold the hire of the laborers who have reaped down your fields which is of you kept back by fraud (or wrongs in your foundries, hewn in your forests) which is kept back by fraud crieth: and the cries of them which have reaped have entered into the ears of the Lord."

God grant that you may be permitted to see these things before you die like the brute beast—Eccl. 3: 19. For that which befalleth the sons of men befalleth beasts: even one thing befalleth them: as the one dieth, so dieth the other; yea, they have all one breath; so that a man hath no pre-eminence above a beast: for all is vanity. All go to one place; all are of the dust (elements of the earth) and all turn to dust again."

"Keep thy foot when thou goest to the house of God and be more ready to hear"—study the word which I believe you love and "show thyself approved." "Christ has his day of hell and death." Rev. 1: 18. "And hell was cast into the lake of fire." Rev. 20: 14. Death and hell are to be annihilated, for so have taken away the key of knowledge: ye entered not in yourselves, and them that were entering ye hindered" give it back to your flock and sense it to the church in the regions of fences—into Christ's own church.

"And when the Day of Judgment comes—(not a literal 24 hour day) Noah's day was not a 24 hour day but a period of time; so is the Judgment day—it will be preceded by a brief but terrible time of trouble that will be able to follow it and to gain a reward—but a lesser reward than that now accorded to those who can and do exercise faith and obedience.

The reason for this is manifest. God is now seeking special (elect) and specially faithful and obedient, to be heirs of God and joint-heirs with Jesus in His glorious Messianic Kingdom, and whom in the world He will use in bestowing His blessing world-wide; and He desires that in this class shall be only such as are sincerely devoted to Him. In this and other minutes the Lord required faith as the condition of the heeding of the truth and of the 40th coming glory. During the King-dom reign there will be such manifestations of the Power and such abundance given to those willing to exercise faith, that all may profit thereby and the degree of the blessing of heart-knowledge and the casting out of every power of Satan and sin.

The poor father realized from Jesus words that he must exercise faith else his son could not be healed. Thou believest not? Then his tears be cried out. "Lord help my unbelief!" His faith got its reward. Jesus cast out the evil spirit to come out of the boy and never to more into him.

"Jesus took him by the hand."

It may be considered why the Master cast out the evil spirit to fear, the boy and cause him pain in leaving him. It is because it is the will of God that Divine power for their uplift out of the mire of sin and death. According to the Scriptures, we are now in the time when Satan will be bound, when all the influences of evil amongst humanity will be restrained. According to the Scriptures, also, this binding of Satan will be accomplished in a great "time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation," and humanity will be left in an almost dead condition. The gods, the princes, the ambition of men will perish in that awful trouble time, but the Master will be present in Kingdom power to uplift Gen.

Messiah's Kingdom will not only bind the Adversary and forbid him to re-enter humanity and interfere with their affairs, but will for a thousand years do an uplifting work amongst the fallen and degraded members of our race, lifting them up, up, up, until they will fully attain the Divine standard represented in Father Adam—from which condition he originally fell through disobedience, and return to which condition has been received for all through the merit of Jesus' sacrifice at Calvary.

ALL THINGS ARE POSSIBLE.

Mark ix, 14-29—Dec. 1.

"And Jesus said unto him, If thou canst believe, all things are possible to him that believeth."—Mark ix. 23.

WHEN Jesus and the three favored Apostles came down from the Mount of Transfiguration they were beheld enjoying the vision of the coming glory, they found the other little Apostles at the foot of the mountain surrounded by a multitude. They had made several ineffective attempts to cast out a demon from a boy whose father had brought him for the purpose. Jesus came promptly to the relief of the Apostles and inquired the nature of their trouble. The father explained:

And across the generation? How long shall I be with you and bear with you? Bring him to Me." They brought him, and immediately the spirit caused him to fall to the ground, wallowing and foaming. Jesus questioned how long he had been thus. The father answered, "From a child," and that often the spirit attempted to cast the boy into the fire or into the water to destroy him. "But if thou canst do anything, have compassion on us and help us."

"If You Can Believe."

Jesus replied, "If thou canst believe; all things are possible to him that believeth." How true it is that in these days everywhere men the accursed spirits of unbelief have destroyed the corrupt order of things that existing. Even the foundations of man's hearts were evil continually. (Verse 5.)

Q.—What is meant by: "The dear was shut"—Matthew xxv, 10? (L. M. S.)

Answer.—A door, in the Scriptures, always indicates a means of access or entrance; an open door, the opportunity to enter; a closed door, no opportunity to enter. The above text occurs in the parable of the wise and foolish virgins. When they that were ready, the wise virgins, went into the marriage the door was shut, making it impossible for those unready (the foolish virgins) to enter? This does not mean that the "foolish virgins" were shut out entirely from God's favor, and consigned to hopeless despair and endless torment. True, they were foolish, with nevertheless they were Virgins, chaste and pure, and secured their oil —the illuminating power of the Holy Spirit, and the knowledge of the truth in their heart—at considerable cost. They were too late in securing the "oil" or in time to make to enter into the Bridegroom to the marriage, and could not participate with the wise virgins in the joy of the Bride. So to-day there are many of the Lord's people, Christians—virgins, whose light is flickering, going out, through lack of oil—the knowledge and spirit of the truth, and failure to buy from their Lord has returned and taken the same only with him into the marriage of the Lamb.

Q.—If, as some say, the Kingdom of God is the Church, how are we to understand Daniel ii, 44? (Eureka.)

Answer.—A kingdom comprises a king, a realm and subjects. The kingdom of God would be that order of things where God's will is done, and which will be in heaven and earth as it is obeyed. The Church has been praying for God's Kingdom to come for nearly 1,900 years.

Our Lord said He was a King, and to this end was He born; but He also said that His kingdom was not of this age or wrongly translated world. God's Kingdom has not yet come, and His will is not yet done on earth. On the contrary, Satan is the God of this world (age) and the prince of the power of the air—operating in the hearts and minds of the children of this world.

Daniel ii, 44 refers to the time when God will set up His Kingdom, and He shall be recognized by all. Very shortly, even before the kingdoms of the heathen be passed away, he whose right it is shall take unto himself his great power and reign, and all the kingdoms of this world shall become the kingdom of our God and His Christ, and he shall reign forever—that kingdom will never pass away. The Church is now called to joint-belovship with Christ, and shall be Kings and Priests unto God, and reign with Christ 1,000 years. This is in harmony with Daniel vii. 13, 14, 18.

Q.—Will you kindly explain Philippians i, 23, "For I am in a strait between two, having a desire to depart, and to be with Christ: which is far better"? (Dertha.)

Answer.—The context shows that the two things in the Apostle's mind (and what to choose he "was not") were life in the flesh or dying to the Lord. To die he earnestly desired, viz., the coming again of Christ, at whose return he hoped to be changed, made like Him, and be with him. The Greek word translated "depart" in the above quotation is "analuo," meaning a decided "return" in Luke vii. 36, and has the same meaning. Jesus said to his disciples: "If I go . . . I will come again." In coming again (the Father sending him—see Acts iii: 20), he would "depart" from the Father and at the same time "return" to his disciples. Had the Apostle's words "to depart" been translated "for the returning" they would be equally correct, and would harmonize with the other Scriptures.

Q.—Would you consider a man without a classical education, as being qualified for the ministry of the Gospel? (Domino.)

Answer.—Bluming back over the history of the Church throughout the Christian era and noting the men who have achieved the greatest amount of success to the proclamation of the Gospel of the Kingdom, we note that those for the most part were men devoid of even a suspicion of a classical education. The Lord Jesus and all of the Apostles, save the Apostle Paul, were unlearned men. (John vii. 15; Acts iv. 13.) Well has it been for the cause of Christ that "not many wise, not many great" (1 Corinthians i. 26, 27; Matthew xi. 25) have been called to preach the Gospel. It was the wise and great—the Scribes and Pharisees—of the Lord's day, who in their arrogance and pride of learning, viewed with contempt the Master and His uneducated humble followers. The same superstition also existed as manifested by the modern Scribes and Pharisees who, no matter how noble and accomplished a man may be in the service of the Gospel, regard him with scorn if he lacks a classical education, and accept not even though he may have been a merchant, a carpenter, or a tent-maker. Only the other day, the learned preachers of Noah's day in modern times who, because he had been a merchant and had never attended college, was unqualified. Some of these small souled Pharisees who deservingly referred to the fact that "he had sold sheets for a living." A classical education and theological training these days are really misfortunes to a man and a misfortune to a broad minded view and service of the Gospel. The ecclesiastical and educational arena for the day tend to mold the mental development in grooves and rots that are almost impossible to get out of when one desires to do some original thinking.

Q.—Psalm xxxvii, 35, "I have seen the wicked in great power and spreading himself like a green bay tree." Kindly explain the simile? (Nassenhuents.)

Answer.—The special thought of the Psalmist was the success in life and the prosperity of the wicked. As the bay tree spreads out to some distance from the trunk and is a mass of foliage of a deep green color at the extremities of its branches giving every appearance of life and vigor and of a generally prosperous condition, so the wicked are to be seen flourishing and going along successfully, taking advantage of their fellows. It is said that all around underneath the bay tree nothing else will grow, there is general desolation. So with the wicked: in every direction where they are found or are searched, there is produced hardships sufferings and death for others. It is true that does not bear fruit, it is a useless tree as far as being a blessing and a benefit to others is concerned, although it is very beautiful. Thus it is with the wicked; they may be well dressed and well groomed, fashionable and to the world the world is not benefitted by their existence, and, indeed, would be much better without them. Apart from the fact that it has a superabundance of roots, running out from the trunk in every direction, the wicked are famed for their covetousness; reaching out and laying hold of everything they can get, their hands are full. The world is overburdened by their absorbing tendencies, and they give nothing in return for what they get. They are the ornamental but useless wicked!

Q.—Will you kindly explain I Peter iii, 18-20, and tell who the "spirits in prison" are? Also, to what way the Lord Jesus went and preached to them? (Consecrated.)

Answer.—The universe is a very large place and this globe upon which we dwell is, comparatively speaking, only a small portion of it, and one far out corner of the vast expanse. Man, a diminutive speck moving around in the dust, has to exercise imagination to send his mind from the center and hub of the entire tremendous order of things. Even then he only faintly comprehends its full and deems that he is monarch of all he surveys as he gazes illegitimately out upon the sun and considers that he is one of the "lords of creation." However, the Bible reveals to us that there are other orders of beings inhabiting the realms above that are far more glorious and powerful than the human race is capable of. These have been interested spectators of the great tragedy being enacted upon this globe. The Apostle says "the angels and men and women merely players" is a true expression from one of the poets. The Apostle says the same thought when he says "For we are made a spectacle (Greek theatre) unto the world, and to angels." (1 Corinthians iv, 9). Some of these angels in their anxiety to rescue the race from sin and death themselves came under condemnation because of disobedience to the Divine commands. "In the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing." These angels, "spirits," have been in prison, restrained under "chains of darkness." (Genesis vi. 1-4; Jude 6.) The Lord Jesus, by His death and resurrection, preached a powerful sermon in proclamation to these "spirits in prison." Doubtless some have benefited by our Lord's example, as they saw the results of faith and obedience to the Divine will of God.

Labor Policy in Imperial Affairs--Ramsay MacDonald's Indian Appointment--The Shipyard Strikes in England and Scotland--Report on British Wages, 1911 -- Successful Italian Printers--Land Scheme in Italy.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

LONDON, Nov. 28.—The preliminary agenda of the annual conference of the Labor party to be held in London in January, contains 16 pages of resolutions submitted by the various affiliated bodies, most of them being on familiar lines. Some strike a new note, and first among these may be said one to be proposed by the British Labor Representation Society in the following terms: "That this conference instructs the Executive Committee in connection with the Parliamentary Labor party to take immediate steps to convene a conference of Labor parties in the British Empire to consider a labor policy in imperial affairs with a view to united action on all questions affecting the relations of the constituent part of the British Empire—(a) to each other, (b) to foreign countries, and (c) the Empire as a whole." The discussion on similar lines has been made in Ramsay MacDonald's book "Labor and the Empire" but a comprehensive discussion of the question by the party in conference has not hitherto been attempted. Another resolution from Bristol suggests the formulation of a program "sufficiently detailed to show the distinctive labor point of view dealing with the question of land, industrial monopolies, finance, national and imperial government and foreign affairs." The questions of immediate legislation there are several (probably one on franchise and electoral reform. Unless the Reform bill includes women the Labor members must seek to encompass its defeat if the resolutions of the Women's Labor League, the Fabian Society, and the Independent Labor party be adopted by the conference. Wage rates are far apart as Weymouth and Carlisle there come demands on the national representative, whilst the Wolverhampton Trades Council suggests a conference "to be attended by national representation or the alternative vote shall be adopted by the party as an amendment to any proposal by the Government to introduce the second ballot."

In a week or so Ramsay MacDonald will leave for India to commence the eighteen months of work which he is to give in India, at Whitehall, and again in India with his fellow members of the Royal Commission on the Indian Civil Service. He is not to resign the leadership of the Labor party. But he will have little opportunity of leading it till the commission has reported, and the Parliamentary party will have to appoint an acting leader.

He will almost certainly be one who can be trusted to carry out Mr. MacDonald's policy of going slow and co-operating with the Government, and so the extreme socialists may be ruled out. There is a possibility that the post might be offered to Mr. Fenwick with the object of binding more closely the liberal-labor group. But the probabilities for the post are the moderate men who have previously held office—Mr. Barnes, Arthur Henderson and Mr. Parker. Arthur Henderson is the ablest parliamentarian of the three, but he fell into disfavor during the dock strike and to avoid trouble the party may give the post to Mr. Parker, a safe man without too much desire to impose a will of his own.

Reports from Scotland and the North-east Coast indicate that the proposed new shipyard agreement will be accepted by both sides, and that so far as sixteen unions are concerned peace terms for a period of 21 years will be signed. There is still the possibility of the boilermakers to be considered however, as well as the pesky unity of minor Unions such as have arisen this week over differences between the electricians and the shipyard employers. Failing to obtain a general advance of one cent an hour on their present 17 cents about 500 members of the Electrical Trade Union came out on November 18. Now the Electrical Contractors' Association in Glasgow have posted notices locking out all the union members, so that a thousand men will be idle. Negotiations are likely between the union and the Clyde Shipbuilders' Association. The dispute is complicated by the fact that the electrical trade is largely contracted for, and the union concerned is thus not in the shipyard agreement. There is a dispute also at Messrs. Vickers' shipyard at Barrow, where about 2,000 ship-platers struck work on November 21 on a demarcation grievance. It appears that certain battleship plates were too heavy to be dealt with by platers' department and were taken into the fittingshop to be dealt with by the engineers; hence the intervention of the platers who are engaged on piece-work. A similar dispute that occurred a few months ago was settled in the platers' favor. Under the shipyard agreement all demarcation disputes are treated under local arrangements, and it is expected that in the present case a settlement will be reached within a short time.

The General Federation of Trade Unions, which has arranged for a conference of trade union approved societies to be held in Manchester on November 29 for the purpose of discussing insurance Act problems is also arranging a great trade union demonstration for the 28th of November. The speakers will include, in addition to many well-known English trade

ONE AGREEMENT SIGNED.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Nov. 29.—It was announced today that a wage agreement has been signed between the union miners and the officials of the National Bituminous Coal & Coke Company. The agreement practically recognizes the union, provides for an increase of about twenty-one per cent in wages, reduces tonnage, permits the miners to organize, provides for a six-hour workday, and gives the men now on strike preference if they should desire to return to work.

The agreement was signed by H. Lynn Smith, of Washington, D. C., secretary and treasurer of the National Bituminous Coal & Coke Company, and A. F. Lesser, president, and A. T. Lester, secretary of the Kanawha local union of the United Mine Workers of America.

The National Bituminous Coal & Coke Company, which is owned by Stanford capitalists, was incorporated but a few days ago for $2,000,000 and has created a charter in this city today. It pursues the policy of open mines at Crown, W. Va. It has, however, practically closed negotiations for the purchase of the mines of the Holly Stephenson Company located at Eskdale.

The agreement will affect upward of 50 union miners now on strike. Whether the other coal operators in the Paint and Cabin Creek district will follow the lead taken by the National Bituminous Coal & Coke Company is not known.

The agreement was signed by Governor Hatfield and the Kanawha officials of the United Mine Workers of America.

"It is agreed that all the old men shall have first choice to return to work if they so desire, new work to be given in which to make application for work.

"It is agreed that 2,000 pounds shall constitute a ton.

"It is agreed that there shall be recognition of the miners' committee in the adjustment of disputes. In case the committee and the mine foreman or superintendent cannot agree, the matter of dispute shall be submitted to arbitration, the miners to select one, the company one. These two are to select the third party, and their decision shall be final.

"It is agreed that the miners will be paid semi-monthly. There shall be a ten per cent advance in wages, but it is understood that no part of it

"MINORITY" PRESIDENTS.

THAT practical good can come of the persistent efforts in some quarters to impress upon the public mind that Governor Wilson will be a "minority President" is not apparent, unless it be the purpose to create sentiment in favor of the direct election of Presidents by popular vote. As long as the present method of voting for the President by states remains, there will be "minority Presidents" from time to time, just as there always have been. Some of the greatest Presidents in our history have been "minority Presidents." In fact, almost one-half of the whole number elected have got their majorities in the electoral college without a majority in the popular vote.

To be exact, since 1820 there have been, not including this year's election, ten "minority Presidents," polling the following percentages of the popular vote: John Quincy Adams, 30 per cent; James K. Polk, 50 per cent; Zachary Taylor, 46 per cent; James Buchanan, 45 per cent; Abraham Lincoln, 40 per cent; Rutherford B. Hayes, 48 per cent; James A. Garfield, 48 per cent; Grover Cleveland (1884), 49 per cent; Benjamin Harrison, 47 per cent; Grover Cleveland (1892), 46 per cent. The latest obtainable figures are that the outside estimate of the total vote cast on the 5th was 15,500,000. Governor Wilson's vote was approximately 6,200,000, or 40 per cent. This is a considerable majority from a popular majority, but it is a very large plurality, exceeding by more than 2,000,000 the vote cast for Colonel Roosevelt and exceeding by 2,500,000 the vote received by President Taft. Mr. Wilson is entitled to feel, and doubtless will feel, that he is the President of the whole people and it is certain that there are very few good citizens of any party who do not wish him as President Taft did the other night in his fine New York speech—a prosperous administration.

It may not be amiss to bear in mind that even had the electoral system been abandoned by constitutional amendment before this year's election and the President been elected by direct vote, the result would have been unchanged. Mr. Wilson would still have been the successful candidate as he received a very much larger percentage of the popular vote than any other candidate. If those who talk about "minority Presidents" mean that a clear majority of the popular vote can be depended upon, and not a mere plurality, should be required for election, they are advancing an impractical and foolish proposition. A system which if adopted would be a failure to elect as often as not.

POSTAL-BANK SUCCESS.

THE executive council of the American Federation of Labor is not among those who think the government's postal-savings bank experiment has been a practical failure. This government institution—which is a long established success in European countries—was approved by the Federation many years ago and Congress was repeatedly urged to pass a postal-savings bank law. The Federation is now holding its thirty-second annual convention at Rochester, N. Y., and its officers send out from there a review of the Federation's connection with the postal-savings establishment and of the favorable operations of the act.

It is pointed out that the banks met with instant popularity and the latest available figures just made public by the postmaster-general show that a large sum of money is deposited with the government, the deposits having reached approximately $18,000,000. This amount has been deposited by 300,000 individuals, making an average of $56 per depositor. The system is now operated in 13,773 postoffices, including 644 branch offices and stations. To date 7,357 banks have qualified to receive postal savings funds, the act passed by Congress providing that such institutions shall be solvent banks organized under national or state laws and subject to national or state supervision and examination. At the will of the depositor deposits can be converted into United States 2½ per cent interest bearing bonds. Applications for this conversion of deposits into bonds must be made on or before December 2, and depositors may exchange the whole or part of their savings deposits for bonds, registered or coupon, in denominations of $20, $100 or $500 as they elect. There have been three bonds issues thus far, the last one being made on July 1. Under the law bonds are issued only on January 1 and July 1 of each year, and ordinarily applicants had to make application at least fifteen days before either of these dates, but now thirty days' notice is required. It is predicted that a large amount of conversions will be made next Monday.

INTERNATIONAL COST-OF-LIVING INQUIRY.

A BILL, which Congress should enact into law at the session beginning next week is the Sulzer bill to secure a joint conference with the other nations of the world to promote an international inquiry into the high cost of living. The measure was reported favorably by the House committee on foreign affairs at the last session. The committee pointed out that the world-wide advance in prices of the necessaries of life in recent years increasing the cost of living is believed to be the cause of much of the social discontent now prevailing in many of the leading countries of the world and presents a problem calling for scientific investigation of facts by a body of trained experts.

The leading political economists, businessmen, commercial bodies, and economic societies of Europe have already placed themselves on record in favor of an international commission to investigate the high cost of living, and a great many of them have expressed the opinion that the United States should take the lead in calling together such a commission. There is no doubt but that a commission should be appointed of unprejudiced and impartial persons—experts, in fact, to investigate these economic conditions. The increasing cost of living is a matter of much public concern, and the facts in connection with the same should be carefully collated by the best experts in the world as a basis for future legislative action. Trusts have considerable to do with it in this country, but there are other causes with which governments should deal. The Sulzer bill is decidedly a proper measure.

STIGMA LIFTED FROM DEPENDENCE.

DRINK and other forms of vice work such frightful havoc in some homes that men are very quick to assume that they play a large part in pauperism. How far the general statistical inferences to the effect are warranted it is not easy to say. But there is a difference between chronic pauperism and that occasional dependence into which even the worthiest families may be brought without fault of their own, especially in an era of rising prices. The New York Association for Improvement of the Poor has just made an investigation into the circumstances of 9,729 dependent families which discloses that in 40 per cent of the cases the dependence is due to sickness, in 27 per cent to unemployment, and in only 2 per cent to intemperance. The report is attracting marked attention for the reason that so many reformers and so many students of poverty and of crime insist that the larger part of poverty and nearly all of crime are due to the causes here held responsible for so small a percentage.

The New York World points out that one of the chief burdens of life for the poor is rent. The calculation of experts on sociological subjects is that not more than 20 per cent of income should be spent for that purpose, but it appears that to obtain fairly good living quarters in New York the average worker has to pay about 27 per cent of his income. This condition of affairs impels the poor to overcrowd their tenements, and as a consequence they violate sanitary laws and suffer through sickness more than they gain by the economy so rent.

Standards of living vary with races. Some of the immigrants are content to find comparative comfort in homes that to one American-born would appear destitute. It is, therefore, impossible to determine what income is required to provide a healthful and well-supplied living for a family. It is clear, however, insofar as a metropolis like New York is concerned (and some other cities) that in too many cases the earnings of even the most industrious and saving do not always equal it.

EDWARD F. DUNNE, GOVERNOR ELECT OF ILLINOIS.

FORMER JUDGE EDWARD F. DUNNE, ex-mayor of Chicago and next governor elect of Illinois, is a Democrat. He is also an Irish American. He was born in Connecticut, educated in Ireland, rounded into manhood in Chicago, where he practiced law. Judge Dunne learned a few things about politics. His father was an alderman in Chicago, and also represented that district in the legislature. The young Dunne learned some practical things which proved valuable to him in later years when he became mayor of Chicago. Judge Dunne has a striking personality and decided ideas on civic and political questions of the day.

ROCHESTER CONVENTION DRAWING TO CLOSE

712382

The Political Program Formulated by President Gompers and Presented in His Annual Report is Discussed by the Convention--Report of the Debate on the Endorsement.

ROCHESTER, Dec. 2.—During the consideration of the report of the committee on president's report at the Rochester convention of the A. F. of L., the committee recommended "that that portion of the president's report under the caption 'American Federation of Labor's Program—Its Results,' and on that portion of the executive council's report under the caption 'Labor's Political Campaign, 1912,'" be disposed of as follows:

"This portion of the reports constitute a review of the political program and progress under the direction of the American Federation of Labor. We commend it to the consideration of the members of all affiliated bodies and others interested in the work that the American Federation of Labor is doing in that direction. We recommend that the work be continued."

A motion was made and seconded that the report of the committee be concurred in. This was a signal for a number of the delegates to not only criticise the political program as carried out by the American Federation of Labor, but offer amendments which, if adopted, would bring into existence a so-called National Labor Party. The Socialists, through their spokesman, vigorously opposed the report of the committee, while Delegate Gallagher of San Francisco, offered the following amendment: "I move that the committee's report be amended and that the following words be inserted: That the Executive Council of the Federation be instructed to consider the advisability of the formation of a strictly speaking National Union Labor Party, which shall be in strict accord with the policies and aims and legislative demands of the American Federation of Labor."

A number of the delegates spoke on this amendment. After states opposed discussion, Delegate Rowe of the Printing Press Assistants' Union moved "that he be made a point of order that the amendment was in violation of Articles 3, Article 2, of the constitution of the American Federation of Labor. John B. Lennon, acting as chairman, decided that the point was well taken. Delegate Gallagher appealed from the decision of the chair. Section 5 of Article 2 reads: "Any politics, whether they may be Democratic, Republican, Socialistic, Synthetic, Prohibition, or any other shall have no place in the conventions of the American Federation of Labor."

After the presentation by Pro Tem Chairman Lennon of the reasons for his decision, likewise a statement by the delegate who appealed from the decision of the chair, a vote was taken and the decision of the chair was sustained by a vote of 161 to 21. On the motion to adopt the report of the committee, it was carried by 166 to the affirmative, to 42 in the negative.

The action of the convention in this matter gives a clear and emphatic definition of the sentiment prevailing in the American Federation of Labor relative to partisan politics. According to the vote here given, the advocates of partisan political action, who are feverishly anxious to launch a political party under the sanction of the American Federation of Labor, do not show any increase in strength among the trade unionists. Neither is there any inclination on the part of the great majority of the delegates to the annual conventions to accept the dictum of the political enthusiasts who, each year, endeavor by every means in their possession to get the hands of the general labor movement.

The delegates to the convention of the American Federation of Labor, if the history of these conventions is taken as a guide, are unfavorable to any plan to entwine the trade unions of this country in any partisan political program, which would, in a short time, destroy the present efficiency of the trade union movement. The American Federation of Labor was established to be free of all of any political kite, reserving to itself the right to champion or oppose any political party or individual in accordance with its or his record. The rejection of the vote upon the report of the committee on president's report is sufficiently emphatic to reflect the temper of the delegates who seek to retain and to make more powerful the effectiveness of the trade unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

DEFEAT CO-OPERATIVE SCHEME

SPOKANE, Wash., Nov. —At a meeting in Odd Fellows' Hall of the National Grange a plan for a $10,000,000 corporation for direct co-operation marketing of farm products was voted down after a short fight. In lieu of the plan defeated, the grange indorsed a plan for State and national bureaus of information as the first step toward co-operative marketing of farm products. By this plan each grange will establish a bureau which subordinate granges will keep information as to marketing conditions. This information will be furnished to all of the subordinate granges and to the National Bureau of Information, to be operated in connection with the office of the national secretary, who, in turn, will inform other State bureaus.

DEPARTMENT OF LABOR.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—An important readjustment of the bureaus under the Department of Commerce and Labor will no doubt be the order of the day after March 4, now, it appears at this time that the bill now before the Senate, creating a Department of Labor, which has already passed the House, may receive consideration upon the reconvening of Congress during the early part of December. With the passage of this legislation the Bureau of Labor will be abolished entirely and its functions of investigating industrial conditions will be transferred to the new Department of Labor, and a new Cabinet officer added that will be at its head. A part of the function of the Bureau of Statistics, as well as the new Children's Bureau, which was created at the last session of Congress, will be merged into the new department. Senator Borah of Idaho, chairman of the Education and Labor Committee of the Senate, has the bill as passed by the House in charge.

There is no excuse for living beyond one's means. Your method of living should be regulated to your earnings power. The wage may be small, and the home modest, but in no case should all the earnings be expended. A part should be saved. We are not growing rich enough sufficiently to work all our lives. There comes a time when one can no longer provide—when one must live on. Foresee that time. Cultivate thrift. Save for the comfort of your declining years. Look around you. Do you not know of some who have made the common error of spending all the proceeds of their labor? Profit by their example.

Pastor Russell's Sermon

HOW, WHEN, WHY A SECOND ADVENT.

Denver Divines on Right Track, Says Pastor Russell—No World-Burning —Satan to Be Bound.—Sin, Sickness and Death to Be Conquered. Man to Be Delivered—The Power Vested in Messiah—His Kingdom Near—How It Will Appear

DENVER, Col., Dec. 1.—This city is stirred! Seventeen pastors of all denominations have been discussing The Second Advent for a month. Now comes Pastor Russell telling us all that "The earth abideth forever"—that it will never be destroyed by literal fire. According to him the great event of Christ's Coming will bring blessing such as we all desire. He seems to have the Bible and logic on his side, too!

Pastor Russell declared that false concepts of the Second Coming of Christ have done great injury. The view set forth in all orthodox creeds is that Christ will come again in the flesh. The resurrection will take place within twenty-four hours. The saintly will rise in the air to meet the Lord. Then fire will come down from heaven and consume the whole earth. A few—Presbyterians—claim that Christ will reign in fleshly glory for a thousand years to bless the living of mankind. The majority of Christians drown all this as ridiculous nonsense because they believe little or nothing, either of the creeds or of the Bible. A minority disown it because they perceive its inconsistency with the Bible. "Where do we fit with this minority?" said Pastor Russell.

More than three hundred Bible texts refer to Messiah's glorious Second Advent. Inquiry shall be first. Why does the Master come again? Did He not properly establish His Church? Has this Gospel Age been a failure? Will He come to rectify matters and to start His Church afresh in the work of world-conversion and blessing?

Not at all. His work has carried out exactly as intended. Not a single section of Scripture implies that the Church is to convert the world during this Age. On the contrary, her mission has been to act as God's mouthpiece in calling a class to joint-heirs with the Redeemer. Properly enough Jesus said, "I pray not for the world, but for those whom Thou hast given Me." He loved the world, He died for the world. In due time, by His Messianic Kingdom, He will bless "all the families of the earth"! But the time for blessing the world is not yet. The present class is the "little flock" to become sanctified or set apart to God and His service, following in the footsteps of Jesus. These, like the Master, must demonstrate their love for God, their loyalty to Him and to the truth, even unto death. Their reward is to be sharers with their Master in His Heavenly Throne of Glory, which for a thousand years will rule, bless and uplift humanity.

The followers of Jesus have another work, in addition to witnessing to the world and calling out faithful saints to walk the narrow way. That other work is "to build one another up in the most holy faith." Each individual of the sanctified Little Flock is not only to "do good unto all men, and especially to the household of faith," but particularly to make his own "calling and election sure" by personal love, zeal and loyalty.

THE KINGDOM NOW IN EMBRYO.

Our Lord's many parables refer to His Church as a Kingdom class, a Kingdom "in embryo." This does not signify that He intended them to occupy places of honor and distinction now. The Master Himself was neither a King nor a Prince on earth. He is the Melchisedec Priesthood of the Messianic Age. Then He will also be the Great King over all the earth, as well as the Great Prophet or Teacher, and the Great Judge or Ruler. Well did He declare to Pilate, "My Kingdom is not of this Age." (John xviii, 36). As His saintly followers are to share in His Kingdom, they also must wait for its establishment. While waiting they are to pray, "Thy Kingdom come; Thy will be done on earth, as it is done in Heaven."

Of the Royal Priesthood the Apostle declares, "The world knoweth us not." We are priests and kings only from the Divine standpoint, which none are able to recognize except the "brethren." Only in embryo are God's saints spoken of as the Kingdom class. They are on probation. Jesus said that the overcomers will be granted to sit with Him in His Throne as actual members of the Royal Priesthood, to reign with Him a thousand years.—Revelation iii, 21; xx, 6.

"HE MUST REIGN UNTIL—"

St. Paul after telling about the resurrection of the dead, explains that the resurrection of the Church to glory, honor and immortality will be first on the program. Subsequently all will be resurrected, "every man in his own order," and Christ will reign until He shall have put down all insubordination. Other Scriptures clearly inform us that the length of his reign will be a thousand years. It will constitute the great Seventh Day of earth's history—six thousand years under the Curse, and the seventh thousand for a recovery from the Curse. St. Paul adds that after Jesus shall have accomplished the work assigned to Him in connection with rebellious mankind, He will deliver up the Kingdom to God, and Himself be subject to the Father.—1 Corinthians xv, 22-28.

To some it may appear that a thousand years is too short a time to fully uplift humanity—those living at the time of the Second Coming and all that are in their graves. Some think that it will be even too short to bring the whole earth to the promised Edenic perfection. We are to remember, however, that while Messiah will probably use human instrumentality in connection with His work, nevertheless the invention and development of the past century give us a glimpse of the wonderful intelligence which may be granted to humanity in proportion as the Curse is rolled away and Divine blessing fills the earth. The majority of our race have never had fifty years of life experience, good or bad. But the promise is that such shall have time and the magic of time to learn the Truth, under the shining light of that New Dispensation—a hundred years, in which to fully decide his course, either for life or for lasting or death everlasting.—Isaiah lxv, 20.

Form the Bible viewpoint the Day of Christ is ample for the great work for which it has been consecrated by the All-Wise Creator from before the foundation of the world. Not should we forget that all power in Heaven and in earth is vested in the One who laid down all to become obedient unto death, even the death of the Cross. Nothing should we forget that the Church has for eighteen centuries been under special preparation and instruction in the School of Christ, preparing her for their work as a Royal Priesthood. They will be able to sympathize with the groaning creation and be merciful, even in the administration of stripes necessary as many for their assistance along the Highway of Holiness, then opened up.

MESSIAH'S KINGDOM INVISIBLE.

Some of the noblest minds have been repelled from faith in the Scriptures and by the thought that an earthly Kingdom with Christ and the saints in regal state is unreasonable. They were quite right in thinking that earthly court and state would be beneath the dignity of Messiah and His Bride. The Scriptures declare that Jesus left His glory, humbled Himself to become a man, in order that He might be the great Sin-Offering for our race. But the Redeemer prayed to be Glorified with the glory that He had with the Father before the world was. Yes, He promised His Church His Bride, a share in His Heavenly glory. Did He lead us to expect a Heavenly glory, Heavenly inheritance and glorious change to spiritual Heavenly condition, and will He then, instead, give us earthly glory and merely perfection in the flesh?

Oh, no! We have all sadly overlooked certain features of God's Word. Jesus did not remain poor, did not remain flesh, did not remain human. In His resurrection not only was He received by the Father up where He was before; but He was glorified "far above angels, principalities and powers," made a "partaker of the Divine nature." The promise to His Church is to share His glory, honor and immortality. Only that on the resurrection the faithful will be "changed" (1 Corinthians xv, 5, 52) and made like the glorified Redeemer, and also of the Divine nature. (II Peter i, 4.)

The Apostle explains the necessity for this change, saying, "Flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of God."—1 Cor xv, 50.

We forget that Jesus declare that God never purposed that either Jesus or His faithful Elect should remain in the flesh! A few Bible statements misunderstood got us into difficulty. We read, "Every eye shall see Him," and forgot that there are eyes of understanding, as well as natural eyes. We forget that Jesus declare that every few now see or hear—only the saintly, whose eyes of understanding have been opened by the anointing of the Holy Spirit. We forget that as Jesus said also, "Yet a little while and the world seeth Me no more." When once we discern that He has been glorified—that He has been given a birth nature which that He no longer has the human nature, which He surrendered as a Sin-Sacrifice, then we can see why the world will see Him no more. Only the living saints will be changed by resurrection power before she can see Him.

We misunderstood our Lord's manifestations after resurrection. Unless He could establish the faith of His disciples in the resurrection, He could not receive the Pentecostal blessing. Therefore He spent with them forty days, watching over them, appearing to various ones, as a gardener, as a traveler, etc., all to convince them, first, that He was no longer dead, but risen; and second, that He was no longer a man, but a Spirit being. He demonstrated this by doing exactly what the angels did. As they appeared in the flesh, ate, talked and vanished, so did He. Then He ascended up on high, not as a human being, "a little lower than the angels," but as a Divine Spirit far above angels. He received the homage of all the Heavenly host.

"I WILL COME AGAIN."

One of Jesus' parables truthfully represents Heaven as a far country, to which Jesus as the young Nobleman went to be invested with Kingly authority over the world. It tells how on His return the faithful ones will be rewarded with a share in His Kingdom. Some of these will be given to rule over cities, and others over five cities, etc., and will enter into the joys of their Lord. But we are not to understand this necessarily to mean that Heaven itself is so divided as to be governed either by the Father the parable shows that the time between the going and the returning would be long. The parable also shows a condition of affairs between the Nobleman and his servants in the interim. As a matter of fact, only ten days elapsed between our Lord's ascension and His shedding forth of the Holy Spirit at Pentecost.

Jesus left the world and His disciples in the world, not so much in the sense of going so far away that He could not be reached by prayer and power with them, but more particularly in the sense that He would not see them or communicate with them. He would compel them to "walk by faith and not by sight," to "search the Scriptures," and to receive their spiritual blessings through the fellowship of the Spirit of the Truth. By His Holy Spirit He would be with them, and not by personal contact or further manifestations.

His Second Coming would be at the conclusion of this Age, to awaken His sleeping saints and change them to the heavenly state. Thus He would come again and receive them unto Himself, awaken His sleeping ones, and subsequently those alive and remaining, who would experience the resurrection change in the moment of the Saints' change. This Harvest is the time in which this Age ends, He promised to take special supervision of the gathering of His Elect.

This state of the Redeemer's coming is, in the Greek, His Parousia—His presence. The world is not to know of the time of His Parousia. On the contrary, it is described as secret, hidden from the world—"as a thief in the night." Jesus described His Parousia, saying that at that time the world would be eating, drinking, planting, building, and now and then of the "coming in the Harvest of the Age, even as the world was eating, drinking, planting, building and carrying in the days of Noah, "and knew not. The intimation is, however, that some of God's people would be made aware of His Parousia—the Wise Virgins, while others of God's people are "foolish virgins," would be "overtaken" by the cares of this life," and know not.

REVEALED IN FLAMING FIRE.

If, then, only the Church may know of the Parousia of Jesus in its time, well they shall be changed to the heavenly, Divine nature, how will the world ever know of Jesus and His Kingdom? If He really meant it when He said, "A little while and the world seeth Me no more," how can He mainly know about the new, invisible Kingdom?

The Bible answers most distinctly. It tells us of His shining forth or epiphania of the Lord's Kingdom. It tells of His apokalupsis manifestation or revelement. "He shall be revealed in flaming fire." The flaming fire signifies severe judgements, as elsewhere. These are to be so severe that the elements of earth's society will melt with the fervency of the heat in a terrific time of trouble. Additionally "the heavens," the ecclesiastical systems, will be involved, and pass away with a great noise or commotion. It is from this revealing in flaming fire in this issuance upon the world, that the great, the high, the mighty, the poor, all shall seek to hide themselves in the dens and caves of the earth, in the rocks of the ders and in affiliation with strong governments, etc.

Gradually mankind will come to understand. Gradually some eyes will open and they will see that it is "the wrath of the Lamb" that causes the "time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation." The blow-hard of trouble will be so severe that the world will effectually learn the intended lesson. Their eyes opening to the truth of the situation, they will learn war no more. They will "beat their spears into pruning hooks, and their swords into plowshares." At their every of understanding open still more glory, and will discern the beauties and blessings of Messiah's Kingdom, "the desire of all nations."

Under Messiah's Kingdom, Israel will return under the cast-off condition in which she has been during the selection of "the very Elect." The portions of Israel will be the resurrected Ancient Worthies, mentioned by St. Paul in Hebrews xi, 33-40. They will be perfected in the Divine nature.

But the Christ, Head and Body, Bridegroom and Bride, must first enter into the glory of the Kingdom. Then will be established the earthly Kingdom in the hands of the Ancient Worthies. The work will be to bless all the families of the earth, beginning with Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and all the prophets; but they will not see the King in His glory, nor the Bride, nor "the virgins her companions" in the spirit plane. They will all be as invisible to humanity as the Prince of Darkness and his demon hosts at the present time. The change will be from Satan's Kingdom will be the binding of Satan, the spoiling of those powers, indicates the deliverance of humanity from the bondage of sin, ignorance, superstition and death.

One of our great obstacles in the past has been that we failed to discern that God has been prosecuting two distinct purposes in the call of the Church, to the spiritual, heavenly, Divine nature; and later, through the Elect Church, salvation must be extended to humanity, to the world. Then will come the privilege and opportunity of earthly Restitution to human perfection in the image and likeness of Jehovah, as Adam in a world-wide Paradise. God's glorious footstool. The First Advent of the Savior was necessary for the redemption of our race. His Second Advent is equally necessary; that He may be His glorious Kingdom and Satan overthrow Sin and release sinners.

Appreciations

Ohio, November 30.

Just a few lines to express my appreciation of your excellent paper, which comes to our home every week.

The articles are very interesting to all classes of people. Those illustrated along the lines of the latest question can be satisfied with except sent accounts given from many parts of the world. Home Rovers are also very pleasing articles for the home on a page set apart for that purpose. The religious feature adds to making it a joy to those who are students of the Bible of any denomination. The question box affords an answer to any question on the Bible which may be puzzling the minds of anyone.

May your paper continue to be placed in the hands of the people in as pleasing a manner during the coming year as it has been in the past year.

With best wishes for your future success.

Yours respectfully,
M. A. FLORENCE SOPER.

Enclosed please find check to renew my subscription as I see it has run out the 15th of this month. Kindly excuse delay.

I gladly add my appreciation with others of the good your paper is doing as it is a clear guide, full of good wholesome news. I especially enjoy Pastor Russell's Sermons and Bible Questions, which are very helpful in answering perplexing questions in the Bible Study. I wish you much good influence on all who read and ponder on the answers. May you help along with your talents in the harvest of what is Truth. "Thy Word is Truth."

Yours truly,
A. WOTER.

Kansas, November 29.

I have just renewed my subscription to the Tribune for another year through the Watch Tower office and you no doubt have it by this time. I want to take this opportunity though of expressing to you how much I enjoy the Tribune. All of its departments, but more especially those much mistaken for our spiritual needs, the food in due season. The ser mons by our dear Pastor, the Answers of the question box seem to grow better all the time, and just what we need to enable us to stand in these perilous times when it is absolutely necessary to have on the whole armor of God to withstand the assaults the evil one. And I would feel a positive loss to miss a single copy of your paper. Dear brother, may the Lord richly reward you for the efforts you are putting forth in spreading the Gilad Tidings. The generous spaces, the beautiful type and prominence to the Gospel of Christ of which we are not ashamed, but of which we were when we believed not, through the wiles of devils, masquerading as the Lord's own servants of darkness. Will add a paragraph when I have rendered 34 verses:

If we in every disappointment
Change all to "it"
The Holy Spirit's appointment,
And murmuring for our good
With quiet wishes to you and your many readers.

I am renewing my subscription to your valuable paper through the Watch Tower bible and Tract Society.

I thank you very much, indeed, for continuing to send the paper after my subscription had run out.

Owing to the sudden death in the family I have been unable to attend to it sooner and I do appreciate more and more the wonderful Bible Studies I have received on the Scriptures through reading Pastor C. T. Russell's Sermons also Questions and Answers along with Sunday Studies. I usually hand or post the Tribune to some one after marking well that portion which was most helpful to me.

Praying God's blessing on your efforts to serve Him, I remain,

Your well wisher,
MRS. WM. ZINK.

New York, Nov. 21.

I desire again to express my deep gratitude for the blessing I receive through reading the many excellent things in your paper. The printing of it is now beautifully and as the Editor is back of the type I want to give you credit for it, unless it is the most carnally thank my Heavenly Father for our dear Pastor's Sermons, which I could not do unless in print as my hearing is too dull; also I prize so much the Question Box and Bible Studies. Since you will be absent of the Lord as a co-worker in the grand work of publishing the glad tidings. I wish to thank you also that you have before this allowed in your paper some of the articles which have been a source of comfort to me and which I regret would be to late to use. So I venture to send the one enclosed which is, I think, brimful of encouragement.

Yours in the love of the Truth,

Georgia, Nov. 25.

A few days ago I received through the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society my subscription to your splendid paper for another year, also sent you a new subscriber. Should have received earlier as my subscription, I see, expires on the 15th inst. I do not wish to miss a single number and I look forward to the weekly visits with intense interest and pleasure and always devour the many good things contained in Pastor Russell's grand Sermons, the Sunday school lessons, Question Box, letter from the dear friends, etc., and I intend to be a subscriber as long as your paper continues such interesting reading matter, and I am sure the dear Lord will not forget to bless you for the services you are rendering through your printed page to advance His cause and spread the glad tidings of great joy, which shall eventually be unto all people. May He bountifully bless you in this life and that to come.

Yours for His coming Kingdom,
MRS. E. WALKER.

Illinois, Nov. 16.

I never enjoyed your paper more than I do now for the wonderful Truth it gives as kindly seeking bread upon the waters of humanity, and we do know that much fruitage will be gathered in the coming age as a result of your labors; for it shall not return to Him void, but shall accomplish that which will be pleasing to our loving Heavenly Father. And may kind Heaven richly reward your rich reward for all your labors. May the love and blessing follow you and rocely rewarded in the life to warrant desire.

MRS. M. E. DARINGER.

TRIBUNE APPRECIATIONS.

Oregon, November 29.

Dear Co-Laborer, in the Gospel of Christ:—Enclosed please find money order for a yearly subscription to the Tribune, which I desire you to send to the party in Canada whose address is enclosed herewith. I earnestly hope that the Tribune will, in time, become a truly welcome visitor in that household where it is now sent. Among the great troubles with so many people is their neglect and refusal to search out and find the other side of a subject, in this instance they pay no attention to the Scriptural instruction: "Prove all things; hold fast that which is good." (1 Thess. 5:21.) And that "which is good" applies here not only unto doctrine and faith as are a complete harmony and agreement with the word of God and with sanctified common sense. "Examine yourselves whether ye be in the faith: prove your own selves, etc." (2 Cor. 13:5.) But alas, the wisdom of the world is built upon foundations, on a foundation of ignorance and error. Not a single creed, system or denomination of church anywhere is the word nor in accord or in harmony with the statements of God's word. About the same lack of harmony prevails today as when Stephen chastised some of the inspired writings in the Bible as that which took place between Jesus and the Scribes and Pharisees (who constituted the "creeds of the Jewish Age"). Christ and his Apostles clearly and distinctly tell us about two different resurrections, the "first resurrection" is the called and "spiritual" resurrection unto spiritual beings and for the heavenly kingdom, and of the remainder of the dead the Apostle declares: "There is (both) a spiritual and a natural body" (1 Cor. 15:44). The "first resurrection is called "refreshing" "restitution of all things." (Acts 3:19-21) and this "refreshing" "restoration" for humanity will not 1,000 years after the "first" (Rev. 20:5; Isa. 11:12; 24:23) for the very purpose of bringing the human race out of sin and death. Jesus Christ came right sermony with the will of God and the "ransom" for Adam and his race full and complete human perfection, and a world-wide paradise on earth like the Garden of Eden, both of which has been lost to them for 6,000 years, because of the disobedience of our first parents back in the Garden of Eden. To restore back to Adam humanity both the intrinsic and the earthly conditions which father Adam and mother Eve enjoyed before they sinned, and thus establish our Lord's earthly kingdom—will be the mission of Christ and His church during the "feast" at His second coming. But notwithstanding these plain statements of God's word, creeds of men want to remove the whole human race from the earth by sending every body to heaven contrary to the Divine plan of God "Who made man a living soul (creation) that the dead (Psa. 5:5) and we read: "He formed the earth and made it. He created it not in vain, He formed it to be inhabited, etc." (Isa. 45:18.) It is to be forever inhabited by the human race made perfect during that 1,000 years' reign of Christ and His saints. "The saints are (at least) but the earth hath He given to the children of men." (Psa. 115:16.) God created lands for men to live on, to "rightly divide the word of Truth." "Rightly" means "correctly" but fail to understand that to "rightly divide the word of Truth" means to bring back, returning back the Adamic article, earthly nature, that was lost. Not a substitute of something higher or lower but simply and the exact original article which we have lost. For instance, Mr. A might lose a cent, later on Mr. A finds a cent, Mr. A is sorry, but this would not be restoring the lost cent, as the cent is still lost. But if Mr. A can trace the precisely the same things which Adam lost, or was responsible for, and did he locate and fit whole race was made to suffer for—see he lose his children's cent, or even his liberty, or only submit what he had left for them. Now, let us "rightly" consider that in the "first" Adam lose a home in heaven? No, because he never was in heaven. The first Adam lose a "spiritual body" No, he did not, for he never had a spiritual body at any time. Adam was man of flesh and blood—a human being—of a little lower station than the angels (Psa. 8:5.) But father Adam was created with a perfect body, free from all pains, sickness, death and decay. Adam lose a right in possession of an Edenic home, an earthly paradise—and eternal life and eternal privileges home on the earthen conditions of his entire obedience to the will of God. But also lose for all of those earthly blessings were lost by Adam through his disobedience of the will of God—everything was put from his happy (earthly) home and sentenced to die. For God so loved the world (earthly) that He gave His only begotten Son (a ransom price) that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish (die) but have everlasting life (earthly) (John 3:16). Yes,

Amalgamated Society of Engineers and a Question of Rules--Hollow-ware Strike Succeeds--Speltermen Demand Abolition of Sunday Labor--London Taxi Cab Drivers May Strike--Shadow of Compulsory Arbitration--Bad Accident Year for Miners.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

LONDON, Dec. 8.—The Briton's deeply rooted reverence for constitutional procedure is singularly illustrated by a schism which is now raging within the Amalgamated Society of Engineers. The legal intricacies and the contentious details it involves would fill a volume but the simple facts of the case are these. A purely legislative assembly known as the Delegate Meeting met last Whitsuntide for the purpose of amending and revising the rules of the society. The members of this little Parliament were recruited from the rank and file of working members, and represented groups of branches in all parts of the world. They sat for over fifty all day sittings extending over about nine weeks. Having revised the rules, the meeting dissolved, and the delegates returned to private membership once more. But the Executive Council, a body composed of eight salaried officials, took exception to some of Delegate Meeting's decisions, and declared them to be "unconstitutional."

They had no constitutional right to veto the legislation of the Delegate meeting so they took the course of calling a ballot vote of the members to determine whether the debated revisions should or should not become part of the new rules. The result has been a majority in favor of the permanent Executive. A most perplexing legal tangle has resulted. As there is no constitutional sanction for a referendum, the re-amended rules cannot be incorporated in the rule-book without the sanction of the Delegate Meeting—which is now dissolved. The only course constitutionally open is to re-call the Delegate Meeting. This will involve bringing delegates from Africa, Australia and America, besides some thirty or more members of home branches. And here the real trouble may come. For the question will arise whether the re-called Delegate Meeting is under any constitutional obligation to endorse a vote of censure, given itself which it may regard as having been unconstitutionally involved, and therefore as having no authority which it needs to obey. And there you are "or would be if it came to that," with a deadlock that it would puzzle the subtlest constitutional lawyer to get out of.

All the operatives in the hollow-ware industry of the Black Country who have been on strike for the last six weeks are back at work as the result of having gained everything they asked for. The men obtain a 10 per cent advance all round on their piece rates, whilst the wages of £2.50 for women (for a week of 54 hours) is assured at the works which previous to the strike remained outside the agreement of last June. Other gains that may be attributed to the strong stand made by the unions concerned in this include the termination of the sub-contracting system in the industry, the probable application in it of the Trade Board Act, and the calling of the Home Office's attention to the unhealthy and dangerous conditions under which it is carried on.

The abolition of Sunday labor is demanded by the Swansea speltermen and at four works a strike is in progress, most of the men being in the Workers or General Laborers' Union. It had been hoped that the employers would consent to discuss the matter but they intimated on November 23 that they were convinced that nothing would be gained by a joint meeting, adding that the abolition of Sunday labor was impracticable. Spelter furnaces are kept going continuously, and the employers hold that damping down would entail much loss as well as reduce output. The union members among the speltermen are showing much determination and they are receiving public support. Canon Otter has forwarded them a resolution of the Imperial Sunday Alliance sympathizing with their efforts.

The London taxi-cab drivers are preparing for a fight against the proposed increase in the price of the petrol supplied to them. Petrol has gone up rapidly during the last few months and the employers have in consequence intimated that after January 1 drivers must pay 26 cents per gallon instead of 16 cents. The men state that the average daily wage is only a little over a dollar. They are not paid a wage by the cab owners but are allowed to deduct a quarter of their total fares. Under the new order 30 cents will go for petrol out of this. The employers are entitled to make the increase under the conciliation agreement of last March, which permitted a proportionate increase in the price of petrol to drivers if the trade price rose over 12 cents per cent. The men hotly declare that the fact that petrol has risen almost 70 per cent. in price renders the clause void. At any rate, they claim it is unworkable and meetings arranged by the Cabdrivers' Union are being held at which the Executive is promised support in any course it may deem necessary. There are about seven thousand taxi-cab drivers in London, and the building of a strike fund has already been begun.

The Dundee carters have made a demand for an increase of wages from $5.75 to $6.25 per week. In the carters' strike of a year ago there was also a wage dispute between the dockers and their employers, but as far as is known no trouble is expected from that quarter on this occasion.

The men's demand has been for

THE FEDERAL EIGHT-HOUR LAW.

In a current number of the Survey, John A. Fitch contributes an article on the Federal eight-hour law adopted by the Sixty-second Congress. His array of opinions gathered from trade publications devoted to the iron and steel industry are significant in the fact that great activity in the iron trade is revealed, with ever-increasing profits, coupled with the avowed policy of the steel companies to fight for the maintenance of low wages and long hours. A hint is given to the iron and steel giants that conciliatory policy would be the better part of discretion. The article declares:

One of the most important labor bills passed by the last session of Congress was the eight-hour law applying to government contracts. This law provides that in future contracts involving the employment of labor to which the United States, the District of Columbia, or any Territory may be a party, there shall be a clause stipulating that the hours of labor shall not be in excess of eight per day. There are a number of exceptions to this general provision, the most important having reference to contracts for transportation by land or water, the transmission of intelligence, the purchase of supplies, and the construction of lines of levees or revetments on navigable waters.

The ultimate effect this law will actually have on industry remains to be seen. If rigidly enforced, it will, of course, operate much further to the application than to government contracts. A plant working on government work for eight hours will not meet the requirements of the law with respect to those particular contracts without applying the eight-hour day also when working on private contracts. If two eight-hour shifts can be divided, one part of it working on government contracts under the eight hour day and the other part on private contracts on a longer day. There have already been suggestions that the law is unconstitutional and it will undoubtedly go to the courts for a decision before it has the effect long. It may be, too, that the law will be nullified in some of its important provisions on account of a certain looseness in the wording

MANUFACTURES SHOULD NOT BE TAXED.

THE state commission which recently held hearings in this city for the purpose of advisement with business-men in regard to the proposed revision of the state's tax and revenue laws will not have to go very far in order to ascertain the fact that the business interests of this community are vigorously opposed to the repeal of the tax exemption on manufactures. It ought not to be necessary for any Pennsylvania community to protest to a body of state legislators against any such proposition, for the proposition should never have been uttered. And yet it is said that there is serious talk among the politicians and legislative managers of a tax on manufactures, and that, in short, in the search for new revenues a tax on manufactures may be adopted.

The businessmen who are active leaders in the movement to promote the growth and prosperity of Pittsburgh put out a few months ago a pamphlet showing what a great advantage Pittsburgh had over manufactures in the cities of other states through Pennsylvania's policy of granting manufactures tax exemption. That this policy, which has long been followed with excellent results and has been regarded as a settled one, should be called into question now, is a symptom not of muck of progressive government as of threatened governmental extravagance. There is not the least question that the law of the state exempting machinery and industrial equipment from taxation on personal property has had considerable to do with Pennsylvania's manufacturing supremacy. We have a great natural advantages, of course, but these natural advantages need to be supplemented by liberal and enlightened tax policy. Owing to exemption of manufactures the personal property in Pittsburgh on which tax is collected by the state is less than $4,000,000. In Baltimore where manufacturing shipment is not exempt, the amount of personality which is taxed is $251,000,000. Does anybody doubt that this fact explains at least a part of Pittsburgh's greater manufacturing prosperity?

Any legislative commission which recommended the laying of a tax on manufactures would invite denunciation by employers and workingmen alike. This is a penalty and handicap under the great manufacturing state of the Union, but competition from other states is becoming constantly stronger and more determined, and we need to keep our proposition as free from tax burdens as possible in order to meet competition most effectually. The state has abundant revenue now. It is the reasonable thing to do to first study how to equalize taxation rather than increase it. Any increase of direct taxation to accommodate appropriation-seekers at Harrisburg will violate the spirit of all the recent party platforms and pledges and the people will make careful note of the name of every member of the legislature who aids in such a program. It is to be hoped that the commission will be made to understand this before it leaves Pittsburgh.

WILL HEALTH PROGRESS MAKE FAMINE?

CORRESPONDENT William G. Shepherd's dispatches from Europe seem to hold out hope that tuberculosis will soon take its place among the diseases that will cease to ravage. It will be one of the long-gone-by extinct pestilence. It is strange, but important question arises in this connection. As we master disease, what shall we do with all the population?

War, pestilence and famine make the question of taking care of the people very simple. The Black Plague in England centuries ago made population so scarce that wages rose so that laws were passed by the landed gentry and nobility establishing a maximum wage, instead of a minimum. The boat load in the China seas, the famine districts in the United States this problem seems afar off. But with natural opportunities for self-employment monopolized, it may not be so remote after all. Private monopoly brings poverty on long before the country is fully peopled. It does this by charging high tolls not only for the use of the land, in city, country, forest and mining region, but high prices for food, clothing, shelter and all other necessaries. The restraint of private monopoly will therefore continue to be the paramount issue in our national politics.

UNION LABEL PROMOTERS

UTICA, N. Y., Dec. 9.—The last convention of the New York State Federation of Labor, held at Poughkeepsie, passed a resolution authorizing the secretary of the New York State Federation of Labor to request every central body or local union to select in their locality a person to be known as a union label promotor. Upon the appointment of these officials a roster is to be compiled and a copy submitted to all national or international unions which have labels, cards, or buttons. The duties prescribed for these label promoters is to visit the different labor unions in their respective localities and use all means to promote agitation for union labels, suggesting to the local unions to incorporate in their order of business a period for the discussion and advancement of union labels.

TYPOS' HOME ANNIVERSARY

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 7.—At the recent meeting of the Union Printers' Home trustees a motion was adopted that the membership of the International Typographical Union be notified that the twenty-fifth anniversary of the institution's establishment would occur in 1913, and that it be suggested that the membership be requested to look kindly on the idea of holding the convention that year in Colorado Springs, with the view of featuring and celebrating the anniversary.

GEORGE F. BAKER, THE SILENT MAN OF MILLIONS.

IT is almost as hard for the multirich man to keep out of the public limelight as it for the camera to pass through the proverbial needle's eye. George F. Baker, one of the four richest men in America, is perhaps an exception. He has practically kept out of the spotlight's glare all his life. From a clerkship he has risen to be the largest shareholder in the coal railroads and has a commanding influence in express companies, the rubber trust and a multitude of other enterprises. He is head of a bonanza bank and as the silent man of Wall street ranks next to Morgan. He is one of America's biggest financiers and still one of the least known by the general public in this great age of common publicity.

WORKERS GET REDUCED HOURS

UTICA, Dec. 10.—Organizers for the American Federation of Labor have succeeded in getting an agreement with the Textile Manufacturers at Little Falls, N. Y., where a strike has been in progress, to reduce the hours from sixty to fifty-four without a reduction in wages. This achievement was in the face of the fact that the I. W. W. were endeavoring to frustrate any settlement which might be made, although it is currently reported that the leaders of the I. W. W. were about to abandon the situation and leave the strikers upon their own resources.

TO AID MINE BUREAU

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—The United States Public Health Service has joined the Bureau of Mines in its campaign to lessen the dangers of mining. Surg. Gen. Blue has appointed Prof. Reid Hunt as a member of a committee which is being organized by the Bureau of Mines to study improved methods of resuscitating persons overcome by poisonous gases in mines. An investigation will be made in the anthracite and bituminous coal fields of Pennsylvania.

COAL TO ADVANCE.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—Increasingly come reports from coal operators, wholesale and retail dealers, that the price of coal, both anthracite and bituminous will be advanced in price on the first appearance of frigid weather. There apparently is no abatement in the steady advance in the price of practically all foodstuffs, and now that coal is to also receive a boost, a course in home economics would not only be instructive, but could be practically applied in making the arrears wage meet the legitimate and necessary expenses of living.

LABOR'S INTERESTS AT NATIONAL CAPITAL.

Local Union Officials of the A. F. of L. to Be Bonded by One Company--Employers on the Great Lakes Combine to Defeat the Eight-Hour Law--Parcels Post to go Into Effect January 1. Railway Commissioners Discuss Grade Crossings.

RISE IN IRON AND STEEL.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10. — How prices of iron and steel products rose after the United States Steel Corporation was organized was incorporated in the testimony in the government suit to dissolve the Steel Trust by Dr. Francis Walker, Monopoly Commissioner of Corporations. Dr. Walker stated that the average increase in the products was $2.85 per ton, or 35 per cent. The highest increase was in Southern iron manufacturers, being 79 per cent. Prices in the United States were uniformly higher after the era of combination than in England and Germany. On January 1, 1911, when the United States prices fell much lower than those abroad on account of the local competitive market, being restored." Sources of government information presented to the Steel Trust report of the Bureau of Corporation were attacked by attorneys for the trust.

EGGARLY WAGES, BIG PROFITS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10. — The United Cigar Stores Company declares quarterly dividends ranging from 25 per cent to 200 per cent. In financial circles the report is received with acclaim. With these big dividends, however, there is another side to the story which has been left untold. There are many thousands of women, children, and men who make possible these great profits, and who only are awarded a beggarly share in the income of the trust in the form of wages. It is stated upon good authority and by those who have made investigations, that the employes of the tobacco trust, who manufacture the cigars disposed of by the United Cigar Stores Company receive but a pitiful compensation for their labor. Practically all the trust factories are operated by non-union men, women, and children, and this giant corporation is grinding out dividends at the expense of its helpless employes. There's one way to aid these helpless employes—purchase only goods that bear the union label.

NIGHT SCHOOL VERY POPLAR

EVERETT, Wash., Dec. 10.—The first session of night school in the Everett High School building has opened with a promise of being highly successful. The enrollment already rolled in 468, an increase of 65 over the enrollment of one year ago. Those who have enrolled are made up wholly of working men and women, who desire to fit themselves for better work in their trades or occupations, or who aspire to something higher. It is interesting to note the vocations of those enrolled, and are as follows: Industrial laborers, 69; mill workers (lumber mills), 43; clerks, 42; carpenters, 7; plumbers, 1; electrical workers, 6; business men, 5; mail clerks, 4; farmers, 5, harness makers, 3; mechanics (no trade given), 14; tailors, 3; engineers, 3; salesmen, 4; bookkeepers, 16; stenographers, 16; teachers, 15; the balance in make up the total of 468 being scattered among a variety of occupations.

Pastor Russell's Sermon

JESUS FATHER OF SAVED HUMANITY.

He Will Give His Earthly Children Everlasting Life — Importance of Bible Study—Pastor Russell Says Scriptures Are Self-Interpreting. Texts Once Dark Become Luminous. Jehovah is the Life-Giver of the Church, but Jesus Will Be the Regenerator of the World. Humanity.

CINCINNATI, O., Dec. 8.—Pastor Russell's meetings were the religious features here. We report one of his addresses from the text: "His name shall be called the * * * Everlasting Father." (Isa. 9:6.) He said:

Our forefathers had much less opportunity for study than have we. Not only is education general today, but the facilities for study are common. Every home has at least one Bible, and good Bible wherewith to study. Moreover, the curse of toil is lifting; less sweat of face is required to earn our daily bread; consequently we have more time at our disposal wherein to ascertain the things freely given unto us of God through His Word. And what beautiful and convenient helps we possess, with clear print, marginal references, concordances, helps, etc.! God no promise for such privileges!

Bible students are learning to use these methods and are being blessed in their study. The Bible is being studied as never before, and being allowed to interpret itself, one passage throwing light upon another. This, evidently, was the Divine design; and in addition to all this, we have the thought that now is God's "due time" to grant blessings and enlightenment to the world along secular lines. All this refreshment is coming for we believe, because we are in the dawning of a New Dispensation, which shortly is to bring more wonderful things. However, we are still in what St. Peter terms "the dark place," waiting for that "day dawn" to grow more clear, and we do well to take close heed to the light upon our path, which falls from our Lamp, the Bible.

CHRIST NOT THE CHURCH'S FATHER.

Item after item of Divine Truth becoming clear, sheds a reflection on other precious items. Old, familiar Scriptures have a new-fold significance. Our text is one of these. No one will dispute that it refers to our Lord Jesus Christ. He is called Wonderful, Counselor, the Mighty God, the Everlasting Father for the Father who gives everlasting life, the Prince of Peace. Those titles are still prophetic. Our great Redeemer has not yet become the Prince of Peace; for peace has not yet come. We are still under the reign of sin and death. Our Redeemer has not yet become the Everlasting Father.

Only the Church has yet been dealt with, and Jesus is not the Father of the Church. He is our Elder Brother; or under another figure, He is our betrothed, and at His Second Coming is to be our Heavenly Bride groom. The Scriptures distinctly tell us that Jesus is not the Church's Father, or Lifegiver. St. Peter says, "The God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ * * * hath begotten us." (1 Peter 1:3.) Jesus testifies to the same effect. After His resurrection, when speaking to Mary, He said, "I ascend unto My Father, and your Father; to My God, and your God." (John xx. 17.) The Scriptures never tell Jesus after such a manner as to speak of Jesus as the Church's Father, and there is intimate that He would become Bridegroom to His own child.

JEHOVAH, FATHER OF THE NEW CREATION.

We must remember that the Church ceases to be human, earthly. She becomes God's New Creation. She is begotten of the Holy Spirit now, and will be born from the dead to the Holy Spirit nature in the First Resurrection, to the Divine nature. She will be like her Lord, His Bride, (Revelation xxi. 9, 10; Romans viii. 17.) To her, old things pass away; all things become new." Under the begetting of the Holy Spirit she becomes in the present life transformed by the renewing of her mind and sees her inheritance on things above. Her perfecting in the resurrection is clearly stated by St. Paul, who says that in the resurrection each seed will have its own kind of body.

The human, or Adamic seed will have human bodies; but those begotten again of the Holy Spirit during this Gospel Age become the new Seed to whom will be given new spirit bodies. Thus they shall be made like their glorified Savior and Bridegroom, and be "like Him, * * * see Him as He is"—a spirit being. Describing the Spiritual Seed and its resurrection, St. Paul says, "It is sown in weakness; it is raised in power; it is sown in dishonor; it is raised in glory. It is sown an animal body; it is raised a spiritual body. There is an animal body, (human) and there is a spiritual body"—celestial, heavenly. —1 Corinthians xv. 43, 44.

JESUS THE SECOND ADAM.

After the exaltation of the Church by the First Resurrection, next will follow the awakening, hoping, blessing, uplifting of humanity in general; but that work will be exclusively in the hands of the glorified Savior. St. Paul assures us that the Father will put all things in subjection to His Son, for the very work of blessing and assisting the world of mankind for whom He died. Then the Son will deliver up the Kingdom authority to the Father, that Jehovah "may be All and in all." But during the thousand years, absolute control of the world will be in the hands of the Great Messiah, who will put down all things opposed to the Divine will, and lift up the willing and obedient from sin, degradation and the tomb.

St. Peter tells us that at the Second Coming of Jesus Divine Blessings will be showered upon the earth—"Times of Refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord; and He shall send Jesus Christ." He tells us that the heavens will retain Jesus until the Restitution Times, of which God has been telling us through the mouth of all His holy Prophets since the world began."—Acts iii, 19-21.

THE SECOND ADAM'S CHILDREN.

The Bible teaches that Jesus is the Second Adam. The first Adam had the privilege of being the father of a human race, in the image and likeness of God and blessed with everlasting life; but only a world wide Paradise. All this Adam lost by disobedience and came under Divine sentence of death, called in the Scriptures the "curse." He cannot eradicate himself, and therefore cannot extricate his children from this calamity. Neither can any of his children give to their race the Prize of Peace; for peace has not yet come. We are still under the reign of sin and death. Our Redeemer has not yet become the Everlasting Father.

Only the Church has yet been dealt with, and Jesus is not the Father of the Church. He is our Elder Brother; or under another figure, He is our betrothed, and at His Second Coming is to be our Heavenly Bride groom. The Scriptures distinctly tell us that Jesus is not the Church's Father, or Lifegiver. St. Peter says, "The God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ * * * hath begotten us." (1 Peter 1:3.) Jesus testifies to the same effect. After His resurrection, when speaking to Mary, He said, "I ascend unto My Father, and your Father; to My God, and your God." (John xx. 17.) The Scriptures never tell Jesus after such a manner as to speak of Jesus as the Church's Father, and there is intimate that He would become Bridegroom to His own child.

JEHOVAH, FATHER OF THE NEW CREATION.

We must remember that the Church ceases to be human, earthly. She becomes God's New Creation. She is begotten of the Holy Spirit now, and will be born from the dead to the Holy Spirit nature in the First Resurrection, to the Divine nature. She will be like her Lord, His Bride, (Revelation xxi. 9, 10; Romans viii. 17.) To her, old things pass away; all things become new." Under the begetting of the Holy Spirit she becomes in the present life transformed by the renewing of her mind and sees her inheritance on things above. Her perfecting in the resurrection is clearly stated by St. Paul, who says that imperfections to perfection of human nature:

"THE EVERLASTING FATHER."

We should carefully note that the Man Jesus was not the Everlasting Father. The Man Jesus gave Himself a Ransom-price—a corresponding price for the man Adam, in order that He might become the Second Adam and have the rightful authority to give everlasting life to Adam and his children.

Jesus did not become the Second Adam until He had finished laying down the Ransom-price. So long as Jesus maintained His earthly life He would have no life to give to humanity; for He would need His life for Himself. When God raised Him from the dead, no longer a human being, but rewarded with the Divine nature, then He was in position to be the Second Adam. His exaltation gave Him increased power, and the merit of His sacrifice constituted the price for the life-rights of Adam and his race. Our Redeemer is not the Second Adam yet. He has the right to be the Second Adam, and in the Father's "due time" He will establish His right to that position, and give everlasting life-rights to as many of Adam's children as will become obedient to the Divine Law.

THE CHURCH THE SECOND EVE.

While Adam was alone he did not become a father. God caused him to sleep and from his side (rib) He made Eve to be his joint-heir in his inheritance, and his assistant in the work of generating the human family. Thus the Lord has not become a Father. But He has gone into the deep sleep of death. His side has been wounded, and the first result is the gradual development of a Bride class. And as Jesus passed from the human to the spirit condition before He could be ready to be the Second Adam, so the Church, as the Second Companion, must pass from the human to the spirit condition before she can fulfil her part in God's great Plan as the Second Eve.

Viewed from a scientific standpoint the picture is complete. The first of the child comes, not from the mother, but from the father. So our Lord, the Redeemer, is the life-giver. The Church is not the life-giver. She is mother, nevertheless has a very important part in the Divine arrangement for the bringing forth of children. So the Church of Christ is to be the mother of the next part in the great work of Regeneration and Restitution. The mother is the nourisher and caretaker of the children; and the Church, as the Bride, has to do laboring with the great Life-giver, will nourish, sustain, care for, supervise the interests of mankind in the Regeneration.

Is it any wonder, in view of the work that God has outlined for His Son and for the Church, that He should consider it necessary to give us precious promises for faith, for loyalty, for obedience? Is it any wonder, in view of the work which He has for us to do for mankind that He declares that the Redeemer Himself "by the things of God in relation to humanity"? Ah, truly, we have come to understand the high calling of God to the Church and the great work of God that is to be accomplished for and in the world of mankind. We are amazed. Our souls cry out, True and righteous are Thy ways, Lord God Almighty! Who shall not come and worship before Thee, O Lord, when Thy righteous judgments shall be made manifest!"—Revelation xv, 4.

THE NEW ORDER OF THINGS.

Guided by the Divine Word, the eye of faith may see, not only the Church in great glory with her Lord, but also the blessing of humanity. First in the Kingdom will be the Redeemer Himself, King of kings, and Lord of lords, with whom will be associated His Queen Consort, will be the elect Little Flock, the saintly ones of all nations, having His Father's name in their foreheads. Thereof all the world of mankind who will be infinite, as it is written: "He shall not judge by the hearing of the ear, neither by the sight of the eyes, but He shall judge righteously and righteous."

Then next to these will be the Great Company, who will do a work of supervising the affairs of the children of Christ, for as a teacher may have a maid for an assistant, so also will the Bride of Christ have these assistants. We read in the Scriptures that the Bride is all glorious within, and that she shall be promoted into the presence of the Great King, Jehovah, in raiment "downgone with gold." Gold is a symbol of the Divine nature. We read that "the virgins, her companions that follow her," shall also be brought into the King's presence.—Psalm xlv, 9-15.

As Isaac typified our Lord Jesus, and as Rebecca typified the Church, so Rebecca's maids typified these "virgins, her companions," as corresponding service to the Ladies of old. All these will be on the spirit plane—invisible to men. The Heavenly Host will be quite sufficient to serve the interests of the redeemed race, whose regeneration to perfect perfection will be their work for a thousand years.

"PRINCES IN ALL THE EARTH."

But while the Kingdom of God will be spiritual, it will have earthly representatives, who will be perfect, and thus ensamples of what Regeneration will mean to the willing and obedient. These Princes will be taken already perfect from amongst men. They are composed of the Worthies of mankind who lived before Pentecost, when the spirit begetting first came to the Church as a result of Jesus' appearing before the Father as her Advocate—Psalm xlv, 16.

Who were those one-time fathers to become the children? The Scriptural answer is that Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, and the Prophets were call the fathers; that when Jesus came He was the child of David and Abraham according to the flesh, through His mother; and that those Worthies themselves were His fathers according to the flesh. But they are not His fathers according to the spirit. They have had nothing whatever to do with this present generation as a New Creature, besides of the Holy Spirit of the Divine nature. They are His fathers no longer. They in turn will get their life from the glorified Messiah; hence they will be His children, receiving their everlasting life from Him as Redeemer, the Lifegiver, the Second Adam.

Because of their loyalty and faithfulness to God in their day we have the testimony that they pleased God. Nevertheless they are not perfect in so far as blessings until the redemptive work is finished. Neither could they follow next to the Redeemer, for that a place in the Father's program was arranged for the Bride, the Lamb's Wife. Thus St. Paul tells us that God has reserved some better thing for us in the Divine plan, and that they without us will not be made perfect."—Hebrews xi, 39-40.

But when the Church has been glorified and the Kingdom shall have been established under the spirit plan, the next thing in order will be the blessing of the Ancient Worthies. They will be the first members of the human family to receive resurrection, which will be a resurrection from sin, and they have already been approved by the Divine standard. Not having been heretofore of the Holy Spirit, they will not be spirit beings in the resurrection, but perfect men. As such these will be Princes in all the earth, superior to the remainder of the race, and representatives of the Kingdom class to be Princes, chiefs or rulers amongst men. They will constitute the earthly phase of the Kingdom of Messiah. Men will see them and receive their instructions and laws, but will not see the real, spiritual Kingdom.

Jesus expressed this thought to the Jews, saying: "Ye shall see Abraham, Isaac and Jacob and all the Prophets in the Kingdom, but yourselves will be outcasts"—not in Kingdom power, but in a subordinate position, subjects. How beautiful, how complete, how perfect are the arrangements of the Divine Plan for the great work of God outlined in the Bible! When mankind shall come to see His Wisdom, Justice, Love and Power, and shall have had opportunity to see His glory, and rest the number of those who must, because of love for self, be destroyed in the Second Death, will be proportionately small.

Appreciations

Ohio, Nov. 27.

I appreciate your efforts in endeavoring to please your readers with such valuable reading matter as the sermons, Sunday school lessons, Bible questions and answers and other good news of the day, and as long as you continue to print the sermons I shall be one of your subscribers.

Yours truly,
MAX MATTHEWS.

Michigan, Nov. 29.

I am glad to be able once more to express my appreciation of your most worthy paper and the bold manner in which it handles the Truth. I do enjoy the sermons and question box so much and they truly are a source of much information to all. The Battle of Armageddon is especially worthy of attention, showing as it does the clean cut distinction between Truth and error, superstition and religion pure and undefiled. Dear Lord, I would like twenty-five copies of Tribune of November 27 to give away among my acquaintances, as I think it is the best ever. God speed you in the good work and may the Lord bless you abundantly.

Yours truly,
ERNEST WILKINSON.

Oklahoma, Dec. 1.

I write to let you know that I appreciate your valuable paper. I would like to say a few words to some of those ministers that are of the liberal kind of ere has not been taught by the American preachers save the privilege of reading it and will now be the devil would rake the coals over me and burn me up. Dear Lord and some of His ministers that God has put back in place for the divine truth and truth alone. Dear Lord, I ask it Thru 1-9. Now that would be a glorious land for me to have stood because I trouble as the word of the Lord; Isa. 58:1, but not at the minister's word. I know he was one of the judges. Isa. 3:22, but it will enough Pastor Russell to see that I have read it. May the Lord bless you for printing his Sermons and the rest of the religious writings. Down with error.

Yours for Truth,

I have just renewed my subscription for the Tribune through the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society.

I especially appreciate the religious section, Pastor Russell's Sermons particularly, and also the Sunday School Lessons, Question Box and Poems and notes of interest in the religious world.

It is a wonderful work you are engaged in, and I am glad to see the Truth into so many homes. May the good work continue.

Wishing you the Lord's blessing in all the ways he sees fit to use you, I am,

Sincerely yours,
AMY E. BARNES.

"The human heart is like a millstone in a mill; the Truth is the wheat under it, it turns and grinds and bruises the wheat into flour; if you put number of the best of all grain in the Gospel of the Kingdom the world so that the Truth may be scattered, you are entering into the joy of their Lord and he has come forth and has girded himself and is serving us at the marvelous table of Present Truth.

Brother Greig's suggestion to "Use the Truth but sell it not" is a good one. I have often wished that someone with less of money would buy and send a thousand of the first volume of "Studies in the Scriptures," Karaite edition, and send to me for distribution. Some people will read a book if you lend it to them, but would not buy it at all. In my business I could place a thousand first volumes in the hands of people who read in the car of 1913. I would not want the large size volume as it is hard to carry in the pocket. The people I deal with are traveling and I would have no trouble to get them to read. Volume Karaite size, as the Karaite size but smaller and perfect. I have since coming into present Truth distributed over fifty thousand "Peoples Pulpit" and several thousand volumes of "Studies in the Scriptures." I do not have the funds already broken several into the truth. The harvest is ripe but the reapers few. I am not financially able to buy the books myself. Now I am going to see if out of your thousands of readers I can convince who wishes me to put out a thousand first volumes. Karaite size in 1913. Send them by express or freight prepaid to Salada, N. C.

Yours in the harvest work,
J. W. HEATHERLY.

P. S.—Perhaps there are some who would like to get out in the harvest but who cannot on account of sickness or some other reason. If so would be glad to send me these books so I could fill their places.

We very keenly appreciate the Labor Tribune, especially the religious features.

We recommend it to our friends and several of them have subscribed.

We are certainly spotting out an up-to-date paper and striking a responsive chord.

Yours sincerely,

Having been a subscriber of your valuable paper, Labor Tribune, for the last few months, I wish to beg leave to add my appreciation for the privilege of reading Pastor Russell's Sermons, Brooklyn Tabernacle and the Question Box, in such a free, liberal and elevating paper as the Labor Tribune. Hoping that you may continue to publish the same, the other features of the paper are well liked, but above all, the Sermons. From a pleased reader,

Yours truly,

Canada, Dec. 2.

I rejoice with you in your pleasure of making the Tribune such a splendid message of good news, because I know you could not do such a work and not receive some of the Joy of service. The Tribune is eminently fair in its industrial news and comments, besides being, as Brother Greig would put it, a "Glorious dispenser" of the best of all news of the Gospel of the Kingdom the world so much needs. The servants of God are entering into the joy of their Lord and he has come forth and has girded himself and is serving us at the marvelous table of Present Truth.

Have just renewed my subscription through the Watch Tower and wish to take this opportunity to express my appreciation of the many helpful things I find in your paper that gladden the heart, the wonderful Bible Tidings of Great Joy to receive from Pastor Russell's Sermons and the International Sunday School Lessons, also such a fine exposition of the Sunday School Lessons. It is indeed a privilege and honor to our home.

May the Lord bless you in your continued work is my prayer.

Yours for the Truth,

Illinois, Dec. 2.

I herewith enclose a postal money order for which I wish you would kindly send the Labor Tribune one year to the address below. Will be now mine a little later.

I have been a subscriber to the Labor Tribune now soon one year, and find it a clean, and must say, the cleanest and best newspaper published.

I am very highly pleased with the manner in which you publish Pastor Russell's Sermons, also the Sunday School Lessons, Question Box and the Letters of Appreciation.

As several is anxiously awaited each week and I feel I could not get along without it as long as you continue to publish Pastor Russell's Sermons and are so pleased with the entire paper also.

I feel assured you will realize a blessing from the Lord as you continue to be faithful in spreading the true light.

Yours very respectfully,
FRANK PETERSON.

Indiana, Dec. 3.

I desire to express my appreciation for the many valuable lessons that your paper contains particularly Pastor Russell's Sermons also the Questions. Will you please change my address. We have now moved in our 23rd of the current week.

Sincerely yours,
DRUSILLA REILLY.

Kansas, Dec. 3.

Having been a subscriber and reader of the Tribune for a number of years, I wish to add my testimony with the other appreciative readers of your paper. We especially appreciate the Sermons, especially at this time of the year, and extra special reports of Pastor Russell's discourses, especially, and with your fine dealings with all the subject matter of the Tribune.

I am sending you some questions for Everybody's Question Box and would be pleased to receive an answer either in the Tribune or by mail as you choose best.

Your brother in Christ,
A. B. PERINE.

Pennsylvania, Dec. 5.

I wish to add my appreciation to your many kinds of valuable work. The Tribune is a visitor to our home for six months and outside of the Watch Tower, I think it is the most excellent of all papers.

Especially do I love and adore it because it so extensively, without stint, publishes Pastor Russell's most valuable Sermons, and such articles of great interest, along the line of Truth, as it is not to be regarded in God's Word. Indeed unlocking to us the great treasures house and giving us meat in due season through this "good door" to accept the Master's invitation to "Enter ye in" and receive the full measure of good things ready to be served in due season. Among the many good things Canada is doing, are some the anarchistic boat sank over a hundred hundred years ago. The sad tidings of great joy which shall shortly be to all people peace on earth, good will to men." What a chorus of tidings. "Lo! the people praise thee, O Lord, let all the people praise Thee." Our noble editor of the Tribune deserves our highest admiration for his fearless championship of courage while within the mutterings and thunderings of "Armageddon" and "Battle of the Great Day of God Almighty," are still fearlessly, with God's Word in hand strong as ever, carries promptly forward this mighty power and witnessing for the Truth. Thanks be to God for His gift.

Now dear hearts, let us once more go back to Bethlehem. The year is on the wane. A truce to strife that wearies all. A truce to grief and pain. Peace, O Bethlehem, let us return once more and hear that song of the angels, "On earth peace, good will to men," now very soon.

With grateful appreciation, yours in the Master's service,

MRS. E. J. HOFFMAN.

Massachusetts, Dec. 7.

I cannot afford to miss these Sermons, neither the best of all. I wish to express my appreciation of the truth you are doing. May yours be "well done" when the service is ended.

Yours truly,
MARGARETTE H. BARROWS.

Startling Presentation of Coming Events.

PASTOR RUSSELL'S VIEWS.

Churches of All Denominations and the Civil Powers of Earth Are About to Unite in Common Cause—Powerful Influence Preparing for the Battle at Armageddon—A Reign of Anarchy Will Be the Result of the Warfare Until The Messiah Takes Control.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Nov. 3.—The Brooklyn Academy of Music was crowded to the limit of its seating capacity when Pastor Russell's discourse on the "Battle of Armageddon—His Presence" was announced. The subject was: "He gathered them together unto a place called in the Hebrew tongue Armageddon." Revelation xvi, 16. The speaker said:

Armageddon in the Hebrew signifies the "Hill of Megiddo," or Mount of Destruction. It was famous in a battle field in Old Testament times.

The Lord has seen fit to associate the name Armageddon, with the great controversy between Truth and Error, right and wrong, God and Satan, upon with which this Age will close, perish, and the New Age of Messiah's glory be ushered in. For this reason many highly symbolistic figures of speech in the last book of the Bible, evidently with a view to making certain important truths until the due time for their revealment. But even in the due time the Bible assures us, "None of the wicked shall understand" (Daniel xii, 8, 10—none who are out of heart harmony with God—but only the wise of His people—the "wise virgin" class of the Master's parable.

I have long avoided presentation of my understanding of our text and its context. I take it up now by request and because I believe it is due time to be understood. I claim for it present inspiration. In some particulars my views agree with those of other Bible students, and in other respects they disagree. Each hearer must use his own judgment, do his own study, and reach his own conclusions.

Kindly remember that I am not responsible for the figures of speech used by the Lord, by the apostles, or by indited constitute a terrible arraignment of institutions which we have all revered, used and which embrace good masses of good words and good works. God's saints people in these various institutions, believe that nearly three are ignored when systems as a whole are dealt with in prophecy

The Trigue, Beast's False Prophet.

Our context tells us that three unpure spirits (teachings) will go forth from the mouths of the Dragon, the Beast and the False Prophet, and that three will be in accord, and symbolically by the doctrines are represented by "frogs." These three unclean spirits have a mighty influence throughout the civilized earth. They are to gather the kings of the earth and lead many to their allegiance, to the great Battle of Armageddon.

The ecclesiastical kings and princes, and their retinues of clergy and lay people adherents, will be gathered in solid phalanx—Protestant and Catholic. The kings and princes of commerce and society as can be influenced by them, will be gathered to the same side. The political kings and princes, with all their henchmen and retainers, will follow in line on the same side. The financial kings and princes, with their aids and all whom they can influence by the great gigantic power ever yet exercised in the world, will join the same side, according to this prophecy.

These "doctrines of demons," represented by the "frogs," will lead astray people in this great battle of the wheels of liberty and progress will be turned backward and mediæval resources will be employed in the interests for self-preservation—for the maintenance of the present order of things.

In giving the present order of things necessary for us to indicate what is symbolized by the Dragon, the Beast, and the False Prophet. Bible students of nearly all denominations agree with us that the "Dragon" of Revelation represents the papacy. Protestant and Protestant interpreters generally agree that the "Beast like a leopard" (Revelation xiii, 2) represents the papacy. But fewer still, we fear, will be ready to support our view that Protestantism is the "Image of the Beast" (Revelation xiii, 15) in our context given another name, "the False Prophet." We urge no one to accept our interpretation, nor shall we think hard of any who refuse it. We will neither slander nor slander any whom there may be found on them with cruel torture. They have the same right to their views that I have, and the same right to make them known to others. And I, for one, will be very glad to consider anything which opponents may set forth as their interpretation of our text.

"Unclean Spirits Like Frogs."

The symbolisms of Scripture might be understood are always forceful. When the Holy Spirit used a "frog" to symbolically represent certain doctrines or teachings, we may be sure the true application will fit well. A frog has a sage look, a wise look. It seems itself up in an apparent desire to improve the beholder. In recent months well represents its chief power, used to croak.

Applying these symbols, we learn that as evil spirit, influence, teaching will come from the Protestant churches federated, from the Church of Rome, and from the Civil authorities, all in full agreement. The spirit of it will be boastful: an air of superior wisdom and knowledge will be proudly assumed—all with croak in harmony. All will tell of dire results that would follow, if anything the interests of both the present and the future life, if their counsel be not followed. However confitting the creeds, the differences will be ignored in the general proposition that nothing ancient must be disturbed, or looked into, or repudiated.

The Divine authority of the Church, and the Divine right of kings, aside from the Church, will not be allowed to enter. Any persons or institutions in conflict with these boastful and unscriptural claims will be branded as heretics, infidels, at the mouths of these "frogs" speaking from pulpits and platforms and through the religious and secular press. The united sentiments of some will be arranged by the philosophy of the same evil spirit working through Clergymen among the high priest respecting Jesus. As Caiaphas declared it expedient to commit a crime in order to the destruction of Jesus and Divine, to be rid of Jesus and His teachings, so this "frog" spirit will appeal to the fears of every relative of financial necessary to their self-protection.

The croaking of these "frog" spirits or teachings will gather the rulers, the princes, financial, political, religious and industrial into one great army of the powers of fear, inspired by the croakings of these "frogs," will scourge the passions of otherwise good and reasonable men to the fury of persecution, in their blind following of these evil spirits, evil doctrines, they will be ready to sacrifice life and everything on the altar of what they mistakenly suppose is Justice truth and righteousness—the spirit of fear, inspired by

For a brief time, as we understand the Scriptures, these combined forces will accomplish a great deal. Free speech, free mails, and other liberties which have come to be the very breath of life to nominal Christendom, will be nearly shut off under the plea of necessity, the glory of God, the commands of the Church, etc. All will be done in the name of Christ. All will be done in the name of Christ. All will be done in the name of Christ

OUR OLD COUNTRY CORRESPONDENCE.

Important Railway Strike in England. Its Curious Cause--Many Other Important Strikes--Increase Wages for British Sailors--Trade Union Leaders in Ireland Fined for "Conspiracy." New Acting Chairman for British Labor Party in Parliament.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

LONDON, Dec. 19.—We are in the midst of a sudden and sensational railway strike. A week ago there was scarcely a foreboding of trouble; now we have the choice of two things —either a part settlement of the question in the men's favor or a national railway strike. Like so many of our big strikes the matter began around one man. This was Locomotive Engineer Knox. At the time of writing over 12,000 railway workers in the Newcastle district of the Northeastern railway system are on strike because of Engine-driver Knox and about 10,000 other workers in the neighboring industries are rendered compulsory idle. This was how the matter arose. On October 24 Knox was brought before a local magistrate and charged with being drunk and disorderly and assaulting the police. The only evidence against him was that of the two policemen who arrested him. The evidence was so conflicting that the case, small as it was, took five hours to hear. In the end Knox was found guilty of being drunk, the other charges being dismissed. He was fined $1.25 and costs.

Knox is a man getting on in years and has thirty-seven years' service with the railway company behind him. He was a mineral or freight train driver and promptly upon this conviction, which was the first fault ever brought against him, he was put down to drive only a pilot engine which meant a reduction in his wages from $2.25 to $1.72 per day. Knox admitted having had two drinks on the night in question but denied that he was drunk or anything like it. He had never been drunk in his life. After vain appeals for a rehearing he also was taken up by the entire local body of railway workers and the strike resulted.

At once the daily newspapers were their customary lukewarm (I don't think) friend out with headings such as "Ten thousand railway strike for the right to get drunk," etc.

The Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants, which is the union in control of the men, refused to authorize a strike which it declared to be unconstitutional and no strike pay was given. However the movement has gone on. Men in other sections of the system are very restive and already ten or twelve towns are almost entirely locked up. So threatening are things, in fact, that despite the unauthorized character of the strike and incessant press denunciations the government has been compelled to move. A special law official has been sent from London to Newcastle, the center of the strike, to notify the Knox case—practically, of course, to try the magistrate who convicted Knox. It is hoped thereby that if the conviction is quashed and Knox reinstated on full pay the men will return to work. Now that the men are out, however, the large numbers this by no means follows.

The carters of Edinburgh and Leith decided on December 3 to strike work for an all-round weekly increase of 3s cents. At the beginning of October a 2s cent advance was given, and the question of a further increase was submitted to arbitration. This has proved unsatisfactory to the men. The decision affects about 1,000 men and includes the coal-men of Edinburgh and Leith and the general carriers of Edinburgh who have arranged terms.

The executive councils of the Operative Dyers' Union in Lancashire and Yorkshire met at Bradford on December 8, representing some 50,000 workers to consider the demand for advances of wages. Other Lancashire unions had joined the movement, and it was stated that 35 per cent on the men outside the Bradford Dyers' Association had balloted for handing in notices. Certain Lancashire employers have offered advances, and a further conference is to be held. The offer of the Bradford Dyers' Association (limited) of piece-work terms was rejected, but the men are to be balloted.

Following the recent decision of the shipowners of the country to signalize the present shipping boom by increasing seamen's wages from January 1 next, leaving the amount to be fixed by the district committees, the Liverpool shipowners on December 10 resolved that the standard rate for British crews of foreign-going steamers signing on at Liverpool shall be as follows: A, $5; B, $25 per month; firemen, $27.50; trimmers, $25; and fairly qualified stewards or waiters, $20. Presumably the rates for men on coasting vessels will be the subject of a further announcement as Cuthbert Laws, the secretary of the Shipping Federation, in reply to a question from the Merchant Service Guild published recently distinctly stated that the general decision covered coasting vessels. The new Liverpool rate, it is understood, means an increase of $2.50 a month; the figure generally expected at all ports. It has been suggested from the men's side that the voluntary advance was intended as a counter-stroke to the Seamen's proposal of a joint wages board for the kingdom, but this is denied by the Shipping Federation. The denial has apparently not satisfied the National Seamen's and Firemen's Union on whose behalf Havelock Wilson on December 10 addressed a letter to all shipowners declaring a conference for the establishment of the proposed wages board. He suggests December 31 as a convenient

MARTIAL LAW IS VALID SAYS COURT.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Dec. 20.—By a vote of four to one the Supreme Court of Appeals upheld the constitutionality of the proclamation of martial law in the Kanawha coal fields issued by Governor Glasscock November 15, under which proclamation a military court sentenced nearly a score of persons to prison. The court refused the petition of L. A. Mays and S. F. Nance, prisoners in the state penitentiary, for a writ of habeas corpus.

The decision was most sweeping in its scope. It not only upholds the power of the governor to declare martial law, but places the authority of the military court to try cases beyond legal doubt, even though the offenses were committed prior to the proclamation of martial law, though the State Constitution provides that the "privilege of the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended," that the "military shall be subordinate to the civil power," and that "no citizen, unless engaged in the military service of the State, shall be tried or punished by any military court, for any offense of which he is cognizable by the civil courts."

The decision holds that those responsible for the state of war are the ones who suspend the Constitution and that the governor in declaring martial law is only taking the step to restore the constitutional guarantees.

"The invasion, or insurrection upon the eighties, which suspends and nullifies the actual operation of the Constitution and laws, the proclamation of martial law simply recognizes the status, or condition of things resulting from the invasion, or insurrection, and declares it.

"In sending the army into such territory to restore and execute the will of the military chief for the time being as a means of restoring peace and order, the executive merely adopts a means of restoring and making effective the Constitution and laws within that territory."

The decision also holds that if the governor has power to declare a state of war, his action in so doing is not reviewable by the courts. The functions belong to the legislative and executive departments and the Legislature.

RAILROADS OPPOSE SAFETY LEGISLATION.

THE bureau which the railroads of the country maintain at Washington for the "scientific study of transportation problems" and incidentally for the purpose of providing publicity favorable to railroad interests makes much of the increase in railroad operating expense. Lately, the bureau has had some difficulty in deepening the impression of steadily growing costs, for the fact has been that revenues have increased remarkably, both gross and net. The eastern roads have granted their firemen's demands on no other account. Thus the latest complete tabulation of monthly earnings (embracing 90 per cent of the roads) shows a total gain in net revenue of $3,836,840 in comparison with the corresponding month of last year. This was a gain of 5.1 per cent, and the statistics are not open to question, for they are summarized by the railroads's own press bureau from the official reports of the roads to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

But the bureau now begins to be agitated about the contingent expense increases of the future. It declares that a special committee of the railways having headquarters in Chicago reports that bills now pending in the Federal Congress providing for an increase in the number of employes of the railways and for the more rapid substitution of steel for wooden equipment will, if enacted, place the railways under an additional expense of approximately $12,000,000 per annum for the former, and a total expense of $832,780,000 for the latter purpose. Without comment, the railways in the course of three years claim to have increased their steel equipment 7.9 per cent and their steel underframe equipment 2.8 per cent. Whether this rate of adoption of safety equipment will be deemed by Congress rapid enough to dispense with the additional compulsory legislation is exceedingly doubtful. The whole subject is one which certainly merits careful congressional consideration. The recent record of railroad fatalities has been too appalling to permit congressional inattention. The details of the slaughter are contained in the Interstate Commerce Commission's annual report, just published. It is shown that in twelve months 10,824 persons were killed and 79,050 injured in 180,123 casualties on the steam railroads of this country. These figures indicate 253 more killed and 20,000 more injured than during the year before.

The commission investigated eighty-one fatal accidents and found that forty-three were derailments and thirty-one to derailments. Practically all of the derailments were caused by defective roadbed and rails, for which there was little or no excuse. The collisions were due almost wholly to blunders by employes. The latter cause of wrecks is hard to remove, for to err is human. But the possibility of correction of defects due to inadequate equipment is absolute. Here there is only a choice between greater safety and greater dividends. The commission does its plain duty by vigorously urging upon Congress the necessity of legislation requiring the standardization of operating rules and the use of the block system, which it meaningly says is now designed to reduce the probability of mistakes of employes.

FIGURES FOR POLITICIANS TO PONDER.

LET the politicians of all the parties read and ponder these figures and all the factions within one or all of those parties interpret the fact as they will, it nevertheless is true in fact, despite all their protestations, that the recent presidential election was the most apathetic in our national history. The people absolutely refused to make the slightest response to the efforts made by all parties to move them to enthusiasm. The eloquence which was spent (to say nothing of the money) was wasted. The only real crisis had developed in our national affairs and that a political revolution was about to institute an entire new dispensation and open a new political era—it was all wasted, the eloquence as well as the money. The proof? It is found in the complete returns of the election throughout the country, showing the lightest popular vote, population considered, in a generation.

JOSEPH N. DOLLEY, AUTHOR OF "BLUE SKY LAW."

JOSEPH N. DOLLEY, bank commissioner of Kansas, the father of the "blue sky law" in that state, which is aimed to prevent the sale of worthless stock to gullible investors, is now interested in the passage of such a federal law. Massachusetts, Oregon and Arizona have already followed the lead of Kansas. Mr. Dolley, who has been bank commissioner since 1909, found that 98 per cent of the money paid in Kansas to promoters and stock sales agents was absolutely thrown away. The "blue sky law" put an end to it.

When the people are deeply moved, and believe that unusual issues have risen and great popular interests are at stake, they go to the polls in unusually large numbers. But in this year's election they did the reverse —that is, they stayed away in unusually large numbers. In 1912 there went to the polls approximately 14,- 395,737 persons; in 1908 there were 14,888,442 such persons. The decline in the vote consequently was about half a million, notwithstanding that more than 300,000 women in California and Washington voted this year who did not have the right to vote in 1908. It should be remembered that the population of the country has largely increased since 1908. There would therefore have been at least 15,000,000 votes cast if the electorate had voted in the same proportion it did in the last previous presidential election. Instead of scoring the natural gain, the country lost. Indeed, the vote this year was not much in excess of that of 1896. Although since 1896 there has been a gain of nearly 20,000,000 in population.

In the state of Pennsylvania, where it was claimed and still is claimed that there was popular enthusiasm, the vote in 1912 was actually smaller, notwithstanding heavy gains in population, than the vote in either 1908 or 1904. The Pennsylvania figures were 1,234,176 in 1912; 1,267,443 in 1908, and 1,213,795 this year. It is pointed out by those who are coolly and impartially analyzing the returns that Illinois is another state which failed to give proof of enthusiasm. As compared with former elections, Illinois increased its vote this year only 15,000, which falls short of the ratio of increase of population. In Kansas another typical western state, Taft and Roosevelt combined polled fewer votes this year than either Taft alone did in 1908 or Colonel Roosevelt in 1904. And the 1904 vote in the country as a whole was not an exceptionally big one for its time, either. On the contrary, 1904's total popular vote, 13,528,979, was actually more than 400,000 below the vote which had been cast in 1900. The only man who has brought out a big total vote in the last 25 years is William Jennings Bryan, as the figures show. Is there not a moral here which may profitably be pondered?

SOFT-PEDALING NOW ON TARIFF.

OF one thing the country may rest assured, and that is that the President-elect is in favor of continued prosperity. The business situation is just now, as it has been for months, a matter of universal consideration. Governor Wilson would be a most eccentric person, indeed, if he did not feel very keenly the desirability of continuing present business conditions, and even further improving them if possible. He has a twofold motive—his sincere concern for the common good, and his personal and official prestige. It would be an almost irretrievable disaster to his administration if it became involved at the very outset with commercial and industrial depression, especially if that depression could be charged to anyact or threat of the new administration itself. Everything manifestly conspires to make Mr. Wilson wary of any and every unsettling policy, whether with reference to the tariff or anything else.

The mere fact that the new Congress is to meet in extra session does not prove that radical enactments, even on the tariff, are in contemplation. For no matter how savagely our Democratic friends may assail the tariff in campaigns they treat it with almost Republican respect when the time comes for its actual amendment and the responsibility for the effects of that amendment is squarely placed on their own shoulders. Here is Mr. Underwood eloquently disclaiming that Democratic revision means destructive or even radical action. A promise that a "tariff for revenue only" will be a good deal of a tariff after all is the only interpretation to be put on recent utterances of Mr. Underwood's, which are to the following effect:

"The Government does need revenue—it needs over $300,000,000 worth of revenue. The people of the United States want their taxes collected at the custom-house, a large portion of them, whether they are Democrats or Republicans, and the Democratic party proposes to raise at least as much taxes at the custom-house in the future as the Republican party is raising now." The difference is, we expect to raise them in a more equitable way for the American people."

Thus, after all the campaign worry is over, the Democratic party seems more assumes the role of compromise and acknowledges that its antitariff fury was largely for campaign effect. There is of course something to be said against the sincerity of campaigning of that sort. The country will more quickly pardon campaign "straying," however, than it would or could pardon tariff slashing by which the welfare of great industries and of the millions of wage-earners dependent on them would be endangered. And on them would be endangered. And on them would be endangered. And

CHRIST'S GOSPEL MISREPRESENTED.

Foolishness of Preaching to the Worldly-Wise — Higher Criticism's Blight—Why Should God's Ministers Preach and Entreat While Earthly Rulers Command?—In the Coming Age of Messiah's Kingdom it Will Be Different—The Law Shall Go Forth and the Transgressor Shall Receive Corrective Punishment. Says Pastor Russell.

LANCASTER, Pa., Dec. 22.—Pastor Russell spoke here. The text for the occasion was: "It pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe."—1 Cor. 1: 21.

There is a wide difference between foolish preaching and "the foolishness of preaching" that our text declares is of Divine appointment. The many topics of interest and profit to humanity all have their time and place. But the preaching of the Gospel has as its exclusive right of way in the Church of Christ. If some claim that the people will no longer attend Divine service to hear Gospel preaching, we reply that there are three reasons for this:

(1) The Church lost the real Gospel during the Dark Ages, and few Christian people have yet recovered it. The word Gospel, as all agree, signifies good tidings, a message of joy; but the message handed down to humanity from the Dark Ages has been the reverse of this—sad tidings of great misery for nearly all of our race. Is it any wonder that the great majority are disgusted with the horrible misrepresentations of Gospel creeds? Mankind gave trials and difficulties enough in the present life, and need encouragement to hope for better things in the life to come.

(2) Responding to the growing sentiment of intelligence, the ministers of the various denominations of Christendom have ceased to preach bad things of great misery for all but "the very elect." Nearly all ministers, graduated within the last twenty years, lost all their faith in the Bible as the inspired Word of God, in the theological seminaries, where they were taught unbelief, under the name of Higher Criticism; where they also were taught to consider it honorable to stultify their manhood by accepting ordination and salary for serving a denomination whose published creed they disown and despise. In the same seminaries they were taught the thought that it is right and honorable to receive title, honor and salary from a church ostensibly as a Christian ministry and Gospel agent, and then to use the opportunity to undermine the faith of the church and to destroy confidence in the Bible as the inspired Word of God.

Under such conditions, what shall these ministers preach instead of the Gospel of Christ, which they no longer believe? Is it any wonder that they preach those things that they ought not to, and refrain from unpreached those things that they ought to preach? Not many of their hearers care for scientific disquisitions; not many of them care for moral commonplace essays on good morals. So how can such ministers avoid foolish preaching?

(3) Not content with undermining the faith of the people who trust and honor and obey him, these ministers mix their father critical views and evolutionary views with diluted morality, and serve this as instead of the Gospel of Christ. He who thinks that such a message will convert a mind from sin to righteousness, from unbelief to faith in God, deceives himself. He who thinks that such messages will have a sanctifying power in the hearts of God's people, equally deludes himself.

NO GOSPEL WITHOUT REDEMPTION.

The essence of the Gospel of Christ is that He died for sinners, the Just for the unjust, that He might bring mankind back to God. But the false Gospels deny that man ever fell from the likeness of God, and equally deny therefore that he needed a Redeemer and that he has a Redeemer. Such spurious gospels, which leave out the very core and essence of the Divine Message, are false, by whatever honorable channel they may have come. We may be sure that they are of the Adversary himself, for they make void the Word of God, the death of Jesus and His resurrection, and His coming again to give to mankind the glorious blessings and privileges bought with His precious blood.

The True Gospel, the "good tidings of great joy, which shall be unto all people," contains not a single word expressing the eternity of torture at the hands of the proof demons. It contains not a single word which would discredit the Wisdom, Justice and Love of the Father above, whose tender mercies are over all His works and whose salvation is yet to be extended to the ends of the earth.

The True Gospel, acknowledging that humanity has come justly under a penalty or curse of death, sets before the groaning creation a glorious hope. It proclaims, as Jesus did, that the time is coming when the curse shall be removed, and when God through the Messianic Kingdom "will wipe away all tears from all faces." (Isaiah xxv. 8.) It proclaims, as Jesus did, a glorious prospect for all who desire to come into harmony with God, and a just penalty, or stripes, upon all those who sin willfully against light and knowledge and opportunity. It proclaims that a New Day is dawning in which the Lord will give "beauty for ashes, and the oil of joy for the spirit of heaviness."

The True Gospel includes the "Gospel of the Kingdom"—that the Divine arrangement now in for the selection of the Kingdom class from amongst men, to be heirs of God and joint-heirs with Jesus Christ in His Messianic Kingdom. It proclaims the honorable work of the Church as the Kingdom of God by and by, to judge, rule and bless all the families of the earth. It proclaims also that the number who will attain this Kingdom glory is limited—a Little Flock, to whom it will be the Father's good pleasure to give the Kingdom. (Luke xii. 32.) It asserts the making of "our calling and election sure" to a share in that Kingdom.

IS GOSPEL PREACHING LOGICAL?

Let us notice the world's viewpoint, which causes the Gospel Message to appear foolish to them. To the worldly-wise Jews and Greeks, Paul, indeed, for Jesus to go about Palestine with twelve disciples, performing some miracles and inviting chiefly the poor to become His followers, seemed foolish, vain and other pursuits. "Ah," says the world, "how impractical was Jesus, and how foolish was His message." A business man would have built a good foundation for his work by making friends with the Scribes, the Pharisees and the Doctors of the Law, and utilizing their influence with their hold upon the people."

But, we ask, how does would the Scriptures have been fulfilled? Who would have crucified Christ or have caused His death? There would have been no reconciliation possible nor provided. It is well for us that Jesus did not follow the suggestions of worldly wisdom. Truly "the wisdom of this world is foolishness with God," even as the Wisdom of God is foolishness with the children of this world.

It is because worldly wisdom got in the food in the Dark Ages that the Gospel has been perverted so greatly. Great human institutions have arisen, lofty and powerful, through man's cunning. Priesthood and hierarchy were made the professed Church of Christ one of the greatest business institutions on earth. Not more, but less, of human wisdom is needed, and not less, but more, of Divine Wisdom and instruction from the Bible.

WHY IT SEEMS FOOLISH.

From the world's standpoint it seems foolish that God should invite sin to do right and to be His servants, it seems weak for a God of all power to entreat, where He could command to enforce obedience. Satan's kings, having the power, would enforce their commands; in fact, everybody, as a rule, executes his own will. How strange, therefore, it appears to the world, that it should be otherwise with the Almighty!

The Bible, however, gives the information. God wishes to select a special class of special servants. To test their loyalty, they must be upon loyalty for them to resist Him and to refuse obedience. God passes His Message or invitation to pass on to others also, that those may find the peculiar people who prefer to do good rather than evil to seek an extent that they are willing to suffer for righteousness' sake. The special work which He desires the Church to accomplish requires such loyal, faithful souls as these men and women glad to sacrifice their lives in the service of the Lord, His cause and His brethren. This class He seeks "count not their lives dear unto themselves."

God carries the propositions still further, however, and puts this special class to peculiar and severe tests, that the trial of their faith and obedience, being more precious than that of gold, may be found acceptable unto His praise—eventually.

Persecutions, tribulations, attacks from the world, the flesh and the Adversary, are permitted to come against these in their loyalty. None of these things are what the world would expect, and to tell the world of these is to relate what seems to them incredible. They cannot see why consecrated people of God should suffer reproofs for righteousness' sake for Truth's sake.

But all these matters are clear and plain to those who are taught of God —to those who have learned that the Church is being selected from amongst mankind for a very special work of God. This makes it appropriate that their loyalty be tested to the limit, in order that they may be counted worthy of the glory, honor and immortality," which God has for those who love Him.

BY AND BY IT WILL BE DIFFERENT.

The Divine Plan outlined in the Bible is different. The procedure under Messiah's Kingdom and dealing with the world will be exactly what the world will concede to be a wise program. In that time all darkness, ignorance and superstition will speedily pass away under the advancing light of the Sun of Righteousness. The way of righteousness will no longer be narrow, secluded and rugged, as at present. God describes it through the Prophet, saying, "A highway shall be there, and a way, and it shall be called the Way of Holiness; * * * the redeemed of the Lord shall walk there; no ravenous beast shall go up thereon." (Isaiah xxxv. 8, 9.

Faithfulness will bring the Divine reward of freedom from weakness, and of increase of strength—mental, moral and physical. Only the willful doer, walking on the Highway of Holiness, will be coming nearer to human perfection. Thus will be fulfilled, through Christ, the gracious promise that "God shall wipe away all tears from all faces," and "there shall be no more curse, neither sorrow, nor sighing, nor crying; for the former things are passed away." (Rev. xxi. 4.)

MANY STRIPES AND FEW STRIPES.

The Bible clearly indicates that the Adamic condemnation against our race will be fully offset by the merit of Christ's sacrifice. But on the other hand, it tells us that every transgression which is not merely of inherited weakness, is charged to the account of the transgressor and must be met by him. Jesus emphasizes this fact, saying, "He that knew his Lord's will and did it not, shall be beaten with many stripes; but he that knew it not and yet did things worthy of stripes, shall be beaten with few stripes." Some of these stripes, or punishments, may indeed come to the transgressor in the present life; and if so, he does well to profit by them.

But whether in the present life or in the future life, every willful transgressor will receive "a just recompense of reward." The difficulty with many theologians is that they see only one subject has not been that they taught a punishment for sin, but that they taught an unjust penalty, dishonoring to the Creator and unfitting to the believer.

THE RECORDS OF WILFUL SIN.

It is a mistake to say that increasing sins would increase the pangs of conscience and that thus each would be punished. We know to the contrary that many, as they become steeped in sin, lose all sensibility. St. Paul corroborates this thought, saying of some that their consciences become "seared"—calloused.

God provided that each individual shall keep a record in himself of his own moral obliquities. Each violation of conscience weakens the character. Character weakness, degraded can be reconstructed only with proportionately great infirmity. This sense, during the period of Messiah's Kingdom, will be struggling against weaknesses which they themselves, aside from those of Adamic heredity. The assistance from the Royal Priesthood will be proportionate to the Adamic weakness, contrary to the human will. Outside temptations will be gone. Full knowledge will be there; but that actor will be the thing of paramount importance as determining who will attain everlasting life.

Our Redeemer gave a suggestion along this line when He said to the Pharisees, "How can ye escape the condemnation of Gehenna?" (Matthew xxiii. 33.) The Valley of Hinnom (Gehenna) outside Jerusalem, where the offal was daily destroyed, symbolically represented the Second Death, as explained in Revelation xx. 14. Jesus did not condemn the Pharisees to the Second Death. His language to the Jewish leaders in Jerusalem now, for they were condemned already—under the Adamic condemnation. The Son of Man came not to condemn the world, but that the world through Him might be saved." (John iii. 17.) At the time He spoke these words respecting the Pharisees, He was laying down His life a ransom or sacrifice for all the children of Adam. They could not forfeit their share in His resurrection work until that work had been completed and they had enjoyed their share or the decision thereof.

The import of the Redeemer's words, therefore, was that He perceived in them so much of dishonesty and dishonor by reason of the knowledge that they would have a hard time to reform character, even under the favorable conditions of the Millennium. They had been shown and heard His teachings, witnessed His miracles, and must have been reasonably convinced that it was a holy power which operated in Him. Wherefore, in bitterness of spirit they declared that His miracles and teachings were inspirations of Satan, they were so blinded with pride.

It could hardly be supposed that such perversity of spirit was the result either of ignorance or of absolute weakness. Evidently it was a great willfulness associated with it. Hence the Master declared that persons who could thus attribute to Satan things which they recognized as good, pure and holy, must have grossly perverted their consciences. They will be obliged to suffer stripes according, and will have proportionately great difficulty in bringing themselves into harmony with the requirements of the Messianic Kingdom.

"PREACH THE WORD."

All of God's people are preachers. The begetting influence of the Holy Spirit is for the purpose of consecrating, and without it no one has Divine authority to preach. Preaching in its broad sense, means to declare, to make known, to show forth. Hence no division of His people into clergy and laity. "He that hath My Word, let Him speak My Word faithfully," saith the Lord. Let us declare God's Message in its purity and simplicity, whoever hears and whoever refuses to hear. Let us not be disappointed at the world's attitude, for this is not to be unexpected. Let us not be surprised if the preaching of this Message shall bring odium, as it did upon the Master and His apostles. The world knoweth us not, even as it knew Him not."

God's Message, for all that, will accomplish its purpose. He will find the "peculiar people" whom He seeks; not one member of the foreordained number will be lacking. They will all be blessed and free. As Messiah's associates in the Kingdom, they will then "declare His decree." (Psalm ii. 7.) The Law will go forth, and chastisements will follow to enforce the Law, until all shall be brought to a knowledge of the truth, all hearts contrite and broken, and every knee shall bow and every tongue confess, to the glory of God.

BEGIN THE NEW YEAR RIGHT.

The only way to begin it right is to send a year's subscription to the National Labor Tribune. It is one of the best home newspapers in the country and will be better in 1913 than ever. Its original stories, its clean fiction, its housekeeping and magazine pages, and its careful and accurate survey of the world's news regarding the progress and welfare of the wage-earning class (which means 90 per cent of all human beings) make it the world's foremost labor paper.

Washington, Dec. 20.

We wish to express our hearty appreciation of the most excellent paper. Each feature is good and instructive, especially the Religious part. We can recommend it to our friends as the clean sheet and clear type is attractive to young and old.

Truly yours,
MRS. ACHESON.

Oklahoma, Dec. 21.

I have been a reader of your valuable paper for several months and will say that each issue seems to be an advancement to the one preceding it. The Old Country Correspondence is very interesting and the Department of Labor is always good, but still better are the Sunday School lessons and Pastor Russell's sermons as viewed by the "dessert" of all are the Sermons by Pastor C. T. Russell and among all the Bible students published by you, I especially enjoyed the sermon entitled "Parables of Armageddon," and I think it so good of you to publish it more than once. I read it each time I received paper but each time I read it.

It is always a pleasure to me to show your paper to others and I know that if the Religious Department is carefully read it will prove a blessing to all. The paper is always published in such clear readable type, and this alone would prove a blessing to many.

Trusting that the Lord will richly bless you in your work as long as you publish the Sermons of C. T. Russell,

Yours truly,
BENJAMIN W. BAKER.

Canada, Dec. 22.

Please find inclosed remittance for another year's subscription of your paper. I still continue to enjoy your paper and appreciate very highly Pastor Russell's Sermon, also the other features, Question Box, etc., and always like so much to read the Appreciations. I am glad to see that the paper on so that others may have the benefit too. May the Lord bless you in the work you are doing in the harvest.

I remain,
Sincerely yours,
MRS. L. ESTERLING.

California, Dec. 23.

I desire to thank you for the Sermons of Pastor Russell which you print and I appreciate very much.

Yours truly,
J. H. FRISWOLD.

Georgia, Dec. 22.

A few lines of appreciation. I have been a subscriber to your excellent paper for nearly a year. I like it on account of the clear type and I like it especially for the Bible Study Truths which it carries to its many readers by publishing Pastor Russell's Sermons. That is the Present Truth Issue.

I have renewed my subscription through the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society. Wishing you much success.

Yours for the Truth,

Virginia, Dec. 20.

Inclosed find money order for year's subscription to Labor Tribune. I always recommend your paper to anyone that wishes Pastor Russell's Sermons in full and large clear type.

I notice by reading the letters of public that are waking up to the fact that Pastor Russell's Sermons contain the food a child of God wants and must have to grow strong in the Lord and the power of His might.

Yours for success in the good work,
J. E. HARDIE.

New York, Dec. 27.

Please find herewith inclosed money order for two subscriptions, one renewal and one new one. As agents we allowed to do the bidding. Being a subscriber we always find the published Pastor Russell's Sermons and feel we would not like to be without them, although we subscribe for other papers, we like the Labor Tribune the best on account of the large clear type and the Labor News when to us are very plain some of the items in which we are interested.

We feel that the newspapers are helping Pastor Russell's sermons are doing much toward spreading the Truth and lifting the veil of intolerance and misstatements the people who have so long been kept in darkness.

Very truly yours,

Pennsylvania, Dec. 21.

The date on my paper tells me that my subscription has run out, so I hasten to inform you that I am renewing it today through Watch Tower Office.

I would be sorry to miss one as we look forward to it so much, especially the Sermon, Questions, etc., Besides this it is a paper one need not be ashamed of to pass it on to our neighbors and friends that they too may have the benefit and subscribe if they like it.

Yours very respectfully,
WM. EVANS.

Texas, Dec. 21.

I have been a subscriber to your paper for over a year and surely appreciate the Sermons of Pastor Russell and the Religious features of your paper. You are doing a great work in publishing so many good articles in your paper and I will be a subscriber as long as you do.

With best wishes,
A. N. TWILLIGER.

Alabama, Dec. 29.

Herewith find check to cover one year's subscription to the Labor Tribune to be mailed to the party hereafter. The Tribune is indeed an excellent paper in all its departments, and the religious department is fascinating, comparing especially Pastor Russell's Sermons which are commanding extensive attention on account of being based on thorough Bible Truths which is entirely foreign to all man-made creeds. The people's eyes are being opened now to the fact that the doctrine of eternal torture in literal fire is an invention of man, and of which Satan is the promoter, which was inserted among the Dark Ages. We thank God that the day has arrived when people dare to study the Bible for themselves, and not to accept what the D. D's say without first turning to the word of God. We should "prove all things, and hold to that which is good." We shall be able to "give a reason for the hope we believe." Surely the D. D's have many things to answer for. Dec. 23, 1-2; 11-21.

Yours truly,
J. L. SMITH.

Maryland, Dec. 22.

With a grateful heart I wish to add a word or so to the many hearty appreciations which are being sent you for the freedom of speech which you allot in your valuable paper for the spreading of the Truth of our Father's Word, the light of which is shining with the Master's footsteps.

I see by the title in the fact that according to our understanding of the Scriptures it will be only a few years I meet the Lord, and will be permitted to deceive the nations of earth, and we most heartily rejoice to know that "the Sun of Righteousness will arise with healing in his beams," dispelling the darkness that now covers the earth and the gross darkness that covers the people.

May the Lord bless you for the good work that you are doing in thus spreading the Truth.

I like your paper very much, especially the Sermons of God's faithful servant, Pastor Russell, which I await with eagerness and which I hope you will continue to publish.

Yours in the love of the Truth,
SAMUEL Q. APPLER.

Minnesota, Dec. 23.

Pardon my long delay in expressing to you and the dear unknown brother of the Allegheny class of the I. B. S. A., my thanks and sincere appreciation by sending me so much precious valuable paper. Another reason I take great pleasure in passing it on to others and since I received your letter one of my friends has also begun to subscribe. The Sermons and Questions are just the thing for those of great information, and comfort to those who are seeking the pure meat of undefiled religion. I am sending a question to be answered through the Bible Study Class. Again thanking you heartily for your kindness, I will close by wishing you much success in your share of this, the Lord's great harvest work. I remain

Yours in Christian love,
MRS. JENNIE VANDERHOOF.

Alabama, Dec. 7.

I consider the No. 48 issue a very fine number on account of the two sermons by Pastor Russell. The Armageddon Sermon and the regular one. The Bible Question Box Department and Tabernacle Bible Studies and that 1st value is greatly enhanced for placing in the hands of thinking people. The Sermons are on the fifth page on the signs of the times—the near doors of "This Present Evil World" to be supplied by that glorious one, "The World to Come wherein Dwelleth Righteousness." Both writers have given the clearest and most forcible presentation of present conditions in the world today and a future forecast according to the "those sure words of prophecy whereunto we do well to take heed as a light shining in a dark place—until the day dawn, and the day star arise in our hearts," than any that I have yet seen in condensed form, which added to the other excellent reading in this number makes it a triumph in proclaiming "the time is at hand" in which the long lease of power and dominion granted the gentile Kingdom under the prince of darkness is to give place to the Kingdom of God under Christ, "the prince of Peace and His glorious church—the stone that has been in process of being cut without hands (since the year 1878) and is increasing, which shall smite the image or counterfeit kingdoms of the world upon its feet, last members, and break them to pieces. And being God's power and wisdom combined to become a great kingdom and fill the whole earth." Daniel ii. 34, 35, becoming the "desire of all nations" and assuring in the "the times of restitution of all things." Acts iii. 19-21. Knowing that you will be permitted to continue sending out the light through the Tribune as long as it is day for the night cometh wherein no man can work, and then bear His well done."

Yours sincerely,
J. T. BARCLAY.

Connecticut, Dec. 29.

I wish to add my appreciation to the Tribune for its most helpful work. It is now engaged in. I subscribe to your paper because of Pastor Russell's Sermons and have found it satisfying in every way that could possibly add which has in it so much of the spiritual food for the household of faith. I love your paper for what it contains, or which I could not send the money for anything that would bring me as much pleasure, and to all my neighbors columns. You are certainly doing a great work to send out the message from God's chief mouthpiece. Your advice in helping to send the Old Tribune to the shut-ins there does cause much joy, too. I pass the Tribune to others as they might get some blessing and become a subscriber. Please inclose find money order which will see that the Tribune is sent to my other home. It forms a Christmas present, and I know it will be appreciated. They are interested in the precious faith, present Truth. May the Lord bless you in the coming year as in the this, and may you ever continue in this service as long as the need of the Truth in the light of the vale then on the other side. Your boustrous brother,

Yours with much love for the Truth,
P. A. LINDSAY.

Maryland, Dec. 23.

As my subscription to your paper is nearing its close, and as your paper is forwarding the amount of subscription for another year.

Your paper is a tremendous visitor in our home, and is worthy a place in every household and while it has many beautiful features, the assembly and its sermons are to me is Pastor Russell's sermons and other Religious features. Wishing you continued success, spiritually and financially, I remain,

Respectfully,
MRS. C. MACEY.

Wisconsin, Dec. 23.

Please find a subscriber to your paper for one short year and as I see by the last on my paper that the time has expired, I desire to renew my subscription as I do not wish to lose one single copy. Also I want to take the opportunity of expressing to you the much I enjoy reading the Tribune, especially the Religious features and Pastor Russell's Sermons, and also the Question Box and Appreciations from the dear friends. And now, dear brother, may God's blessings be with you in the work, for now beautiful up on the mountains are the feet of Him that bringeth good tidings that published peace, that bringeth good tidings of good, that publisheth salvation that saith unto Zion thy God reigneth. Is. 52: 7.

Your brother in the story that never grows old.

Maryland, Dec. 23.

I believe that none of the many strong expressions of Appreciations published, is more than a true estimation of the value of your service to humanity in the publication in each pleasing form of Pastor Russell's sermons, the Comments on Sunday School Lessons, the Questions and Answers, and not least, the Letters of Appreciation. In common with many I owe the gain of my heart to "God bless you."

Sincerely yours,
F. W. WATKINS.

New York, Dec. 21.

I write to let you know I appreciate your valuable paper. I especially appreciate the Religious section, Pastor Russell's sermons particularly, and also the Sunday School Lessons and Question Box. It is a wonderful help to me engaged in the sowing the germs of Truth here so many forms. I hope the Lord will continue and as long as you print the Sermons I shall be one of your subscribers.

Yours for the Truth,
MRS. IDA M. HARRIS.

ROTARY BORING DRILL.

Removable Hard Steel Cones Grind Rapidly Through Rock.

For sinking oil and artesian wells through hard rock a new rotary drill bit, the invention of a Texas oil producer, is coming into very general use, says Popular Mechanics. Instead of scraping its passage through rock as did the old one piece bits, this new instrument crushes its way downward at a rate many times that of the old bits.

The illustration suggests at once how the bit accomplishes its work. When rock is encountered the dirt bit is replaced by the rock bit, which screws on to the wire in means of the large collar. The pipe revolves slowly by means of the rig resting on the rollers. These are tons made to turn by friction, and their hard steel teeth pulverize the rock beneath rapidly. The flow of water downward through the pipe and up on the outside washes away the powdered rock as it is produced. A small pipe inside of the collar confines lubricating oil and a metal disk fits the top of the drill through cable to the cones. The inclosed alloy steel is used in manufacturing the bit. These cones are easily removed and replaced with new ones when they have become worn.

VALUABLE PILING TIMBER.

British Guiana Greenheart Used in the Locks.

The secretary of the institute of mines and forests of British Guiana in a book of reference which is issued as an official document writes as follows:

There are three varieties of greenheart—yellow, black and maiotop—all most serviceable and durable woods if cut at maturity. greenheart is one of the tallest forest trees of British Guiana, and logs can be had from eighteen to twenty-four inches square and seventy feet long. It grows in clay soil near the rivers and creeks. Owing to the great demand for this timber and to the absence of legal restriction to prevent the cutting of the young trees it is becoming extremely difficult to produce good, straight, and long timber, as is worthy of the attention of the legislature.

Greenheart is already familiar to the trade, being highly esteemed for all classes of submerged work—piles, dock gates, etc. It is also used for the lines woods of Lloyd's, and admirable keelsons, knee and other timbers can be had of it. It is also very suitable as a mast for planking vessels. For wharfs, house framing, mill timbers and many other purposes greenheart is unsurpassed by any other wood in the colony.

The Panama connecting engineers after a comparison of the world's woods have adopted British Guiana greenheart for the Panama canal, and are finding it as superior to Australian bushes wood in its resistance to the teredo.

Though the excellence of greenheart is never been so prominently brought before the notice of the public as when Mlly and artisticality for lock gates are widely known. Most of the lock gates constructed in the Mersey during the last twenty years have been made with it, as have those at the Manchester ship canal, and when the necessity occurred for enlarging some of the canal lock gates fully thirty years after they were passed in position it was found that the wood was in the same excellent state of preservation that it could be used over again.

Ship With Three Skins.

The launching of the Iron Duke at Portsmouth, England, is considered by a new era in British naval construction. The vessel is the twenty-eighth British Dreadnought to have been made with a displacement is 25,400 tons, and her main battery consists of ten 13.5 inch guns firing shells of 1,400 pounds, or 250 pounds more than the projectiles fired by former weapons of this caliber.

The chief feature, however, of the new Dreadnought is the improvement that she demonstrates in her protection against submarine attack. She has the whole length of the "vitals" (from the first turret to the last) the hull of the ship consists of three separate skins, so that even if the two outer ones should be pierced by rocks or torpedoes the stability of the vessel would not be impaired.

New Milk Receptacle.

A patent has been granted to Edwin A. Ragdes of Salt Lake City on a milk can which may help to solve the problem of delivering pure milk to the cities. His device consists of a can within a can, a dead air space separating the inner and outer cans. The inner can is protected from extremes of temperature by an envelope of the water or other nonconductor. It may be removed easily for cleaning. One virtue, when closed, seals both cans. By Hayde says experiments have been shown that the milk will be preserved for many hours at the temperature at which it is put in and that the device can be manufactured cheaply.

DEVICE MAKES DUMB TALK.

Remarkable Invention of a Man Who Lost His Larynx.

The ancient proverb, "Necessity is the mother of invention," was never better exemplified than in the remarkable case of Telesfo Teredo, now a subject in Almanza, near Carthagena.

Teredo awoke one day slightly hoarse, and his affliction became steadily worse until finally his breathing became noisily affected, and his wife accompanied him to Madrid to consult a specialist.

Dr. Tapia made a lengthy examination of the patient and communicated his impressions to the wife much after this fashion: "Your husband has a cancer in the larynx. Without an operation he will surely die. If he is operated upon we can save his life, but he will remain dumb, because it will be necessary to remove the vocal chords." Surgical intervention was decided upon, and Dr. Tapia proceeded to remove the larynx, employing Parlee's method. Thus two operations were performed, one in October, 1910, and one in November.

The despair of the poor fellow on recognizing that he had been deprived of speech knew no bounds, and he began to display a suspicious attitude toward Dr. Tapia then provided him with an apparatus invented by Glick, the well known German laryngologist, by which it would be possible to articulate. The patient tried this for a long time and finally managed to speak a little, but always at the expense of great fatigue.

Teredo was not to be beaten, however, and he began to turn the matter over in his mind and eventually evolved a plan by which the apparatus of Glick would be perfect. In this conception both patient and apparatus were submitted to the deeply learning of Medicine by Dr. Tapia, and to the surprise of all present the inventor pronounced clearly sung some couplets from a well known Spanish opera.

Since then the apparatus has been greatly improved, and a few weeks ago before a distinguished assembly the doctor himself read a long paper giving an account of his illness and subsequent cure.

The fundamental idea of the invention consists in introducing sound into the mouth by means of a rubber tube which is in communication with the orifice in the neck through which breathing is effected. Once sound in the mouth the sound becomes modulated by the action of the tongue, teeth and lips. Hitherto the unintelligible expressions in the mount way.

ITALY'S WATER POWER.

Alpine Glaciers Furnish a Source of Light and Heat.

Enormous water powers are improvements carried out in Italy during the past few years have gone a long way toward making her the finest in the world, this handicaps the Italian peninsula as an industrial region. Of these the Adamello group, composed with glaciers, is the two years and supplying light and power to Milan and the province of Brescia. A consultant and one of the engineers who designed water power plants built with the snow peaks.

In the case of this plant it may literally be said that ice does the work of fire, as the water supply generating the power springs from a glacier high in the Rhetian Alps.

From the head of the glacier torrent known as the Adame the engineers have built a channel partly through and partly over a mile of steep mountain country. This channel or intake empties into a lake which is a deep fill, the lake walled in by sheer cliffs. Out from this reservoir the water, after penetrating the mountain side for nearly a mile, falls about a thousand yards through a solidly built pipe line and empties out at the power house. A second drop and power plant are located further down.

Artificial Milk.

Synthetic milk is the latest product of the chemical laboratories of the German scientists, including Sir William Crookes, examined and tasted coconut milk at a demonstration in London recently and declared it palatable. The fluid, which is the discovery of three German chemists, is made by Prudent on the principle of the same color as the animal liquid, and the inventors claim that it is more nourishing and more easily assimilated than the cow's produce and moreover colors. The method of manufacture is simple and consists in the mixing of certain of vegetable ingredients, digested by machinery instead of by the cow, and the result is keep sweet for months in ordinary milk. Its strength, it is said, can be standardized for the family, infant or invalid.

Repairing Leaks in Range Boilers.

After receiving many requests from on the plumber's advice, because the leaks could not be repaired, we decided to tell some means of making a plumbe look in the third boiler, writes a correspondent of Popular Mechanics. We made a successful repair by driving a taper punch into the hole just far enough to admit the point of a one-eighth inch pipe plug. Before tapping the hole a one-eighth inch plug was turned in tightly after thoroughly covering the threads with white lead.

Sizing a Threaded Hole.

It sometimes becomes necessary to transfer the size of a threaded hole from some out of the way place to the shop in order to make a place to fit it. With proper tools this is easy with out them it might be difficult. One thing is always at hand, and that is wood. Whittle a stick tapering until it fits in the hole. Then turn it into the hole and a fair thread will be made on the wood. The stick can be kept in the pocket without risk of changing the size, as would be the case with ordinary calipers.

APPRECIATIONS.

Georgia, Dec. 29.

Your imagination cannot picture to you with what incomprehensible joy I read the weekly visits of the dear old Tribune. That Weekly Sermon, transmitted cheering letters from the sisters and brothers, Biblical question, etc., are indeed dear. In our country is not situated similar to that to dear Brother Apostle John, walk on the isle of Patmos.

I never dreamed myself in my loneliness, worthy of a portion that said: I was accounted predestinated by a sister in the Truth, whom at the Atlanta convention last year she was able to send with a veritable joy of anointing, and I rejoice to be in obedience to dear Sister Woodworth, Sister Lou Claflin and Brother Sowers. It seemed as if the watchful presence of a small Apostle was in our home. Then the health and strength had, dear Brother D. L. Sullivan came in such an opportune time, cheering and instructing us with the Word of God, in deep prayer and love, as none but those possessed of the spirit of Jesus can do.

Dear Brother Sullivan's visit at the gangs of loneliness as iron a little more and we started to enjoy our good thing alone.

Yes, He knows best and I never felt better, or simply, resigned to the joy of those words.

"I delight to do Thy Will, O my God!" "Content whatever lot I see, Since 'tis God's lot and therefore good for me."

MRS. W. E. GIBBS.

Maine, Dec. 20.

Please find herewith money order for two new subscriptions and a renewal. Am always glad to get subscribers for the Tribune as it is such an excellent paper. I read it from A. to S. A. literature, and we all dearly love its weekly visits, and so long as our Tribune keeps a pace with the times as the other Religious features appeal, we cannot afford to be without it and trust the precious harvest treasures may continue to unfold until the Chief Reaper has gathered the whole of the fields like garner when the pure message will then begin to reach and sweep the whole earth as the waters cover the sea.

Sincerely yours for the Truth and its Author.

MRS. GEO. E. BROOKS.

Massachusetts, Dec. 19.

Through the kindness and advice of a friend, I have had your dear little paper about nine months, and am much pleased with it both as regards the Truths and especially the explanation of Pastor Russell's Sermons.

I enjoy them heartily and shall continue to be a subscriber.

Sincerely yours,

C. E. SWAIN.

Illinois, Dec. 22.

I see that my subscription to our paper expires this month. It has been a pleasure to me, this past year 1912, the way it has been managed. I feel that I can't do without it. Have been a conscientious seeker, who believes in letting no mankind to moral standards of the Bible, but to the Bible it may be. I admire your courage of what seems right to you, and to be a rebuker, fails about a thousand yards through a solidly built pipe line and empties out at the power house. A second drop and power plant are located further down.

I am your subscriber,

MRS. C. J. ADCOCK.

Massachusetts, Dec. 20.

I enjoy a dear mule, not having the privilege of hearing preaching and lectures of Pastor Russell have read them with much interest in your well grained paper. The have helped and lifted me in such many ways. I thank you for its publication. I think should your paper be kept clean and large in size and strong in its quality, it will bring in subscribers. Question Box, etc., are also appreciated. Wishing it much success, I remain,

Yours truly,

F. W. PACKARD.

Maine, Dec. 21.

I desire to express my appreciation of your valuable paper, first for the Sermons by Pastor Russell and Superintendent Bok, and second for the absence of the worldly and other items called "news" which are so prevalent in other papers. I deem my self favored, changed as I do not wish to miss a single issue of this paper.

Praying a blessing on you for your zeal in our service,

Yours for Truth,

MRS. SAVARY.

WHAT DOES IT MEAN?

It came one summer when I dreamed
Of love's sweet dream,
Tho' none shall answer, no one see
The meaning of it all.

Nor could I ever strange thing may prove more true,
Which no one can but often so, it is Known

He does alone and to His chosen
Manifestion,
He shows it and shows it for your good;
He is not hard, you do not think he so.

When in the dark you put your hand in his,

When it was light, you trust to walk alone,
And through the strength He gave you all your own.
You did not ask what that sad blessing meant,
But meek and took it, satisfied, content.

But you not think it strange, you thought the knew
He planned for you.
Dear one, then do you take life's every test
Yet cannot trust that tender Father hand.

And tasting He makes mistakes more or
It could some disappointment why you want haste offends;

He sees the into the sickness do you harm
And gives a whirlwind when you ask a calm.
You think it strange this trust sadly
And in your weakness ask what does it mean?

The Answer to What Does It Mean?

I think the language of God's love would be
I love you child; I seek his slightest
Long to prosper him in all his ways;
I give him quiet nights and peaceful days,
But if I do, still love myself from me.
My mistreatched hand he will not sail to see,
I place a lingering sail before his feet,
There he will walk, and there a two will meet.

TO MULCT HATTERS.

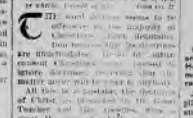
WASHINGTON, Dec. 21.—Unconfirmed information has been received that the Loewe Hat Company, having been successful in its suit against the United Hatters in securing a judgment, is making an effort to collect the same. It will be remembered that this house of a large number of the members of the Hatters' Union in Danbury, Conn., were attached for the judgment secured in a former suit, and it is further reported that writs of like kind are to be issued against the homes of the hatters in Danbury and in the other places where the United Hatters' Union is strong. Definite information is not at hand at this time to give the exact status of the situation, but it is believed that as an appeal will be taken by the hatters from the last decision rendered, some legal process will be found to interpose, prohibiting the carrying out of the writs of attachment against the homes of the hatters until the appeal now pending can be disposed of.

KNOW OF THE DOCTRINE.

Dec. 22.

"If any man would do His will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself." John vii. 17.



THE Apostle Paul seems to be the only one who has ever fully understood the Divine plan of the Gospel Age. Even the Apostles themselves, with some few exceptions, were ignorant of the deeper things of God. Their understanding of the Divine plan was very limited, and even after the Lord's resurrection they were slow to grasp the full import of the Truth. Peter, James and John, the three favored ones who were permitted to see the glorified Lord in the mount, were among the slowest to understand. Even after the Lord's resurrection they were slow to grasp the full import of the Truth. Peter, James and John, the three favored ones who were permitted to see the glorified Lord in the mount, were among the slowest to understand. Even after the Lord's resurrection they were slow to grasp the full import of the Truth.

If as God's people we but realize our own darkness and ignorance we would have more ready access to the throne of grace, and find the Lord ever willing to help us. Then, and God and Father ever at our side, as Christ was, to give Himself a ransom for all to be testified in due time." "For He (Christ) is the propitiation for our sins; and not for our sins only, but also for the sins of the whole world." 1 Timothy ii. 6; 1 John ii. 2.

Q.—Do the Scriptures ever refer to a dead man as a dead soul? (J. A. W.)

Answer.—The word "soul" in the Old Testament is from the Hebrew word nephesh, and in the New Testament it is from the Greek word psuche. Both words have the same meaning in the substances signifies in the original meaning of the terms—a breathing creature. See in other words of being being. In numerous places in the Scriptures the possibility of the death of the soul is declared. An excellent method of acquainting your self that the Bible does teach the mortality of the soul, is to take some good Bible concordance, and there are several this concordances to be obtained at any public library, and carefully examine every passage under the heading of the word soul. Following are several citations from the Old Testament will throw light on this subject—Psalm lxxviii. 50; Ezekiel xviii. 4; Exodus xxi. 30; Ezekiel xxii. 27; Psalm xxx. 3; James v. 20. In many texts of the Bible the translators failed to give the proper rendering for the word soul, hence the error. A dead soul is no longer a living being but is a dead being. A living that has ceased to breathe. The process of creation is reversed when death takes place.

Q.—Is there any place in the Bible where the thousand years are mentioned? (Rev. Edmondson—Levittown xii.)

Answer.—The thousand years reign of the Messiah are referred to by all of the holy prophets of the Bible. (Acts iii. 21.) Peter however, the period of time in which all of the world of mankind is to be blessed, while specifically mentioned as the thousand years five times in the 20th chapter of the fifth verse of Revelation is as where else so mentioned excepting in an indirect way. In the second epistle of the Apostle Peter he referred to the day of judgment says "that one day is with the Lord, as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day" (II Peter iii. 8). This thousand year day will be the judgment day for the world, for as St. Paul says "God has appointed a day in which He will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom He hath ordained whereof He hath given assurance unto all men in that He hath raised Him from the dead" (Acts xvii. 31). The great day of the Lord will be the time wherein the world will be granted a full and glorious opportunity of salvation. See 1 Corinthians vi. 2, Job v. 28, 29; II. V.

Q.—What is meant by the "Second Death" mentioned in the book of Revelation? (H. S. P.)

Answer.—Second death implies second life. The first death, that which came upon the human family through disobedience in Eden, extended to every member of the human race according to God's providence, foreknown and fully declared. Christ died for the sins of the whole world for one thousand years has been upon the race, in other words, as Adam brought mankind under sentence of the first death so Christ will release all mankind from that penalty and give the race individually a full opportunity to attain perfection and eternal life. Whoever sins wilfully and deliberately against that light will receive the second death, death again; this time it will not be Adamic death, but Second Death. The difference between the two is that the latter will be everlasting; there will be no redemption and no resurrection from it. The Lake of Fire mentioned in the Scriptures, while the second is declared to be "perdition," "destruction," "destroyed as dross," in other words, annihilation.

"Wise saying and fair discourses, to be able to silence and confound the wise condemnation, Two things of God," Jacob with God and prevailed, His though resurrection of the dead.

Someone not inquires. Why are the disciples of Christ not illuminated that six hundred different denominations have resulted from the differences of theology, and the reason for the explanation is true, shortly after the death of the Apostles, the Adversary began to sow the seeds of error, causing human sin and woes in his service, through pride and ambition. The dark ages followed, which is often spoke of the period as the "Dove Ages."

The various denominations of Christendom have failed to grasp the true severance and love of the Truths, because our forefathers who made these creeds were not privileged to refer to the Light. They all made the mistake, however, of looking too much to the creeds and not enough to the Word.

God has foretold through the Prophets this difference, and also has blessed and guided His children throughout the ages are living to have the harvest of the Age will cause a great enlightenment upon His people, scattering the dark clouds of error, and causing them to see the Truth. Understand, but none of the wicked shall understand." We are in the dawning of this New Age, and we consider the Divine theory ter and Plan for human salvation.

Whether to Do His Will.

Today's sermon is a message from the Master's own lips. He gives us the key to a most knowledge of His doctrine; namely, that the earnest desire to fully consecrated to God and fully desirous of knowing His will and His doctrine, will be the first step in gaining the standpoint of Divine revelation, we must draw near to God in the spirit of consecration and obedience in our heart. We must will to do His will.

God's will represents actual perfection of living, and we should desire to be God and favored all mankind. This is the Divine Standard, but we are no more able to do this than those who were the Jews. The best we can do is to will to do right, and to the best of our ability carry out that desire of heart.

But for those who have come into harmony with God through Christ, their desire must be consecrated and made whereby all desiring to do the Divine will and manifesting endeavors so to do, are considered perfect, although they did the Divine will perfectly. This class are the prospective members of the Body of Christ. To these the promises of our next apply They shall know of our Lord sufficiently to fully consecrate to worship Him in spirit and in truth, whether He was the active Agent of Jehovah.

On the threshold of a new year shall we and determine to give our hearts fully to the Lord—to do God's will? If so, we shall doubtless be enabled fully to understand the doctrines of Christ—the deep things of God, revealed to this Cross by the Spirit of God.

Q.—Where does the Bible state that the Devil is now, ever was, or ever will be a ball? (M. C. R.)

Answer.—The rather lurid ideas and theories of the past representing the Devil as being the chief tender of a large and commodious furnace filled with flames and brimstone into which were cast the millions of the unregenerated members of the human race, shrinking away before the enlightening influences of the present century. There are still a few deluded souls who have not yet been awakened from this awful nightmare of the dark ages. May they soon be aroused to appreciate the beauties of the truth and realize their being delivered from the bonds of ignorance and superstition. The Devil has never been in hell; he is not there now, and eventually he will go there. It will not be a hell of eternal torment but it will be the hell of the Scriptures—death, destruction, and from is to be destroyed. (Hebrews ii. 14.) This place or condition of destruction was that which came into existence subsequently. The waters which produced the flood had evidently been held in suspension in the atmosphere, causing a general green or hot-house condition to prevail upon the earth. Vegetation and animal life developed luxuriously and the average length of human life was eight or nine hundred years. There were no electrical storms and consequently no thunder and lightning, and therefore, no rainbows when the storms were over. After the deluge, because of the changed conditions, fermenting began, and Noah in ignorance of this was not aware that the juice of the grape could become intoxicating. Because of this lack of knowledge he became unduly under the influence of wine.—(Genesis ix. 20, 21). It appears, too, that, owing to the changed conditions, after the deluge, as article of diet (Genesis ix. 3) where before the flood the race had subsisted entirely from the fruits of the vine, instances of beef and veal demand a more exhalting form of diet than was supplied by the equable climate conditions existing prior to the flood.

Q.—Does the Bible intimate that the whole man was made of the dust, or the body of man, or the body of the soul? (E. H. G.)

Answer.—It is to be regretted that the theologians of the darker past in the consideration of some of the simplest teachings of the Bible got together and formulated creeds and systems of theology which are the source of nearly all of the misrepresentations of the Bible in our time, and which have served to drive millions of the people into infidelity and skepticism. The Bible has been made to appear as a book of unreasonable and unsustained look ever writing whereas it is thoroughly in harmony with all the laws of nature and common sense. In the subject of man and the soul, nothing could be plainer and simpler than the teachings of the Bible. There is scarcely a clergyman to be found who can give a reasonable expression regarding the teachings of the Bible upon this subject. Many of them say that "the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground." Here was a man, but he was a dead man. Something was needed to make him a living man. So "the Lord God breathed into his nostrils the breath of life." The man, wholly formed of the dust, then became a breathing living being. Man did not receive a soul; he became a soul. There was no ill-formed soul prepared to receive that breath; he was not created half spirit and half flesh, but as the Apostle explains "the first man is of the earth earthy." (1 Corinthians xv. 47.) Man is a soul whose being is formed of the dust and is vitalized by the breath of life.

Q.—Where in the Bible is it taught that God as a trinity—that is to say three persons in one? Jesus Christ being the Son of God; is He the Son of the Holy Ghost? (Rodeka.)

Answer.—The word, "trinity" does not occur in the Bible. "Three is not a single passage to be found in the Scriptures in which it is stated that God is three persons in one. There is a specific passage to be found in 1 John v. 7, and part of the eighth verse in which this absurd theory is contained. However, all Bible students are familiar with the verse—"In heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost; and these three are one; and there are three that bear witness in earth," were injected into the text by some over-officious ecclesiastic during the middle ages of mystery. The ridiculous idea is absolutely a heathen one, having originated in darkest India among the Hindoos. As the people are breaking away from the ignorance and superstition of the past, they are accepting the rational, easy message of this three in one and one in three conception of a diseased imagination. Let us smile over the childish prattle of some who still try to persuade us that three does one is one.
